Simply lessening the tax burden for firms, however, does not mean instant revival of the economy. Also, a tax reduction or lowering of bank interest rates do not ensure economic revival. Whether firms will invest or not depends in large measure on the trend of demand. Unless the firms are convinced that the goods they had manufactured will sell, they will not be willing to make investments. This is certain. If the alleviation of the burden for firms generates a boost to investments even with an uncertain prospect of demand, it will take on the character of speculation. In view of the weakness of the price structure supporting the stability on figures only, it is best not to stimulate speculation. This cannot be stressed too much.

If the government is determined to effectively revive the economy through promotion of investments, it should have come up with effective measures to stimulate demand. Such measures are to increase income for the consumers and to lessen their tax burden. The government's economic measures, though drastic they may be for firms, totally ignored such aspects. It is inevitable that benefit for one side is a loss for the other side. It is our fear that excessive favor for the supply side will inevitably require the demand side to make excessive sacrifices. Real income is virtually at a standstill since the worst kind of inflation in 1980 when wholesale prices soared 44.2 percent. The government should not underestimate that shrunken buying power means reduced consumption. If the government tries to restrain wages and the price of agricultural products in an attempt to eschew the pressure of inflation caused by lowering interest rates and an increased financial deficit -- a result of the drastic cutback of corporate taxes -- the government's drastic economic measures will produce no drastic effects despite the government's intention.

Not only should the government take measures to alleviate the burden on firms so as to avoid passing it on to the masses, but it also must come up with appropriate measures to lighten the burden on consumers. This is the principle of equilibrium. It is hoped that the government will reduce inequitable elements in order to eliminate the disharmony caused by a series of politically and socially shocking events. For economic stability and invigoration, dispelling public suspicions is an indispensible factor.

This is why we cannot regard economic policy as a purely economic matter. What is more, since the government's economic measures will have an effect only when demand is expanded, the government should look at the significance of the measures aimed at increasing the income of and alleviating the burden on consumers which will have the dual function of eradicating social disharmony and invigorating the economy.

The government has been able, so it is explained, to make such a bold decision as working out the drastic economic measures, including the radical cut in bank interest rates and corporate tax rates. In actuality, until mid-June, the wholesale price index had gone up only by 2.2 percent and the deficit in international balance of payments was about $500 million, only one-fifth that of the corresponding period last year. This alone is a very encouraging factor.

However, we cannot but point out that it is very dangerous if the government policymakers consider such results the outcome of an improvement in the structure and nature of the economy. It is commonly known that the numerical stability in the commodity price index and the improvement in the international balance of payments are a result of the extraordinary economic recession being suffered at home and abroad. In addition, the great bumper crops attained in agricultural production until recently and last year were a contributory factor.

All these show that the sustaining factors are actually very shaky, unlike what is suggested by the statistical data. It is certain that improvement which is anticipated in the economies of foreign countries will eventually precipitate a sharp increase in prices of materials and resources in the international markets and, as is implied by the term "dumping economy," there lies ahead the danger of a rush of commodity price hikes aimed at compensating for losses incurred in the bargain sales and dumping sales during the recession. Worse yet are the poor crops which may result from the continuing drought.

All this means that the commodity price index is actually very unstable. It is certain that a rise in the prices of imported foreign goods will result from improvement in economies overseas. An increase in imports, which will result from the increasing demand of the improving economy at home, will eventually deepen the deficit in the international balance of payments. In addition, when the spreading protectionism in foreign countries and the dim prospects for construction exports to the Middle East are taken into account, both of which we expect because of the reduction in oil dollars, we can never be optimistic in forecasting the international balance of payments. In this regard, we worry that an economy sustained by the aforementioned unstable factors may be shockingly disturbed by the drastic economic measures.

Needless to say, the radical cut in bank interest rates will precipitate excessive imaginary demands, thus causing a drastic increase in the demand for money. And, this change, if it takes place, must not be construed as sign of increasing investments. There has always been a strong demand for money and the banks were always short of it. But, investment activity by enterprises was always poor.

Like shooting a star down from the skies, it has been extremely difficult to get a loan from a bank. And, to the same degree, the demand for money has been extremely high. But because money was never used for investment in production, the economy was not affected. Even now, there is no guarantee that this situation will change remarkably. If the demand for money, which has nothing to do with production, sharply rises and the money supply increases to meet this demand, as has been the case so far, this will only accelerate inflation. Moreover, savings deposits will be reduced in banks and, as a result, the money printing machines will have to run more rapidly.

These are the factors of domestic instability which will result from cutting bank interest rates. In the field of international economy there is a mere serious factor which will further deepen the deficit in the international balance of payments. Because of the domestic bank interest rates, which are almost 50 percent lower than the interest rates of foreign banks, more and more efforts will be made to pay foreign debts with loans obtained from domestic banks.

This will undoubtedly worsen the shortage of bank money and deter the introduction of foreign capital. And, with low-interest loans obtained from domestic banks, the people, in an effort to hoard their assets in foreign countries, may take foreign currency out of the country. We wonder how this will be controlled. All other foreign countries have, with regret, increased their bank interest rates in an effort to prevent the outflow of foreign currency caused by the high bank interest rates in the United States. Now, we are seeking an opposite policy. We really wonder how the government will handle the outcome of the policy.

We all agree that some epochal measure should be worked out to overcome the economic difficulties and to bridge over the economic recession that could not be worse.

We only think that, if the government had to work out emergency measures, disregarding impact and sacrifice, it could have worked out comprehensive and multipurpose measures which would not only seek to lessen the burden of business enterprises, but also help stabilize and galvanize the ROK economy at home and in the field of the international economy. This is our sincere advice for followup measures.

VOPB: STUDENTS' STRUGGLE CANNOT BE SUPPRESSED

BK301420 (Clandestine) Voice of the People of Burma in Burmese to Burma 0030 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Unattributed article: "May the Glorious Tradition of Students' Struggle Shine Forever"]

[Excerpts] When Burma was under colonial rule, student leader Ko Ba Hein said it is the practice of imperialists to depict politics as something fearsome or despicable in order to scare students away from it. The truth of this statement still holds today.

Even worse is the Ne Win military government. It has drawn the curtains and closed the doors between students and politics and uses its power to stop students from becoming involved in politics. It resorts to all sorts of tricks, including keeping students in different regions so they will not join forces. Students are being coerced into joining the Lanzin and Shayzaung youth groups under the Burma Socialist Program Party. Their attempts, however, will be of no avail as it will be like carrying water in a wicker basket. Perhaps they may have temporary satisfaction, but the long-term objective of such moves will never succeed.

Ever since the military government assumed power, students have persistently struggled against the unjust rule. The military government has also done everything within its power to frenziedly suppress these struggles. The government has also prevented students from joining the struggles of the masses.

During colonial times, despite suppression to prevent the people from understanding politics, mass movements and student movements emerged. In the early days of anti-imperialist struggle and under the national movement led by venerable U Ottama, the student boycott emerged. The student movement, which began on the 10th waning moon of Tazaungmon, 1920, started by opposing the colonial education system. Although the movement was aimed at opposing the Rangoon University Act, which restricted the number of student intellectuals and the level of education national students could have, it had wide repercussions throughout the anti-imperialist front. Thus, the day went down in history as the biggest victory in the anti-imperialist struggle at that time.

Student movements emerged one after the other following that incident. The second student protest occurred again in 1936-37. Together with the "1930" movement which happened in 1938-39, student protests erupted once again. Students actively participated in the 1940-42 anti-imperialist armed struggle, and as members of the Asian Youth League and the Anti-Fascist Revolution Army, they joined the armed struggle against Japanese fascism. Students who were part and parcel of the struggles during colonial times also continued their struggles against successive reactionary governments in the postwar era. The October 1953 student protest and the 1959-60 student incidents should go into the records as student movements of the postwar era.

We have seen that whenever the opportunity arose, students persistently struggled against unjust practices throughout the 17-month rule of the Ne Win caretaker government as well as throughout the rule of the current military regime. We have also seen that students tried to link up their struggle with the workers movements and the struggles by the masses whenever they could.

While trying to keep students out of politics, the military government tries to disrupt the history of student struggles so that future students will not learn from and emulate that glorious tradition. However, that attempt is bound to fail. The history of student struggles is one of students struggling to uphold their interests as well as those of the people. It is a history of movements and sacrifices. The fighting peacock [banner] of the students has had its head bloodied and its body battered at the hands of the enemy but remains unbowed. Boldly and unflinchingly, it will continue to struggle against the enemy of the people and students. May the glorious tradition of student struggle shine forever!

KPRP CENTRAL COMMITTEE HOLDS 4TH PLENUM

["Communique on Fourth KPRP Central Committee Plenum" -- date not given]

[Text] In an atmosphere of great joy and militant solidarity, the Fourth Plenary Session of the KPRP Central Committee was opened on 25 June and ended successfully on 27 June 1982. The plenum held thorough discussions and adopted resolutions on various problems.

1. The plenary session discussed and adopted a resolution on military work;

2. The plenary session evaluated the general situation during the first half of this year and the draft program of action for the second half of 1982;

3. The plenary session disseminated the resolution of the Political Bureau concerning the security work and foreign policy of the Kampuchean party and government.

The party Secretariat will issue concrete plans for dissemination to advise all state organs of all levels throughout the country on the implementation of these significant resolutions.

SON SANN FRONT WELCOMES SIHANOUK OFFER TO MERGE

BK010205 Hong Kong AFP in English 0922 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] Bangkok, June 30 (AFP) -- Son Sann's Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) today welcomed an offer by Prince Norodom Sihanouk to merge his forces with theirs in the new Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea.

Gaffar Peang-Neth, KPNLF deputy secretary general in charge of diplomatic and international affairs, said such a united front would "strengthen the fight" against the 150,000-200,000 Vietnamese troops in Cambodia.

Mr. Gaffar said Prince Sihanouk's offer was being relayed to Son Sann, who is prime minister under the tripartite coalition agreement signed in Kuala Lumpur on Tuesday with Prince Sihanouk and the Khmer Rouge.

Prince Sihanouk, the new chief of state, told a news conference before leaving Singapore yesterday that the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) wanted the nationalists to merge before offering any material aid to the coalition.

SIHANOUK: NO SIGNIFICANCE TO SRV PULLOUT OFFER

[Text] Jakarta, July 1 (AFP) -- A unilateral partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia would have no significance, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of the newly-formed Cambodian coalition government set up to oppose the presence of Vietnamese troops in Cambodia, said here today.

It has no significance, but it is up to the countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), he told a news conference before leaving for Manila.

Prince Sihanouk was commenting on reports from Hanoi that Vietnam might announce a unilateral partial withdrawal of its troops from Cambodia if there were positive signs from the ASEAN countries. The prince said he was very thankful to the ASEAN countries -- Singapore, Malaysia, Thailand, the Philippines and Indonesia -- for their support for his new tripartite coalition government which also includes a nationalist group headed by Son Sann and the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge.

He flatly denied that his regime was a government in exile, emotionally telling reporters, it is not correct as my government has its headquarters on Cambodian soil. However, he was unable to give the exact location of the government headquarters, stressing: We have to keep it secret, otherwise we shall be wiped out by the Vietnamese.

The prince said he had not received an official reply to his offer to merge his forces with the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) headed by Son Sann, who has been named prime minister of the coalition government.

But reports from Bangkok said Mr. Son Sann had welcomed the prince's offer. The reports quoted KPNLF's Deputy Secretary General Gaffar Peang-Neth as saying that the merger would strengthen the front against the estimated 200,000 Vietnamese troops in Cambodia.

Prince Sihanouk said he did not ask for aid during his current tour to ASEAN countries, but added that Indonesia had expressed its desire to help rebuild Cambodia.

The prince stated that he had reached a full agreement with President Suharto on the need of self-determination for the Cambodian people on the basis of mutual respect. The coalition government wanted to build an independent and sovereign Cambodia with the principle of peaceful coexistence with all countries in Southeast Asia, he said.

Answering a question he said he would some day invite ASEAN journalists to visit his headquarters so that they can tell the world that our government really exists in Cambodia.

He said he would visit Bangkok after Manila, and from there would go to Cambodia, probably next week. Then I will go to China and North Korea also to thank them for their support, he said.

Prince Sihanouk said he had planned to visit some European countries, including France, West Germany and Britain to seek support for his government, adding that he might proceed to the United Nations to address the General Assembly and then to Washington. Asked if he thought France could play a big role in the Cambodian problem, Prince Sihanouk said he believed so. President Mitterrand and I are good friends, the prince said, adding that he believed it would be easy for them to communicate with each other.

Prince Sihanouk and party including his wife Princess Monique flew to Manila abroad a special aircraft of the Indonesian Pelita Airline provided by the Indonesian Government. An Indonesian official said the prince had gained an understanding of Indonesia's views on the Cambodian problem.

SIHANOUK MEETS WITH INDONESIAN LEADERS

Vice President Malik

BK301409 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] The formation of the Kampuchean coalition government is aimed at paving the way for a political settlement, and its leaders, Prince Sihanouk, has expressed the hope that a settlement according to the wishes of the Kampuchean people could be attained. This was stated by Vice President Adam Malik this afternoon after meeting Prince Sihanouk at his office on Merdeka Selatan Road in Jakarta.

The coalition government, which was formed in Kuala Lumpur, will be based in Kampuchea but its precise location is yet to be decided. According to Adam Malik, Sihanouk's impending return to Kampuchea is not to wage war but to seek a political settlement and that the road toward this is now open.

The vice president also said that Prince Sihanouk did not raise certain issues and described his courtesy call on President Suharto as very satisfactory.

Prince Sihanouk and his wife, who arrived in Jakarta Tuesday evening as the personal guests of the Vice President and Mrs Adam Malik, will leave for Manila tomorrow.

Acting Foreign Minister Panggabean

BK010817 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0743 GMT 1 Jul 82

[Text] Jakarta, July 1 (ANTARA) -- Foreign Minister ad Interim General Maraden Panggabean paid a courtesy call on visiting Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia here Wednesday and told newsmen later that the visit was merely a courtesy call and "nothing new has been discussed".

The foreign minister ad interim said that he was convinced that a solution would be found with the creation of the coalition government of Cambodia headed by Prince Sihanouk as president. The Cambodian people were willing to forget the past, for example the steps taken by the Pol Pot regime which killed thousands of innocent Cambodians. This would lead towards political consciousness of the Cambodian people to stand on their own feet as an independent nation, the foreign minister (?added).

Prince Norodom Sihanouk, now here on a three-day private visit, said in a statement to the press in Singapore Tuesday that he was willing to dissolve his resistance group to form a single non-communist faction in the new coalition government. He also said that his main international backers, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations -- Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, the Philippines and Indonesia -- want the merger before they offer any material assistance to the coalition formed in Kuala Lumpur last week with Son Sann who heads the Khmer People's National Liberation Front as prime minister and communist Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan as vice president.

General Panggabean said that a settlement would be found of the Cambodian problem with formation of the coalition government not by the use of armed force but by a strong political will that the Cambodian people do not want their national identity being eliminated by the Vietnamese occupation forces. He said it was important that there should be regional peace and stability in the Southeast Asia region as without such peace and stability there could be no development.

During the visit Prince Norodom Sihanouk was flanked by his wife, Princess Monique. Mrs Panggabean was also present. The Cambodian [words indistinct] arrived here Tuesday from Singapore for the visit as private guests of Vice President and Mrs Adam Malik. Earlier in the day the prince paid courtesy calls on President Suharto and Vice President Adam Malik.

PHNOM PENH CONDEMNS COALITION AS 'FADED PICTURE'

BK301244 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Text] The farce staged in Kuala Lumpur on 22 June cast light on a very faded picture of the so-called Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government.

During their rule in Kampuchea, the hands of the three comedians in this farce were stained with the people's blood. World public opinion already knows that the great victory of 7 January 1979 completely broke the iron yoke of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime -- cheap lackeys of the Beijing expansionists -- thus forcing them to flee the country to seek refuge in Thai territory since then.

Regarding the other two Khmer reactionaries -- Sihanouk and Son Sann -- who are exiled feudalists, capitalists and traitors, they have been condemned by the Kampuchean people. But despite their repeated defeats, they are still striving to resort to all perfidious maneuvers in order to revive the Democratic Kampuchean political corpse. The so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, recently formed in Kuala Lumpur, is nothing remarkable. It exists only in appearance. Although Sihanouk, Khieu Samphan and Son Sann have agreed to sit together, their attidude and their fundamental interests will never be in complete agreement. The Pol Pot gang -- the criminals whose hands are stained with the people's blood and who have been strongly condemned by world public opinion -- have taken this opportunity to drag in Sihanouk and Son Sann to be their clowns. Realizing that they are the weakest -- having no armies of their own -- Sihanouk and Son Sann have no other alternative but to go along with Pol Pot. It is true that Beijing is currently using Sihanouk's label to replace Pol Pot's so that when the time comes Pol Pot will drop them without hesitation in order to grab all the power for himself again. In summary, the main aim of each of the three reactionary traitorous Khmers in joining the Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government is to advance their personal interest. Furthermore, this coalition government exists only in form. It has no territory and no people. Up to now it has only survived in Thai territory. Therefore it has no force whatsoever to hinder the advance of our people's revolution.

The Kampuchean people know very well the traitorous faces of Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan. They are determined to follow the correct and wise leadership of the KPRP to defeat all perfidious tricks of all types of reactionary forces. For more than 3 years, the Kampuchean revolution has grown and developed in all fields -- political, military, economic, social and diplomatic -- and is advancing toward achieving greater victories.

The Government of the People's Republic of Kampuchea is the only authentic and legitimate representative of the Kampuchean people because it has been elected by the Kampuchean people throughout the country in a general election.

Because of this, the Kampuchean people are very pleased with the new regime and determined to firmly defend and strengthen this regime in order to make the independent and peaceful Kampuchean fatherland advance step by step toward authentic socialism.

As for the Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government of the three reactionary and traitorous Khmers -- Sihanouk, Khieu Samphan and Son Sann -- which is a picture created by the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing expansionists -- it will be unable to reverse the realities in Kampuchea.

KAMPUCHEA COMMENTARY CALLS COALITION 'NEW CORPSE'

[KAMPUCHEA commentary: "New Corpse" -- date not given]

[Text] As you will recall, before the convening of the 15th ASEAN foreign ministers meeting in Singapore, the Chinese expansionist clique and the U.S. imperialists planned to gather the three Khmer reactionary groups for a meeting in Geneva. However, because of the emergency situation, Beijing and the U.S., with the support of the ASEAN countries, decided after the Singapore meeting to force the three exiled Khmer reactionary groups to go to Kuala Lumpur in order to sign the declaration on the formation of the coalition government on 22 June.

Their so-called coalition government, still bearing the name Democratic Kampuchea, simply amounts to replacing the old corpse with the new corpse made up of Khmer traitors to the nation and people and feudal high officials.

There is no doubt that this is nothing but a dark and dirty maneuver of the Chinese expansionist clique, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and the international reactionaries, to maintain the Kampuchean seat at the United Nations for the Democratic Kampuchean corpse which stinks all over the world because of the barbarous acts of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique, Therefore, the so-called coalition government is just a new shroud to cover the Democratic Kamouchea corpse.

Various Western diplomats have noted that this is only an alliance without any basis or mutual trust because the three Khmer reactionary groups have fought and quarreled in public for the chimera of power.

International public opinion is mystified over the appointment of the murderer Khieu Samphan to the position in charge of foreign affairs because he represents the Democratic Kampuchean corpse — A genocidal regime -- which is hated and rejected by the world. Everybody knows that Khieu Samphan with the chief hangmen Pol Pot and Ieng Sary are murderers who commited genocide against more than 3 million Kampucheans. Sihanouk — a malicious coward and anachronistic prince -- cheaply sold his fatherland and nation by letting Beijing and Washington put him into a common cage with the genocidal regime. For his princely ambitions, Sihanouk has grossly insulted the soul of more than 3 million Kampucheans who tragically died under the Democratic Kampuchean regime. The millionaire Son Sann dreamed of returning to exploit the Kampuchean people. In summary, Sihanouk and Son Sann are tarred with the same brush of genocide as the murderer Khieu Samphan.

The loose alliance of the so-called coalition government, gathering the three Khmer reactionary groups is, as (?MERDEKA) reported, trying the impossible of putting a tiger, a cobra and a wild cat in the same cage. The comic opera of creating the so-called coalition government of the three Khmer reactionary groups, which was coordinated by Beijing and Washington, cannot confuse anybody.

It is regrettable that the ASEAN countries have let themselves be used by the Chinese and the U.S. to oppose the Indochinese countries and cause instability in Southeast Asia. The Kampuchean revolution is firmly advancing. During the past more than 3 years, the Kampuchean people have scored great victories in all fields. No reactionary force can reverse the situation in Kampuchea. The Government of the People's Republic of Kampuchea is the sole legitimate representative of the Kampuchean people at the United Nations as well as in other international organizations.

BRIEFS

SRV-AIDED PUMPING STATION -- Phnom Penh, 23 Jun (SPK) -- The building of a pumping station at Prek Samraong, Kandal Province, has just been completed with the help of the Vietnamese waterworks service from Ben Tre Province. [Text] A delegation of the LPDR Central Agricultural Cooperative Committee and a delegation of the Soviet Federation of Consumption Cooperatives held talks in Vientiane on the afternoon of 30 June 1982 to discuss and exchange views on lessons in carrying out the agricultural cooperative work. The Lao delegation was headed by Khamsen Vongnokeo, acting chief of the Central Leading Committee for Agricultural Cooperatives, while the Soviet delegation was headed by Nesterenko, vice chairman of the Soviet Federation of Consumption Cooperatives.

In the meeting, the Lao side informed the Soviet side of the general situation on the organization and progress of agricultural cooperative work in the recent past in order to create a basis for adoption of a plan on cooperation and assistance in the immediate future.

NATIONWIDE ANTIDROUGHT CAMPAIGN LAUNCHED

BK301230 Vientiane KPL in English 0911 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] Vientiane, June 30 (OANA-KPL) -- The Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Irrigation recently launched an anti-drought campaign throughout the country.

According to the recent forecast of the Meteorology Department, insufficient rainfall might affect the current main rice crops until the middle of next month.

In view to guarantee this year's rice production, Khamphet Phoummavan, deputy minister of agriculture, forestry and irrigation, has urged all production bases to speedily make use of all means to irrigate their crops.

According to the ministry report, five southern provinces have so far completed sowing rice seeds, and completed transplanting rice on 15 percent of the total rice fields.

Petroleum, fertilizers and pesticides were also supplied to various pumping stations and production bases.

SITTHI RETURNS FROM EUROPE, DISCUSSES KAMPUCHEA

BK301605 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Begin recording] We are now providing them with both political and moral support. During my tour of Europe, many countries expressed their willingness to help the coalition government with food and other material supplies. They did not mention military aid. It is good that they have formed their own government because they can now draw more support from ASEAN and other countries. It gives them the right to receive foreign aid. Foreign countries are now giving assistance to relieve the plight of the Kampuchean refugees along the border. They might later give assistance to the coalition government directly. In the past, foreign assistance reached the Kampuchean people through Phnom Penh. We have no objection to that. The assistance came from the Soviet Union, international organizations and East European countries which recognize the Phnom Penh government.

[Answer] I think he will stay in Bangkok for 3 or 4 days before proceeding to Kampuchea. [end recording]

Asked if he would run in the next general election, the foreign minister replied: [begin recording] I must first resign from the Senate and officially inform the prime minister if I am going to run in the election. [end recording]

NATION REVIEW VIEWS SIHANOUK-SON SANN MERGER

[Editorial: "Time Not Ripe for Son Sann, Sihanouk Unity"]

[Text] It is less than a fortnight ago that the leaders of the three anti-Vietnamese Khmer factions signed the agreement bringing into fruition the long-disputed Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea. But within this short time there has been a lot of talk, some new ideas and some behind-the-scenes international reaction. Once the signing was completed in Kuala Lumpur, Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan returned to his jungle headquarters. However, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, now the president of Democratic Kampuchea, assumed a role which we have always thought most suitable for him -- the role of ambassador-at-large for Kampuchea.

At the moment he is visiting ASEAN capitals -- after all, ASEAN was the instigator of the coalition which it worked hard to bring about -- and airing several views and listening to ideas. We are particularly interested in the idea that the guerrilla forces under the leadership of Sihanouk and Son Sann should join forces. On the face of it, that is a very good idea, but there are several pitfalls since it should not be a coalition within a coalition. The coalition agreement that has been signed reserves the right for each group to get whatever foreign aid it can get without pooling it.

It is well known that, internationally, the image of the Khmer Rouge is badly blotched because of its genocidal practices during the three years it was in power. However, it must be conceded that they have taken the brunt of the fighting against the mighty Vietnamese army since the beginning of 1979. There has never been much enthusiasm for supporting the Khmer Rouge even among countries like Australia which totally condemn Vietnamese aggression. From our point of view, improving the image of the coalition, despite partnership with the Khmer Rouge, largely falls on the shoulders of Sihanouk and his reputation is big enough to carry that burden.

Sihanouk himself was one of those who suffered under the Khmer Rouge and, except perhaps for Chinese interest in him, he might have been 'liquidated.' And that fact alone will give him high credibility when he speaks for the coalition, for he has put personal emotions behind his patriotism. While his prestige may be increased by joining forces with Son Sann, it may be viewed by the Khmer Rouge leaders who have been highly suspicious of the coalition as bifurcating the tripartite aggreement.

Further, China, which has always been lukewarm to the formation of the coalition, may suspect outside pressures when none exist. China's role in the Kampuchean conflict must not be underestimated since she has been the one who has supplied the Khmer Rouge the necessities to keep them fighting the guerrilla war. ASEAN's efforts have always been directed to find a political solution for Kampuchea and these have been made difficult because of the tarnished image of the Khmer Rouge.

Considering these various factors, it would be wise for both Sihanouk and Son Sann to tread warily for some time until there is some clear indication of international reaction which Sihanouk, personally, and others from reports [as published] will be able to judge personally. Obviously when he comes to bangkok on Saturday and later goes to western Kampuchea to set up the new coalition government, he would again meet Son Sann and Khieu Samphan. That would be an ideal time for the three leaders to discuss and plan a political strategy since Sihanouk would carry with him the various ideas of the ASEAN leaders.

POST: KHMER REFUGEES READY TO WELCOME SIHANOUK

[Text] Khao-Idang -- Khmer refugees at Ta Phraya holding centre near the Thai-Kampuchean border are looking forward to the scheduled visit this weekend of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, but doubt that the coalition government he leads will be able to drive out the Vietnamese occupation forces.

The refugees also said that they strongly mistrust the Khmer Rouge -- apparently as a result of the cruel experience they endured during the three years under the murderous Pol Pot regime.

In an interview with the Bangkok POST at the camp early this week, In Thoeun, 23, a refugee from Takeo, said he was glad when he heard from a relief worker that Prince Sihanouk, the president of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, planned to visit Khmers along the border and inside Kampuchea next week. He said many of his friends welcomed the appointment of the prince as head of the anti-Vietnamese resistance and were looking forward to his visit. In Thoeun said that the refugees longed for the return of peace in Kampuchea so that they can return home. He said they were frustrated by the continued fighting. But he doubted that the coalition would be able to dislodge the Vietnamese forces.

Another refugee, Kuang Huen, from Poipet, told the POST that those in the camp suffered an aimless and hopeless existence because they had not been accepted for resettlement. "If the prince can form a government in Kampuchea, we will be pleased to go back with him to reconstruct our country," he said, adding he still did not trust the Khmer Rouge.

Another refugee who did not wish to be identified said he would like friendly countries to provide the coalition with arms, food, medicines and other necessities.

A Khmer Serei guerrilla chieftain told the POST that though he agreed with the coalition government concept, he deeply mistrusted the Khmer Rouge. He said he was afraid the Khmer Rouge might doublecross them after they successfully drive out the Vietnamese.

But Mit Sok Piav, a deputy commander of Khmer Rouge Division 474 based in the Phnum Malai Range, said he wanted the Khmer people to forget the past and work together against their common enemy, the Vietnamese.

LAWYERS TEAM CALLS ON SRV TO DISCUSS CBW CHARGES

[Text] Bangkok, July 1 (AFP) -- An Asian lawyers' team has called on Vietnam to "come forward in open forum" to discuss charges of chemical warfare, aid diversion and human-rights violations in Indochina.

The call, in a cable made available here today to AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE, was addressed to the Hanoi-based Association of Vietnamese Jurists by the self-styled Asian Lawyers' Legal Inquiry Committee.

Last month, the Vietnamese group dismissed as a propaganda ploy a weeklong investigation by the inquiry committee into alleged toxic warfare and the other charges.

The inquiry panel, with members from India, Bangladesh, Indonesia, Singapore and Thailand, said on June 10 it was "morally certain" that chemical weapons had indeed been used in Laos and Cambodia. A bitter statement carried by the VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY on June 5 had condemned the inquiry as suiting the scheme of Chinese expansionists and U.S. imperialists against the people of Indochina."

In the new cable to Hanoi, the panel called on Vietnam to "explain its prejudiced stand condemning our inquiry from the outset", noting Vietnam's denunciation had come "even before our inquiry had begun."

"Furthermore, we call upon Vietnam to come forward in open forum to discuss the grave issues we are examining," said the cable, signed Chana Samutthawanit, chairman of the inquiry group.

POST: STRAY SRV SHELLS HIT THAI BORDER AREAS

BK300239 Bangkok POST in English 30 Jun 82 p 3

[Text] Prachin Buri -- Stray mortor shells, fired by Vietnamese forces in Kampuchea, again fell into Ban Non Mak Mun of Ta Phraya District yesterday, Thai military sources here reported. The Vietnamese fired 17 of the 82mm mortar rounds into the border area at 2 p.m., and some strayed into the now largely-deserted village of Ban Non Mak Mun, 20 kilometers northeast of Aranyaprathet. No one was injured by the shells fired from Yang Village in Kampuchea some four kilometers from the border, sources said.

According to the sources a Khmer Serei force of 300 to 500 men under the leadership of a pro-Son Sann commander, Chey Chhaiya, 35, is operating in Kampuchea opposite the Thai village.

On Monday Vietnamese forces attacked the Khmer Rouge stronghold on Phanom Mak Huen Mountain opposite the Thai village of Ban Laem Nong-ian. The two sides fired heavy artillery and recoilless rifles at each other for 40 minutes in the rain.

The Bangkok POST also learned yesterday that four light planes, believed to be Cessnas, flew from Kampuchea into Thai air-space on June 23 at about 7 p.m. The planes circled for about half an hour around Ban Thapthai of Ta Phraya District, 10 kilometers from the border. They then flew off but at about 1 a.m. the next day a similar single-engined plane flew over the same area for about 20 minutes.

Sources in the Ninth Division, which is in charge of security in the border area, suspected that the planes were either on reconnaissance flights or dropping weapons and other supplies to the pro-Soviet faction of the Thai Communists.

ARMY HELICOPTER DOWNED IN NAN BY GROUNDFIRE

[Text] Eight men were missing after an army helicopter was downed by communist groundfire in Pua District of Nan Province Tuesday, Radio Thailand announced last night. Chopper No 5547 and another were flying logistic supplies to government forces of the Civilian-Police-Military Command 32 on Doi Phu Pa Mountain, Pua District. The pilot of the No. 5547 helicopter reported at about 11 a.m. that his craft was hit by groundfire and was going to make an emergency landing. Later it lost contact. Radio Thailand said there were two pilots, two mechanics and four passengers on the ill-fated craft.

SITTHI ANNOUNCES JOINING SOCIAL ACTION PARTY

[Excerpts] Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila announced yesterday that he will join the Social Action Party [SAP]. ACM Sitthi told newsmen of his decision upon his return from a one-week visit to Vienna yesterday evening. He did not say whether he would run in next year's general elections, saying only that he was in the process of resigning from the Senate in order to join SAP. ACM Sitthi added that his visit to Vienna had resulted in an improved understanding with Austria's leaders.

SIX MUSLIMS CHARGED WITH BOMB PLANTING, SEDITION

BK300307 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 30 Jun 82 p 6

[Text] Six Muslim youths were yesterday formally charged in the military court for their alleged connection with the planting of a dud timebomb at the site of the international trade fair at Hua Mak on March 30. They were also accused of being members of the BRN [Barisan Revolusi Nasional] separatist movement which seeks to secede three southernmost provinces from Thailand. The six were among 14 Muslim youths -- many of whom are students or Ramkhamhaeng University -- who were arrested in two separate swoops at the Khlong Chan housing units in early April.

The public prosecutor said eight of them were released during the course of investigation because there was no substantial evidence against them.

The six who were prosecuted in the court yesterday were identified as A-wae Maseng, Che-wae U-seng Hayiche-wae, Royali Lama, Che-kada Chemae, Baraheng Duerako and A-sae Burasai. The prosecutor said the six, in collaboration with another two persons still at large, allegedly planted a timebomb at the site of the Hua Mak international trade fair but it failed to go off. The defendants allegedly intended to instigate unrest among the people and sought to threaten national security, the prosecutor said.

The defendants later distributed leaflets on behalf of the BRN in Pratunam area to propagate the movement. Four of the defendants confessed to the charges but the two others denied them.

The court yesterday set the first hearings for Friday.

NHAN DAN SCORES THAI AID OFFER TO DK COALITION

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 1 -- NHAN DAN today says that the Thai Government's intention to give military aid to Kampuchean reactionaries runs counter to the very interests of Thailand. The paper recalls that at a press conference on June 23 Thai Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon said Thailand would consider aid, military and otherwise, to the "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea", reasoning that the stronger that alliance the safer the Thai-Kampuchean border, and that the setting up of such a government would benefit Thailand's security. What causes instability on the Thai-Kampuchean border is China's use of Pol Pot remnants and other Kampuchean reactionaries against the People's Republic of Kampuchea... In many cases, the Thai Army has acted in support of the reactionaries."

"To give more weapons to these elements now would increase the tension and instability" the paper says, adding that Bangkok's intention would also jeopardize peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

"By invoking its security", the paper continues, "Thailand wants to justify its compliance with Beijing's scheme and to influence other ASEAN countries. But the fact is that some ASEAN states and even a number of Western countries, though approving the tripartite coalition, have denied military aid to it, knowing that this would exacerbate tension and serves the policy of China. Some ASEAN countries have also seen more clearly that the main danger to Southeast Asia is Chinese expansionism and hegemonism, and they agree that it is necessary to enter into a dialogue with Vietnam".

"The real interest of the nations in this region is to entertain neighbourly relations and to live in peace and friendship. Dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries is necessary to pave the way for a Southeast Asia of peace, stability and cooperation" NHAN DAN says. "The ASEAN countries should see this reality and adopt a practical attitude" the paper concludes.

ENVOY CRITICIZES U.S. AT UN DISARMAMENT SESSION

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 1 -- Vietnamese UN Ambassador Vo Anh Tuan has exposed the perfidy of the repeated charges made by the United States against the Soviet Union and Vietnam regarding chemical weapons.

Addressing the special session of the U.N. General Assembly on disarmament in New York on June 29, Vo Anh Tuan described the allegations made by U.S. Representative Samuel Stratton as "a false alarm raised by a thief to throw off pursuers". Samuel Stratton did nothing to contribute to the work of the U.N. General Assembly, Vo Anh Tuan said. Recalling that U.N. experts had concluded in their reports to the 36th General Assembly that the charges were groundless, the Vietnamese ambassador pointed out: "The United States, guilty of chemical warfare in Vietnam, now acts as the accuser while turning Vietnam, victim of its chemical weapons, into the accused."

"By stepping up this slander campaign", Vo Anh Tuan went on, "the U.S. Government tries to divert public opinion from its decision to produce new chemical weapons including binary arms and to deploy them in foreign countries."

CUBAN SOLIDARITY OFFICIAL RECEIVES AWARD

OW301732 Hanoi VNA in English 1525 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 30 -- The Vietnamese Embassy in Havana yesterday handed over to Rene Cruz Rodriguez, member of the Communist Party of Cuba Central Committee and president of the Cuban Committee of Solidarity With Vietnam and the Cuban Institute of Friendship With the Peoples, the Friendship Order awarded by the Vietnamese Council of State.

Present at the presentation were Jesus Oropesa Montane, alternate Political Bureau member, and head of the General Department of Foreign Relations, of the C.P.C. Central Committee; and representatives of the Cuban Foreign Ministry and other organizations concerned.

The recipient thanked the Vietnamese state for this honour and affirmed the Cuban friendship organizations' continued contributions to the fraternal friendship and militant solidarity between Cuba and Vietnam. He also reiterated the full support of the Cuban party, government and people for the Vietnamese People's National Construction and Defence.

TAP CHI CONG SAN ARTICLE ON FOREIGN POLICY

BK301245 Hanoi TAP CHI CONG SAN No 5 in Vietnamese May 82 pp 85-93

[Article by Vu Tien: "The World Situation and Our Party and State's Foreign Policy" -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] In the 1970's -- and particularly since 1975 -- there have been swift and profound changes in the world situation. The world revolution has vigorously developed its strategic offensive stance and has won extremely important victories. The balance of power has clearly shifted to the advantage of the revolutionary and peace forces. Imperialism and reactionary forces have suffered repeated setbacks and retreated step by step. The emergence of the counterrevolutionary assault force -- the Beijing reactionary clique -- has not been able to reverse the balance of power, even though it has caused difficulties to the world revolution. Nevertheless, the "who will triumph over whom" struggle in the world is still going on in a difficult and violent manner.

THE OFFENSIVE STANCE OF THE WORLD REVOLUTION

Mankind is now at a stage where no force can prevent the uprising of nations. A genuine revolution is apt to be successful and stand firm even if it occurs on a small island. Over the past years, THE NATIONAL LIBERATION AND INDEPENDENCE MOVEMENT HAS DEVELOPED WITH A NEW STRENGTH AND A NEW DIMENSION AND WITH INCREASINGLY PROFOUND SOCIAL CHANGES. The last positions of colonialism are being wiped out, while neocolonialism has been dealt heavy blows. During the past 5 or 6 years, an additional 20 countries have gained their independence. The formation of a bloc of socialist countries in the Indochinese Peninsula is of utmost importance. It is a solid southern vanguard post of the socialist system and a factor for ensuring peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The successful revolution in Afghanistan is an important breakthrough in southwestern Asia. The Islamic revolution in Iran is a special phenomenon, reflecting a new victory of the struggle for national liberation. Portuguese colonies in Africa have been liberated, leading to the emergence of revolutionary and progressive states. Zimbabwe has basically ended the rule of the apartheid regime. Namibia is on the threshold of national independence. The scope of the liberation struggle in the republic of South Africa has been widened. In the Middle East, the struggle against imperialism and its lackeys has developed unprecedentedly strongly. Progressive Arab countries such as Syria, Libya, Algeria and the PLO hold high the banner against the Camp David agreement and the U.S. policy of sowing dissension among the Arab countries. In Latin America, U.S. imperialism and its lackeys have been dealt a heavy blow in Nicaragua. The guerrilla war in El Salvador is developing with every passing day and winning victories. The protests against the dictatorial militarist regimes in Guatemala and other countries in Central America and the Caribbean Area are growing. India's role in the struggle for peace against imperialism in the Nonaligned Movement has been enhanced.

Noteworthy is the fact that many countries, after having gained their independence, have chosen the socialist path and embarked on many broad and profound economic, cultural and social transformations and are united closely with the socialist countries on the diplomatic front. NATIONAL INDEPENDENCE LINKED TO SOCIALISM IS AN OUTSTANDING AND EVER GROWING TREND IN THE PRESENT ERA.

The developing countries, especially the nonaligned, play an increasingly important role in international relations and in the struggle for peace, security and disarmament against colonialism and neocolonialism, racism and Zionism. The developing countries represent more than two-thirds of the UN members and have an important voice in solving world issues. As vital sources of raw materials, fuel and energy for the capitalist countries, they are struggling fiercely to regain the right to mastership over their natural resources, to win the right to equality in trade relations with the capitalist countries and to establish a new world economic order.

In the capitalist countries, THE STRUGGLE MOVEMENT OF THE WORKING CLASS AND OTHER LABORING PEOPLE HAS DEVELOPED DEEPLY, BROADLY, SEETHINGLY AND CONTINUOUSLY IN DIVERSIFIED FORM. Over the past 10 years, the total number of people who have taken part in work strikes has been 250 million. There are new characteristics of the movement in these countries: The struggle is no longer limited to economic problems as in the past, but has switched its focus to conflicts with the monopolistic capitalist states; the scope of struggle is no longer within an enterprise or a corporation, but now covers each production sector, each economic field or an entire country; and the social forces participating in the struggle are becoming ever larger. The "spring offensive" in Japan, the "hot autumn" in Italy and work strikes in many provinces of Canada and the Federal Republic of Germany and throughout the United States, England and elsewhere are lively manifestations of the class struggle in the capitalist countries. The acute social conflict in northern European countries, once considered the "fortress of class peace," is a new phenomenon. Strong factors in the movement are the national and international campaigns against war and for peace in West Europe and the United States, with the participation of numerous circles of different tendencies and of parliamentarians and national activists. In many capitalist countries, the communist parties have been able to develop a great influence. The takeover of power by the leftists in France was a new and significant phenomenon.

IN THE GENERAL OFFENSIVE STANCE OF THE THREE REVOLUTIONARY CURRENTS IN THE WORLD, the decisive role belongs to world socialism which is the center that attracts all other revolutionary forces. Realistic socialism has over the past years won new successes. The socialist countries have increased their strength rapidly in all respects; developed production forces, including scientific and technological forces, on a larger scale and with a better quality; and constantly improved socialist production relations and the people's material and cultural life. The superiority of socialism is clearly reflected in the stabilization and development of the economy and the relatively high rate of development. In particular, the average annual rate of development in industrial production has increased more than twofold over the capitalist countries. With a population accounting for 10 percent of the world population, the CEMA member countries in 1950 achieved only 18 percent of world industrial output; by 1978 this percentage had increased to one-third. Over the past 10 years, the Soviet Union alone more than doubled its fixed assets over the previous 10 years, while its production forces have now reached standards for quality. The gap in economic development between the Soviet Union and the United States has diminished: In 1950 Soviet industrial output represented only 30 percent of U.S. industrial output; in 1978 it rose to 80 percent. In 1980 the Soviet Union surpassed the United States and ranked first in the world in the production of mineral oil, natural gas, steel, fertilizer and cement.

Particularly important is the fact that the socialist countries have strengthened their national defense forces and achieved a balance of military power between the Soviet Union and the United States and between the Warsaw and NATO blocs. This is a firm guarantee of the security of fraternal and friendly countries and of world peace.

With ever deeper economic cooperation and with close coordination in the political ideological and diplomatic fields, the socialist countries have constantly developed the strength of each country as well as the strength of the entire community. The area and influence of socialism has been unceasingly consolidated and expanded throughout the world. As analyzed in the political report of the party Central Committee presented by Comrade Le Duan at the fifth party congress, "despite certain difficulties in the process of advance and the betrayal of the Chinese leadership, the socialist system has created a combined strength greater than that of the imperialist and reactionary forces. With the Soviet Union as the pillar, the socialist system is ever more vigorously developing its role as a factor deciding the developmental trends of society, a firm bastion of peace and a reliable support for the revolutionary struggle of the world peoples." Today, only by holding fast to the stand of socialism can we correctly analyze the world situation, recognize the fundamental trends and features of the era, and understand that the most important strength of the world proletariat lies in the forces of the socialist countries of which THE SOVIET UNION IS THE PILLAR. All contentions that renounce socialist realism and negate or belittle the role of the Soviet Union are erroneous.

OVERALL DECLINE OF CAPITALISM

While socialism and the revolutionary forces are rapidly growing bigger and stronger, WORLD CAPITALISM FALLS EVER DEEPER INTO AN OVERALL DECLINE. Following two consecutive economic crises in the 1970's (1974-75 and 1979-80), the capitalist economy, after a period of recuperation, again entered a recession in mid-1981.

One of the most noticeable features of the current stage of the general crisis facing capitalism is that all of the problems facing capitalism and all of its intrinsic contradictions have come violently to the fore. The result of three cyclic economic crises that have broken out since the 1970's is that inflation and unemployment have grown at an unprecedented rate and the whole system of domestic and international economic relations of capitalism has become increasingly unstable. The measures taken by the monopoly capitalist state to readjust the economy have had very little effect. When applying anti-inflation measures, the bourgeois governments only worsen the slump in production and aggravate unemployment; and when trying to check economic recession, they only end up with increasing inflation. Therefore, the rate of economic development of the key capitalist countries is tending to slow down.

In the last decade, the average annual growth rate of the gross national product of these countries dropped to one-fourth of that in the 1960's; and that of industrial production dropped to almost one-third. An important indication of economic crisis is that in the 1974-80 period the average annual rate of increase in labor productivity of all the developing capitalist countries put together dropped 200 percent as compared with 13 years earlier. In the early 1980's, labor productivity of all nonagricultural sectors of the United States decreased by approximately 2 percent over 1978. According to an assessment by UNCTAD, the average annual growth rate of gross national product of the developing capitalist countries in the 1980's will drop to one-fourth as compared with the 1970's and one-half as compared with the 1960's. THIS TREND IS, TO A GREAT DEGREE, THE RESULT OF A CYCLIC RECESSION PATTERN -- especially the 1974-75 crisis, the greatest since World War II -- AND AT THE SAME TIME, OF THE INCREASING EMERGENCE OF NONCYCLIC CONTRADICTIONS.

Most important of all are the rapid surge of inflation and sectoral and structural crises (concerning energy, raw materials, finances and money, grain and so forth), the rising struggle movement for economic independence of peoples of liberated countries (directed against the rear base of capitalism), and the growing competition among imperialist countries for old and new sources of raw material and for investment areas. All these factors are closely related to the cyclic development of capitalist production.

Inflation is one of the noncyclical factors that has heavy socio-economic consequences. Economic recession coupled with soaring prices -- the phenomenon of "stagflation" -- is a new feature of the capitalist economy. It has developed widely since the 1970's. Formerly, inflation tended normally to increase only in the stages of restoration and prosperity of various economic cycles. As for periods of crisis when demands and the people's standard of living fell, prices did not increase or increased slowly. Now, inflation scars quickly in all the evolutionary cycles of the capitalist economy. From 1973 to 1980, the average annual rate of price increase in the developed capitalist countries was 10 percent. During the 1980-81 period, the general price index for products and commodities in the private economic sector increased by approximately one-fourth. As a result, the real income of workers decreased, while the income of capitalist groups rapidly increased. In 1981, the officially registered unemployment rate of developed capitalist countries exceeded 25 million people (more than 7 percent of the total number of working-age people).

The rapid development of "stagflation" has led to CHANGES IN THE BALANCE OF PRODUCTION POTENTIALS AND VIOLENT CONTRADICTIONS AMONG THE MAJOR CAPITALIST COUNTRIES. Nowadays, competition among the capitalist countries is no longer aimed at accelerating economic development but at strenuously preventing the economy from declining further and at avoiding the effects of galloping inflation. In this competition, those countries whose economy has been heavily burdened by the costs of the arms race, are losing the most because of increases in prices and recession in production cycles. During the 1970's and the early years of the 1980's, the rating of the United States and the United Kingdom in the gross industrial product of the major capitalist countries decreased, while the positions of Japan and the Federal Republic of Germany were enhanced.

An extremely fierce trade and currency war is taking place among the United States, Western Europe and Japan, which is threatening to become a political contradiction. In 1980, Japan had a surplus in $15 billion in exports to the United States ($20 billion in 1982). One-fourth of the cars sold in the United States came from Japan. Japanese competition in the United States has expanded to areas considered "inviolable" such as electronics and precision equipment. To cope with this situation, the United States has increased the interest rate, devaluing and draining Western European currencies and aggravating the economic recession in Western Europe. In 1981, the French franc fell by 33 percent against the dollar and 6 billion francs were moved abroad. Within 19 months prior to July 1981, 27 billion German marks had left the FRG.

The economic difficulties and the trade and currency war have led to THE POLITICAL DIFFERENCES BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND WESTERN EUROPE AND BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND JAPAN over some issues related to the socialist and national independent countries, especially those countries abounding in raw materials and fuel.

The United States wants to destroy East-West detente, but its European allies cannot reject the great benefits which detente brought them during the 1970's. The United States wants to impose "economic sanctions" on the Soviet Union, but the Western Europe countries have found in the Soviet Union and other socialist countries a wide market and a stable and abundant source of raw materials and fuel which have helped them get out of the economic crises. (At present, the Soviet Union is meeting 30 percent of Western Europe's demand for uranium for nuclear reactors. According to the November 1981 agreement, from 1985 to the end of the century, the Soviet Union will provide these countries with 40 billion cubic meters of natural gas, or 25 percent of the total requirement of Western Europe for gas.)

The United States has pressured the West European countries into expanding NATOS' scope of activities toward the Persian Gulf, having their armed forces cooperate with the U.S. "Rapid Deployment Force" and increasing their military budgets. It has also pressed for the deployment of its medium-range nuclear weapons and neutron bombs in Western Europe. But the European countries are resisting this pressure. They realize that Europe now has the largest arsenal of nuclear weapons and that should war break out, Europe will become a major battlefield.

The United States has also pressured Japan into increasing its military budget and readjusting its balance of trade with the United States. But it is not easy to compel Japan to surrender to the U.S. will.

With regard to the developing countries, the United States is inclined toward using military force against various movements fighting for national independence, while U.S. allies want to use political, economic and diplomatic pressure rather than create a direct confrontation.

However, wicked by nature, all the imperialist countries have adopted the same view of opposing socialism and various revolutionary movements. Moreover, the United States' economic and military strengths now serve as a guarantee for it to exert pressure on various capitalist countries which are U.S. allies.

THE COUNTEROFFENSIVE OF THE IMPERIALISTS AND REACTIONARIES AND THE STRUGGLE FOR PEACE

The imperialists and reactionaries are frenziedly launching a counteroffensive to avoid an economic crisis and to cope with the international movement. Due to the current balance of forces and with the impossibility of constant direct confrontation. THEIR COUNTEROFFENSIVE HAS TAKEN PLACE UNDER MANY FORMS. They have waged "proxy" wars and counterrevolutionaries after arming them with weapons. They have engineered coups d'etat in many countries. They have employed the "peaceful process" to interfere in the internal affairs of our countries as in the case of Poland. They have advocated the use of military pressure, economic blockade and "economic sanctions." They have stepped up psychological warfare, promoted an "anticommunist doctrine" and "anti-Soviet doctrine", and used bourgeois doctrine and reactionary culture as a means to undermine our ideology and religion as a means to control the masses. In other words, they have resorted to every sophisticated and cunning trick to sabotage and sow dissension among us, to prevent revolutionary developments and to counter the influence of socialism in the world.

It is especially noted that the U.S. imperialists are launching a GLOBAL COUNTEROFFENSIVE IN ORDER TO MATERIALIZE THEIR AMBITION TO REGAIN MILITARY SUPERIORITY AND LOST POSITIONS, TO CHECK THE WORLD'S LIBERATION MOVEMENT, AND TO REESTABLISH U.S. CONTROL OVER THE IMPERIALIST SYSTEM. In collusion with Beijing, the U.S. imperialists have readjusted their global counterrevolutionary strategy by directing the spearhead toward the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. Since mid-1978, the U.S. imperialists have stepped up the arms race at an unprecedented rate, trying to develop all sorts of mass-killing weapons including neutron bombs and biological weapons, to bring medium-range nuclear missiles to Europe, to brazenly spread propaganda on "limited nuclear war", to rekindle the "cold war" and to sabotage detente. They have openly used force to attack the national liberation movement which they have slandered as "international terrorism." They have expanded and strengthened their system of military bases everywhere, formed a "Rapid Deployment Force," conducted many sabre-rattling military exercises and intensively provided arms to many dictatorial and reactionary regimes in various areas to fan the flames of arms conflicts and create new hotbeds of tension.

The United States and the reactionaries have interfered in the internal affairs of Poland in an attempt to overthrow the socialist administration there and sabotage the socialist system from within. In Southeast Asia, the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists have, in collusion with the imperialists, carried out multifaceted sabotage activities against the Indochinese countries and have rallied various counterrevolutionary forces to sabotage the peace and security of the many countries in the region.

THE ADVENTUROUS MILITARY POLICY OF THE U.S. IMPERIALISTS AND REACTIONARIES IS AN EXTREMELY SERIOUS THREAT TO WORLD PEACE. However, the present balance of forces does not permit them to implement this policy easily. The integrated strength of the socialist system, of which the Soviet Union is the mainstay, is superior to the imperialist strength. Socialism, which is a little inferior to imperialism from the economic viewpoint, possesses not only political superiority but also a military force equivalent to that of imperialism. Considering the strength of the three revolutionary currents, we can say that this is the great strength capable of frustrating all of the imperialist and reactionary plots. Another factor is that it is not easy for the imperialists to muster their forces to wage war. The tendencies to internationalize socio-economic life in the world and to trade in a manner beneficial to both sides are developing their effects. Moreover, the arms race is no longer an effective means for the capitalist countries to extricate themselves from economic crises. It does not stimulate the entire imperialist economy but only stimulates a small component of modern military industries. While during the 1950's and 1960's, West Europe sided with the United States to wage a "cold war" against the Soviet Union and other socialist countries, during the 1970's the tendency toward detente was increasingly taking deep root in West European societies.

As for the value of the "Chinese card," it is not as great as expected by the U.S. imperialists. The Chinese card cannot help the United States create a position of strength over the Soviet Union, reverse the trend of detente and the situation in Kampuchea and Afghanistan and other places, or cause a confrontation between ASEAN and the Indochinese countries. Consequently, THE CAPABILITY OF PRESERVING PEACE EXISTS PRACTICALLY.

The characteristics of imperialists and reactionaries are to wage war and conduct military adventures. The imperialist countries still have the economic and military potential to wage war. If ever a nuclear war occurs, their existing colossal depots of nuclear weapons will bring disaster to the world and, obviously, to the country waging the war itself. Consequently, THE STRUGGLE TO PROTECT PEACE, prevent a nuclear war and maintain readiness to cope with a conventional war likely to be waged by the imperialists and reactionaries, IS AT PRESENT THE PRIMARY DUTY OF STRATEGIC SIGNIFICANCE. It is very important to maintain peace so that the revolutionary forces in the world can continue to win more victories without incurring any losses in war. Under the conditions of detente, there is even more possibility to mobilize the masses to struggle and check imperialist intervention. To maintain peace, the world peoples must resolutely carry out the revolutionary struggle to oppose the arms race, which causes a tense situation, and to prevent the U.S. imperialists from breaking the general balance of military forces which has come into shape.

Progressive mankind is therefore warmly welcoming the peace initiatives of the socialist countries, especially the Soviet Union. These initiatives correctly reflect the world peoples' aspiration for peace and uphold the peaceful good will of the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. Our people resolutely support these initiatives. By peacefully working to build their country and by struggling stalwartly against the immediate and dangerous enemy -- Beijing expansionism and hegemonism -- and the main and long-standing enemy -- imperialism headed by the United States -- our people will make positive contributions to the common struggle for peace and revolution in the world.

OUR PARTY AND STATE'S FOREIGN POLICY

Over the past years, we have scored great achievements in implementing the party's principled foreign policy, the two most outstanding of which have been the strengthening of the militant alliance of the three Indochinese countries and the very diversified and splendid development of the all-round cooperation between our country and the Soviet Union and other countries in the socialist community. These achievements have strengthened the stature and strength of our people in their fight to defend the fatherland and have created further conditions for socialist construction in our country. In spite of the enemy's schemes and tricks aimed at encircling and isolating our country, the SRV's role and position have been constantly enhanced in the world arena.

As the party Central Committee political report at the fifth party congress pointed out, in the period to come our diplomatic work must be aimed at striving to take advantage of favorable international conditions and seeking to obtain great and multifaceted international assistance for our national construction and defense undertaking, thereby contributing to ensuring the successful fulfillment of the historic tasks set forth by the congress. In particular, our diplomatic work must become an active and positive front in the struggle to frustrate the policy of the big-power Chinese hegemonist expansionists which, in collusion with the bellicose U.S. power, is trying to weaken and annex our country. In the immedate future, we must strive to defeat the multifaceted war of sabotage they are waging. We must prevent the realization of their scheme of rekindling the war of aggression and consolidate peace in Indochina and Southeast Asia.

Loyal to their international obligations, our people are uniting with the revolutionary and progressive forces in the world and vigorously supporting the resolute struggle of the peoples in the world against the bellicose and aggressive policy of U.S.-led imperialism for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

SOLIDARITY AND ALL-ROUND COOPERATION WITH THE SOVIET UNION HAS ALWAYS BEEN THE CORNERSTONE OF OUR PARTY AND STATE'S FOREIGN POLICY. This is also a principle, a strategy and a manifestation of revolutionary sentiments. It originates in the Soviet role and position in the socialist system and the world revolution and in the revolutionary nature of the two Marxist-Leninist parties and the two socialist states. It also originates in the demand of a binding character -- which is that national independence must be linked to socialism and independence and sovereignty to the alliance and comprehensive cooperation between the socialist countries. Solidarity and comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union are a firm guarantee for the success of our people's cause of national defense and socialist construction as well as for the consolidation of national independence and the establishment of socialism on the Indochinese Peninsula. This is also an active contribution to the consolidation and strengthening of the socialist system and the strengthening of the struggle for peace and socialism in the world.

THE SPECIAL VIETNAM-LAOS-KAMPUCHEA RELATIONSHIP IS AN EVOLUTIONARY LAW OF THE REVOLUTION IN THE THREE COUNTRIES. It is a matter of survival for the destiny of the three nations. This view was pointed out by the Lao and Kampuchean leaders in their speeches welcoming our fifth party congress. Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan upheld the special solidarity, militant alliance and comprehensive cooperation between Laos and Vietnam as a law of existence and development of the two countries. And Comrade Heng Samrin spoke of the profound Kampuchean-Vietnamese love and attachment and affirmed: "...solidarity and all-round cooperation with Vietnam and Laos is the strategic thought of the party (the KPRP), the objective and necessary demand of history, a determinant factor for Kampuchea's destiny, the pure revolutionary sentiments and the consistent stand of the Kampuchean people in the new epoch..."

Our people are determined to maintain the pure friendship and the tradition of solidarity among the three nations, to foil all enemy schemes and acts of sabotage and division and foster the special relationship between the three countries so that it will be fruitful and last forever.

THE MILITANT SOLIDARITY AND FRATERNAL COOPERATION BETWEEN OUR COUNTRY AND OTHER COUNTRIES IN THE SOCIALIST COMMUNITY has taken a new step of development and brought about satisfactory results. Our people are determined to do their best to foster their friendship and cooperation with the fraternal countries and contribute to the consolidation and strengthening of the socialist system on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism.

Being a nation once oppressed by imperialism and having long struggled against the forces of aggression, our people totally SUPPORT THE STRUGGLE OF AFRICAN, ASIAN AND LATIN AMERICAN COUNTRIES to eliminate all forms of imperialism in the world, gain and protect national independence and build a new world economic order. We advocate developing the cooperation between Vietnam and other members of the Nonaligned Movement and contribute to developing the active role of this movement in the struggle against imperialism to protect world peace and the independence and sovereignty of all nations.

With deep sympathy our people are pleased with the achievements of the struggle movement of the working class and laboring people in the developed capitalist countries. We are DETERMINED TO SUPPORT THAT MOVEMENT and are convinced that it will win even greater victories in the struggle for peace, democracy and socialism.

With regard to the ASEAN states, we advocate ESTABLISHING GOOD NEIGHBORLY RELATIONS, and are always ready, together with these countries, to build Southeast Asia into a region of peace and stability.

Our people are resolved to struggle to frustrate all schemes of aggression and annexation which are concocted by the Chinese authorities against our country. Nevertheless, we will ALWAYS PRESERVE INTACT OUR FRIENDLY SENTIMENTS FOR AND MAINTAIN THE POLICY OF GOOD NEIGHBORHOOD WITH THE CHINESE PEOPLE. We advocate the policy of restoring normal relations between the two countries on the basis of the principles of peaceful coexistence, respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity and settlement of contentious matters through negotiations.

We advocate the policy of ESTABLISHING AND EXPANDING THE NORMAL RELATIONS ON THE STATE LEVEL AND IN THE ECONOMIC, CULTURAL AND TECHNOLOGICAL FIELDS WITH ALL COUNTRIES regardless of their political and social regimes and on the basis of respect for each other's independence and sovereignty and of equality and mutual benefits.

With these guidelines, the foreign policy of our party and state will certainly be an important factor for the successful implementation of the tasks set forth by the fifth party congress.

FOOD MINISTRY ON PROVINCIAL GRAIN COLLECTION

Grain Collection in North

BK271034 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] According to the Ministry of Food, as of 26 June the northern provinces and cities had delivered to state granaries a volume of grain equivalent to 67.7 percent of the total grain collection norm for the 5th month-spring crop season, with agricultural taxes accounting for 80.3 percent.

Some 73 districts and 2,086 cooperatives have already paid their agricultural taxes. Ha Son Binh, Nghe Tinh, Hai Hung, Ha Nam Ninh, Binh Tri Thien and Thanh Hoa Provinces and Haiphong City have fulfilled their agricultural tax quotas for the 5th month-spring crop season. Nghe Tinh Province alone has overfulfilled its total grain collection norm by 0.4 percent.

In many provinces, although the harvest of the 5th month-spring rice crop has been carried out fairly rapidly, the delivery of rice to state granaries is still slow. Thai Binh has fulfilled only 33.9 percent of the total grain collection norm and 40.2 percent of the agricultural tax quota for the 5th month-spring crop season; Hanoi 39.6 percent of the total grain collection norm and 48.3 percent of the agricultural tax quota; Ha Bac 50 percent of the total grain collection norm and 58.5 percent of the agricultural tax quota; and Vinh Phu 52.8 percent of the total grain collection norm and 57.4 percent of the agricultural tax quota. Meanwhile, Quang Ninh and Bac Thai are the only two provinces in the mountainous region which have begun the grain collection work.

To ensure that the delivery of grain to state granaries is finished within 45 days as instructed by the Council of Ministers, the Ministry of Food urges a number of provinces to take advantage of favorable weather conditions to accelerate grain deliveries, striving to fulfill their grain obligations to the state in June.

Despite the slower pace of their rice harvest, the provinces in the mountainous region should also strive to accelerate their grain deliveries in order to satisfy the needs in their localities while contributing to the successful fulfillment of the grain collection plan for the 1982 5th month-spring crop season.

More Provinces Reported

[Text] According to a report of the Ministry of Food, as of 26 June, Hai Hung, Ha Nam Ninh and Thanh Hoa Provinces and Haiphong City had overfulfilled their grain collection norms for the 1982 5th month-spring crop season.

Today, 30 June, the chairman of the Council of Ministers sent messages heartily commending the people and cadres in these localities. He urged: Developing the achievements they have scored, the commended localities should continue to motivate cooperative members to economize on the consumption of grain in order to sell it to the state beyond the obligation quotas, thus overfulfilling the grain collection norms set for the entire crop season.

At the same time, cooperative members must strive to accelerate production and take care of and protect the 10th month rice crop and the summer-fall vegetable and subsidiary crops. They must make every effort to make the 10th-month rice crop a big success in order to steadily solve the grain problem in the localities according to the spirit of Resolution No 99 of the Council of Ministers.

Grain Targets Met

[Text] According to the Ministry of Food, as of 22 June, Ha Son Binh Province had fulfilled its grain obligation norm for the 1982 5th month-spring crop season.

On 28 June, the chairman of the Council of Ministers sent a message warmly praising the people and cadres of Ha Son Binh Province for their success in this task and particularly commending Ung Hoa, Quoc Oai, Chuong My, Thuong Tin, Phu Xuyen and My Duc Districts for their great contributions to the common success of the province.

The chairman of the Council of Ministers expressed the hope that the cadres and people of Ha Son Binh will develop the achievements they have scored in order to intensively plant, care for and protect the 10th-month rice and summer-fall subsidiary crops, and will encourage cooperative members to economize on the consumption of grain in order to sell it to the state beyond the obligation quota, thus overfulfilling the grain collection norm set for the entire crop season.

Also according to the Ministry of Food, as of 23 June Nghe Tinh Province had overfulfilled the grain collection norm for the 1982 5th month-spring crop season.

On 28 June, the chairman of the Council of Ministers also sent a message warmly praising the people and cadres of Nghe Tinh Province for having upheld their revolutionary tradition, thus becoming the first unit to fulfill the grain collection norm for the 1982 5th month-spring crop season in the north.

The chairman of the Council of Ministers expressed the hope that the cadres and people of Nghe Tinh will develop the achievements they have scored so as to intensively plant, care for and protect the 10th-month rice and all kinds of summer-fall subsidiary crops, and will encourage cooperative members to economize on the consumption of grain in order to sell it to the state beyond the obligation quota, thus helping to ensure the province's grain balance for the last 6 months of this year.

AID FROM FRG, UK -- Hanoi, VNA, June 30 -- The Vietnamese Ministry of Public Health received here on June 28, 40 tonnes of medical materials, medicine and medical equipment as aid from the Caritas organization of the Federal Republic of Germany. Present on the occasion were Dr. George Specht, representative of Caritas, and Dietor Siemes, FRG charge d'affaires a.i. in Vietnam. The same day, the ministry also received 12 tonnes of medicine and medical equipment as aid from the Oxfam organization of Great Britain, in the presence of Mrs Diane Crocombe, Oxfam's representative. Speaking on these occasions, representatives of the Vietnamese Ministry of Public Health expressed profound gratitude to Caritas, Oxfam and the FRG and British peoples for their valuable aid. HA SON BINH PADDY COLLECTION -- As of 22 June, Ha Son Binh Province had delivered 36,039 tons of paddy to state granaries. This figure represents 100.2 percent of the grain obligation norm for the 5th month-spring crop season and 60 percent of the grain obligation norm for 1982. [Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 22 Jun 82 BK]

THAI BINH RICE HARVEST -- Thai Binh Province has harvested 75,403 hectares of 5th month-spring rice, thus fulfilling 100 percent of the planned norm, with a yield of more than 3.6 tons per hectares and a total output of more than 270,000 tons. These figures show that both the rice yield and output attained by the province in this crop season are higher than last year. [Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 23 Jun 82 BK]

KHMER COALITION NOT SEEN AS FINAL SOLUTION

[Editorial: "Democratic Kampuchea Coalition"]

[Text] The report concerning the establishment of a Democratic Kampuchea coalition government is certainly encouraging, especially for ASEAN, which had long sought a settlement of the longstanding Kampuchean issue.

The coalition consists of three resistance forces which oppose the Heng Samrin regime, established by Vietnam 3 years ago after the Khmer Rouge regime led by Pol Pot had been expelled. The three forces are the Khmer Rouge, former Prime Minister Son Sann and Prince Norodom Sihanouk. Press reports said that the coalition government will be led by Prince Norodom Sihanouk as its president, Khieu Samphan as the vice president and Son Sann as prime minister. The document affecting the agreement is slated to be signed in Kuala Lumpur between 21 and 23 June.

The coalition is based on a "four-point principle." First, the coalition government is established within the legal framework of the Democratic Kampuchea. Second, each member of the coalition will retain its own identity. Third, the three forces will be on an equal footing and no one will have more authority over the others. Fourth, decisions on important matters, especially those affecting the strategy of Democratic Kampuchea, should be taken by consensus.

The establishment of the coalition still cannot and must not be regarded as a final settlement of the Kampuchean problem. But, the most important step has, at least, been achieved. ASEAN's role in this respect had been decisive. ASEAN countries have long striven to bring about unity among the anti-Heng Samrin resistance groups and ASEAN efforts, finally, have been successful with the establishment of the coalition government.

Apart from that, the establishment of the coalition will also influence the position of many nations at the UN forum with regard to the Kampuchean problem. We probably will soon witness a shift in the balance of support toward the credentials of Democratic Kampuchea in the world body.

The big problem we have yet to face is the attitude of the government in Hanoi. So far, the Hanoi government has been unwilling to respect the UN resolution on Kampuchea and even belittled ASEAN efforts to seek a solution to the problem.

The annual ASEAN foreign ministers meeting some days ago had reaffirmed ASEAN's opposition to the Heng Samrin regime. Apart from that, ASEAN reiterated its basic stand of supporting the UN resolution, which called for the withdrawal of the 200,000 Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and the restoration of the Kampuchean people's rights to determine their own fate under neutral supervision, such as UN supervision.

A Radio Hanoi broadcast several days ago, which was obviously directed to the ASEAN foreign ministers meeting, was, in fact, intended to tell ASEAN not to meddle in another man's business. The broadcast said the Kampuchean problem is neither ASEAN's nor Vietnam's nor Kampuchea's nor Laos' affair, but was between the latter three countries and China.

The statement was clear enough to indicate the strong stand Hanoi is taking. It also indicated that Vietnam has no intention of withdrawing its troops from Kampuchea until the Heng Samrin regime manages to consolidate itself and dominate the whole country.

Therefore, the formation of the coalition government could bring about an escalation of hostility on the part of Vietnam and this could also mean a worsening of tension that could eventually open the possibility of expanding the war to other areas in this region.

It is to be hoped that all parties directly involved in the establishment of the coalition government will not allow matters just to pass by, but take it into account.

IRIAN JAYA COMMADER URGES REBELS TO SURRENDER

BK301146 Jakarta ANTARA in English 1045 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] Jayapura, June 30 (ANTARA) -- Commander of Irian Jaya Military Region Col Sembiring Meliala has addressed an appeal to members of the so-called "Organisasi Papua Merdeka" (Free Papua Organization) still trying to wage a guerrilla war from the jungles of the province to return to the fold of the Indonesian Republic.

Speaking at the opening of a service conference of the region's command Tuesday, Sembiring said those who heeded his appeal would be welcomed with open arms by the provincial government and Indonesian Armed Forces.

Repentant former rebels could return to their home villages and join the government in developing the region for the sake of a better future, he said. Under Indonesia's state philosophy, Pancasila, anyone who had been misled into becoming a follower of the organization but wanted to return to the right path would be treated fairly. But those who continued to oppose the Indonesian Government by committing acts of resistance would be dealt with resolutely and thoroughly.

The commander said it was the duty of the region's entire command and its field units to isolate the remnant rebel elements and to protect the people living in the interior from the insurgents' influence. The people had to be continuously guided and enlightened because only in this way would they gain the right awareness, he said.

Sembiring also told the assembled staff officers, sub-regional, district and batallion commanders security in the region had to be restored in view of the MPR (People's Consultative Assembly) general session due to be held in 1983 which would determine the further course of the national struggle.

INDICTMENT IN U.S. 'SHOCKS' COMPUTER INDUSTRY

[Text] Tokyo, July 1, KYODO -- The Japanese computer industry has been shocked by a U.S. federal grand jury indictment charging Hitachi Ltd. with conspiracy to transport stolen secrets on IBM computers. Industry executives are especially concerned about the possibility of a "tarnished image" abroad following the incident.

No Japanese computer maker would officially comment on the case, but there is little doubt they are stunned, especially as stock prices of major computer makers including Fujitsu and Nippon Electric Co. (NEC) are tumbling in Tokyo. "The incident may lead foreigners to believe that Japanese technical standards are at a low level," a Fujitsu official said. An NEC official suggested "Japanese makers may all be lumped together in foreign countries."

But the industrial espionage case is not expected to have an immediate impact on exports of Japanese computers and peripheral equipment, at least for the time being. Fujitsu, for instance, is exporting large computers to the United States and Europe. But it does this on an original equipment manufacture (OEM) basis under the buyer's brand. The company makes computers to customer's specifications so it is unlikely that orders for Fujitsu products will drop suddenly.

NEC is not apprehensive about its exports as its products for overseas markets are mainly peripheral equipment and terminals rather than computers themselves. NEC is now more confident than ever that its strategy of pushing ahead with the development of models incompatible with IBM models was a correct one.

Computer development strategies will be crucial in the days ahead, following the IBM case, said an executive of the Japanese computer industry. Hitachi Ltd. and Mitsubishi Electric Corp., the two firms involved in the case, seem likely to stick with their existing policies of making computers compatible with IBM systems despite the indictments. This is because IBM computers are still the pacesetters, with something like a 60 percent share of the world market, analysts said. They also pointed out that a number of clients of the two firms are already using computers compatible with IBM models, and a major sudden change would greatly inconvenience them.

OFFICIALS SAY ROK HAS CONCEDED TO AID PROPOSAL

[Text] Tokyo, July 2, KYODO -- South Korea has conceded and agreed to a Japanese proposal for dollar 4 billion in loans to be extended to finance projects under its 1982-86 development program, according to government sources. The sources, in disclosing this late Thursday night, said South Korea wanted more official development assistance (ODA) from Japan and a massive commodity credit from the Export-Import Bank of Japan.

This was contained in a proposal South Korea put forth late in June to break the deadlocked negotiations on Seoul's request for dollar 6 billion in loans. The bilateral negotiations started last summer but no substantial progress has been made. In April South Korea rejected Japan's "final" offer of dollar 4 billion -- dollar 1.5 billion in ODA and the rest in loans from the EXIM bank.

The sources said Thursday South Korea agreed to the amount of loans and wanted to have dollar 2.3 billion in ODA and dollar 1.7 billion in commodity credit from the EXIM bank. The Japanese Government has so far rejected the commodity credit formula.

The sources said dollar 1.5 billion in ODA is the maximum Japan could provide to South Korea, indicating there is still a long way to go to final solution to the loan issue.

They also said Japan has never extended such a massive commodity credit to a fast developing nation, such as South Korea.

South Korean Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok will visit Japan shortly on his way home from the United States to hold talks with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi. Suzuki said Thursday that he hopes the loan talks will produce agreement at the earliest possible date. But Sakurauchi said it will be difficult to meet the Korean request at this moment.

ROK Assemblyman Meets Suzuki

[Text] Tokyo, July 1 KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Thursday he hopes the current Japan-South Korea negotiations on Seoul's request for dollar 6 billion in loans will produce agreement "at the earliest possible date."

Cooperation between the two countries should be based on friendship, Suzuki said in a meeting with South Korean National Assembly member Yi Sang-ik. Yi is presently in Tokyo as leader of a delegation of the (South) Korea-Japan Parliamentarians League. The secretary general of the league also held talks with Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and asked him to deal with the aid request positively.

Negotiations between the two sides started last August but have made little headway. South Korea rejected a Japanese "final" offer of dollar 4 billion, put forward in April. Yi's visit to Tokyo followed a fresh South Korean proposal seeking commodity loans as part of the requested dollar 6 billion in aid for its 1982-86 economic development program. So far, commodity loan formulas have been rejected by the Tokyo government.

Earlier in the day, Sakurauchi said dollar 4 billion was the maximum Japan could offer South Korea at the present time. The figure breaks down into dollar 1.5 billion in low-interest government loans and dollar 2.5 billion in export-import bank credits. Speaking at a Diet committee meeting, Sakurauchi said: "I think it will be hard to meet (the new request) though I said we will study it."

The issue is expected to be discussed again when Sakurauchi meets with his South Korean counterpart Yi Pom-sok in Tokyo next week. Yi, who is now in the United States, will visit Japan for several days beginning Saturday as Sakurauchi's private guest.

PHILIPPINE'S VIRATA HOLDS TALKS WITH SUZUKI

[Text] Tokyo, July 1, KYODO -- Visiting Philippine Prime Minister Cesar E.A. Virata Thursday asked Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki to open the Japanese market wider to developing countries as well as to the industrialized countries. In a meeting with Suzuki, Virata said market-opening measures enforced so far by the Japanese Government appear to benefit only the advanced nations. Japan should also pay due consideration to developing countries, he added.

Suzuki said a mission of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party, led by Masumi Esaki, former minister of international trade and industry, is scheduled to visit the Philippines in mid-July. He expressed the hope that the Philippine Government would discuss the matter with the mission.

When Virata requested extension of yen credits to promote large-scale development projects in the Philippines, Suzuki said he will do his best to continue to provide as large credits as possible this year.

NODONG SINMUN MARKS CCP FOUNDING ANNIVERSARY

SK010431 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0406 GMT 1 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 1 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today in an article dedicated to the 61st anniversary of the founding of the Communist Party of China says that the entire members of the Workers Party of Korea and the Korean people extend warmest congratulations and militant greetings to the entire members of the Communist Party of China and the fraternal Chinese people. The author of the article says: With the founding of the Communist Party of China on July 1, 1921, the Chinese working class and people came to have their Marxist-Leninist vanguard and victoriously pave the road of the arduous revolutionary struggle under its leadership.

The road covered by the CPC over the last 61 years is a glorious path adorned with the magnificent struggle for the freedom and liberation of the Chinese people and for the socialist revolution and socialist construction.

Under the wise guidance of Comrade Mao Zedong, the great leader of the Chinese people, the CPC surmounted all the difficulties and trials lying on the road ahead, achieved a brilliant victory in the people's revolution and founded the People's Republic of China.

After the victory of the people's revolution the CPC powerfully organized and mobilized the entire people in the worthwhile struggle for the building of a new, socialist life under the revolutionary slogan of self-reliance and hard struggle, and built a new pulsating China in the vast land of China.

The unity and cohesion of the Communist Party of China, the organiser of all victories and the guiding force of the Chinese people, is growing stronger and the leading role of the party is being heightened in the revolution and construction.

Today the Chinese people, rallied close around the Communist Party of China headed by Comrade Hu Yaobang, are successfully carrying on the struggle to build China into a powerful socialist state by realising the four modernisations, while adhering to the four principles.

By waging an energetic struggle, upholding the decisions of the 6th Plenary Meeting of the 11th Central Committee of the Communist Party of China and the Fourth Session of the Fifth National Peoples Congress, the Chinese people have registered fresh successes in the building of socialist spiritual and material civilisation and all other fields of the revolution and construction. The might of the People's Republic of China is growing day by day and its international prestige rising higher.

Our party and people sincerely rejoice as over their own over all the successes made by the CPC and the fraternal Chinese people in the revolution and construction. The friendship between the parties and peoples of Korea and China is a militant friendship based on proletarian internationalism and an indestructible friendship which was sealed in blood in the flames of the arduous revolutionary struggle and has overcome all trials of history.

The Korea-China friendship personally initiated and nursed by the great leader of the Korean people Comrade Kim Il-song and the great leader of the Chinese people Comrade Mao Zedong and respected Comrade Zhou Enlai has been constantly developed and strengthened.

Our party and people treasure the traditional friendship between the parties and peoples of Korea and China and will continue striving to consolidate and develop it.

To vigorously fight on for the final victory of the cause of anti-imperialism and independence in firm unity with the Communist Party and people of China forever is the unshakable will of our party and people.

Our party and people heartily wish the Communist Party of China and the Chinese people greater success in their future struggle to build a highly democratic and civilised, modern socialist power and reunify the whole of China by restoring Taiwan to the motherland.

KIM YONG-NAM RECEIVES PRC TRADE UNION DELEGATION

[Text] Pyongyang, July 2 (KCNA) -- Comrade Kim Yong-nam on July 1 met and had a friendly talk with the Chinese trade union delegation headed by Han Ronghua, vice-president of the All-China Federation of Trade Unions.

Present on the occasion were Vice-Chairman of the Central Committee of the General Federation of Trade Unions of Korea Mun Pyong-nok and Charge D'Affaires ad Interim of the Chinese Embassy in Pyongyang He Zhangming.

NORTH CITES SOCIALIST MEDIA ON ANTI-U.S. MONTH

[Text] Pyongyang, July 1 (KCNA) -- Mass media of socialist countries recently published articles on the occasion of the month of anti-U.S. joint struggle, according to reports.

Under the title "Chinese and Korean Peoples will unite and struggle shoulder to shoulder for ever" Radio Beijing of China broadcast an article by Chen Yunqi, former platoon leader of the Chinese Peoples' Volunteers and now deputy director of the Political Department of a division of the Beijing Garrison District of the Chinese Peoples' Liberation Army.

It recalled that, under the wise leadership of President Kim Il-song and the Workers Party of Korea, the Korean people and Peoples' Army officers and men have won a great victory in the three-year fatherland liberation war. It said: The Chinese People's Liberation Army and people resolutely support the Korean people's sacred cause of the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

The U.S. imperialists must not fail to unconditionally withdraw their troops and equipment from South Korea. Whatever storm may sweep the world in the future, the Chinese people and army will as ever unite with the Korean people and struggle and win together. [For the Beijing Radio account of the article by former CPV platoon leader Chen Yunqi, see the Northeast Asia section of the 2 July China DAILY REPORT.]

The Soviet paper SOTSIALISTICHESKAYA INDUSTRIYA noted: It is characteristic of the protest demonstrations rapidly growing in Seoul and other cities of South Korean that they are all staged under anti-U.S. slogans.

Whereas the Democratic People's Republic of Korea is pursuing a policy to achieve the reunification of the country peacefully on a democratic principle, the Chon Tu-hwan "regime", on the contrary, is inciting the confrontation between the North and South, trying to undermine this course at any cost, the paper says. It stressed that the month of solidarity with the Korean people now open demonstrates that all the progressive forces on the globe support the legitimate desire of the Korean people. A recent issue, of the Soviet journal PROBLEMY DALINEGO VOSTOKA also carried an article.

The Romanian paper SCINTEIA in an article said that the Korean people showed through the fatherland liberation war that no force on earth could subdue a people who rose up in a struggle for defending their inviolable rights, national freedom and sovereignty, and revolutionary gains.

It went on: Romania and the DPRK are constantly developing the friendly and cooperative relations in all fields, political, economic, cultural, etc. What played the decisive role in expanding and strengthening the friendly and cooperative relations between Romania and Korea was the meeting between Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu and Comrade Kim Il-song in Bucharest and Pyongyang. It opened a bright prospect for further developingcooperation between the two parties, two countries and two peoples.

The GDR paper HORIZONT recalled that the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique started a war of aggression against the Democratic People's Republic of Korea on June 25, 1950, and wrote their wild designs were smashed to pieces by the heroic struggle of the Korean people and People's Army.

Noting that the Workers Party of Korea and the DPRK Government put forward numerous proposals for the peaceful reunification of the country, it said that the biggest obstacle to the settlement of the reunification question is the U.S. troops presence in South Korea.

RADIO REPORTS SINGLAUB TEACHING TERRORISM

[Text] Today, terrorism is being committed without restraint in the United States. In this execrable U.S. society, a single robbery occurs every 2 minutes and an average 60 cases of homicide happen every single day. In New York alone, nearly 700,000 crimes -- such as homicide, robbery and rape -- are being committed yearly on average.

Even a special murder training center -- called (Cogray) and Company -- is operated in the United States. According to a report revealed by the U.S. paper DAILY WORLD, 26 lecturers and advisers train students at a forest training center in Atlanta. They reportedly teach the use of modern murder weapons, assassination and torture. Included among the lecturers and advisers is Singlaub, former chief of staff of the U.S. Command in South Korea, the newspaper reports.

The number of students trained there, at a cost of about $3,000 per head, totals some 600 to date. It is said that they constitute the backbone of U.S. terrorism.

UNITED STATES VIEWED AS THREAT TO NORTH KOREA

[Text] Pyongyang, July 2 (KCNA) -- The Executive Secretariat of the Organisation of Solidarity of Peoples of Asia, Africa and Latin America in its statement published on the month of anti-U.S. joint struggle strongly protested against the United States for scheming more viciously than ever before to perpetuate its military occupation of South Korea and harassing peace and security in Korea, while persisting in its aggressive provocations against the northern half of the DPRK in disregard of fair world opinion, according to a report.

The U.S. administration, the statement says, does not lend an ear to the just voice of the world people demanding the relaxation of tension but threatens and blackmails the people opposed to the war policy of the U.S. imperialists.

The United States military domination over South Korea is not only a practical threat to the security of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea but also an obstacle to the just struggle of the South Korean people for democratic freedom and political and social rights.

Sternly denouncing the war manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korea puppets, the tri-continental peoples solidarity organisation joins the revolutionary and progressive democratic forces of the world in demanding the immediate withdrawal of the U.S. troops from South Korea and extending full solidarity with the Korean people in their just struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

NODONG SINMUN ON PRINCIPLES OF KIM CHONG-IL WORK

SK280155 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2225 GMT 27 Jun 82

[NODONG SINMUN 28 June editorial article: "The Leading Principles of the Chuche Idea Are Powerful Revolutionary Weapons Leading the Cause of Independence to Victory" -- part one]

[Text] Today our people are staging a historic struggle to imbue society with the chuche idea. To vigorously accelerate this cause, they should thoroughly embody the chuche idea in all sectors of the revolution and construction. In the treatise on the chuche idea, Comrade Kim Chong-il, member of the Presidium of the Political Bureau of the KWP Central Committee and a secretary of the party Central Committee, delineated a brilliant way on which we can more vigorously advance our revolutionary cause by clearly expounding the leading principles we should follow in embodying the chuche idea.

The leading principles of the chuche idea are guidelines to establish chuche in all the activities of the state and the party and in all the sectors of the revolution and construction. The principles delineate all the basic principles for successfully implementing the revolution and construction by adhering to the creative and independent stand and increasing the role of ideological consciousness.

To embody the chuche idea in the revolution and construction, we should thoroughly observe the leading principles of the chuche idea.

1. The treatise on the chuche idea clearly elucidates the question of adhering to the independent stand to embody the chuche idea. To implement the revolution and construction in accordance with the demand of the chuche idea, we should adhere to independence in all activities of the state and the party and embody it.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The chuche idea demands that we realize chuche in ideology, sovereignty in politics, self-reliance in economy and self-defense in national defense with the attitude of a master toward the revolution and construction. Chuche, sovereignty, self-reliance and self-defense are the leading principles of our revolution.

As principles which embody independence, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has set forth the principles of chuche in ideology, sovereignty in politics, self-reliance in economy and self-defense in national defense. The principles of chuche, sovereignty, self-reliance and self-defense are the leading principles which embody independence in the sectors of ideology, politics, economy and national defense.

The treatise elucidated that establishing chuche in ideology is a primary demand arising in the revolutionary struggle of the popular masses for independence. Revolution and construction are man's activities of consciousness. Therefore, only when we establish chuche in ideology can we establish chuche in all the sectors of politics, economy and national defense. Establishing chuche in ideology is defined as having a viewpoint and attitude of possessing awareness that one is the master of the revolution and construction, of thinking and practicing everything, placing the revolution of one's own country in the center and resolving all problems through one's own wisdom and ability.

Every party and people are the master of their revolution. Successfully implementing the revolution of one's own country is the basic duty of one's party and people. The revolution of the world can be successfully implemented when every country carries out its revolution and support and cooperate with each other. For this reason, every party and people should enact their revolution in a responsible manner with an attitude of a master by firmly establishing the chuche ideology.

To establish chuche ideology, the working class should arm itself with its revolutionary ideology and its party's lines and policies. The working class is an independent class, and its revolutionary ideology is an independent ideology.

Only when the working class arms itself with a revolutionary ideology can it successfully implement the revolution and construction in any difficult and complicated circumstances, recognizing that it is the master of the revolution.

The guidelines of the revolution and construction in every country are its revolutionary party's lines and policies embodying the revolutionary ideology of the working class. When one arms oneself with the lines and policies of one's party and adopt them as the standard of one's thought and practice, one can implement the revolution and construction to meet the demand of one's people and the reality of one's country and assume full responsibility as the master of the revolution and construction.

For us to establish chuche in ideology is to arm ourselves with the chuche idea and the party's lines and policies embodying it and to establish the party's unitary ideological system. We cannot talk about the firm establishment of chuche in ideology unless the party's unitary ideological system fully functions in the whole party and society.

To establish chuche in ideology, one should be good at one's own things. Only when one has a good knowledge of one's own things can one independently resolve all the problems arising in the revolution and construction in conformity with the reality of one's country and implement the revolution and construction to meet the demand and aspirations of one's people. One can ardently love one's own fatherland and people and display a patriotic devotion and a revolutionary passion.

The Korean people should have a good knowledge of Korean geography, history, economy and culture and of their customs. In particular, they should be well versed in the lines, policies and revolutionary history and tradition of our party to become a genuine chuche-type Korean patriot and communist.

To establish chuche in ideology, we should possess great national and revolutionary pride. Without the national pride in the belief that our nation is not inferior to others and pride as a people who carry out the revolution, we cannot live independently. Nor can we defend the nation's independence and prestige and win victory in the arduous revolutionary struggle.

The people with a strong national and revolutionary pride are invincible; the people without them are not. The people who have been oppressed by another's country are required to possess great national and revolutionary pride.

The struggle to increase national and revolutionary pride should be particularly strengthened in those countries where nihilism and flunkeyism are deeply rooted due to the imperialists' policy of assimilating their colonies and extinguishing the national culture of colonies.

We should cherish pride as the Korean people who are wise and courageous and, in particular, pride as the people who carry out the revolution with the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song as our leader.

To establish chuche in ideology, one should develop the national culture and heighten the level of the masses' art and literature. Only when one creates a culture with a revolutionary and socialist content, meeting the emotion of one's people and reflecting the outlook of the working class, can one make ideological and spiritual life healthy and establish chuche in ideology.

To develop the socialist national culture in a sound way, one should inherit and develop the excellent tradition of the national culture, while thoroughly preventing the cultural penetration of the imperialists and rejecting the reactionary and nihilist tendency of the national culture. One should selectively accept the progressive foreign culture according to the sentiment of one's people.

Only when we develop science and technology and raise the cultural level of the people can we help the workers become the true masters of nature and society, eliminate the ideology of looking up to and relying on others in science and technology and thoroughly establish a chuche system.

To establish a chuche system in the ideological sector, we should oppose all forms of timeworn ideologies, including toadyism. Establishing a chuche system in the ideological sector is an effort to help man to free himself from the yoke of timeworn ideologies and an ideological revolution of helping him establish a new chuche outlook of the world. To establish a chuche system in the ideological sector, we should reject all forms of timeworn ideologies which contradict this system, especially toadyism. Toadyism is slavery, a subservient ideology of holding in high esteem and respecting big and developed countries and man's nihilistic attitude of devaluing and despising his own country and fellow countrymen. As taught by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, if man believes in toadyism, he will become foolish. If the people believe in toadyism, the country will fall. If the party believes in toadyism, it will destroy the revolution and construction. The most harmful and dangerous thing today is toadyism toward the U.S. imperialists. Toadyism toward the U.S. imperialists represented by the ideology of fearing and respecting the United States has caused damage to the revolutionary struggle of the people.

The harm of toadyism toward the U.S. imperialists has been intensively wrought in South Korea. The toadyism toward U.S. imperialism developed by the U.S. imperialist aggressors and their stooge has paralyzed man's national and class consciousness. This ideology has been a most harmful ideological toxin which caused damage to the precious cultural property and customs of our people.

The struggle to oppose toadyism and establish a chuche system is a serious question influencing the destiny of the revolution. By continuously strengthening the struggle to oppose toadyism and establish a chuche system in the ideological sector, we will firmly guarantee the final victory of the Korean revolution.

The treatise says that to assume an independent attitude in the activities of the party and the government, we should abide by the principle of independence in politics. Politics is a sector which has decisive significance in social life. Without independence in politics, we cannot imagine any independence. Chuche in the ideological sector is represented by the concept of independence in politics. Self-reliance in the religious sector and self-defense in the national defense sector are guaranteed by the concept of independence in politics. By achieving independence in politics, we mean that we protect the national independence and sovereignty of our people and conduct the politics of safeguarding their interests and relying on their might.

As taught by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, political independence is the first lifeline of an independent nation. Only when a nation achieves political independence can it guarantee independence and freedom and achieve happiness and prosperity.

The revolutionary struggle is the struggle to achieve political independence. Because all questions regarding the revolution and construction are solved through politics, the destiny of the revolutionary cause is influenced by political independence.

To guarantee independence in politics, we should establish the government of the people. Man's independent right is intensively represented by national sovereignty. To completely achieve independence, therefore, the working class and the people should above all become the masters of the government. Only by achieving sovereignty by themselves and becoming the true masters of the country and society can the working class and the people achieve political sovereignty and enjoy an independent and creative life.

To guarantee independence in politics, we should organize an independent force. A political force is a core element of the revolutionary forces. Only when we firmly organize and rely on an independent political force can we achieve and protect sovereignty and guarantee independence in politics.

To correctly organize an independent political force, we should strengthen the party -- a leading force in the revolution -- and achieve the unity of all the people, based on the league of workers and peasants with the working class as a core element. The most important thing in this regard is to firmly unite all the people around the party and the leaders. Only when the party and the people firmly unite into a single political force can they display inexhaustible might and win victory in the revolution and construction.

To guarantee independence in politics, we should have our own leading idea and independently determine and implement our lines and policies in accordance with our own decisions. The fundamental thing in politics is to determine and implement policies. Only when we independently determine and implement all our lines and policies can we have independent politics.

Without independence in politics, we cannot achieve consistency, nor can we abide by principles. In the end, we will ruin the revolution and construction.

Because our party, under the leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, has independently determined and implemented its lines and policies to meet the interests of our people and the situation in our country with the chuche idea as a sole leading ideology, it has always won a brilliant victory in the revolution and construction.

To guarantee independence in politics, we should exercise complete sovereignty and equal rights in the sector of foreign relations. The sovereignty of the party and the government is finally reflected in the sector of foreign relations. Exercising complete sovereignty and equal rights in the sector of foreign relations poses a basic question in guaranteeing political sovereignty.

Sovereignty is the sacred right of all parties, countries and peoples. Although there are big and small parties and countries and economically developed and backward peoples, all parties, countries and peoples are equal and independent. No one should violate the sovereignty of others. At the same time, his sovereignty should not be violated.

Independence does not contradict internationalism. It is a basic factor strengthening internationalism. Just as we cannot imagine the world revolution without the revolution in our country, internationalism without independence should not exist. Unity based on internationalism should be multilateral and equal. Only based on the principle of independence can the unity based on internationalism become multilateral, equal, sincere and solid.

With the principle of opposing imperialism, supporting the colonial national liberation and the international workers' movement, continuously seeking socialism and communism, not interfering in the internal affairs of others, mutual respect, equality and reciprocation, our party has followed the policy of strengthening unity with socialist countries and with the international communist movement.

With the principle of respecting territorial security and sovereignty, inviolability, noninterference in the internal affairs of others, equality and reciprocation, our country has pursued the policy of uniting with nonaligned and newly emerging countries and cooperating with all countries which are friendly to us.

We will protect sovereignty and equal rights in the sector of foreign relations and abide by the principle of combining independence and internationalism.

The treatise says that to achieve independence in the activities of the party and the government, the principle of self-reliance should be bided by in the economic sector. The economy is the material basis of social life. Only when we achieve economic self-reliance can we consolidate the independence of the country, enjoy an independent life, firmly guarantee chuche in the ideological sector, independence in politics and self-defense in the national defense sector and provide the people with an affluent material and civilized life.

To abide by the principle of self-reliance in the economic sector, we should build a self-reliant national economy. By building an independent national economy, we mean that we build an economy which does not become subordinate to others and stands by itself -- that is, an economy which serves its people and develops by resorting to its domestic resources and the might of the people. Only by building such an economy can we rapidly increase our production capacity by rationally and comprehensively utilizing the country's natural resources, continuously improve the people's standard of living, consolidate the material and technical foundation of socialism and strengthen the country's political, economic and military might. Thus, we can exercise complete sovereignty and equal rights politically and economically in the sector of international relations and contribute to strengthening the world's independent anti-imperialist and socialist forces.

Building a self-reliant national economy in countries once economically and technically backward because of imperialist domination and exploitation poses a vital question. Only by building a self-reliant national economy can these countries reject the imperialists' neocolonial policy, completely extricate themselves from their domination and exploitation, eliminate national inequality and vigorously embark on the road of socialism.

To build a self-reliant national economy, we should abide by the principle of self-reliance in economic construction. The principle of self-reliance is the revolutionary spirit and fighting principle of the communists to carry out the revolution by themselves. As we do in our other work for the revolution and construction, we should believe in and resort to our own effort in economic construction. The people who believe in their own might and arduously struggle can perform any difficult task whatsoever. The people who do not believe in their own might and try to rely on others cannot satisfactorily perform any work: Only when we mobilize the might of our people and our domestic resources based on the principle of self-reliance and resort to our technology can we rapidly develop the economy and achieve the prosperity of the country, overcoming all difficulties.

To build a self-reliant national economy, we should multilaterally and comprehensively develop the economy. Contrary to the capitalist economy, which aims at making money, the socialist self-reliant economy aims at meeting the demand of the country and the people. Therefore, a self-reliant economy should multilaterally and comprehensively develop to independently produce and supply heavy and light industry goods which are needed to make the country wealthy and prosperous and improve the people's living standard.

Only by building such an economy can we safely and rapidly develop the economy on a solid foundation. To build a multilaterally and comprehensively developed self-reliant economy as shown by the practical experience in our country, we, while preferentially developing heavy industry, should pursue a policy of simultaneously developing light industry and agriculture.

Heavy industry is the core element of a self-reliant national economy with a machine manufacturing industry as a central figure. Only when we possess such a heavy industry can we achieve self-reliance economically and technically and rapidly develop all sectors of the people's economy, including light industry and agriculture, based on modern technology. At the same time, only when we develop light industry and agriculture along with heavy industry can we systematically improve the people's living standard and accelerate the development of heavy industry. In particular, independently resolving the food problem by successfull conducting farming is of great significance in providing the people with a stable and independent life.

To build a self-reliant national economy, we should equip the economy with modern technology and train the people's technical force. Technical self-reliance is a key to economic self-reliance. Only when we possess our domestically developed technology can we effectively exploit and utilize the country's natural resources and multilaterally develop the people's economy. Only by developing our technology can we liberate the people from toilsome labor, lessen differences between physical and mental labor and independently resolve complicated and difficult questions in economic and national defense construction.

Eliminating the backwardness of the people's economy and equipping this economy with modern technology are a revolution: Only by continuously accelerating the technical revolution by mobilizing all potentials can all sectors rapidly develop technology and achieve the country's economic and technical self-reliance in a short span of time.

Resolving the question of the people's technical manpower is an important factor achieving technical self-reliance in the economic sector. Only by resolving this question can we independently develop the economy and technology. Resolving the question of the people's technical cadres by those countries which once lagged far behind in modern science, technology and civilization because of being subordinated to imperialism is an important question in building a new society. To carry out the technical revolution and achieve self-reliance economically and technically, therefore, we should concentrate on the cultural revolution, raise the cultural and technological level of the working people and train a large force of technicians. We should correctly implement the policy for making all social members into intellectuals as set forth by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, rapidly raise the cultural and technical level of the working people and the intellectual level of the technical cadres and train more and better technicians.

To build a self-reliant national economy, we should consolidate our domestic raw material and fuel bases. Relying on others for raw materials and fuel is tantamount to entrusting others with the lifeline of our economy. To achieve self-reliance economically and develop the economy in a safe and promising manner, we should resort to our own raw material and fuel bases and fundamentally and independently meet the demand for raw materials and fuel. To achieve this end, while mobilizing to the maximum and utilizing the country's natural resources, we should from the beginning develop industry into an independent one which relies on domestic raw materials and fuel.

By building a self-reliant national economy based on the principle of self-reliance, we do not mean that we build the economy with the door closed. By achieving a self-reliant economy, we mean that we oppose economic domination and subordination by other countries. By this, we do not mean that we deny international economic cooperation. Close cooperation among socialist and newly emerging countries plays an important role in guaranteeing economic self-reliance in these countries and strengthening the economic might of these countries.

Today the peoples of newly emerging countries are struggling to oppose the policy of the imperialists, including the U.S. imperialists, of aggression and plunder, to protect their national sovereignty and natural resources, end the old economic order with which imperialist major powers randomly exploited and plundered the majority of the world's countries and the people and establish a new equal international economic order.

Newly emerging countries possess inexhaustible manpower and natural resources and vast economic potential: They also possess good experiences and technology which they can exchange with one another. If newly emerging countries and the peoples of these countries strengthen economic and technical cooperation and vigorously struggle with united effort, they can reject the imperialists' policy of aggression and plunder, protect their national dignity and the right to existence and achieve economic self-reliance and prosperity in a short span of time.

The important task assigned us today in building a socialist self-reliant national economy is to accelerate the work of making the people's economy chuche-oriented, modern and scientific. As clarified by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the work of making the people's economy chuche-oriented, modern and scientific is a strategic line which we should consistently pursue in the economic construction of socialism and communism. By continuously and correctly purusing the line for building a self-reliant national economy and by vigorously accelerating the work of making the people's economy chuche-oriented, modern and scientific, we should strengthen the self-reliant and chuche-type nature of the people's economy, continuously modernize the technology and equipment of the people's economy and thoroughly make all production and management activities scientific.

The treatise says that to achieve self-reliance, we should abide by the principle of self-defense in the national defense sector. Achieving self-defense in the national defense sector is a basic principle of building an independent country. Those countries which do not possess self-defending armed forces capable of defending its country from enemies at home and abroad when imperialism still lives are actually not completely independent countries.

Imperialism is a constant source of war. The major force of aggression and war are the U.S. imperialists. Although we do not want war, we do not fear it. We do not beg for peace before the imperialists. The most correct way to protect national independence and peace and to achieve the victory of the revolutionary cause is to confront the imperialists' aggressive war with a liberation war, confront the reactionaries' anti-revolutionary violence with a revolutionary violence and constantly and readily cope with the imperialists' maneuvers for aggression.

To do so, the principles of self-defense should be maintained in the national defense. Self-defense in the national defense is the military guarantee for the political independence and economic self-reliance of the state.

Only when the principles of self-defense in the national defense are carried through can aggression and intervention by imperialists be frustrated, the political independence and economic self-reliance of the country be maintained and the revolutionary gains and the people's stability be defended.

Carrying out the principles of self-defense means to defend one's country with one's own strength. Of course, in the national defense, assistance may be obtained from the fraternal countries and friends. However, a country cannot entrust its national defense to other countries. The basic problem is one's own strength. Only when a country possesses its own strength can the assistance of foreign countries prove its worth. Therefore, in its national defense, a country should rely on its own strength and defense capabilities. The national defense is a task for the people and is a task which should be carried out by the people themselves.

When the entire people are firmly united as one under the leadership of the revolutionary party and rise up in the struggle for national liberation and [word indistinct] can they repel any imperialist aggressors and defend the country's sovereignty and revolutionary gains.

To carry out the principles of self-defense in the national defense, self-defensive armed forces should be possessed. The self-defensive armed forces should be organized with sons and daughters of the working people. Only such an army as organized with the sons and daughters of the working people, including workers and peasants, can guarantee the unity between the army and the people and the closeness of upper and lower echelons and can become the genuine people's armed forces which can defend the country's sovereignty and revolutionary gains and which can serve the people.

In carrying out the principles of self-defense in the national defence, it is important to establish an all-people's defense system on a nationwide scale. By doing so, the strength of the entire people can be mobilized to thoroughly annihilate the enemies at any time and in any place and the country can be reliably defended from the aggression of imperialists.

To carry out the principles of self-defense in the national defense, the political and ideological superiority of the people's armed forces should be enhanced. The decisive factor influencing the victory in a war lies not in the military technology but in the lofty political zeal and revolutionary devotion of the militarymen and popular masses who have recognized the correctness of their cause.

The lofty revolutionary spirit in the struggle for the freedom and liberation of the people, the boundless loyalty to the party and the leader, the peerless sacrificing spirit and mass heroism to willingly devote youth and lives to the fatherland and revolution, the revolutionary camaraderie between officers and men of the army, the kindred ties with the people and the diversified military support are the political and ideological superiority which can be possessed only by the people's army, the army of the revolution.

As has been proven by the history of revolutionary war, the revolutionary army firmly prepared and armed politically and ideologically can win victory in the fight with the enemies equipped with modern weapons even though it is inferior to them in arms.

The political and ideological superiority is precisely the essential superiority of the revolutionary armed forces and is the source of its invincibility.

Therefore, the army should be firmly organized politically and ideologically and its political and ideological levels should be rapidly enhanced so as to see to it that it can defeat the imperialist aggression army with the political and ideological superiority of the revolutionary people's army.

To carry out the principles of self-defense in the national defense, one's own defense industries should be built and the logistic supply should be strengthened. By doing so, military and materiel preparations can be outstandingly guaranteed with its own strength and any aggressors can be repelled.

By continuously and thoroughly carrying out the line of self-defense in the national defense, we will further strengthen our revolutionary armed forces into invincible ones, smash any aggression of the enemies and reliably defend the fatherland and the revolutionary gains.

[NODONG SINMUN 29 June Editorial article: "The Leading Principles of the Chuche Idea Are a Powerful Revolutionary Weapon Leading the Cause of Independence to Victory -- part two]

[Text] 2. The treatise on the chuche idea comprehensively explains that to establish a chuche system in party and state activities and in all sectors of the revolution and construction, creative methods should be adopted. To carry out the revolution and construction in accordance with the requirements of the chuche idea, creative methods should be adopted both in formulating the revolutionary line and strategy and tactics and in implementing them.

Resolving all questions in the revolution and construction to meet the situation by resorting to the creative capability of the people is a principle which we should always correctly abide by in our revolutionary movement. The treatise urges us to constantly resort to the people to adopt a creative method in the revolution and construction. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The method of resorting to the people and mobilizing the broad strata of the masses of the people is a revolutionary and a positive one which enables us to fully mobilize all potential in the revolution and construction.

Success in the revolution and construction depends on how successfully we utilize the creative capability of the people. Because the people are a decisive force which forges ahead with the revolution and construction, by resorting to the people we can resolve successfully all difficult problems and vigorously accelerate the revolution and construction.

To successfully carry out the revolution and construction by resorting to the people, we should formulate correct policies and lines reflecting the desire and will of the people and make the people possess these policies and lines. The people know the situation better than anyone else and have rich experience. Only by summing up and generalizing the desire and will of the broad strata of the people can we formulate correct lines and policies meeting the desire and interests of the people and encourage them to struggle by gripping the hearts of the people. When we fail to correctly reflect the will of the people, we may make a subjective error in guiding the people in the revolution and construction, failing to help the people display their creativeness. In addition to formulating lines and policies reflecting the will and desire of the people, we should make the people possess these lines and policies by making them deeply permeate the people.

In the end, all party lines and policies are implemented by the people. Only when the people understand the justness of party policies and the method of implementing them can they accept them as vital and struggle to implement them, displaying enthusiasm and creativeness. Those line and policies which the people do not understand cannot display great power in the daily life of the people.

To carry out the revolution and construction by resorting to the creativeness of the people, we should rally the people into a single political force. The strength of the people comes from their unity. Only when the people firmly unite into a single entity can they display astounding power both in their revolutionary struggle and in their construction work.

To firmly rally the people, we should correctly combine the class line with the mass line. Only when we correctly pursue a mass line by firmly abiding by the class principle can we thoroughly isolate hostile elements, consolidate our class position, rally the broad strata of the people by indoctrinating and remodeling them and encourage them to display their creativeness in the revolution and construction. When we fail to correctly combine the class struggle with the work of strengthening the unity of the people under a socialist system and when we waver in this work, we will weaken the unity of the people, paralyze their revolutionary enthusiasm and creativeness and greatly damage the revolution and construction.

To have the people display their creativeness in the revolution and construction. We should struggle against all forms of timeworn things hindering reform. Above all, it is important for us to struggle against passiveness and conservatism. Only by strengthening our struggle against passiveness and conservatism can we help the people highly display their creativeness and enact a continuous innovation and upsurge in the revolution and construction.

We should widely carry out a mass movement in the revolution and construction. A mass movement is a creative method of strengthening the unity and cooperation of the working people and helping them fully display their inexhaustible strength and of accelerating the construction of socialism and communism through a mass struggle and toward collective innovation: Only when we oppose all elements hindering a mass movement, make the people display their voluntary will and creativeness and organize and continuously develop a mass struggle can we successfully resolve all difficult problems.

The important thing in carrying out the revolution and construction by resorting to the creativeness of the broad strata of the people is to adopt a revolutionary work method. If we do not adopt a revolutionary work method, we cannot correctly mobilize the people to implement our lines and policies no matter what correct lines and policies may we have. Nor can we successfully carry out the revolution and construction.

In the early period of the anti-Japanese struggle, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song invented the chuche-type work method -- the revolutionary work method of the communists. The chuche work method is one which has the people assume the attitude of being the masters of the revolution and construction and play a role as masters. This work method is a revolutionary, communist-type one helping us mingle with the people in order to familiarize us with the situation and find a correct way to solve problems, of making the upper sector effectively assist the lower sector, of encouraging the people to willingly perform their revolutionary task by placing priority on political work over all other work and of resolving all questions to suit the situation in a creative manner without formalism. This method is one making us always share life and death and weal and woe with the people, set an example for them by taking the lead, display a modest, simple and generous personality and guide the people to fully display their creativeness.

This chuche-type work method differs from the method of moving people with money and stick and from the administrative method of issuing orders. The party of the working class should always adopt a revolutionary work method both before and after seizing power and both in the revolutionary struggle and in construction work. In particular, after seizing power, it should continuously improve and complete its work method to meet the developing situation. Thus, it can vigorously forge ahead with the construction of socialism and communism by helping the people fully display their revolutionary enthusiasm and creative positiveness and prevent the trend of bureaucratization and the inclination to resort to administrative methods, which are prone to appear in the ruling party.

For the party of the working class to adopt a revolutionary work method of resorting to the people and encouraging them to display their creativeness is an important question of great significance in the revolution and construction. We should more vigorously accelerate the revolution and construction by helping the people display their creativeness by thoroughly adopting the great-leader-type work method -- a revolutionary work method invented by the respected and beloved leader General Kim Il-song.

To adopt a revolutionary method in the revolution and construction as clarified in the treatise, we should solve every question to meet the situation. The revolutionary movement demand that we solve every question to meet the changing and developing situation and the country's concrete conditions. The revolutionary struggle to achieve socialism and communism is waged in conditions of various periods and under the concrete circumstances of various countries. There is no prescription that suits all ages and countries in the revolution and construction. Therefore, we should always start from the situation and solve every question in a creative manner to meet the situation.

To correctly wage our revolutionary struggle to meet our domestic situation, we should correctly evaluate the subjective and objective situation of the revolution in our country and formulate our lines, policies and strategies and tactics to meet this situation.

If we fail to correctly evaluate the subjective and objective situation of the revolution in our country, we will make subjective errors in formulating our lines and policies and greatly damage the revolution and construction.

We should attach greater significance to the chuche factor -- political and ideological factors -- in our revolutionary struggle. When a chuche force is prepared and when the ideological and spiritual level of the people is high, we can take the initiative and force ahead with the revolution, though other conditions are unfavorable.

In defining a revolutionary line and method, we should view the chuche factor -- political and ideological factors -- as the basis. Based on this, we should actively develop the revolution.

To wage the revolutionary struggle and carry out construction work to meet our domestic situation, we should correctly deal with the existing theory. In dealing with the principle and rule of the existing theory as taught by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, we should see the demand of the times which this principle and rule reflect and what premise they use. We should make them function to meet the concrete domestic situation. A revolutionary theory which does not meet the practical revolution is useless. The starting point of the revolutionary struggle and construction work is not the principle and rule of the existing theory but the living situation. The problem is not whether our endeavor suits the existing theory but whether it suits the desire and interests of the people and the subjective and objective conditions of the contemporary era.

If our endeavor suits the desire and interests of the people and the subjective and objective situation, we need not to adhere to the principle and rule of the existing theory.

To correctly wage the revolutionary struggle, we should study the new principle and method of the revolution and construction. Studying the principle and method of the revolution and construction to meet the requirements of the situation is of urgent significance in our era. Our era, in which the revolution and construction has matchlessly advanced and developed and in which many new theoretical and practical questions have arisen, demands that we adopt a guiding revolutionary theory, strategy and tactics which suit today's situation and that we develop the revolutionary theory of the working class in a creative manner.

The theoretical activities of our party in uniquely delineating the principle and method of the revolution to meet the requirements of the practical revolution of our era is a brilliant example of abiding by the revolutionary principle of Marxism and Leninism and developing the revolutionary theory of the working class onto a new, higher stage.

It is important for us to assume a critical, creative attitude towards the experiences of others in revolution and construction. Others' experiences reflect the social and historic conditions and the characteristics of the people of the countries concerned. Some of these experiences are useful for one's own country, some are not. Some suit the situation of one's own country, some do not. We should adopt some of the experience of others, that which is useful to us. We should not adopt that which is not useful to us. When adopting others' good experience, we should assume an attitude of not adopting all of these experiences but remodelling and changing them to meet the situation of our country.

Although we should consult others' experiences, we should strive to make good use of our own. What is wrong is the attitude of indiscriminatingly imitating others and of refusing to learn from others' good experiences in a frank manner. The problem is what attitude we assume in dealing with others' experiences. What we oppose is the dogmatic attitude of lacking creativeness of unconditionally respecting others' experiences and of adopting those experiences which do not suit our domestic situation. This attitude prevents us from formulating correct lines and policies meeting the requirements of the development of the revolution in our country and the desire of the people. In the end, it prevents us from successfully carrying out the revolution and construction.

The method of solving every question to meet our domestic situation by displaying our creativeness is a scientific and revolutionary method of rejecting toadyism and dogmatism and successfully carrying out the revolution and construction.

3. The treatise on the chuche idea explains that maintaining ideology as a basis is one of the principles for successfully carrying out the revolution and construction. The independent ideological awareness of the people plays a decisive role in the revolutionary movement. Therefore, we should maintain ideology as the basis of the revolution and construction. We should place priority on political work -- ideological reform work designed to promote the voluntary awareness and positiveness of the people -- over all other work.

The treatise explains that to successfully carry out the revolution and construction, we should above all place priority on the work of remodelling ideologies. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The work of remodelling man is fundamentally a work of remodelling ideologies.

The basis of the work of remodelling man into a communist lies in the work of having him possess a communist ideology and consciousness. As stressed in the treatise, the work of remodelling ideologies is the important work of remodelling men into true communists. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has maintained that the work of remodelling all members of society into chuche-type communists by revolutionalizing them and turning them into members of the working class and making them intellectuals is one of the important revolutionary tasks in imbuing society with the chuche idea.

To construct socialism and communism, we should not only increase productivity and remold society, but remodel men themselves into communist-type men who are completely cultivated.

Though productivity reaches a high level and material wealth is abundant, we cannot talk about the construction of a communist society unless men -- masters of society -- are remodeled into communist-type men.

To remodel men into fully cultivated men and independent and creative men, we should arm them with an advanced scientific technology and the communist ideology. In particular, the first priority should be given to making men armed with the communist ideology.

Remodeling men, in essence, is remolding ideology. Men's values and character are decided by their ideology. Accordingly, remolding ideology is of particular importance in remodeling men. Remodeling ideology is work to improve the conditions of men's material life. This work is more difficult than work to heighten the level of their culture and technology.

Men's ideological consciousness is restricted by the social and economic situation and the material living conditions. However, even though the social and economic situation and the material conditions in social life change, men's ideological consciousness is not remolded in itself.

The vestiges of the old ideology is very conservative and persistent. Since the work of remolding ideology is a very complicated work assuming a compelling nature, only when we energetically struggle can we attain successes.

Remolding men's ideology is a grave revolution. It is a struggle to arm all the workers with an advanced ideology of the working class and the communist ideology by ultimately eradicating the vestiges of the old ideology from the domain of men's ideological consciousness. And it constituted the basic form of the class struggle which is staged in the socialist society where the exploiting class is purged.

To remold men into communist-type men, even after a socialist system is established, we should struggle against the imperialists, reactionary ideological and cultural penetration as well as eliminate the vestiges of the old ideology and carry out the ideological revolution to arm men with a new communist ideology.

The basic task in modeling ideology is to establish a revolutionary outlook on the world and a view on revolution. To make men ardent communist revolutionaries, we should make them establish a correct view on revolution. The attitude they show toward revolution and how positively they participate in revolution depend on how their view on revolution is established.

Our party members and workers should possess the chuche-oriented view on revolution. The chuche-oriented view on revolution is a viewpoint and stand that we view revolution placing the masses of the people in the center, and a revolutionary spirit of stoutly fighting for them.

The core of the chuche-oriented view on revolution is loyalty to the party and the leader. The cause of socialism and communism is pioneered by the leader and carried out under the leadership of the party and the leader. Only when we uphold the leadership of the party and the leader can we win victory in the movement of revolution. For this reason, to establish the correct view on revolution, we should increasingly adopt loyalty to the party and the leader as a basic duty.

To establish the correct view on revolution, we should firmly arm ourselves with revolutionary ideology and theories. When we grasp revolutionary ideology and theories, we can foresee the future of revolution with confidence, correctly recognizing the justness of the development of revolution and fight to the end without unrest and hesitation in any adverse circumstances.

To establish the correct view on revolution, we should posses the communist revolutionary spirit. The communist revolutionary spirit is a endless devotion to the party, the leader, the working class and the people, a surging animosity and hatred for the enemy of revolution and a tenacious revolutionary spirit of fighting to the end without any rest in any adverse circumstances, keeping fidelity to revolution. The communist revolutionary spirit is also a self-reliant revolutionary spirit in resolving all problems for ourselves, overcoming trials and difficulties laid on the way of advance, a strong organizational and disciplined spirit of observing the organizational disciplines in an awakened manner, valuing most the revolutionary organizations. When we possess such revolutionary spirits, we become genuine revolutionaries.

We can talk about the correct establishment of the view on revolution when we make the revolutionary ideology and theories our faith and possess a tenacious communist revolutionary spirit. Whether the view on revolution is correctly established is confirmed by revolutionary practice. Revolutionary practice is a powerful means to remodel ideology and a criterion to verify men's ideology. Apart from practice and action, we can neither appraise nor verify men's ideology. The revolutionary practice of communists is a struggle to realize the leader's revolutionary ideology and the party's lines and policies. One who devotedly struggles to realize the party's lines and policies, upholding the leader's revolutionary ideology, is a genuine communist revolutionary with a correct view on revolution.

Whether the view on revolution is correctly established is shown in the period of austere trials. When he confronts trials, man is subject to show his real mind. One who can keep fidelity to revolution, though he mounts the scaffold, and who is resolved to render the party and the leader endless loyalty, though he sacrifices oneself, is a genuine revolutionary with the firm chuche-oriented view on revolution.

To be a communist revolutionary with the correctly established view on revolution, we should enhance revolutionary study. Studying is a basic way to arm ourselves with revolutionary ideology, theory, strategy and tactic.

Without studying, we can neither possess a high class view and revolutionary insight nor grasp the truth of the revolutionary struggle. One who carries out revolution should continue studying throughout one's entire life, adopting studying as the first duty.

Studying is not a means to merely obtain knowledge or theory. The revolutionary theory and knowledge gained through studying should be made faith.

To become a genuine communist revolutionary with the correctly established view on revolution, we should lead a revolutionary organizational life well. The organizational life is a revolutionary life-style, which stems from the nature of the movement of communism, and (?constitutes an activity of revolutionary judgement). Apart from the organizational life, we cannot become a revolutionary and maintain a political life. Though we were born with a physical life, we maintain and add lustre to a political life through the organizational life.

The revolutionary organizational life should always be led in the ideological struggle of the party members. Only when we vigorously wage an ideological struggle in parallel with ideological indoctrination, can people be awakened and disciplined politically and can we complete the ideological and spiritual traits of the revolutionaries.

The party of working-class should always stick to revolutionary organizational life to temper people as enthusiastic communists through the furnace of ideological struggle. To become communist revolutionaries with a correct view of revolution, we should temper ourselves through the practice of revolution. Revolutionaries are tempered in terms of ideological will through the practice of revolution, thus possessing the characteristics and nature of revolutionaries.

Class struggle is the most intense revolutionary struggle. People can enhance their class-consciousness, possess (? a correct judgment) and develop their uncompromising struggle spirit against the class enemy through the practice of class struggle.

The struggle for socialist construction is also an important revolutionary struggle.

Only when we positively take part in the practical struggle for the production and construction, can we have a firm faith in the justness and victory of the socialist, communist cause and possess revolutionary traits — the genuine working class' revolutionary spirit.

Through revolutionary study, organizational life and revolutionary practice, we should foster party members and workers as chuche-type communist revolutionaries, who possess a firm view of chuche revolution, and as genuine revolutionary fighters, who devotedly struggle to consummate the revolutionary cause of chuche pioneered by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song to the end.

The treatise also states: To vigorously push ahead with the revolution and construction, we should give priority to political work. So as to successfully carry out the revolutionary task, we should give priority to political work over all other work for indoctrinating and mobilizing people.

As revolution and construction are carried out by people, the success or failure of the revolutionary struggle and of socialist and communist construction is dependent upon how we carry out the work with people. The work with people, in essence, is a political work and a work with people's ideologies.

To give priority to the political work -- the work with people -- is to have the masses successfully carry out the revolutionary struggle and the construction work with a high awareness and positiveness by having the popular masses arm themselves, above all works, with party line and policy and arousing their revolutionary zeal.

Originally, revolution is an awakening struggle. Revolution is not one that is carried out at other people's orders, or that is carried out for reward; but it is carried out by our political convictions and awareness.

Therefore, we should always give priority to political work in revolutionary struggle, thus making it a firm rule to enhance people's awareness and positiveness. To give priority to political work is a demand stemming from the nature of the socialist system. Under the socialist system under which the popular masses are the masters of everything, unlike under the capitalist system which suppresses and exploits the people masses, it is just to depend on the high political awareness and revolutionary zeal of the popular masses.

Only when we enhance the awakening enthusiasm of the workers as masters of revolution by giving priority to political work, can we display the superiority of the socialist system and vigorously push ahead with socialist construction.

Giving priority to political work does not mean that we neglect the administrative practical works or technological economic works. As the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song once taught, we should correctly combine administrative practical works or technological economic works. As the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song once taught, we should correctly combine administrative practical work and technological work with political work while giving priority to political work.

The construction of socialism and communism is a highly organized work carried out in accordance with plans throughout the entire society. It is also a complicated work carried out based on the modern sciences and technology.

The accurate administration organizational work and scientific and technological economic work are an indispensable requirement for the construction of socialism and communism. However, the administration organizational work and the technological economic work themselves can be properly carried out only when priority is given to political work. When we adhere to technological economic work, while disregarding political work, we cannot successfully carry out any revolutionary task.

To successfully organize and mobilize the popular masses to socialist construction, the political and moral incentives should be emphasized, while correctly combining them with material incentive.

The essential characteristics of the socialist society lie in its communistic characteristic. The political and moral incentives proceed from the communistic characteristic of the socialist society and are to strengthen this communistic characteristic.

Of course, socialist society possesses a transitional nature. Therefore, in socialist society, the principle of socialist distribution should be adopted and the material incentive should not be disregarded.

However, disregarding the political and moral incentives and emphasizing the material incentive runs counter to the essential characteristics of the socialist system. This is also a very dangerous and harmful inclination of aggravating egoism among the working people, making them cling to money and material things and finally corroding the socialist system and revolutionary gains.

Under socialism, the political and moral incentives should be emphasized. The essential superiority of the socialist system is for the popular masses, who have become the masters of all things, to firmly unite and devotedly work for the country, the people and freedom.

Only when the political and moral incentives are emphasized can the popular masses be led to devotedly work with the correct stand and attitude of being the masters of the country and the revolution.

Political work should be conducted through the forms of persuasion and indoctrination. Political work is a work to conduct with the people and a work to make them display their ideological will.

With the bureaucratic method of ordering or commanding the popular masses, we cannot lead them to display their devoted zeal. Only through a method of persuasion and indoctrination can we not only lead the people to arm themselves with the revolutionary ideology and to unreservedly display their revolutionary zeal and endless creative strength but also can more firmly deepen the ties between the party and the popular masses.

Political work should be conducted through various forms and methods. Political work is conducted under various conditions and circumstances. It is a creative work conducted with the people with different intellectual levels and characteristics. Therefore, it cannot be conducted through a fixed pattern.

Political work should be conducted in a substantial and aggressive manner, using various forms and methods. Political work should be developed into a work of the masses. Political work, which mobilizes and educates the broad masses cannot be conducted by several persons. All the people carrying out the revolution should become political workers. They should also become the indoctrinators and organizers of the masses.

As taught by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the method, in which 1 teaches 10, 10 teach 100, and 100 teach 1,000, is a superior method in which as many people as possible can participate in political work and which makes it possible for political work to become a work of the masses themselves.

Political work should be closely linked with the practice of the revolution. On important purpose of the political work is to successfully solve assigned revolutionary tasks.

The success of political work should find expression in the practical success of the revolution and construction and should be evaluated by this practical success.

Political work has no relation with the implementation of the revolutionary task and political work which fails to serve the revolution and construction is not useful.

We should more properly accelerate the construction of socialism and communism by firmly grasping and maintaining the principle of giving priority to political work, the correctness and vitality of which have been proved through the practice of the revolution.

Safeguarding and protecting the chuche idea created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and estensively embodying it in all sectors of the revolution and construction constitutes a basic requirement for the completion of the chuche cause.

The chuche idea is the genuine outlook of the world in our era, which is the era of chuche. It is also a great revolutionary banner leading the revolution and construction to an ever-victorious path.

The history of the Korean revolution, which has traversed the road of victory over half of a century, while surmounting all difficulties and trials, is precisely the history of victory of the chuche idea.

Today we are vigorously accelerating the general advance to implement the historic report of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the sixth party congress and the revolutionary line and struggle program clarified in his policy speech.

The key to victory in this sacred struggle is to uphold the revolutionary banner of the great chuche idea and to brilliantly embody it in all sectors.

All functions and working people should deeply study the treatise of Comrade Kim Chong-il, member of the Presidium of the political bureau of the KWP Central Committee and secretary of the party Central Committee, titled "On the Chuche Idea" and should adopt the ideology, theory and policies clarified in the treatise as their firm faith.

Thus they should expedite the complete victory of socialism and the country's reunification and complete the cause of modeling the whole society after the chuche idea by vigorously advancing the revolution and construction in accordance with the demands of the chuche idea.

NORTH BLOCKS PRC BORDER AFTER ARMY DEFECTIONS

SK020312 Seoul YONHAP in English 0248 GMT 2 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jun 2 (YONHAP) — North Korea has blockaded its border with mainland China since last May, and has "significantly" reinforced vigilance along that border and its coastal areas in the wake of the recent flight of North Korean military officers to China, it was reported here Friday.

The TONGIL ILBO, a Japanese language daily published here by a pro-Seoul Korean expatriat, said the North Korean leadership was "alarmed" by the defection to China in late April and May of a "considerable" number of its military officers, and took the action to prevent further defections.

The defectors, who included "over 10 generals," had been purged by Kim Chong-il, son and heir apparent to North Korean President Kim Il-song, because of their opposition to the plan whereby the junior Kim would succeed his father as North Korea's next leader, the paper said in a story, attributed to "sources well informed about North Korean affairs."

The paper reported late last month a large number of North Korean military officers opposing the hereditary succession were fired, jailed or transferred in a purge launched in mid-April. The paper said North Korea is boycotting the renewal of its fisheries agreement with Japan for fear its naval officers, assigned to supervise the agreement, might defect to Japan or other countries on board Japanese fishing boats.

Furthermore, it said, armed North Korean soldiers are guarding foreign embassies and consulates in Pyongyang to prevent the possible defection of North Koreans through diplomatic missions.

AMERICAN WRITER CALLS FOR U.S. OVERTURE TO NORTH

SK020440 Seoul HANGUK ILBO in Korean 2 Jul 82 p 3

[Text] Washington — by correspondent Yi Mun-hui — As it improved its relations with Red China through ping-pong diplomacy in the late 1960's, the United States must make similar efforts toward North Korea and this will greatly contribute to deterring war on the Korean Peninsula and easing tension in the region, said the CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR on 30 June.

Saying this in the article contributed by Edward Olsen, professor of national security affairs at the naval postgraduate school, the paper held that such efforts for improvement must be made in a limited war so as not to damage the interests of South Korea and must be, if possible, made while Kim Il-song is still in power.

TIMES LAUDS YI POM-SOK WASHINGTON VISIT

[Editorial: "Yi's Visits to D.C., Tokyo"]

[Text] Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok has wound up his three-day official visit to Washington with a series of meetings with American leaders and is now set to make a stopover in Tokyo on his way back home to have talks with Japanese Government figures.

The Washington visit was reported to be fruitful despite the sudden resignation of his host, Mr. Alexander Haig, from the post of secretary of state on the eve of his departure.

In addition to a meeting with the outgoing secretary, which turned out to be a courtesy call, the minister followed a busy schedule, having talks with Vice President George Bush and other leading officials of the U.S. administration, plus some congressmen, to discuss a wide range of issues from stepped-up political and economic cooperation to improve management of U.S. foreign military sales (FMS) credits with regard to their terms and the export of Korean-made defense industry products to third countries.

When the announcement of his tour was made last week, only a few days preceding his departure, there were observations that Minister Yi, much versed in inter-Korean problems, might explore with Washington policy makers the future course of resolving the Korean Peninsula question.

Though the abrupt replacement of the U.S. secretary of state was somewhat embarrassing, the minister must have been rewarded with a rare opportunity to gain an on-the-spot grasp of the Washington situation at the time of a change at the helm of American foreign policy and have talks with U.S. leaders more in a future perspective. After all, as the minister repeatedly stressed prior to his departure, there appeared to be no major outstanding issues between the two countries and his visit was rather a "routine get-together," if not ceremonial in conjunction with the centennial of Korean-American relations.

In contrast to such aspects of the Washington tour, Mr. Yi's visit to Tokyo early next week, though unofficial, is expected to be crucial due to its obvious impact on the settlement of the long-drawn-out controversy over Seoul's request for $6 billion in Japanese loans. The Tokyo visit is eye-catching because, for one thing, it was not scheduled at the time of his departure from Seoul over the weekend when the minister categorically ruled out such a possibility.

For another, the visit will be made at the request of Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, who together with his staff should have studied the latest Korean proposal on ways to settle the loan issue. The proposal, handed to the Japnese early last week, was the first of its kind following Mr. Yi's appointment to the portfolio of foreign minister just a month ago. It was in response to a Japanese bid of last April in which Tokyo had reportedly offered $4 billion -- $1.5 billion in official development assistance (ODA) loans and the rest from the Japanese Export-Import Bank. The Japanese offer fell much short of the Korean request for $6 billion in soft ODA credits alone.

The contents of Korea's recent counterproposal were not known. Yet noteworthy was a remark by Minister Yi shortly before his overseas tour that the loan negotiations could be successful only if both sides made concessions to the other party's position and in that process a comprehensive approach taking the regional security situation into account would be essential. Indeed for the benefit of closer relations between Korea and Japan and for that matter the common cause of the Free World, an early settlement of the loan controversy, now protracted for more than a year, is crucial -- preferably before the coming fall. For this task, Minister Yi's visit to Tokyo is hoped to be fruitful in paving the way for a final resolution of the pending issue.

HANGUK ILBO SEEKS JAPANESE CONCESSIONS IN TALKS

[Editorial: "Foreign Minister Yi's Visit to Japan Following His Visit to the United States -- We Hope for a General Solution in Korea-Japan Economic Aid Talks"]

[Text] It is reported that Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok will visit Japan, at the invitation of Japanese Foreign Minister Sakurauchi, on his way home from a visit to the United States.

The Korea-Japan foreign ministers' talks on 5 July was not on his schedule when he left for Washington on 26 June. As the year-old Korea-Japan economic cooperation talks has entered a delicate stage, his visit to Japan is being keenly watched.

Foreign Minister Yi's official visit to Washington itself was more than we could anticipate. Now, on top of it, he is to visit Tokyo for talks between the Japanese and Korean foreign minister, attracting attention at home and abroad.

During his stay in Washington, Foreign Minister Yi met with former U.S. Secretary of State Haig. He also exchanged views on a wide range of subjects with Stoessel, the deputy secretary of state who is acting on behalf of newly appointed Secretary of State Schultz until his appointment is cleared in the Senate. He also held talks with Carlucci, deputy secretary of defense, U.S. Vice President Bush and congressional leaders.

In the course of these meetings, the U.S. leaders reaffirmed the Reagan administration's invariable support for Korea-U.S. relations of friendship and alliance. Minister Yi increased the U.S. leaders understanding of Korea's political and economic situation. What is more, he is viewed as having contributed a great deal to persuading them to regard favorably such issues as increasing U.S. foreign military sales credits for Korea and expediting the export of Korean-made defense industry products to other countries. Of course, we presume that the discussion on the situation in East Asia, including the Korea-Japan economic aid talks, must have been included in the pending issues discussed during his meetings with the U.S. officials.

We consider Minister Yi's visit to Japan on his way home for talks with his Japanese counterpart a timely one and an expression of the attitude of mutual contact between the two countries. At issue is Japan's new offer last April of $1.5 billion as overseas development assistance loans from the Japanese Government and a loan of $2.5 billion from the Export-Import Bank -- totalling $4 billion -- which is known as the Yanagiya proposal. This was too far from our government's request and led the talks to a deadlock.

Then, Minister Yi was appointed to the post of foreign minister on 2 June, and he soon conveyed Korea's counterproposal to Japan on 22 June. Judging from these facts, it is too early to be optimistic or pessimistic over the outcome of the Korea-Japan foreign ministers talks. For a while, some Japanese working-level officials had hinted that the Yanagiya proposal was the final one. There were rumors that the Japanese side was observing the situation in Korea and waiting until the dust kicked up by the Yi Chol-hui-Chang Yong-cha scandal settled.

It is common sense that there be no ultimatum in diplomatic negotiations between working-level officials. Diplomatic negotiations on pending issues are accompanied by numerous ups and downs and efforts before they are settled by a political decision at the highest level. Also bilateral relations have something to do with multilateral relations and there are elements that can affect conditions as the situation changes. In other words, recent events in Korea, in essence, have nothing to do with the issue of economic aid talks. What should be seriously regarded by the Japanese side in dealing with the economic aid talks is, we think, what prompted the very idea of the economic aid request. Essentially, Korean-Japanese economic aid is a matter of long-term relations between the two countries and is directly linked to stability of the international relations in northeast Asia. Such a thing should not be influenced by myopic calculations or a narrow-minded wait-and-see attitude.

In addition, if settlement of the economic aid talks is postponed until after August or September, it is likely to be put off till next year due to the tight schedules of the leaders of both countries of diplomatic visits to other countries.

In this case, we worry about the effects of a postponement.

Judging from this, it is our hope that the Korea-Japan foreign ministers' talks will provide a milestone for an early settlement of the economic aid issue -- a longstanding issue pending between Korea and Japan. Korea's new counterproposal on the economic aid issue has a rational flexibility. The time is ripe for the Japanese side to prove that it is making efforts for a settlement by making general and long-term concessions.

SECRETARIES OF ROK-JAPAN LAWMAKERS' UNION TO MEET

[Text] Seoul, July 2 (YONHAP) -- The 1982 regular joint meeting of the secretaries of the Korea-Japan Parliamentarians' Union will be held here July 10 to decide the agenda for the union's annual General Assembly conference Sept. 7-10 in Tokyo.

Sources at the binational organization said Friday that the Korean delegation will be led by Rep. Yi Sang-ik, the Korean-side secretary general, and the five-member Japanese delegation will be headed by Diet Member Matshuhei Mori, the Japanese-side secretary general.

The sources said the two sides have already agreed that discussions of the Soviet Union's world strategy and how it affects northeast Asia's security, as well as the adoption of concrete Korean-Japanese cultural exchanges will be formally introduced to the Tokyo conference.

They said Ken Yasui, the Japanese side chairman of the union, will come to Seoul with the Japanese delegation for talks with Korean politicians on Seoul's request for six billion U.S. dollars in loans.

TONG-A ILBO ATTACKS NEW ECONOMIC MEASURES

SK012300 Seoul TONG-A ILBO in Korean 1 Jul 82 p 3

[From the column "Reporter's Eye" -- by reporter Sin Sang-min of the Economics Department]

[Excerpts] Explaining the 28 June drastic measures in favor of business firms, Finance Minister Kang Kyong-sik said: "Do not confuse an enterprise with an entrepreneur". The reason why one side of a solid, be it round or angular, can have sunshine is that its opposite side endures darkness. This also applies to the economy.

It is inevitable that benefit for one side is a loss for the other side. To revitalize the economy, the other side may endure a heavier loss for the time being. If the 28 June measures to help firms bring about price instability, the common people, including workers, will shoulder the loss. Prior to calculating the ripple effect of the measures, popular workers may feel a sense of relative poverty and of alienation because the benefits of the measures are focused on firms.

It is said that though the degree of shock is different, the 28 June measures are essentially similar to the 3 August action taken 10 years ago. At that time, the majority of distinguished businessmen in this land were engaged in the curb loan business. This saddened us. The people are sad at the reality in which businessmen, who received a good education and were fostered after capitalism had taken root in this land, are not much different from swindlers and profiteers -- businessmen who conducted business activities shortly after the liberation. In a sense, Mrs. Chang's loan scandal is a case through which businessmen disappointed us.

The so-called public business firms manipulated their accounts. This causes distrust of all businessman. Of course, I am talking about a few business firms. When they heard that the general trading companies, overseas construction companies and heavy chemical industries, which assume the responsibility for leading our economy, have good appearance but no substance, the common people were seized by depression rather than by rage.

For this reason, the 28 June measures may have been inevitable. Because the business firms could not resolve their own problems by themselves, the government took action to help them. However, since workers are also suffering from the economic recession as much as business firms, the government has demanded due benefits be given the workers through these measures.

It is learned that the government is working out measures to lower the income tax rates as much as the cut in corporate tax rates. But, remarks of the authorities concerned that "because the tax policy is not effective in supporting people in the lower income brackets, the government plans to settle the problem through expansion of employment" imply little cuts in the tax burden imposed on them. This signals that the 28 June measures would end with unilateral support for business firms. However, the measures should not help only business firms. The government should be aware that it should not make the common people and workers think they are the only side to be sacrificed as they felt they were sacrificed. In the 3 August action of the past.

ROK TO SIMPLIFY EXPORT-IMPORT PROCEDURES

[Text] A number of measures designed to improve export procedures, calling, among others, for totally lifting government controls on capital goods imported for export use, were announced by the Ministry of Commerce and Industry yesterday.

The government will allow all small and medium manufacturing firms to export, regardless of the size of their capital and records in foreign sales.

At the same time, the government will have export inspection and testing procedures on 200 items discontinued. The steps are likely to be put into effect late this month when the modification of pertinent government regulations is expected to be approved by the cabinet, a ministry spokesman said.

The announcement said the government will discontinue its supervision over the capital goods imported for export use. Until now, importers of industrial facilities for use in the production of foreign-bound goods have been required to export goods worth up to 10 percent of the value of imports a year.

Blue-chip firms, especially those with outstanding records in exports, will be freed from government controls when they purchase raw materials for export use. While easing or lifting its controls on importers of capital goods and raw materials for export purposes, the government intends to toughen penalties against violators, the ministry said.

The ministry said 200 items will no longer be subject to export testing, reducing the number of export goods which continue to undergo such inspection to 776.

According to the ministry, mining and other manufacturing firms of small size will be authorized to export their products with their own right, regardless of the size of their capital and export records. The export license has so far been issued or renewed only for those manufacturing firms whose annual exports exceeded $100,000 and with a paid-in capital of 20 million won.

But, the small and medium-sized firms which do not produce goods of their own will be subject to the capital and sales requirements on a continual basis. The validity of an export license will be extended to possibly two years from one year.

Controls on barter trade between Korean and foreign concerns will be strengthened, the ministry said, for the sake of discouraging transaction with firms from the countries in which the foreign currency situation is in bad shape. The simplication of a total of 85 kinds of export procedures will save Korean exporters roughly 23,431 million won a year and 31,047 man-days. Other features of the export simplication steps follow:

-- The capital requirement for import agents will be done away with. Business records will be the only requirement imposed on import agents.
-- Export companies will no longer need to hire quality inspectors.
-- The business of returning customs duties to exporters will be improved.
-- International biddings by foreign governments or firms whose value is less than $5 million will no longer be subject to ministerial coordination.

ACADEMY OF SCIENCES HOLDS SESSION 26 JUNE

OW020345 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in Russian 1430 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Ulaanbaatar, 29 Jun (MONTSAME) — A regular session of the MPR Academy of Sciences was held on 26 June. The report by Comrade C. Tseren, president of the MPR Academy of Sciences, "Plans for Scientific Research Work for 1981-1985" and the report by Comrade O. Shagdarsuren, scientific secretary of the MPR Academy of Sciences, "Account of MPR Academy of Sciences Activities in the First Half of 1982," were heard at the session. Participants, who debated the reports, expressed concrete opinions and suggestions for increasing practical returns from scientific research, ensuring close ties of science with production and fuller and more expedient use of existing scientific strengths and perfecting the planning of scientific research work.

The speakers' addresses noted with satisfaction that an atmosphere of collective leadership is asserting itself in the Academy of Sciences in contrast to the previous willfulness and rough treatment of scientists. Such a creative and genuinely businesslike atmosphere, they said, should be introduced deeper into the activity of scientific councils and sectors of Academy of Sciences institutes. Corresponding resolutions were adopted on the reports. The session also heard a number of scientific reports submitted by separate scientific research institutes.

The session discussed organizational questions. Comrade C. Tseren and B. Lubsandandzan, corresponding members of the MPR Academy of Sciences, were elected members of the MPR Academy of Sciences, and Doctors of Sciences Comrades O. Shagdarsuren, S. Norobsambuu, A. Dulmaa, N. Ishjamts, T. Namjil, T. Haydab and R. Tserendulam were elected corresponding members of the MPR Academy of Sciences.

B. Chadraa was removed from corresponding membership in the MPR Academy of Sciences.

Academician C. Tseren, president of the MPR Academy of Sciences, graduated from the Moscow State University in 1965, where he became a theoretical physicist. During his years of work in the Joint Institute of Nuclear Research in Dubna City, he successfully defended his theses for a candidate's degree (in 1970) and a thesis for his doctor's degree (in 1980), the scientific value of which was highly assessed by prominent scientists of the USSR and other foreign countries.

Academician C. Tseren pays considerable attention to training scientific cadres and regularly lectures at the Mongolian State University and supervises the course and degree work of students. C. Tseren was elected a candidate member of the MPRP Central Committee at the 18th MPRP congress. He is a deputy of the MPR People's Great Hural.

SIHANOUK ARRIVES IN MANILA FOR 3-DAY VISIT

OW011237 Quezon City RPN Television Network in English 1106 GMT 1 Jul 82

[Text] Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk is in Manila for a 3-day visit, Sihanouk is currently the Kampuchean coalition government president-designate. David Nye has more on that visit:

Norodom Sihanouk was met at the airport by members of the diplomatic corps led by Foreign Minister Carlos P. Romulo. Others included the ambassadors of the ASEAN-member nations. Accompanied by his wife Princess Monique, Prince Sihanouk came from Jakarta, Indonesia, and will stay until July 3. He will then proceed to Bangkok, Thailand, on the last leg of his tour through the capitals of the ASEAN. He is expected to seek concrete Philippine support for the new coalition government which seeks to dislodge the Vietnamese from Kampuchea.

Before he left for Manila, Prince Sihanouk met Indonesian President Suharto for an hour at the Merdeka Palace to thank him for Indonesian support for the coalition government. The prince also met the Singapore President Lee Kuan Yew earlier to seek similar support. Prince Sihanouk will begin talks with President Marcos and Minister Romulo tomorrow.

Meets With Marcos

OW020546 Hong Kong AFP in English 0534 GMT 2 Jul 82

[Text] Manila, 2 Jul (AFP) -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk, head of a recently formed Cambodian coalition government set up in opposition to the Vietnamese backed Phnom Penh regime, met President Ferdinand Marcos behind closed doors today, reportedly to ask for aid and support.

Details of their talk may be disclosed tomorrow during a press conference shortly before Prince Sihanouk leaves for Bangkok to complete his tour of the five-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), information officials here said.

Prince Sihanouk arrived in Manila from Jakarta yesterday for a three-day visit to personally thank Philippine leaders for their support, to explain the details of the resistance coalition and to seek increased aid.

The ASEAN countries -- Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia, Thailand and the Philippines -- worked hard towards the formation of the coalition and are vocal proponents of a United Nations resolution calling for the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia and the denial of recognition to the Vietnam-backed Heng Samrin government. The anti-Vietnamese coalition, formed recently in Kuala Lumpur, includes resistance factions led by Prince Sihanouk, anti-communist leader Son Sann and the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge chief Khieu Samphan.

[Speech by Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the PRK Council of State, at 28 June meeting in Phnom Penh to mark 31st founding anniversary of the KPRP -- recorded]

[Text] My respects to all bonzes present, my best wishes to all local and foreign guests and my best wishes to all beloved comrades and friends:

June 28, 1951, the founding date of our party, is inscribed in the history of our nation. The resolute revolutionary struggle, which has been full of difficulties and complications for more than 30 years, has caused big changes in our society and our people. The people have escaped from the danger of genocide, have been rapidly reborn and are making every effort to defend and construct their beloved fatherland.

On this historic date, we all remember and express our sincere and profound thanks to dear and respected President Ho Chi Minh, who accomplished praiseworthy great acts by bringing and popularizing the light of Marxist-Leninism and who is the founder of the Indochinese Communist Party -- the predecessor of the three parties of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos.

We remember Comrade Son Ngoc Minh and Comrade Tu Samouth -- communist elements and renowned leaders of our party and our people -- who sacrificed their lives for the noble ideal of the party, the cause of the glorious Kampuchean revolution and the lasting prosperity of our people.

On this glorious historic day, we recall our compatriots and comrades who valiantly struggled and sacrificed their lives for the people, the party and the fatherland. On this occasion, our party and our people express their most profound thanks to the parties and people of Vietnam, Laos and the Soviet Union, as well as of other socialist countries. Our thanks are also directed to our friends near and far in the world who helped and supported our people. The great merits and lofty sacrifices of the Vietnamese people toward our revolution are always heavy in our country's history. [applause]

Also on this occasion, I would like to express on behalf of the party Central Committee and the Council of State warm congratulations and praise for the immense achievements won by all of our people and armed forces in all fields over the past 3 years. [applause]

Dear comrades and friends, great victories scored by our people during the past years are the result of the birth and activities of the Indochinese Communist Party and, since 1951, of the Khmer People's Revolutionary Party, which was renamed the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party. The birth and activities of our party following the patriotic work of our ancestors, is a continuation of the growing traditions of our nation's struggle.

[Phnom Penh SPK in French at 1501 GMT on 28 June, in its report on Heng Samrin's speech, at this point adds the following:

[For more than 100 years, our territory was occupied by the French colonialists. Our people were subjugated to slavery. From year to year, they lived with famine and misery. This is why our people throughout the country, animated with an unconquerable spirit, rose against the yoke of the French colonialists; barbarous domination and that of their lackeys. There were insurrections in many provinces such as Kraatie, Kompong Cham, Kompong Chhnang and so on led by Sivatha, Achar Sva, Po Kamboand Patranloong [names as received]. Because of the lack of correct leadership, these struggles ended in failure.

[In 1917, the Russian October Revolution triumphed. With the light of the October Revolution, Comrade Nguyen Ai Quoc (President Ho Chi Minh) -- the first communist combatant of Vietnam and the revolutionary of the three Indochinese countries -- made every effort to wage Marxist-Leninist propaganda in preparation for the foundation of the communist party. On 3 February 1930, Comrade Nguyen Ai Quoc founded the Indochinese Communist Party in the name of the Communist Internationale. In April 1931, the Indochinese Communist Party was recognized as a cell of the Communist Internationale. Since then, the revolution of the peoples of the three countries was closely linked and our people's revolutionary movement entered a new phase.

[Under the leadership of the party, revolutionary bases in our country developed. The struggles of the workers and peasants spread: Workers at Kompong Cham rubber plantation demanded a pay raise, a reduction of working hours, enjoyment of their rights and freedom in the creation of a representative organization; peasants in Battambang Province and the Pnong minorities in Kratie rose against tax levies; and so on.

[In 1945, the Soviet Union annihilated the facist Germans and Japanese and the August 1945 revolution of the Vietnamese people erupted, which was ultimately victorious. The Democratic Republic of Vietnam was born, which influenced the national liberation struggle of our people. Due to the assistance and support of the Vietnamese revolution, revolutionary forces of our country were built up and developed rapidly. On 17 April 1950, at the end of the national congress of the Khmer Issarak Front, the Committee of the United National Front was set up with Comrade Tu Samouth as president, as well as the Provisional Central Committee of National Liberation led by Comrade Son Ngoc Minh. On 19 April 1950, President Son Ngoc Minh, in the name of the Provisional Central Committee of National Liberation, read the proclamation of independence to our people and peoples in the world.

[In order to respond to the demands of the developing revolution, the Second Congress of the Indochinese Communist Party (February 1951) decided that each country should found its own revolutionary party. In implementing this resolution, the communist Kampucheans convened their first congress on 28 June 1951 and founded the Khmer People's Revolutionary Party headed by Comrade Son Ngoc Minh.

[This party continued the revolutionary cause and traditions of the Indochinese Communist Party, led the entire people in chasing out the French colonialists, the U.S. interventionists and the traitors of the nation as well as their lackeys so as to restore independence, unity and permanent prosperity to our country.

[The peoples of the three countries scored victories in their struggle with every passing day. In particular, the Vietnamese victory at Dien Bien Phu led the French colonialists to sign the 1954 Geneva accords. In Kampuchea, Sihanouk -- a representative of the feudal class with capitalist tendencies -- was in power, practicing a two-faced policy: Externally he maintained relations with the imperialists and socialist countries under the label of "neutrality," internally he exploited the population and oppressed the revolution in a most barbarous manner. In 1970, the U.S. directly intervened in Kampuchea and brought to power the Lon Nol militarists -- their lackeys.

Once more our people, the Vietnamese and Lao peoples, standing shoulder to shoulder, rose up against the U.S. aggressors. Due to the assistance and support of the fraternal Vietnamese Army, our revolutionary armed forces successively foiled full-span sweeping campaigns against the enemies and inflicted bitter defeats on them. Liberated zones grew larger every day.

Faced with inevitable defeat, the U.S. imperialists were obliged to sign the Paris accords in January 1973 and to carry out the withdrawal of U.S. troops and their mercenaries from the three Indochinese countries and end the bombings in Kampuchea. In 1974 and at the beginning of 1975, the Vietnamese Army and people launched an offensive against the puppets in South Vietnam. Those victories aided the growth of our armed forces and the victory of our army and people which liberted the entire territory on 17 April 1975.

Shortly after the second congress of the party (September 1960), Pol Pot and Ieng Sary -- lackeys of the Beijing expansionists -- found a way to take over the leadership of the party and diverted it step by step onto the bad path of chauvinism. They profited from the unrestricted aid of Vietnam in their struggle against the U.S. and Lon Nol by attempting to betray it, After the 17 April 1975 victory, they clearly demonstrated their reactionary nature. They completely abandoned their working class position, betrayed Marxism-Leninism, practised excessive reactionary chauvinism and sacrificed the interests of the nation in favor of the Beijing expansionists.

They implemented "the Chinese Proletarian Cultural Revolution." They applied the most barbarous measures, abolished everything and transformed our country into a hell on earth. They inculcated an excess of reactionary chauvinism, separated Kampuchea from the alliance of the three Indochinese countries and provoked an aggressive war against Vietnam to serve the expansionist policy of the Beijing reactionaries in collusion with the U.S. imperialists.

Within the party, they implemented a militarist, dictatorial and authoritarian regime and massacred almost all the old cadres who had acquired much experience during their struggles. They transformed the army and cadres into terroriests and hangmen and prompted a disasterous extermination unprecedented in the history of mankind.

Faced with a situation in which the nation was pushed to the brink of extinction and the territory was about to fall into the hands of the reactionary Chinese, in December 1978, a number of authentic Kampuchean communists gathered patriotic forces to create the Kampuchean National United Front for National Salvation aimed at spurring the people to rise in order to topple the genocidal regime. At the urgent request of the Kampuchean revolution, the fraternal Vietnamese people and army brought us devoted and multifaceted aid and support and because of this we scored the historic victory on 7 January 1979, completely toppling the Pol Pot regime, eliminating the danger of extermination, liberating our territory from the Beijing expansionists' claws and founding the People's Republic of Kampuchea. With this historic victory, our party was restored, The third contress of the party held at the beginning of January 1979 energically condemned the treason Pol Pot committed against the nation and his reactionary political line. According to the political principles of national salvation, genuine Kampuchean communists decided to reorganize the party and determine the primary tasks.

The fourth congress of the party in May 1981 noted the successes which had been scored, traced the political line and defined the current revolutionary tasks for our country, continued to stimulate the reorganization of the party and decided to rename the party the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party.

After liberation, due to the correct political line of the party and considerable international aid, especially from Vietnam, the Soviet Union and fraternal socialist countries, our people, with tremendous efforts, scored satisfactory successes in all fields in the tasks of defending and reconstructing the couhtry. The reorganization work of the party also yielded good results.

[This is the current revolutionary situation in our country: Independence and sovereignty are well defended and the alliance between the three Indochinese countries is being reinforced now more than ever. The situation in Kampuchea is irreversible. It is clear that our revolution is defeating the enemies and our people are always advancing.]

Faced with the development of our revolution and their defeats in the military and political fields, our enemies have used a new tactic by creating the so-called "tripartite government." This act is only a maneuver by the Khmer reactionaries' clique implemented at the order of their masters — the Beijing hegemonists and expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists. They are using the Sihanouk card to conceal the crimes of the Pol Pot hangmen and to dupe international public opinion and our people.

This maneuver confirms our enemies' weak position and their successive defeats and, on the other hand, the strong position of the Kampuchean revolution due to the alliance and solidarity between the three Indochinese countries -- Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos -- which is closer than ever and the Solidarity with the Soviet Union, fraternal socialist countries and peace and justice-loving peoples in the world.

The collusion between Sihanouk, Son Sann and the Pol Pot clique unmased their traitorous faces. The counterrevolutionary forces are in collusion, joining together to reinforce their shaky position and to maintain their rotten corpse at the United Nations.

Our people must increase vigilance in order not to fall into their traps. They must never forget the bloody crimes and the defeats of the traitorous Pol Pot clique. Whatever their maneuvers, they can never change the situation in Kampuchea. [applause]

Dear comrades and friends, in commemorating the founding anniversary of the Khmer People's Revolutionary Party (now the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party) which is a genuine Marxist-Leninist party, we understand the close link between the party and the successes of our country's revolution and our nation.

As an authentic Marxist-Leninist party, the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party established as its goal the safeguarding of national independence and the construction of our country, step by step through the transition period toward socialism. Many distinguished sons and daughters of the party and the people have valiantly sacrificed themselves in the struggle for national independence against the French colonialists, the U.S. imperialists and in toppling the Pol Pot regime -- lackeys of Beijing. Actually, under the party's banner we are determined to struggle against the Beijing expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces to firmly defend the independence of the fatherland. For the people's prosperity, our party is tirelessly working to advance Kampuchea step by step through the transitional period toward socialism. This is scientific socialism -- the noble ideal of progressive mankind in the world -- which is completely different from the reactionary and fake socialism of Pol Pot-Ieng Sary.

In the glorious light of the fourth party congress resolutions, all the victories won have been expanded. All of our party, people and armed forces are extremely happy and proud to pledge to fight more vigorously in order to successfully implement the two strategic tasks -- to firmly defend national independence and to build the fatherland step by step during the transitional period toward socialism. To successfully carry out these two strategic tasks is a struggle full of difficulties, complications and determination; but it is also a wonderfully glorious quest which calls for all of the party, people and armed forces as well as our ministers, departments, units at all levels, cadres and party members to make every effort and uphold their fighting spirit; to advance vigorously to valiantly develop revolutionary heroism in the struggle and in production, work performance and education; to overcome all obstacles and hardships, fear no sacrifice and to march on with confidence and enthusiasm, trust and faith in the brilliant future of the Kampuchean revolution. [applause]

Long live the glorious Marxist-Leninist KPRP! [applause]

Long live the Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos solidarity! [applause]

Long live the everlasting solidarity between Kampuchea and the Soviet Union and other socialist countries! [applause]

Long live glorious proletarian internationalism! [applause]

The cause of defending and building the Kampuchean fatherland will certainly achieve final victory! [applause]

[The SPK version contains the following additional material:

[As an authentic Marxist-Leninist party, our party has closely combined genuine patriotism with pure proletarian internationalism. The political line of our party is to hold up the two banners of patriotism and of international solidarity, solidarity with the Soviet Union -- the strong bulwark of peace and socialism in the world -- and solidarity with other socialist countries, with revolutionary and progressive forces in the world and, foremost, solidarity with Vietnam to reinforce the alliance of the three Indochinese countries. The correct political line of our party is completely different from the political line of the Pot Pot reactionaries -- Beijing's lackeys -- who have appealed excessively to reactionary chauvinism, who made friends of enemies and enemies of friends, who betrayed [sentence as received].

[As an authentic Marxist-Leninist party, our party's organization stands on the principles of democratic centralism. It guarantees internal democracy, improves respect for its discipline, implements collective leadership and personal responsibility, and ensures solidarity and unity in its bosom, which is totally different from the Pol Pot clique's organization which adopted a militarist, dictatorial and authoritarian system, which practiced a divisive policy, which provoked conflicts and killed each other savagely.

[As an authentic Marxist-Leninist party, our party periodically practices self-criticism and criticism in the interest of the working class and the hard-working masses.

[As a genuine Marxist-Leninist party, our party unceasingly expands the close ties between the party and the masses. The party always concerns itself with the education of cadres and its members in order to make them wholeheartedly love and serve the people, care about their lives, maintain their revolutionary qualities and morals and always study Marxism-Leninism in order to raise the leadership's abilities and to carry out well the tasks entrusted by the party and the people.

[The resolution of the fourth party congress emphasized that building the party is an immediate and primordial, strategic task and constitutes a principal factor to assure the Kampuchean revolution's victory.

[Our party was born of the working class. It struggles for the working strata. The party leans on the people and always cares for them. The close ties between the party and the masses constitute the party's great strength. The party sincerely hopes that the people will follow all its activities and those of its members, that they will make suggestions in order that it may have good members and can discard the bad ones so that the party is faithful to the fatherland, the people and proletarian internationalism and so that its cadres and members are exemplary in their deeds and worlds. In the interests of our fatherland and our people, each of us must respond to the wishes of the party and contribute actively to building the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party so that it is a firm and dynamic Marxist-Leninist party aimed at advancing the revolutionary cause of our country to final victory.]

SOVIET AMITY GROUP, EMBASSY MARK KPRP ANNIVERSARY

BK011218 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1437 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 29 Jun (SPK) -- A meeting was held today at the Soviet Cultural Center under the sponsorship of the USSR Embassy and the Kampuchea-USSR Friendship Association to mark the 31st founding anniversary of the KPRP.

Pen Navouth, minister of education and vice chairman of the Kampuchea-USSR Friendship Association; and Phlek Phirun, secretary of the National Assembly and chairman of the Kampuchean Red Cross, attended the meeting.

Counselor of the USSR Embassy to Kampuchea Dolgopiatov said that the KPRP is a Marxist-Leninist party with close relations with the Vietnamese and Lao peoples in the struggle against the French colonialists and U.S. imperialism.

He went on: The victory of 7 January 1979 liberated the Kampuchean people from the claws of the Pol Pot gang and gave them a new life. He then retraced the various stages achieved by the KPRP, going from the first to the fourth congresses where the KPRP defined the national reconstruction program. Since then, the relations of friendship with the Indochinese countries, the USSR and other fraternal socialist countries have deepened more than ever, he stressed.

Pen Navouth presented the history of the KPRP which, through a persistent and protracted struggle, restored true independence and freedom to the Kampuchean people. We are boundlessly grateful. Minister Pen Navouth said, to President Ho Chi Minh, the founder of the Indochinese Communist Party, and to Son Ngoc Minh and Tu Samut, who sacrificed themselves completely for the cause of the revolution. The sacrifices of the Vietnamese people are inscribed in our hearts. He expressed the profound thanks of the Kampuchean party and people to the parties and peoples of Vietnam and the USSR for their aid and support for the Kampuchean people in their national construction efforts.

LAO, SRV, KHMER MEKONG COMMITTEES HOLD CONFERENCE

[Text] Phnom Penh, 24 Jun (SPK) -- A delegation of the Lao National Mekong Committee led by its chairman Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, deputy minister of communications, public works and transportation, and a delegation of the Vietnamese National Mekong Committee led by its chairman, Dinh Gia Khanh, deputy minister of water conservancy, arrived in Phnom Penh this morning. They will attend the fourth conference of the national Mekong committees of the three Indochinese countries.

They were greeted on their arrival by Kong Samol, minister of agriculture and chairman of the Kampuchean National Mekong Committee. Also present were Khamphan Vilachit, Lao ambassador, and Nguyen Thao, Vietnamese embassy counselor accredited to Kampuchea.

Kong Samol Opens Meeting

[Text] Phnom Penh, 26 Jun (SPK) -- The fourth meeting of the National Mekong Committees of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos began its work in Phnom Penh on Friday, 25 June.

Kong Samol, minister of agriculture and chairman of the Kampuchean National Mekong Committee, headed the Kampuchean delegation; Dinh Gia Khanh, deputy minister of water conservancy and chairman of the Vietnamese National Mekong Committee, headed the Vietnamese delegation; and Singapo Sikhotchounlamani, deputy minister of communications, public works and transportation and chairman of the Lao National Mekong Committee, headed the Lao delegation.

In his opening speech, Kong Samol said that the traditional cooperation of the Indochinese countries in terms of the exploitation of the resources of the Mekong started a long time ago, but it was interrupted by the genocidal regime of Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan, lackeys of Beijing expansionism-hegemonism and U.S. imperialism.

He noted that the opening of this fourth conference contributed to promoting the development of cooperation among the National Mekong Committees of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos and enabled them to achieve new results. These successes, Kong Samol stressed, stem from the clear-sighted leadership of our Marxist-Leninist parties and of our governments and from the Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos militant solidarity.

Keeping the PRK out of the United Nations is neither just nor is it beneficial to international cooperation in terms of exploiting the Mekong's resources, Kong Samol said.

Chan Si Remarks

BK011340 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1553 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 28 Jun (SPK) -- The fact that Thailand prevented Kampuchea from participating in the International Mekong Committee constitutes an illigal act which infringes upon the political as well as economic interests of each country, said Chan Si, member of the Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers, when he received the Vietnamese and Lao National Mekong Committees in Phnom Penh on Sunday, 27 June.

Chairman Chan Si expressed satisfaction with the brilliant success of the fourth meeting of the national Mekong committees of the three Indochinese countries. He expressed high appreciation for the efforts of the Vietnamese and Lao National Mekong Committees to have Kampuchea recognised as a member of the International Mekong Committee.

The head of the Vietnamese delegation, Dinh Gia Khanh, deputy minister of water conservation and the head of the Lao delegation, Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, deputy minister of communications, public works and transportation pledged to do their best to get Kampuchea recognised as a full member of the International Mekong Committee.

Kong Samol, minister of agriculture and chairman of the Kampuchean National Mekong Committee, also attended the meeting.

Press Communique Issued

BK011401 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0511 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 29 Jun (SPK) -- The fourth meeting of the National Mekong Committees of the PRK, SRV and LPDR, which was held in Phnom Penh from 25 to 27 June issued a press communique on 28 June. Here is the full text of the press communique:

Implementing the decision of the third meeting held in Hanoi during December 1981, the National Mekong Committees of the PRK, LPDR and SRV held their fourth meeting in Phnom Penh from 25 to 27 June 1982. The delegation of the LPDR National Mekong Committee is led by its chairman Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, that of the SRV National Mekong Committee by its chairman Dinh Gia Khanh and that of the PRK National Mekong Committee by its chairman Kong Samol, who presided over the meeting.

The three delegations reviewed the activities of the national Mekong committees of the three fraternal countries during the survey and development of the water resources of the Mekong's lower basin.

In an atmosphere of unity and militant solidarity, the three delegations exchanged views on various questions concerning cooperation and bilateral assistance among the members offices of the three committees and noted that satisfactory progress and effective results have been obtained as a result of the great efforts put forth by the peoples of the three countries.

Programs of economic and technico-scientific cooperation in the fields of agriculture, water conservancy, communications and transportation, fundamental surveys and cadre training and so on... have contributed positively to the economic development and the improvement of the living conditions of the populations in the three countries.

The three committees agreed on the organization of a seminar concerning meteorological and hydrological matters to promote more fruitful cooperation among the three countries. This seminar will be held in Ho Chi Minh City in December 1982. The date and venue of the fifth meeting of the three national Mekong committees will be set after the seminar.

The three national Mekong committees unanimously stressed that the absence of the PRK in the Mekong committee remains an increasingly glaring obsticale to the survey ahd development of the Mekong's lower basin. It is obvious that any project for the exploitation of the Mekong's main course can be realized only with the participation of the PRK in the Mekong committee, which will allow the latter to contribute to peace, stability and cooperation in Southeast Asia. It is in this manner that the Mekong will really become a river of peace, friendship and international cooperation.

The national committees of the LPDR and SRV have expressed satisfaction at the achievements in all fields of the Kampuchean people, who have been reborn rapidly from the ashes of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime and are convinced that, under the leadership of the KPRP and PRK government, the Kampuchean people will score more successes in the building of a new and happy life and in the defense of the fatherland.

The three delegations visited western Baray and the historic monuments of Angkor in Siem Reap Province and the important irrigation networks of Stoeng Pursat in Pursat Province, Stoeng Sangke and Stoeng Mongkolborei in Battambang Province and Stoeng Chinit in Kompong Thom Province.

Chan Si, chairman of the Council of Ministers of Kampuchea, received the delegations and expressed satisfaction at the successful development of the multi-sided cooperation among the three fraternal countries.

The two delegations from Laos and Vietnam expressed sincere thanks to the National Mekong Committee of the PRK for its warm and friendly reception.

LEADERS RECEIVE AWARDS FROM SUPREME SOVIET

BK021221 Vientiane KPL in English 0921 GMT 2 Jul 82

[Text] Vientiane, Jul 2 (OANA-KPL) -- Four Lao top leaders were awarded here yesterday with the "medal for reinforcement of combative alliance" by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR.

The decree of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR issued on May 14, 1982 awarded the medals to Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party CC, and premier of the Lao People's Democratic Republic; Souphanouvong, Political Bureau member of the LPRP CC, president of the LPDR, of the Lao People's Supreme Assembly and president of the Lao Front for National Construction; General Khamtai Siphandon, Political Bureau member of the LPRP CC, vice-premier, minister of defence and commander-in-chief of the Lao People's Liberation Army and to Phoun Sipaseut, Political Bureau member of the LPRP CC, vice-premier and minister of foreign affairs.

The awards is an acknowledgement of the contribution made by the Lao leaders for their efforts for world peace, and the consolidation of the combative alliance and for the military and armed forces co-operation among the Soviet Union, socialist and other friendly countries.

Vladimir Sobchenko, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the USSR to Laos, on behalf of the USSR, presented the awards to the honoured Lao leaders.

V. Sobchenko, on this occasion, also said that the Communist Party and Government of the USSR highly appraised the great achievements of the Lao party, government and armed forces leaders -- able political leaders, who have devoted themselves for Marxism-Leninism, socialism, the well-being of Lao people for the strength of the socialist community, peace and security and prosperity of the world peoples.

The Soviet ambassador stressed that the enhancement of combative alliance and solidarity among Laos, Soviet Union and other socialist countries has so far been instrumental in the efficient build-up of modern armed forces of Laos which stand ready to solve all eventual prolems. The ambassador, also hailed successful building up of socialist foundation in Laos and the successful task in uniting the entire Lao people to safeguard the revolutionary gains. These successes, the ambassador said, greatly contribute to enhance among other things, the powerful alliance among Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea which is an important factor contributing to peace and stability in this region.

Kaysone Phomvihan, in his response, qualified the great assistance of the USSR for Laos including aid in the field of defence, as a great contribution for the safeguarding of the revolutionary gains, the socialist construction and the failure of imperialists, hegemonists and expansionists and other reactionaries.

The Lao party general secretary seized this occasion to thank the USSR for all its co-operation and assistance to Laos. He went on to say that for the interests of the socialist community, we will do our best to consolidate the combative alliance, the all-round co-operation with the USSR, Vietnam, Kampuchea and other socialist countries, and will contribute in the struggle of all peoples who are struggling for national independence, democracy and social progress.

Kaysone Phomvihan further wished the great Soviet people who are under the genuine leadership of the Communist Party of the USSR with Leonid Brezhnev as the general secretary, to score new and greater success in the implementation of the resolutions adopted by the 26th Communist Party of the USSR, and the 11th 5-year plan thus leading the Soviet Union to communism.

SITTHI INTERVIEWED ON KAMPUCHEA, AUSTRIAN VISIT

BK011610 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 1 Jul 82

[Excerpts] Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, who returned with his party from Austria at 1730 yesterday said the visit was a successful one. He said the visit was made for the purpose of reciprocating the Austrian foreign minister's visit to Thailand and strengthening ties between the two countries. It was also aimed at following up the results of the visit by the Thai delegation led by Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon recently. The foreign minister also attended the siminar between ASEAN and West European countries dealing with political, economic, cultural and historical problems.

[Begin recording] During this visit, I met for talks with [Austrian Foreign Minister] Pahr, who is chairman of the International Conference on Kampuchea [ICK]. We discussed political issues, especially Kampuchea. Minister Pahr is scheduled to visit Thailand soon. Before visiting Thailand, he will visit Vietnam, but in his capacity as Austrian foreign minister, and not as chairman of the ICK. He will also visit Burma before coming here. When he is here, we will hold more discussions.

In addition to my meeting with Minister Pahr, there was also a joint meeting between ASEAN ministers and Minister Pahr dealing with the peaceful political settlement of the Kampuchean problem under the UN resolution adopted in New York in July last year. We discussed steps to be followed. We told Minister Pahr of Nguyen Co Thach's planned visit to this region, first to Burma, then to Singapore, Malaysia and Thailand. In Thailand, he will hold talks with me. Minister Mokhtar, meanwhile, expected to meet Nguyen Co Thach in October because he is too busy at present. It has not been fixed when there will be a meeting between Nguyen Co Thach and Philippines Foreign Minister Gen Romulo.

I believe my trip to Austria was very useful. Economically speaking, we followed up on various topics. We consider Austria as a doorstep for our two-way trade with East Europe. We expect to see an increase in trade exchanges between Austria and Thailand. Austria, however, wants us to have a law to protect foreign investment. We are working on this, because many other countries have also raised this matter with us. They include, for example, Japan, Canada and many other countries. If we have that type of law enacted, it is believed we will be able to attract more investors.

From our visit, we had a chance to inform them of the real situation in our country. We reviewed ths historical ties between West Europe and Thailand and other ASEAN countries. Now for your questions.

[Question] What kind of preparations have we made for the scheduled visit by Prince Sihanouk on 3 July?

[Answer] From what I learned from the deputy foreign minister, Sihanouk will visit the Philippines today. He will be welcomed on arrival in each country by the respective foreign ministers. I will welcome him at the airport here.

[Question] At what time will he arrive?

[Answer] I do not know yet. He will arive on 3 July, probably in the afternoon. I will host a dinner for him in the evening.

[Question] In what capacity will he be treated during his visit here?

[Answer] He is now president of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea under the agreement reached recently. The agreement will take effect when the government is proclaimed inside Kampuchea. He will have to pass through Thailand in order to enter Kampuchea.

[Question] Through which area will he be entering Kampuchea?

[Answer] I do not know. I do not know where they will decide to proclaim the new government -- whether it will be in the area under the occupation of Sihanouk, or Son Sann, or Khieu Samphan. I still do not know. It is up to them anyway.

[Answer] He will be in transit. We will treat him as a friend. Sihanouk was a friend to us once, before the change in the situation. When I met him recently I felt that he has good intentions toward Thailand. When I met him in Beijing, he thanked Thailand for its assistance to the Kampuchean refugees. He highly valued Thailand for that.

[Question] What about security for him during the visit?

[Answer] That will be the responsibility of security officials, the police, the military, the National Security Council and the Central Intelligence Department. In fact, I don't know much about this. It is the responsibility of security officials.

[Question] Is his visit here a personal or an official visit?

[Answer] I would say an official visit. He will be welcomed by the heads of state of the countries he is visiting. He will call on the ruler of Malaysia, President Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore, and President Suharto. I believe he will also meet President Marcos.

[Question] When is he scheduled to meet the prime minister?

[Answer] On 7 July, I believe.

[Question] Has he requested an audience with the king?

[Answer] There is no positive plan about this so far. I will tell you as soon as I know. Yes, he has requested an audience, but it is up to the royal Secretariat to notify us. [end recording]

SITTHI QUITS SENATE TO JOIN POLITICAL PARTY

BK020902 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 2 Jul 82

[Text] The Senate met this morning at the National Assembly Building under the chairmanship of Siri Atipho, deputy Senate president. The meeting started at 0905. The chairman informed the senators that Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila had resigned from the Senate effective 1 July because he planned to join a political party.

The Senate later approved the draft regulations governing the lot, drawing procedure to screen out senators in accordance with Article 85 of the Constitution of the Kingdom of Thailand. The meeting ended at 0915.

THREE ASEAN MINISTERS AGREE ON TIN ASSOCIATION

[Text] Industry and mining ministers from three ASEAN countries yesterday adopted an agreement to establish the Association of Tin Producing Countries and tentatively scheduled August 2 for signing the pact.

In a joint statement issued after they ended a one-day meeting at Dusit Thani Hotel, the ministers of Thailand, Malaysia and Indonesia said that the agreement has yet to be approved by their respective governments. The ministers include Thailand's Maj Gen Chatchai Chunhawan, Malaysia's Minister of Primary Industries Datuk Paul Leong and Indonesia's Minister of Mines and Energy Dr Subroto. Though the meeting did not decide where the headquarters of the association will be, Minister Chatchai said that it might be either in Kuala Lumpur or Jakarta.

The joint statement said that the agreement provides an essential framework to ensure remunerative returns to producers and fair prices to consumers. To attain this objective the agreement provides for several institutional and financial arrangements including measures to intensify research and development on the uses of tin to strengthen marketing through joint approaches for direct marketing and improvement of market intelligence and information, it said. The three countries account for more than 70 percent of world's tin production. The activities of the association would serve to enhance the functioning of the 6th International Tin Agreement which becomes effective tomorrow, the joint statement said.

The ministers also invited the other tin-producing countries to sign the agreement on August 2, or to join the association at their earliest convenience. Chatchai said that countries should inform the three within July 28 of their intention to joint the association. "But their failure to inform us within that day does not mean that they are not allowed to join us later," he said.

Chatchai said that contribution to support tin prices will come from producing countries proportionate with their respective production capacity. Price support, he said, is already being done by the buffer stock of the ITC [International Tin Council].

DEMOCRAT PARTY TO STAY IN GOVERNMENT COALITION

[Text] Bangkok, June 30 (AFP) -- Thai Premier Prem Tinsulanon has successfully emerged from a political crisis following the agreement of an important coalition partner to stay with the governing team.

The Democrat Party's about-turn came last night after talks between party leader Phichai Rattakun and Gen Prem, and a tense party meeting.

The Democrat decision to stay in the coalition government that features two other main political parties -- the Social Action Party (SAP) and Thai National Party (TNP) -- has defused a crisis that developed over the weekend.

The issue that threatened Gen Prem's third government since he came to power in March 1980 was the defeat in Parliament Friday of a government-sponsored bill for constitutional amendments regarding general elections.

In response to the defeat, the Democrat Party on Saturday called on its six cabinet ministers to resign. The main advocate of this call, deputy party leader Chaloemphan Siwikon, staged a walk-out of the party meeting when it was rejected last night.

According to political sources, SAP and the TNP never considered resignation. SAP leader Khukrit Pramot maintained the government was under no obligation to resign as the bill did not concern policy.

Gen Prem, at a regular weekly cabinet meeting yesterday, called the defeat a "parliamentary affair." The bill called for constitutional amendments that would have instituted a more solid party system that would bar small, loose groupings from entering the House of Representatives after general elections due in April 1983.

In its final reading, the bill obtained six votes less than the required 264, with 33 against and 119 abstentions. The large number of abstentions, mainly from usually pro-government senators, was generally seen as a political loss-of-face for the government.

POST: NEW ANTI-INSURGENCY OPERATION LAUNCHED

[Excerpts] The government forces yesterday launched a massive anti-insurgency operation against communist insurgents and separatist bandit gangs in the three Muslim-predominated provinces of Yala, Narathiwat and Pattani.

About 5,000 soldiers, rangers, border patrol police and defence militiamen from the First, Second, Third and Fourth Army regions are involved in the month-long offensive campaign, code named "Tai Rom Yen 11," under the command of Maj Gen Wanchai Chitchammong of the Fourth Army Region.

The national forces in the middle of last month launched an anti-insurgency drive in Trang, Phatthalung, Satun and Nakhon Si Thammarat Provinces. The operation was hailed as a success with the destruction of one major communist stronghold, camp 842, and several other smaller camps.

However, the death tolls on both the government and the communist sides were low.

PREM STATEMENT ON AID TO DK COALITION ASSAILED

BK011547 Hanoi International Service in Thai 1130 GMT 1 Jul 82

[Text] The policy of tailing after Chinese expansionism is leading the ruling circles of a number of ASEAN states to obviously sophistic contentions and to calculations that are truly harmful to themselves. At a press conference on 23 June Thai Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon said that Thailand would consider a request for military aid and other aid for the so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea. He held that the stronger this alliance is, the more secure would be the Thai-Kampuchean border, and that the formation of the government is favorable to Thailand's security.

The above statement by Prime Minister Prem indicates that the present Thai Government still considers the PRK and Vietnam its enemies. It has allowed the Pol Pot genocidal clique and other reactionary Khmer forces to use Thai territory as a hideout and helped transport Chinese weapons to them for use against the Kampuchean people, causing tension and instability in this region. Now, they are thinking of providing weapons for these reactionary elements to oppose the Kampuchean people's reconstruction of their country. The Thai Government cites Thailand's national security as a lame excuse to carry on this scheme.

Everybody knows that tension along the Thai-Kampuchean border is caused by China's dark scheme by using the Pol Pot and other reactionary Khmer forces to provoke the PRK. These reactionary forces often fight each other or plunder the local people. In may cases, the Thai Armed Forces have engaged in the fighting to help the reactionary Khmer forces. To give more weapons to them means to escalate the tension and chaotic situation along the Thai-Kampuchean border. Bangkok's intention to give military aid to the reactionary Kampuchean forces runs counter to the interests of the Thai people and of peace and stability in Southeast Asia. Over the past years, because it has acted upon Chinese orders in its relations with the Indochinese countries, Thailand has courted instability and many difficulties for itself. It has allowed Beijing hegemonist expansionism to interfere increasingly deeply in Thai internal affairs. The collusion among Thailand and other ASEAN member countries to establish the so-called coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea on Chinese orders has set a dangerous precedent for China to resort to the use of Maoist forces against the countries in Southeast Asia.

Under the pretext of Thailand's security, Bangkok wants to justify its compliance with Beijing's scheme and to influence other ASEAN countries. But the fact is that some ASEAN states and even a number of Western countries, though approving the tripartite coalition, have denied military aid to it, knowing that this would exacerbate tension and serve the policy of China. Some ASEAN countries have also seen more clearly that the main danger to Southeast Asia is Chinese expansionism and hegemonism, and they agree that it is necessary to enter into a dialogue with Vietnam.

Confrontation only benefits the Chinese expansionists. The real interest of the nations in this region is to entertain neighborly relations and to live in peace and friendship. Dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries is necessary to pave the way for a Southeast Asia of peace, stability and cooperation.

The ASEAN countries should see this reality and adopt a practical attitude.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS ADOPTS CEMA SESSION REPORT

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 2 -- The Standing Committee of the Council of Ministers has adopted the report of the Vietnamese delegation on the results of the 36th session of the Council of Mutual Economic Assistance (CMEA) held in Sofia from June 8-10. The report was delivered by To Huu, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and head of the Vietnamese delegation to the session.

The committee highly appreciated the economic and social achievements of the CMEA member countries in recent years. It approved Vietnam's participation in the general agreement on cooperation in the development and wide use of micro-processors in national economy and the Vietnamese delegation's activities at the 36th CMEA session.

TAP CHI CONG SAN ON THIRD LPRP CONGRESS

[Unattributed article: "Splendid Success of the Third LPRP Congress" -- capitalized passages published in italics]

[Text] Last April the LPRP held its third national congress in Vientiane. This congress, representing 35,000 members of the LPRP, reviewed the situation in Laos over the past 10 years, since the Second LPRP Congress in February 1972, with emphasis on the 6 years since the emergence of the LPDR on 2 December 1975. The congress set forth orientations, tasks and targets of the Lao revolution in the new revolutionary stage -- the transitional stage toward socialism nationwide -- as well as targets and tasks for the First 1981-85 5-Year Plan and subsequent years up to 1990. The congress elected the new party Central Committee headed by Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, outstanding son of the people of various nationalities in Laos and esteemed leader of the Lao revolution.

By its great significance, the Third LPRP Congress has marked new and very important progress for the Lao revolution.

The LPRP has creatively applied the principles of Marxism-Leninism to the specific conditions of Laos, led people of various nationalities to victory in the struggle for national revolution and democracy, thereby triumphantly establishing the LPDR.

In the fall of 1975, grasping the favorable condition which resulted from the victories of the Vietnamese and Kampuchean revolutions, the LPRP promptly mobilized the people in a concerted uprising to seize and control the country's administration. This dynamic and creative leadership prevented damage, destruction and chaos in Laos. It also created new forces and favorable conditions for national construction and defense.

Since the complete liberation of Laos, the LPRP has led the tasks of economic and social transformation and building according to socialist guidelines. To date, in industry the socialist economy has reached 93 percent; in communications and transportation, 47 percent and trade, 32.7 percent. Moreover, 1,343 agricultural production cooperatives have been established.

Thanks to the policy of encouraging agricultural production, many localities have begun planting two crops instead of the traditional one crop per year. For the first time in its history, Laos has become self-sufficient in food for 2 consecutive years, 1980-81.

In the industrial domain, electricity output for 1981 reached 807 million million kilowatt-hours or a per capita output of 230 kilowatt-hours. Machinery products, bricks, wooden goods, soap, tobacco and paper have increased from 100 to 200 percent compared with 1976.

THESE ECONOMIC ACHIEVEMENTS HAVE CONTRIBUTED SIGNIFICANTLY TO STABILIZING AND IMPROVING THE PEOPLE'S DAILY LIFE.

In the cultural and educational domains, illiteracy has been basically eliminated. In 1981, 85 percent of the illiterates could read and write. In the 1980-81 academic year there were 620,000 general school students -- a 100-percent increase compared with the 1976-77 academic year -- 1,125 university students -- a manifold increase compared with the 1976-77 academic year. There are almost 10,000 Lao students studying in fraternal socialist countries, of whom more than 4,000 are university students. This is a great advance for the Lao revolution. THE ENHANCEMENT OF EDUCATIONAL BACKGROUND HAS CONTRIBUTED VERY SIGNIFICANTLY TO HEIGHTENING LOVE FOR THEIR COUNTRY AND SOCIALISM by the people of various nationalities in Laos.

Since national liberation, the LPRP has consistently built the national defense force and mobilized people throughout the country together with the armed forces, to defend firmly the unified Lao fatherland. This is the greatest achievement of the Lao revolution. Now Laos has a regular army and a firm and strong people's security force. These forces are continuously heightening their vigilance and are ready to foil all schemes and the multi-faceted sabotage activities being conducted by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces.

Evaluating these achievements, especially in the economic and social fields, the Third LPRP Congress affirmed that the Lao revolution is in the first stage of its transition toward socialism. The general lines of the Lao revolution in the transitional stage toward socialism are: TO CONSISTENTLY CONSOLIDATE AND STRENGTHEN THE PROLETARIAN DICTATORSHIP; TO ORGANIZE AND PROMOTE SOLIDARITY DETWEEN WORKERS AND THE PEOPLE OF VARIOUS NATIONALITIES AND DEVELOP THEIR RIGHTS TO COLLECTIVE MASTERY OF SOCIETY; AND TO CARRY OUT SIMULTANEOUSLY THE THREE REVOLUTIONS, NAMELY, THE REVOLUTION IN PRODUCTION RELATIONS, THE SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNOLIGICAL REVOLUTION AND THE IDEOLOGICAL AND CULTURAL REVOLUTION, WITH THE PRODUCTION RELATIONS REVOLUTION A KEY FACTOR FOR DEVELOPING PRODUCTION AND THE SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNOLOGICAL REVOLUTION AS THE KINGPIN. THESE ARE ALL AIMED AT BUILDING SOCIALISM, FULLY EXPLOITING AND DEVELOPING ALL THE POTENTIALS OF THE COUNTRY; DEVLOPING INDUSTRY THROUGH THE EXPLOITATION OF AGRICULTURE AND FORESTRY; DEVELOPING THE NATURAL ECONOMY IN ORDER TO GRADUALLY ADVANCE FROM SMALL-SCALE PRODUCTION TO LARGE-SCALE SOCIALIST PRODUCTION; AND DEVELOPING INDUSTRIALIZATION BY USING SOCIALIST INDUSTRIALIZATION AS A BASE FOR THE TRANSITIONAL PERIOD IN ORDER TO TURN LAOS INTO AN AGRUCULTURAL-FORESTRY-INDUSTRIAL ADVANCED COUNTRY. THIS WILL BRING HAPPINESS TO THE PEOPLE OF VARIOUS NATIONALITIES IN LAOS; ELIMINATE FOREVER THE SYSTEM OF EXPLOITATION OF MAN BY MAN; STRENGTHEN NATIONAL DEFENSE; FIRMLY PROTECT LAO SOVEREIGNTY, NATIONAL DEFENSE AND THE NEW REGIME IN ORDER TO BUILD LAOS INTO A PEACEFUL, INDEPENDENT, UNIFIED AND SOCIALIST COUNTRY, THEREBY, TOGETHER WITH VIETNAM AND KAMPUCHEA, FIRMLY DEFENDING THE BULWARK OF THE SOCIALIST SYSTEM IN THE REGION AND CONTRIBUTING POSITIVELY TO THE STRUGGLE FOR PEACE, NATIONAL INDEPENDENCE, DEMOCRACY AND WORLD SOCIALISM.

The Third LPRP Congress has affirmed two strategic tasks of national defense and construction in the new stage of the Lao revolution, of which the task concerning socialist construction is regarded as the most significant one.

On the economic front, the party has affirmed that the agricultural and forestry production is strong and has the potential to accelerate the improvement of the people's daily life and contribute significantly to building the initial capital for the socialist industrialization. In the years ahead, the party intends to improve agriculture comprehensively, develop the strength of agriculture and forestry in order to strive to become totally self-sufficient in grain and food. It also intends to gradually fully develop the agricultural cooperatives. Over the next 5 years, the development of cooperatives will be completed in rice growing areas, while this task will be carried out gradually in upland agricultural areas and other places.

In the industrial field, the party stressed that since Laos has abundant agricultural and forestry resources it should seek international cooperation based on these resources in order to formulate plans to develop small industry, handicrafts, light industry, processing industry and the electric, construction and repair sectors; and to expand and build additional establishments for ore exploitation. The general aim is to have the whole network of industry, small industry and handicrafts serve agriculture and forestry production, communications and transportation. In this context, the electrical, engineering, communications and transportation sectors must exceed the present requirements.

The party also set goals for trade, pricing, banking, finances and wages and various aims and concrete measures aimed at fulfilling important economic tasks and targets.

The LPRP is paying special attention to strengthening the economic cooperation between Laos and Vietnam, the Soviet Union, Kampuchea and other countries of the socialist community.

The people of various nationalities in Laos have inherited the tradition of solidarity, struggle and respect for loyalty and sincerity. This is a basic strength. However, the multifaceted national structures and the slow progress in education and the difference in languages, habit and customs are obstacles to the unification of various nationalities into one nation. As a result, the LPRP in every revolutionary stage has paid special attention to tasks concerning the nationalities. The party's attention to the various nationalities has been reflected through its guidelines, revolutionary strategy, aims, policies and other concrete measures. The strengthening of the tasks concerning the united national front and tasks concerning nationalities in general has always been a decisive factor for the success of the Lao revolution in the past, present and future.

The party contends that education is a very important factor in Laos. Unless the people's educational background is enhanced, the Lao people will not be able to improve and develop the economy, know how to protect the country and how to become masters of the society and of their lives.

On the basis of this judgment, the LPRP contends that the cultural and ideological revolution must advance one step further, to be centered around tasks concerning education. The aim of the cultural revolution is to build a genuine and socialist national education; eliminate vestiges of reactionary culture, continued ignorance and feudalism left behind by history and neocolonialism; and stop the infiltration of decadent and reactionary culture. The long-term goal of tasks concerning culture and education is to build a new man and turn Lao workers into people of socialist consciousness who understand modern science and technology and who have a sense of responsibility and the ability to become masters of the society.

The LPRP affirms that the Chinese expansionism and hegemonism which is aimed at subjugating Laos and other Indochinese nations, is a direct and dangerous enemy of the Lao people.

Under all circumstances, the party must strive to CONSOLIDATE AND STRENGTHEN NATIONAL DEFENSE AND THE PEOPLE'S SECURITY FORCES, in order to foil all sabotage schemes and tactics of the reactionary group in the Beijing leadership in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces, thereby firmly protecting the peaceful work of the people, defending Lao independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and the new regime.

The LPRP affirms its support for a foreign relations policy which includes the determination to foil the hostile policy of the Chinese big nation expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces.

The party contends that THE STRENGTHENING OF THE SPECIAL SOLIDARITY AND COOPERATION WITH VIETNAM AND KAMPUCHEA AND THE STRENGTHENING OF SOLIDARITY AND COMPREHENSIVE COOPERATION WITH THE GREAT SOVIET UNION AND OTHER FRATERNAL SOCIALIST COUNTRIES, WILL ALWAYS BE A MILESTONE IN THE FOREIGN POLICY OF THE LAO PARTY AND STATE, and this will be an invincible power that no enemy can smash.

The unswerving policy of the Lao party and state is to establish friendly and good-neighborly relations with ASEAN countries, especially the Kingdom of Thailand.

The Lao people have resolved to oppose the hostile policy of the Chinese reactionary leadership, but to spare no efforts in maintaining friendly relations with the Chinese people.

Through various domestic great revolutionary achievements and with the correct foreign policy, the LPDR is gaining the sympathy and support of world progressive opinion. The status and prestige of the LPRP and the LPDR in the international arena is consistently enhanced.

The revolutionary cause of the working class and the people of various nationalities in Laos has scored tremendous achievements. This was due to the correct leadership of the LPRP, which was formerly part of the Indochinese Communist Party, the vanguard party of the working class and people of the three Indochinese countries, founded and led by President Ho Chi Minh. Applying the principles of Marxism-Leninism to the specific conditions of the Lao revolution, the LPRP has enhanced the spirit of creativity, charted the correct revolutionary line, triumphantly completed various strategic tasks, strategems and revolutionary methods and led the Lao revolution from one victory to another. Comrade Truong Chinh, head of the VCP delegation to the Third LPRP Congress has said in his speech: "The victory of the Lao revolution is the brilliant victory of the creative application of Marxism-Leninism to the specific conditions of Laos and of the ardent patriotism and the spirit of solidarity, in addition to the undaunted impetus of the struggle of the people of various nationalities in Laos who are determined to surge forward to become masters of their own destiny. It is the victory of the militant alliance of the three fraternal countries in Indochina and the socialist community, of which the Soviet Union is the mainstay, and of the world revolutionary movement. It is also the victory of the correct and consistent foreign policy of the Lao party and state which clearly and principally distinguishes friend from foe, and which flexibly implements various suitable positions and policies aimed at positively contributing to the struggle of peoples of various nations for the common goal of the era."

The great revolutionary victories scored by the fraternal Lao people of various nationalities for more than half a century, especially during the past decade, have indicated that the LPRP has applied a correct line in builidng itself gradually to become the party with working class characteristics which is absolutely loyal to Marxism-Leninism and the people's interests; and in closely combining the genuine patriotism with proletarian internationalism.

The LPRP affirms that one of the important party building tasks in the new stage is to STRIVE TO FIRMLY MAINTAIN THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE NEW POLITICAL PARTY OF THE PROLETARIAT WHICH RULES THE ADMINISTRATION, and to maintain its role as a leading core for the firm proletarian dictatorship system in order to protect national independence, build socialism in Laos and fulfill the country's international obligation triumphantly.

In light of the resolutions of the Third LPRP Congress, the fraternal people of Laos will surely advance firmly on the path toward successfully building a socialist, independent and prosperous Laos and make it a worthy member of the heroic and strong world socialist community, a fortress of peace, national independence and socialism in Southeast Asia.

The Vietnamese party and people are proud of the LPRP, the unyielding comrade and the intimate friend of Vietnam. They were very moved to hear the heartfelt speech of Comrade General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan at the recent Fifth VCP Congress in which he said:

The LPRP pays special attention to educating its cadres and members and the people of various nationalities to strive to protect the special Lao-Vietnamese solidarity and it resolutely struggles against all enemy schemes for sowing dissention and it instructs the younger generation of Lao to foster this special relationship to make it bloom and last forever....under all conditions. In the past as well as at present we have always stood side by side with Vietnam and done our best to contribute to the victory of our fraternal people and our intimate comrades.

As close comrades-in-arms of the Lao communists and people, the Vietnamese communists and people are very happy to note the splendid success of the Third LPRP Congress. We firmly believe that in light of the resolutions of the LPRP Congress, the working class and the people of various nationalities in Laos will strengthen their solidarity and strive to score new and ever greater victories for their revolutionary cause.

TRUONG CHINH ADDRESSES HANOI VOTERS' MEETING

[From the review of NHAN DAN for 2 July]

[Text] Featuring on the frontpage of NHAN DAN today is a report that on the evening of 1 July at the Hanoi municipal theater, the Fatherland Front Committee and People's Committee of Hanoi organized a meeting for the city voters to hear a delegation of National Assembly deputies from the capital talk about the results of the third session of the Seventh National Assembly.

Chairman Truong Chinh attended and addressed the meeting.

After pointing out the results of the third session and some tasks to be done, Chairman Truong Chinh expressed the hope that Hanoi, as the capital of the country, would be responsible for taking the lead in accomplishing social and economic changes in the present stage. He urged that the city people's council and committee should convey to the people the spirit of the National Assembly session and adopt practical and creative measures for organizing the implementation of the tasks set forth by the party and state.

DEFENSE MINISTRY REVIEWS MILITARY EDUCATION

[Text] The Ministry of National Defense recently held a conference of various officer school teachers to review implementation of the party Central Committee Political Bureau resolution on educational reform and to discuss guidelines for further reform in the future.

Gen Hoang Van Thai, member of the party Central Committee and vice minister of defense, presided over the conference. In his speech he stressed: This conference of officer school teachers should concentrate on correctly resolving the fundamental problems of military training theory in both teaching and studying. At the same time, we should draw upon general experiences which can be applied broadly to many schools and we should promptly resolve the teaching problems in military schools.

He went on: The study of military training theory must be closely linked to training requirements and be aimed at providing officers with the ability to perform their duty well.

Col (Duong Han), chief of the National Defense Ministry's school department, reported on implementation of the resolution on educational reform in military schools. His report pointed out: In the past 2 years or more, by implementing the party Political Bureau resolution on educational reform and the various training targets set by the VCP Central Committee's military commission for schools, the National Defense Ministry has made great efforts to organize military schooling in a perfect and systematic manner. The program involves institutes, colleges, officer schools, politico-military schools and regional military schools to ensure the training of sufficient numbers of officers under a balanced and uniform structure in the middle and high levels of military schooling. The program is designed to enable the army to advance toward standardizing the levels of knowledge required by each of the officer ranks.

The conference also devoted a great deal of time to hearing a report on educational reform and the teaching experiences of some schools. Many of those present participated in heated discussions to clarify the requirements of increasing the training quality. They also visited some teaching installations to see the organization of training operations and the development of army training standards in the first army officer school.

Concluding the conference, Maj Gen Nguyen The Bon, deputy chief of the general staff, highly evaluated the results of the conference and commended some schools for having put forward good ideas. They have arrived at some scientific conclusions by using their actual training operations to serve as a basis which other schools can study and apply. He repeatedly urged those present to develop the results of the conference, apply creatively the experiences of schools and, at the same time organize the scientific research and trining activities of schools so as to constantly increase the quality of our army officer training.

NHAN DAN ON IMPLEMENTING 1982 STATE PLAN

[NHAN DAN 1 July editorial: "Initial But Important Progresses"]

[Text] Our people have just completed the first 6 months of implementing the 1982 State Plan. This was a period of arduous struggle since there were many severe imbalances in the the economy. In this same period, however, we gained new factors and progress. We harvested a bumper winter-spring rice crop with an expected average yield of 27 quintals and 30 kilograms per hectare or 1 quintal and 86 kilograms more than the previous crop. This is the highest yield we have ever achieved. Despite the 24,000 hectares reduction in winter-spring rice acreage, the output has increased by several hundred tons.

Acreage for industrial crops, vegetables and beans has been increased, while the cattle and hog population increased by 3 to 6.2 percent. Fresh water fish rearing has been expanded and maritime products have increased. Industrial products, especially artisan and handicraft goods have increased considerably with the gross output reaching 51.2 percent of the full year's plan norm. Many key projects in capital construction have been completed. Tasks concerning communications and transportation have been improved and distribution of grain and the purchase of agricultural products are making headway.

Achievements scored in the first 6 months of the year have marked new progress in implementing the state plan. It has also shown the great efforts of our entire party, people and all sectors and echelons.

As all of us have realized, numerous difficulties and imbalances in the economy are becoming more acute this year. Striving to implement the resolutions of the Fifth VCP Congress, the central authorities, sectors and echelons have made great efforts to overcome the difficulties so as to maintain and develop production and improve the people's daily life. Many progressive models have been formulated to enhance the spirit of self-support and self-reliance, develop creative thinking, improve the people's livelihood and develop the effects of the new policy on management in order to implement the motto: "The central and provincial authorities share the same concern; the state and the people work together."

These achievements also showed our people's ability to change and improve the situation. In many very difficult situations, various sectors and localities have overcome them all and advanced further. The great success of the winter-spring rice crop is the most basic factor that has created a new favorable condition for accelerating production and stabilizing the people's daily life.

The fact that we could overcome the problem of an acute grain shortage in the north during the recent pre-harvest period is an indication that we can overcome new ordeals and can succeed in becoming self-sufficient in grain.

During the grain-shortage period, animal husbandry was consistently developed. This reflected the great effects of the new management policy. The fulfillment of targets by local industry indicated this sector's dynamism, creativity and potential.

While noting these achievements and progress, we realize there are various difficulties, weaknesses and shortcomings that must be overcome. The winter-spring rice crop has succeeded, but output of the subsidiary crops has decreased. Despite progress in production in the agricultural, industrial and other sectors, the state plan norms for these sectors are far from realized. Delay has been seen in various domains. Difficulties are prevalent in the economy and the people's daily life. Various main tasks concerning reorganizing production and construction, improving circulation and distribution and developing economic management have been carried out slowly. Such phenomena as bureaucratism, subsidization and the tendency to departmentalism have not been overcome effectively. In many localities economic and financial regulations have not been observed scrupulously; waste and thefts of materials, energy and goods are still severe.

These prevalent difficulties are problems that must be overcome in the days ahead. The urgent economic tasks that must be carried out in the last 6 months of this year are arduous and require above-average efforts.

We must carefully note and develop all progress, achievements and efforts to accelerate our tasks in the last 6 months in order to surge forward to fulfill the 1982 State Plan triumphantly.

TIMES SKEPTICAL OF DK COALITION'S TIES TO CHINA

BK020606 Jakarta THE INDONESIA TIMES in English 24 Jun 82 p2

[Editorial: "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea"]

[Text] Ultimately, the agreement on the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea was signed day before yesterday in Kuala Lumpur witnessed by senior officials of ASEAN. The agreement was signed by three Kampuchean resistance group leaders, i.e. Prince Norodom Sihanouk for Moulinaka, Khieu Samphan for the Khmer Rouge and Son Sann for the Kampuchean National Liberation Front [as published]. The agreement assigns to Prince Norodom Sihanouk the post of president of the Republic of Democratic Kampuchea, to Khieu Samphan the post of vice-president in charge of foreign affairs and to Son Sann the post of prime miniseter. Each resistance group will retain much of its individual identity, ideology and freedom of military action and enjoy equal status. Each is allowed to continue to receive and dispose of any aid granted to it by its backers.

The coalition government will be run by a council of ministers divided into an "inner cabinet of three" consisting of the president, the vice-president and the prime minister; and four coordinating committees. All major decisions will be governed by the principle of consensus.

This time the meeting of the three resistance leaders was at the initiative of Malaysia with the support of the other members of ASEAN, and therefore Kuala Lumpur was an appropriate place to sign the agreement.

From the provisions of the agreement, it seems it is a difficult, loose coalition. We hope it will be workable.

Though the formation of the coalition was an internal affair of Kampuchea, yet ASEAN had been anxiously waiting and assisting the formation for it believes that the formation will facilitate their effort to achieve a peaceful political settlement in Kampuchea according to the principles of the United Nations resolutions of Kampuchea. Internationally, politically and diplomatically the coalition government will assume the identity of the Government of Democratic Kampuchea which still retains its seat in the United Nations and will be treated as an alternative to the Vietnamese-supported Heng Samrin regime at Phnom Penh. Together with ASEAN, the coalition government will campaign for the implementation of the resolutions of the International Conference on Kampuchea and the United Nations, calling for the withdrawal of foreign forces from Kampuchea and the restoration of the Kampuchean people's right to determine their own future.

It is apparent that the coalition is in agreement with ASEAN that the settlement in Kampuchea must be achieved politically. Even if there is any intention to apply force, it will be only a kind of military pressure as implied in the Prince Sihanouk's recent statement that the combined forces of the coalition government would not be able to oust the Vietnamese troops of 200,000 strong from Kampuchea.

How much the coalition government can be used as political and military pressure on Vietnam remains to be seen. ASEAN has declared its whole hearted support but it will not give military aid to the coalition government. This will have a salutary effect on Vietnam. But some of the ASEAN country leaders have stated to the contrary and this will not smoothen the way to negotiation with Vietnam.

If we want Vietnam to talk with us on the settlement of the Kampuchean question, we must avoid any impression that the coalition government is heavily supported by the People's Republic of China militarily, for Vietnam considers China its worst enemy and is very sensitive about it. If the coalition gets aid from other countries, military or otherwise, it may not create as much adverse effect as when it is rendered by China.

It is all right to use the coalition government to enhance the effort of peaceful political settlement, but at the same time ASEAN must be realistic and flexible in applying the principles of the United Nations resolutions. What is important is the achievement of the aim of political settlement and cooperation in Southeast Asia. We must remember that the Vietnamese supported Heng Samrin government, though not recognised by ASEAN and the United Nations, is recognised by a number of the United Nations member countries. To that extent it has its legal existence. Besides it has done a lot of good things for the people of Kampuchea in terms of economic, educational, social and cultural progress in contrast to the tyranny and cruelty perpetrated by the Pol Pot regime. It may be not out of context to try a "Rhodesian" type of settlement in Kampuchea.

Having expressed our view, we hope the coalition government will be workable and successful.

ROMANIAN VICE PREMIER MEETS WITH SUHARTO

BK011410 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 1 Jul 82

[Text] Romanian Vice Premier Gheorghe Petrescu, who led his country's trade delegation to Indonesia, has handed a message from President Nicolae Ceaucescu to President Suharto. The message and warm greeting were conveyed at his meeting with President Suharto at Bina Graha in Jakarta today. At the meeting the Romanian vice premier discussed the possibility of further promoting cooperation, particularly in the economic and technological sectors, between Indonesia and Romania.

Coordinating minister for economics, finance and industry, Wijoyo Nitisastro, who accompanied President Suharto at the meeting, in response to questions by newsmen confirmed Romania's interest to buy Indonesian oil. But the Romanian plan is yet to be discussed, particularly the method of the purchase and type of oil.

Ceaucescu Visit Scheduled

LEONG ON REJECTION OF U.S. OFFER FOR TIN TALKS

BK301252 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] Malaysia today rejected an offer by the United States to hold talks with ASEAN producers on GSA tin disposal. The minister of primary industries, Datuk Paul Leong, said the talks would be useless unless Washington was willing to stop sales of the product from its strategic stockpile. Datuk Leong was commenting on the report from the United States that Assistant Secretary of State John Holdridge had told ASEAN tin producers that Washington was willing to hold talks on the tin situation.

Datuk Leong said the damage had already been done as sales from the GSA stockpile had largely contributed to the (?death of) the tin market. The bufferstock manager had already used up most of its financial resources to buy tin from the markets to defend the floor price of the metal. Since this year, the United States had already sold more than 3,700 tons of tin from the stockpile.

The minister said it was the responsibility and obligation of the GSA to take heed of the present adverse tin market situation. Datuk Leong hoped the United States would consider this, even though they were not a signatory to the Sixth ITA, which will be enforced tomorrow.

Datuk Paul Leong told newsmen this on his return from Bangkok after formalizing the articles of the association of tin producers.

Further Leong Comment

[Text] Malaysia has again stressed that the Tin Producers Association will not duplicate work of the International Tin Agreement [ITA]. All bufferstock operations and export control measures will continue to be looked after by the International Tin Council. This was stated by the minister of primary industries, Datuk Paul Leong, on his return from Bangkok after attending the ASEAN tin ministers' talks on forming the association.

He said the immediate task was to launch the Tin Producers Association. Once the articles were approved, the Thai minister of industry, Tun Chatchai Chunhawan, would approach all tin producers. The association would be officially launched on 2 August. So far, Bolivia had indicated its willingness to join.

Datuk Leong said the site of the headquarters would be decided this weekend. Malaysia and Indonesia have offered space in their respective capitals.

He said the association would act as a backup to the Sixth ITA or alternatively act as a fall back for producers should the agreement fail or become ineffective.

SIXTH INTERNATIONAL TIN AGREEMENT TAKES EFFECT

BK010731 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0600 GMT 1 Jul 82

[Text] The Sixth International Tin Agreement [ITA] comes into force today. Twenty countries are taking part in it. Among producers, the notable absentee is Bolivia. On the consumer side, the United States and the Soviet Union opted out after joining in the negotiations earlier. The latest signatory to the pact is India, bringing consumer participation to just over 60 percent. Malaysia reluctantly agreed to join the agreement after carefully considering the question of its effectiveness, because of poor consumer response.

In a separate development, ASEAN tin producers had decided to form a tin producers association to act as a backup to the Sixth ITA. Under the agreement, the bufferstock level will be substantially reduced due to less consumer participation. Under the First ITA, the maximum stock level was 54,000 tons, while under the sixth pact it is only 34,000 tons.

Malaysia has said that more stringent export control measures are necessary because of this and also to defend the low price of the metal. The International Tin Council is meeting in London to decide on the excess tin carried over from the fifth to the sixth pact. One of the options open is to return the contributions to producer nations or sell the metal on the open market.

TIMES VIEWS HAIG'S EXIT, U.S. FOREIGN POLICY

BK020705 Singapore THE STRAITS TIMES in English 28 Jun 82 p 16

[Editorial: "The General Bows Out"]

[Text] Mr Alexander Haig's decision to quit office because of policy differences once again brings into sharp focus a question that has troubled and puzzled America's friends and foes over the past 18 months: Does the Reagan administration have a foreign policy? If there is one, it is, sadly, distinguished by an embarrassing series of starts and interruptions. The thrust of Mr Reagan's view of the world may be clear enough: He wants the United States to take a tough stand against Russian expansionism. But this thinking has not been translated into something coherent and consistent enough for a comprehensive foreign policy to be discernible.

On another plane, Mr Haig's departure also serves to underscore the on-going struggle for domination over U.S. foreign policy within the Reagan administration. Coming from a person who reportedly threatened to resign no less than eight times last year because of disputes with White House officials, Mr Haig's resignation should be no great surprise, but it still stunned many. And it can hardly be welcomed by America's Western allies who feel comfortable working with him because of his NATO background. A highly ambitious man -- who, many say, has his eyes on the White House -- Mr Haig had more than his share of squabbles over U.S. foreign policy, in particular with Defence Secretary Caspar Weinberger, and more recently, with the representative to the United Nations, Mrs Jeane Kirkpatrick.

For a person who likes to see himself as the "vicar" of U.S. foreign policy, he has found himself contradicted and his authority undermined by what, at one stage, he described as a "White House guerrilla campaign." Whatever the reasons for the constant squabbling -- whether it was due to a clash of personalities or just the presidential way of doing things or both -- clearly, the secretary of state could not carry on his business effectively.

Equally serious, the different and confusing signals that keep emanating from Washington raise doubt abroad about whether there is someone in charge of foreign policy. The increasing impression of a directionless policy is hardly going to inspire confidence among America's allies and friends and certainly does no good for the administration at a time when it is faced with problems stretching from Lebanon to Latin America. It can only mean a lack of leadership at the top.

The new secretary of state, Mr George Shultz, may have little experience in international affairs. But as a former treasury secretary with invaluable knowledge in international economic issues and as one who is noted to be a team player, he brings with him other assets. Hopefully, with less tension and public feuding, Washington can begin to speak with one voice and be consistent and coherent in its foreign policy.

MITI TO ASK U.S. TO REVIEW EMBARGO AGAINST USSR

[Text] Tokyo, July 2, KYODO -- The Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) will make a strong representation against the U.S. Government's recent extension of sanctions against the Soviet Union, which has stalled a joint Japan-Soviet oil and gas project off Sakhalin, informed sources said Friday. At the same time, MITI will renew its demand for exemption of the project from the U.S. ban on oil exploration equipment, they said.

However, the sources said, prime emphasis will be laid on demand for a review of the U.S. embargo itself rather than on request for exemption. This reflects MITI's deep dissatisfaction that embargo has been extended to overseas subsidiaries and licensees of U.S. firms. Application of domestic law beyond the national boundary is not permitted generally under international law. MITI's move will bring Japan into line with West European nations, which have already voiced strong protest against the U.S. embargo announced on May 18.

Immediately after the announcement of strengthened sanctions against the Soviet Union, Japan asked the U.S. to treat the Sakhalin project as an exception, noting that the suspension of the project would penalize this country rather than the Soviet Union. But the appeal went unheeded. Washington's ban on export of electric logging equipment for the project off the Soviet-held northern island has made it impossible to continue exploration of the continental shelf there. As a result, talks between Sakhalin Oil Development Co. of Tokyo and the Soviet Government over the continuation of the project are having rough sailing, the sources said.

JAPAN, USSR AGREE TO CONTINUE SAKHALIN PROJECT

[Excerpt] Tokyo, July 3, KYODO -- Japan and the Soviet Union have agreed to continue their joint oil and natural gas development project off Sakhalin despite a U.S. ban on the use of American technology for the multibillion dollar venture, industry sources here said Saturday. The Japanese partner in the project, Sakhalin Oil Development Cooperation Co., had been concerned about a possible Soviet cancellation of the project.

The sources said the agreement was reached during talks in Moscow last week between company president Sadao Kobayashi and Soviet Vice Foreign Trade Minister Vladimir Sushkov. The joint project involves undersea oil and natural gas fields in the Chaivo and Odoptu districts off the northeastern coast of the island.

Kobayashi and Sushkov agreed to continue the project in the Chaivo district as scheduled, the sources said. They said initial exploration has already been completed. The sources said the two also agreed to use Soviet drilling equipment in the Odoptu district instead of U.S. machines affected by American economic sanctions against Moscow over its intervention in domestic affairs in Poland. The agreement also reportedly calls for renegotiating the project to take account of delays caused by the withdrawal of a Japanese drilling rig using U.S. equipment.

OFFICIAL HINTS NO EXTRADITIONS IN IBM CASE

[Text] Tokyo, July 6, KYODO -- A senior official of the Justice Ministry said Tuesday that "an alleged criminal deed (in connection with the IBM industrial espionage case) apprently does not constitute a crime in Japan," thus suggesting no extradition of already indicted Hitachi, Ltd. staff to the United States. Hiroshi Maeda, director of the Criminal Affairs Bureau of the Justice Ministry, made the remark at a meeting of the House of Representatives Justice Committee.

This is the first official indication of government reluctance to comply with the expected request from U.S. authorities for extradition if Hitachi employees indicted by a U.S. federal grand jury last week.

Mitsubishi Electric Corp., the other Japanese company implicated in the case, hopes to settle the case at an early date through a "plea for no contest," according sources close to the company. Mitsubishi is now going into legal details while continuing active pre-trial bargaining with U.S. law-enforcement authorities, the sources said.

The grand jury put off the decision on Mitsubishi employees at the request of American defense lawyers for the corporation. The lawyers asked the U.S. attorney's office for a delay in proceedings because they needed more time to study charges on Mitsubishi employees.

COMMODITY LOANS TO ROK STILL UNDER DISCUSSION

Foreign Ministry Official

[Text] Tokyo, July 2, KYODO -- Commodity credits might be provided to South Korea in the form of aid for development projects when the South Korean side has trouble raising sufficient capital domestically, the director general of the Foreign Ministry's Asian Affairs Bureau told the House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee Fridsy.

Kiuchi was responding to questions on South Korea's demands for massive commodity credits from the Japan Export-Import Bank, a major stumbling block in Seoul's request for multi billion dollar economic help from Japan. Akitane Kiuchi told the committee that it "would not be unthinkable" for Japan to cover between 10 percent to 30 percent of the cost of some development projects in this manner, but said he could not be more specific without determining Seoul's feelings on the matter. However, he stood by the ministry's position that it would be "extremely difficult" to provide the direct commodity credits that South Korea desires.

Japan frequently provides yen loans covering up to 30 percent of project costs in cases in which the partner country has trouble raising funds domestically. It has also provided commodity credits in exceptional cases in China when Chinese authorities have had trouble funding large-scale projects. The "commodity credits" to which Kiuchi referred would be yen loans used to cover a portion of labor and material costs in South Korean development projects.

The Foreign Ministry considers this proposal to have the advantage of being close to Seoul's desired commodity credits in nature, while not presenting problems at home, where the opposition parties oppose the provision of direct commodity credits. The Treasury, however, is also against providing commodity credits and differences of opinion remain within the Foreign Ministry itself. Kiuchi told the Lower House committee that the concerned ministries have not reached a decision on the issue yet.

Sakurauchi, Yi Continue Talks

OW051135 Tokyo KYODO in English 1109 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Tokyo, July 5, KYODO -- The Japanese and South Korean foreign ministers could not break the deadlock in their negotiations on Seoul's massive loan request Monday, but they agreed to hold an unscheduled third meeting Tuesday to discuss the economic aid issue. They also agreed to meet again if their third round of talks fails to produce agreement on the dollar 6 billion request for financing South Korea's 1982-86 economic development program.

Monday's meeting was the first between Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and his South Korean counterpart Yi Pom-sok, who became the key Cabinet member in June.

During the talks, Sakurauchi told Yi that Tokyo would sincerely and seriously consider Seoul's new request for dollar 4 billion in long-term, low-interest official development assistance (ODA) and commodity credits, in view of the traditional ties between the two countries, according to officials. At the same time, the Japanese foreign minister explained the difficulties of meeting the South Korean request and sought understanding of Japan's domestic circumstances.

Yi, citing the "special relations" between Japan and South Korea, strongly requested an increase in the share of ODA and commodity credits in Japan's offer totaling dollar 4 billion.

Foreign Ministry officials said that Monday's meeting would form the basis for mutual concessions to settle the issue. Both parties also agreed to hold working-level negotiations at an appropriate time.

Yi is now in Japan on his way back from a visit to the United States. He is scheduled to meet with Minister of International Trade and Industry Shintaro Abe, Finance Minister Michio Watanabe and Chief Economic Planner Toshio Komoto Tuesday. He will also meet Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Wednesday.

Present at Monday's meeting were Japan's Ambassador to Seoul Toshikazu Maeda; Nobutane Kiuchi, director general of the Foreign Ministry's Asian Affairs Bureau; and Kenichi Yanagi, director general of the Ministry's Economic Affairs' Bureau. Representing South Korea were Assistant Foreign Minister Kong No-myong, Ambassador to Japan Choe Kyong-nok and other officials.

Watanabe: No New Offer

[Text] Tokyo, July 6, KYODO -- Finance Minister Michio Watanabe said Tuesday that Japan has no intention to make a new offer on South Korea's request for massive Japanese economic aid. Watanabe told reporters that the Japanese Government decided to extend dollar 4 billion -- dollar 1.5 billion in yen loans and dollar 2.5 billion in export-import bank loans -- to South Korea last April to finance its 1982-86 economic development program. He said this is the maximum offer Japan can make under the present circumstances.

Regarding a new South Korean request for dollar 2.3 billion in yen loans and dollar 1.7 billion in commodity loans for a total of dollar 4 billion in aid, Watanabe said the amount of yen credit wanted by Seoul is too big.

He said he will explain the Japanese policy when he confers with visiting South Korean Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok later Tuesday. Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa also said Japan cannot make any new offer on the Korean aid request.

Further Watanabe Remarks

[Excerpts] Tokyo, July 6, KYODO -- Japan Tuesday rejected again South Korea's request for massive Japanese aid due to Japan's poor economic prospects. Finance Minister Michio Watanabe took the step when he received visiting South Korean Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok at the Finance Ministry for about 30 minutes, officials said. He also told Yi that even if the negotiations are dragged out, the South Korean request would not be met.

Meeting newsmen after the meeting, Watanabe said that Japan would be ready to negotiate with South Korea on minor adjustments, such as the fund quota for each year, if the Koreans are willing to do so on the basis of the Japanese offer.

Regarding a new South Korean request for dollar 1.7 billion in commodity loans and dollar 2.3 billion in yen loans for a total of dollar 4 billion in aid, he said the commodity loan is offered to the poorest nations and there was no instance of a high income country like South Korea receiving such help.

Party Marks CCP Visit

[Text] Pyongyang, July 6 (KCNA) -- He Zhangming, charge d'affaires ad interim of the Chinese Embassy in Pyongyang, arranged a party yesterday evening at his embassy upon the conclusion of the visit of a party workers delegation of the Communist Party of China to our country.

Head of the delegation Feng Wenbin, vice-president of the party school of the CPC Central Committee, spoke first at the party.

He referred to the fact that during its visit to Korea the delegation toured various places including Pyongyang and felt the unshakable will of the entire Korean people to reunify their country. Under the wise leadership of the Workers Party of Korea headed by Comrade Kim Il-song the Korean people have attained brilliant successes in the socialist revolution and construction by displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and strenuous endeavours, he said.

He went on: We express once again heartfelt thanks to the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea for your passionate welcome and cordial hospitality and for your active support to the socialist modernization of our country. We will convey the revolutionary comradeship of the Korean people to the Chinese people.

We will make all efforts in future, too, for the consolidation and development of the China-Korea friendship, he said, and stated: We sincerely wish the fraternal Korean people new greater victory in the struggle for implementing the decisions of the WPK Sixth Congress and in their great cause of achieving the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

Kang Hyon-su, first vice-chairman of the Control Committee of the WPK Central Committee, spoke next. Noting that the fraternal Chinese people under the wise leadership of the Communist Party of China have achieved political stability and unity and made many successes in the struggle to turn China into a highly democratic and highly civilized, modern socialist power, he said:

We heartily wish the fraternal Chinese people greater success in the future in the struggle for modernizing the country and reunifying the whole country by having Taiwan returned to the motherland while firmly adhering to the four basic principles. In the future, too, we will always stand firm on the side of the fraternal Chinese people and actively support and encourage their struggle for their just cause.

Saying that the relations of class brothers, comrades-in-arms, sealed in blood between the peoples of the two countries will further consolidate and develop with each passing day, he emphasized: The Korea-China friendship will be evergreen like the pine-tree on Mt. Paektu.

The attendants raised glasses to the everlasting, great, blood-cemented militant friendship and unity between the parties and peoples of Korea and China, to the good health and long life of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, to the good health and long life of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, to the good health and long life of respected Comrade Chairman Hu Yaobang and to the good health and long life of respected Comrade Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping.

Dailies Mark Treaty Date

[Text] Pyongyang, July 6 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN and MINJU CHOSON July 6 dedicate articles to the 21st anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Friendship, Cooperation and Mutual Assistance between the DPRK and the USSR.

NODONG SINMUN says in its article that the signing of the treaty by Korea and the Soviet Union in face of a strained situation in which the aggression and war manoeuvres of the imperialist reactionary forces became undisguised, was an event of weighty significance in the life of the two peoples.

The author of the article says that the treaty has contributed to thwarting and frustrating the aggression and war manoeuvres of the U.S. and other imperialists and their stooges, defending peace in Asia and the world and developing the friendly and cooperative relations between the Korean and Soviet peoples to a new, higher stage.

The article stresses: The Soviet people oppose the U.S. imperialist's occupation of South Korea and war provocation manoeuvres and express firm solidarity with our people in the cause of reunification. The Korean people will in the future further strengthen and develop their friendly and cooperative relations with the Soviet people against imperialism and for the victory of the cause of socialism and communism.

Kim Il-song Receives Message

[Text] Pyongyang, July 3 (KCNA) — The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, received a message of thanks sent by Dominic Mintoff, prime minister of the Republic of Malta, upon leaving our country on July 2.

The message reads: Dear Excellency President,

All the members of the delegation of the Government of the Republic of Malta visiting the Democratic People's Republic of Korea would like to join me in thanking you most sincerely for the kind invitation to visit your marvelous country.

During our unfortunately too short but memorable stay in your beautiful country between the 30th of June and the 2nd of July, we were immeasurably impressed not only by the unprecedented and tumultuous welcome given to us by the tens of thousands who thronged the airport and the city of Pyongyang but also by the great achievements your republic has attained inspired by the chuche idea and under Your Excellency's wise leadership.

The friendship which characterizes relations between our two republics has been given a new and practical dimension as a result of the frank and detailed talks with Your Excellency. Our people will always remember these meetings with appreciation as the start of a new phase of cooperation.

Before returning home may I thank Your Excellency, also on behalf of all the members of my delegation, for the generous hospitality lavished on each one of us wherever we were in your most charming country.

Wishing you a long life and prosperity.

Sincerely yours.

ROK FISHING VESSEL ATTACKED BY NORTHERN PATROL

SK060510 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0300 GMT 6 Jul 82

[Text] The North Korean puppets fired at our fishing boat, which was catching fish on the high seas, and failed in an attempt to capture the boat.

A North Korean puppet patrol boat approached and fired at the Songjin No 5 belonging to the Mukho Fisheries Cooperative, which was engaging in fishing on the high seas about 220 miles northeast of Ulnung-do at around 1730 yesterday, but failed in an attempt to capture the boat, the Office of Fisheries Administration announced today.

According to the Office of Fisheries Administration, a North Korean puppet patrol boat suddenly appeared and urged the Songjin No 5 to defect to the North. They shot indiscriminately while the other boat was engaged in fishing on the high seas along with our other fishing craft. The Songjin No 5 had a narrow escape from death. The Office of Fisheries Administration said that the Songjin No 5 was returning to Mukho Port under the protection of our navy and that there were no casualities.

In the meantime, the Office of Fisheries Administration said that it would reveal the truth by investigating the case as soon as the Songjin No 5 returned. It denounced as an inhumane act the North Korean puppet's indiscriminate shooting at our fishing fleet, which was peacefully catching fish on the high seas in the East Sea. It revealed that it would strongly protest to the North through the Military Armistice Commission and call for an immediate stop to such brutal acts.

YI, SAKURAUCHI DISCUSS LOAN AGREEMENT IN TOKYO

[Text] Tokyo, July 6 (YONHAP) — The two rounds of talks here Monday between South Korean Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok and his Japanese counterpart Yoshio Sakurauchi have produced a glimmer of hope in the long-deadlocked negotiations between the two Asian neighbors over Seoul's request for Japanese loans.

Sakurauchi promised to give "favorable considerations" to South Korea's request for 1.7 billion U.S. dollars in commodity credits as part of the four billion dollar loan package. South Korea initially requested six billion dollars in Japanese Government loans last August. Japan had expressed reluctance to accommodate Seoul's request for commodity credits on the grounds that South Korea is an advanced developing country.

Assistant Foreign Minister Kong No-myong, a member of the Korean delegation at Monday's talks, told Korean correspondents that Sakurauchi pledged to seriously review South Korea's latest request for 2.3 billion dollars in official development aid (ODA) loans and the remaining 1.7 billion dollars in commodity credits "in view of the historical relations between the two countries."

Korean officials said Japan's positive reaction to the commodity credit issue, which has emerged as a centerpiece in the long negotiations, reflects its understanding of South Korea's need for those credits to help finance the country's fifth five-year economic development plan (1982-86).

Sakurauchi accepted Yi's invitation to visit South Korea to resume talks on the economic cooperation issue, and Korean officials said that visit will probably occur in early August.

On other issues, the two ministers agreed that tension continues to exist on the Korean Peninsula and Sakurauchi voiced support for Seoul's efforts to safeguard its security and resume inter-Korean dialogue.

August Settlement Expected

[Text] Seoul, July 5 (YONHAP) -- Japan and South Korea are expected to finalize the negotiations over Korea's year-long request for six billion U.S. dollars in Japanese loans around the end of August, a Korean lawmaker said Monday.

Rep. Pak Kyong-sok, a deputy executive secretary of the Korea-Japan Parliamentarians' Union, said that Tokyo's decision on the issue was expected to be made by Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki by Aug. 21, when the Japanese Diet (parliament) is scheduled to recess.

Pak returned Saturday from a trip to Tokyo, where he and Rep. Yi Sang-ik, the Seoul-side chief executive secretary of the lawmakers' union, met with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and Japanese parliamentary leaders. Pak quoted the Japanese prime minister as saying that he expected the Korean and Japanese foreign ministers to review the issue thoroughly to work out an early solution when they meet in Tokyo Monday. "I expect this week's (Korean-Japanese) foreign ministers' meeting to make much process towards an early settlement of the loan issue, as Japan is showing some measure of flexibility to our counterproposal," Pak said.

ROK-CANADA SUMMIT TO EXPLORE MORE REACTOR SALES

[Text] Ottawa, July 5 (YONHAP) -- A senior external affairs source said Monday that additional Canadian sales of Candu nuclear reactors to South Korea would be a major topic of discussion at the forthcoming Korea-Canada summit talks scheduled for Aug. 28 to 31.

According to the source, the further promotion of bilateral commercial times will be a major item on the summit agenda, and additional Candu sales will be brought up in that context. Two-way trade between Seoul and Ottawa reached 1 billion [no monetary unit supplied] in 1981, nearly 40 per cent more than in 1980.

The source said it was his understanding that Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau had specifically mentioned Ottawa's interest in further Candu exports to Korea in a personal letter to former Premier Yu Chang-sun sent early this year.

Canada has already sold a 678-megawatt nuclear power plant to Korea, which is now under construction at Wolsong in southeast Korea. Canada wants to sell Korea three additional Candu units costing about 1.5 billion [no monetary unit supplied] the source said Ottawa urgently needs to sell more Candu units as its multi-billion-dollar nuclear industry is on the verge of collapse for lack of export sales. It has not sold a nuclear reactor at home or abroad since 1978.

'STEP-BY-STEP' UNIFICATION PROCESS SUGGESTED

[Text] Tokyo, July 4 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Unification Minister Son Chae-sik told a meeting of Korean expatriates here Sunday that Korean unification cannot be achieved by wishful thinking alone but required firm determination in a step-by-step approach.

Son made his remarks at a meeting of the prospective members of the Japan branch of the Advisory Council on Peaceful Unification Policy ACPUP under the control on the Korean Government. The meeting was held at the head office of "Mindan," an association of pro-Seoul Korean expatriates in Japan. Chang Chong-myong, the president of Mindan, was present at the conference.

According to officials traveling with Son, the South Korean Government plans to create similar overseas expatriate branches of ACPUP in the United States, Canada, Western Europe, South America and Australia.

CHAIRMAN MARKS DATE OF NORTH-SOUTH STATEMENT

[Statement to the North by Seoul side Co-Chairman of the North-South Coordinating Committee Min Kwan-sik]

[Text] Tomorrow we mark the 10th anniversary of the publication of the historic 4 July North-South joint communique.

Ten years ago, both sides gave all fellow countrymen in the North and South great expectations for peace and stability on the Korean Peninsula and for reunification by announcing the North-South joint communique in Seoul and Pyongynag.

The basic idea of the 4 July joint communique was to remove misunderstanding and distrust between the North and South, which were caused by the long separation and confrontation, to ease tension and to accelerate the peaceful reunification of the fatherland, based on the desire for early achievement of the peaceful reunification of the fatherland.

Proceeding from the idea of the 4 July joint communique, we made every sincere effort to recover national trust by implementing the agreements made between both sides during the North-South dialogue, by ensuring the foundation for peace on this land and by realizing mutual interchange between the North and the South.

However, on 28 August, 1973, the North side unilaterally discontinued the operation of the North-South Coordinating Committee, which was being operated by the mutual agreement of both sides. It also violated the 4 July joint communique and all other agreements between the North and the South.

Nevertheless, we continuously urged the North Korean side to sincerely observe and implement all the agreements solemnly made between the North and the South based on the idea of the 4 July joint communique and to resume the normal operation of the North-South Coordinating Committees. However, the North Korean side is attempting to nullify the 4 July North-South joint communique by denying the role of the North-South Coordinating Committee.

We firmly believe that the way for the peaceful reunification of the fatherland lies in unconditionally resuming the dialogue, returning to the basic idea of the North-South joint communique, and solving the pending questions between the North and the South and the future problems of the nation through dialogue, sitting together face to face.

We have urged the North Korean side to actively respond to the concrete and practical measures we worked out to provide the plaza of dialogue, vowing our renewed efforts for the peaceful reunification in the 1980's.

We proposed mutual visits between the highest persons in authority in North and South on 12 January last year. On 5 February of the same year, we also proposed convening talks between the highest persons in authority in North and South. On 22 January this year, we put forward measures for national harmony and democratic reunification reflecting the people's desire for reunification. We proposed immediate implementation of 20 pilot projects, which arose from the idea of implementing measures for national harmony and democratic reunification. We also proposed convening talks between high-level officials from the North and the South, a proposal which took even the position of the North Korean side into consideration.

In spite of our sincere efforts to achieve the peaceful reunification of the fatherland, the North Korean side is refusing to come to the table of dialogue, exploiting the reunification issue for political propaganda and to slander the South. We cannot but deplore and worry over this.

On the occasion of the 10th anniversary of publication of the 4 July North-South joint communique, we once again urge the North Korean side to restore the function of the direct telephone line between the North and the South, recover national reason, to come to the table of dialogue in accord with the ideas of the 4 July North-South joint communique and to respond to discussion and resolution of future problems of our nation and pending questions with an open mind.

ROK ADOPTS 'REVOLUTIONARY' BANKING, TAX REFORMS

[Text] In a virtually revolutionary move for the nation's financial and overall economic system, the government announced yesterday that all financial transactions with banks, nonbank institutions and securities market must be done in real names. The real-name trade system will go into effect partly on Jan. 1 next year and fully on July 1 that year.

Presenting the far-reaching financial reform plan, Minister of Finance Kang Kyong-sik also told a press conference that the global or comprehensive income tax rates will get a sweeping cut from the current 76.5 percent at the maximum to a 50 percent level on the top-rate basis. The drastic plan calls for subjecting interest, dividends and other financial-asset income to global tax, while newly imposing capital gains tax on securities. At present, these income are taxed separately at a relatively low rate of 16.5 percent by withholding the levy at the time of payment.

Kang disclosed that the shifts on the tax side are intended to take effect after the full-scale implementation of the real-name transaction system. The planned global income tax cut, complementary to the financial sweep in nature, is also designed to match the drastic slash in corporate income tax proposed in the economic revitalization package taken Monday.

To legislate the ambitious reform plan, the government is going to draft a special measures law. In addition, at least two existing laws -- the laws on income tax and inheritance tax -- need to be revised, while the law on the secrecy of bank deposit has to be scrapped.

The secrecy-guarantee act was first written in July 1961 and has since remained in effect. It has provided the legal basis for the non-name or anonymous financial transactions as they are now.

The government will seek legislative steps when the National Assembly goes into session in coming September. According to the government timetable, the special law is to become effective early next year, making it mandatory for all financial accounts, established after Jan. 1 next year, to carry the real name of the holders.

The non-name or anonymous transactions, Kang pointed out, have lent themselves to the best caches for tax evasions and social irregularities. "Now the country is urgently required to establish the real-name system, which is the basic premise for the introduction of market mechanism on the financial side," he said. The finance minister further noted that the reform idea, specifically directed against the curb-money market, "is not going to have any impact on the bulk of the people -- wage earners and bona fide businessmen -- the capital accumulated through normal economic activities."

Despite earlier speculation, it seems that the government has decided not to take any direct counter measures against the curb market. Kang said that once global income tax rates are lowered as much as the government wants, it will leave not much room for the existence of curb loans. Along with this, tax offensive will be strengthened greatly against curb dealings after the proposed special law takes effect, he added.

To promote the cause of the real-name accounts, while minimizing the adverse effects on the economy, the plan demands special treatment for the non-name or anonymous accounts, already established.

The extraordinary steps, which would remain effective for a certain period under certain conditions, include the exemption from retrospective taxation on financial assets. In connection with this, the government will lead financial assets of suspicious sources to real-name accounts by three stages. For example, at the first stage, extending till June 30, 1983, they will be given two choices -- a special levy of five percent of the asset value or the acceptance of the conditions the government set. The condition includes the investment in equity interest of businesses.

SIHANOUK ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR MERGER WITH SON SANN

[Text] Manila, July 2 (AFP) -- Cambodian Prince NOrodom Sihanouk today announced plans for the merger of his Moulinaka guerrilla faction with nationalist leader Son Sann's Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) to combat the Hanoi-backed Heng Samrin government in Phnom Penh.

Highly authoritative Philippine Foreign Ministry sources said Prince Sihanouk bared the merger plan during his talks this morning with Foreign Minister Carlos P. Romulo prior to the prince's meeting with President Ferdinand Marcos. The prince also said his newly-formed Cambodian coalition government, set up in opposition to the Phnom Penh administration, would campaign to retain the Cambodian seat at the United Nations and continue to explore ways for future negotiations with Vietnam.

An official Philippine Government statement said the visiting prince, who was recently chosen to head the Cambodian coalition of Democratic Kampuchea, shied away from discussing "assistance" and took up what he considered more attainable objectives.

Prince Sihanouk told Mr. Romulo he would consult (?with) Moulinaka followers on the merger [word indistinct] when he returned to Kampuchean territory after his tour of the five nations Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN). The KPNLF has about 9,000 guerrillas headed by ex-Premier Son Sann while Prince Sihanouk's troops number about 5,000. The Khmer Rouge, the biggest of the three factions in the coalition government, have about 30,000 armed guerrillas. Prince Sihanouk, according to Foreign Ministry sources, however, stressed that his faction and Son Sann's KPNLF would maintain their coalition government agreement with the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge. He gave no further details on the merger.

Prince Sihanouk and his wife, Princess Monique, had an hour-long meeting with ranking Philippine Government officials headed by President Ferdinand Marcos, Prime Minister Cesar Virata, Foreign Minister Carlos P. Romulo and his two deputy foreign ministers.

Mr Marcos reiterated ASEAN's united stand and support for Democratic Kampuchea. He added that ASEAN was hopeful that the new group would muster enough strength to combat effectively the Heng Samrin regime in Kampuchea. He also said that the new coalition, under which Prince Sihanouk is president, Khieu Samphan vice president in charge of foreign affairs and Son Sann prime minister, had now a stronger base.

Prince Sihanouk who will be in the country for three days is on the last leg of his ASEAN tour. ASEAN leaders have played a key role in promoting the Cambodian coalition government pact, which was signed in Kuala Lumpur last month.

According to the government statement, Mr Marcos expressed optimism over developments in Kampuchea as a result of the coalition, pointing out that "if we can help sustain the morale of the democratic coalition, we may end up with some kind of negotiation" between Vietnam and the newly-merged anti-Vietnamese Cambodian forces.

SIHANOUK MEETS MARCOS, SEEKS SUPPORT AGAINST SRV

[Text] Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of the Kampuchean coalition government, sought the help of the Philippines in freeing Cambodia from its Vietnamese occupation army. Sihanouk met with the president in Malacanang in formal talks. During the meeting, the president expressed the hope that ASEAN would be able to sustain the morale [as heard] for a peaceful solution to the conflict in Kampuchea.

President Marcos described Prince Norodom Sihanouk as a seasoned diplomat who is very discreet in discussing possible ASEAN assistance to the newly formed Democratic Coalition Government of Kampuchea. In their 1-hour talk in Malacanang this morning, the president expressed ASEAN's hopes that the coalition which Sihanouk heads will be able to replace the badly criticized Pol Pot regime in the United Nations. He said: ASEAN supports the efforts of the people of Kapuchea to discourage intervention by stronger nations in the international affairs of other countries.

[Begin Marcos recording] If we can help sustain the morale of the democratic coalition, we may end up with some kind of a negotiation between those who run into the Kampuchean territory, let us say frankly, the North Vietnamese, and the democratic coalition. [end recording]

Sihanouk is scheduled to hold a press conference tomorrow before he departs for Bangkok.

Comments on ASEAN Aid

[Text] Manila, 3 Jul (AFP) -- Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk said today he has received "Nothing at all" in terms of military aid, cash, food or medicines from the Association of Southeast Asian Nations [ASEAN]. But the prince, who departs for Bangkok today on the last leg of his ASEAN tour, said he was not "disappointed."

He said he had received encouraging notes from Malaysia, Singapore and Thailand that military or other material aid might come in the future when his Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, set in opposition to the Hanoi-backed Phnom Penh government, assumes greater credibility.

This presumably refers to plans to merge the two anti-communist factions within the coalition: Prince Sihanouk's Moulinaka faction and nationalist leader Son Sann's Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF). Prince Sihanouk, the president of the coalition government yesterday announced the merger plan. But there has been no reaction from Son Sann, who is premier in the coalition while Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan is vice-president in charge of foreign affairs.

In a pre-departure press conference, Prince Sihanouk said he was "very satisfied with the political, moral and diplomatic support: given by ASEAN nations at the moment. "I cannot force ASEAN to hurry," he said, adding that he has been assured that the ASEAN five would "study the coalition's problems."

The main problem, he said, was to "develop a military capability to fight and do more harm to the Vietnamese enemy and persuade them to abide by international resolutions."

Prince Sihanouk, who signed a coalition government pact with Son Sann and Khieu Samphan in Kuala Lumpur last June 22, said his ASEAN swing was aimed mainly at "thanking them for their political and moral support." He said he was assured by Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines, which he visited after the Kuala Lumpur Cambodian resistance summit, that the ASEAN five would continue to campaign vigorously for Democratic Kampuchea's retention of the Cambodian United Nations seat.

However, he explained that the coalition's primary goal now was to "fight, develop our military capability to do more harm to the enemy and persuade them (Vietnamese) to abide by the United Nations' resolutions" seeking a complete withdrawal of foreign forces followed by U.N.-supervised elections in Cambodia. He said he would proceed, after his Bangkok visit, to Cambodia to chair meetings of his government. "The international community will see that we do have areas under our control," he added.

Prince Sihanouk said ASEAN had indeed expressed hope that the anti-communist factions of the coalition would eventually equal the strength of the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge which boasts of about 30,000 armed guerrillas.

"Singapore, Malaysia and Thailand let me know that if the nationalist camps unite, they will enjoy more credibility and will get military aid," he said.

"Son Sann and I agree that as far as manpower is concerned, we have no problem," adding that they are presently planning to merge his 5,000-strong Moulinaka guerrilla faction with Son Sann's 9,000-strong Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF). "I have explained our problems. It is up to ASEAN to decide whether to grant us more concrete aid," he noted.

He also said that he was optimistic that the "coalition will last," because its first problem was to "regain independence." He added, however, that he was "without ambition and passion" and "would not want to be held responsible for clashes among factions."

Further Remarks

[Excerpts] Manila, July 3, KYODO — Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of the newly formed anti-Vietnam coalition government of three Kampuchean resistance groups, said Saturday it has no intention of talking to the Hanoi-backed Heng Samrin government in Phnom Penh. The prince rejected negotiations on the grounds the Phnom Penh group does not represent even a part of Kampuchea. He claimed that the Heng Samrin regime could not exist without support from Vietnam and the Soviet Union, ruling out any contact as long as it was a mere puppet government.

The prince made the statements at a press conrerence here before flying to Bangkok Saturday on the last leg of his ASEAN tour to explain the June 22 declaration in Kuala Lumpur of the anti-Hanoi Kampuchean coalition

The prince dismissed Vietnamese pronouncements of a partial troop withdrawal as meaningless and deceiving. "The question is whether they are willing to let Kampuchea be independent or not," Sihanouk said.

The prince also said he was willing to drop his earlier proposal for a Geneva type conference to end the Vietnamese occupation of his country if "the majority" say so. He said he did not ask for military aid from the ASEAN group, although, he added, the coalition's armed forces will eventually have to rely on friendly countries for arms, ammunition, and equipment to fight the Vietnamese. "It will be a long struggle. Without the support of ASEAN and the free world, we cannot succeed," Sihanouk said. "It is up to ASEAN to decide."

Prime Minister Cesar Virata said Friday night the Philippines is willing to provide "humanitarian" aid to the coalition. Virata, who sat in on Sihanouk's 45-minute meeting with President Ferdinand Marcos, also quoted the Kampuchean leader as saying that China is the only country that has so far extended military aid to the coalition, which the prince said already controls a third of Kampuchean territory.

Before the press conference, he and his wife Princess Monique had an unscheduled breakfast with Mrs. Imelda Marcos, wife of the Philippine president. "The first lady told me that each time she goes abroad, she will not only be the ambassador of the Philippines but also of Kampuchea," Sihanouk said.

Asked about his role in the coalition government, Sihanouk, 60, said he was a changed man. When he was a "young and charismatic leader," he failed to serve his country in the best possible manner.

SIHANOUK'S 3-DAY VISIT TO THAILAND REPORTED

Arrives in Bangkok

[Text] President of Democratic Kampuchea, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Princess Monique, In Tam and a four-man delegation arrived at Don Muang International Airport at 1710 today on board Thai International flight TG639 from the Philippines to pay a 3-day official visit to Thailand. They were greeted on arrival by Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, his wife and other senior Thai officials.

Prince Sihanouk gave a brief statement to newsmen, saying that he is pleased to be making a visit to Thailand today and is happy at the warm reception accorded by the Thai people. He is very happy to have another opportunity to visit Thailand. However, he excused himself from answering newsmen's questions at this time.

The foreign minister then introduced Prince Sihanouk to the ambassadors of ASEAN countries and the Chinese ambassador to Thailand. Prince Sihanouk and his party then proceeded to Erawan Hotel where he will stay during his official visit. Tonight at 2000 the foreign minister will host a dinner in honor of Prince Sihanouk and his party at the Foreign Ministry. At 0830 tomorrow Prince Sihanouk is scheduled to meet with Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon at Phitsanulok House.

Meeting With Prem

[Text] According to Wanida Chitman, deputy spokesman of the prime minister's office, at 0830 Prince Norodom Sihanouk called on Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon at Phitsanulok House. He was welcomed there by the following senior Thai officials: Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila; Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphongi; and Lt Gen Chantharakhup Sirisut, secretary general to the prime minister, Prince Sihanouk was accompanied by In Tam and Buor Herl.

The prime minister hosted a breakfast for Prince Sihonouk and his delegation. The prime minister made a speech welcoming the prince. Replying, Prince Sihanouk said he is very happy to be the first guest at Phitsanulok House. He thanked the Thai Government and people for their warm reception. In particular, he expressed his appreciation for Thailand's assistance to the Kampuchean people at a time of hardship as if they were relatives. The Kampuchean and Thai people have close cultural and religious ties as they have long been neighbors. Prince Sihanouk said he is extremely grateful for the opportunity to have an audience with their majesties the king and queen and for their continued kindness toward the Kampuchean refugees.

The prime minister said the Thai Government has tried its best to provide humanitarian assistance to the Kampuchean refugees. He congratulated the successful establishment of the coalition government which will benefit the Kampuchean people, eventually enable the large number of Kampuchean refugees in Thailand to return to their motherland and contribute to peace and stability in this region.

Prince Sihanouk then summed up his visit to the other four ASEAN countries as very successful, saying that the ASEAN leaders are elated with the establishment of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea and they have expressed readiness to support diplomatic and political efforts for a resolution of the Kampuchean problem in accordance with the UN resolutions and the recommendations of the International Conference on Kampuchea. Prince Sihanouk said the ASEAN countries support him as the representative of the coalition government at the nonaligned conference in Baghdad, Iraq in mid-September and at the UN General Assembly in the same month. The prime minister expressed his support for this stand of ASEAN.

Prince Sihanouk then noted the plan of the coalition government to hold joint consultations inside Kampuchea to formally declare the establishment of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea as soon as possible in the interest of unity and the struggle against the occupiers of Kampuchea. In discussing the formal declaration of the establishment of the coalition government, the formation of coordination committees on defense, social and cultural affairs, public relations and financial affairs will also be discussed.

Concluding, Prince Sihanouk said he was greatly impressed with the excellent reception and the classical dance performance at the reception party for him at the Foreign Ministry on the evening of 3 July. He said he had not seen classical dancing for a long time and praised the performance as very good. He said once Kampuchea is well established he would send personnel for classical dance training here because Thailand has preserved this aspect of art very well.

The prime minister said he is pleased with the close relations existing between the two countries and Thailand strongly wants to see Kampuchea and the Kampuchean people enjoy freedom, independence, peace and prosperity.

The breakfast concluded at about 0945.

The No. 2 man at the Japanese Embassy arrived at the hotel where Prince Sihanouk and his entourage are staying at 11 a.m.. Later this morning the president-designate of the newly-formed Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea met U.S. Ambassador to Thailand John Gunther Dean who also visited him.

This afternoon Prince Sihanouk is expected to meet representatives of the North Korean trade mission here.

Prince Sihanouk's official visit to Thailand ends today and his future movements are shrouded in secrecy for security reasons.

KPNLF NOMINEES FOR COALITION COMMITTEES REPORTED

KPNLF leader Son Sann has sent the nominees to the coalition president, Prince Norodom Sihanouk. The list will be announced at the first "working session" of the Khmer coalition government "on Kampuchean soil" later this week, informed sources said.

The Khmer Rouge's list of nominees of "ministers" to be named to the four committees (equivalent to "ministries" in the usual sense) has yet to be made known.

Son Sann has nominated Col Ing Judeth to the Defence Committee. He was, before 1975, a military liaison officer posted to Bangkok for the Lon Nol government and has been active in anti-communist resistance activities since 1975, mostly in northern Kampuchea.

Col Ieng Judeth was one of the first high-ranking military officers to join the KPNLF in 1979. A close collaborator of KPNLF Commander-in-Chief Gen Dien Del, the colonel is one of the top men in Son Sann's military structure.

The KPNLF's nominee to the Economy and Finance Committee is Mr Boun Sai, a French-educated economist. He was working in Toulouse, France, before joining the KPNLF in Kampuchea and had been in charge of the resistance faction's financial affairs.

Boun Sai was writing a university thesis at the time he left France to join the KPNLF.

"When my country is free again, I would like to go back to university. The subject of my thesis will probably deal with the reconstruction of Kampuchea," Boun Sai told the NATION recently.

Son Sann's education and culture minister nominated to the three-party committee in the coalition is Mr Choy Vi, a former director general for education in the Ministry of Education in Phnom Penh before 1975. He is one of the few intellectuals who survived the Pol Pot regime.

Choy Vi spent 1975-1978 in Kampuchea and managed to flee with his family. He has been in charge of training and education programmes for the KPNLF since 1979.

Dr Bou Kheng, a doctor from Battambang, will be "minister of health" in the coalition for Son Sann's faction. Dr Bou Kheng and his brother also survived the Pol Pot genocide. After they joined the KPNLF, he has worked mostly at the Sroch Srang camp.

One source close to the talks on the technical details of the composition of the four committees (apart from the three man"inner cabinet") said yesterday that Khieu Samphan and suggested that only persons with Khmer citizenship should be nominated to the committees.

This condition could pose a problem for the Sihanoukists since some of the nominees who had been living abroad had applied and obtained citizenship of their country of resettlement.

PROBLEMS IN COALITION FORMATION PLANS REPORTED

Headquarters Site

[By Jim Wolf]

[Text] Bangkok, July 4 (AFP) -- Cambodia's three main anti-Vietnamese groups today ran into a last-minute hitch in their plan to proclaim a new union on Cambodian soil, highly reliable sources said. The sources said the leaders of the yet-to-bet formalized Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea (CGDK) were holding an 11th-hour meeting here to overcome the snag, which concerned where to set up the new jungle headquarters.

Taking part in the discussions were Prince Norodom Sihanouk, nominal Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan and Son Sann, who heads the anti-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF). Prince Sihanouk, the new chief of state, held an initial round of talks with Khieu Samphan, the new vice president, here last night after arriving on the final leg of a tour of members states of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN). The prince then met separately with Son Sann, his new premier, for more than an hour this morning.

Son Sann was rejecting a Khmer Rouge demand that the new government be based on territory controlled by the Khmer Rouge, the sources said. The sources, Cambodian insiders who have proven reliable in the past, said Prince Sihanouk was also reluctant to set up shop on Khmer Rouge-held soil because of the ousted group's odious international image.

The last-ditch effort to break the deadlock was to start at the four-star Erawan Hotel, the Thai Government hostel for visiting dignitaries, late this afternoon.

There was no immediate indication whether the wrangle would hold up the on-site proclamation of the new coalition, which is generally expected some time this week. ASEAN officials and the Cambodian leaders have been hoping for an early proclamation to head off any possible collapse of the troubled alliance before it gets off the ground.

The three groups are united only in their opposition to the Vietnamese, who invaded Cambodia on December 25, 1978 and set up a client government in Phnom Penh after driving out the Beijing-backed Khmer Rouge. The Vietnamese resistance groups declared a loose union in Kuala Lumpur on June 22 after more than a year of negotiations on merger terms.

Immediately after conferring this morning with Son Sann, Prince Sihanouk met China's Ambassador to Thailand, Shen Ping. No details of that meeting were available.

The Cambodian informants said there had not yet been any substantive discussion of Prince Sihanouk's offer last week to fuse his forces with Son Sann's. One key reason, the sources said, was that Thailand was "unenthusiastic" about the plan, possibly because it considers it premature with the simple mechanics of the new government yet to be worked out.

If confirmed, Thailand's reluctance would contrast with the reported positions of Singapore and, to a lesser extent Malaysia, identified by Prince Sihanouk as the prime movers behind it. In Singapore on June 29, the prince said ASEAN, the guiding hand behind the coalition agreement, wanted the merger of non-communist forces before offering it any material assistance.

Last night, in a brief comment during a banquet here in Prince Sihanouk's honor, Son Sann said the proposed merger of non-communist forces "seems like a good idea."

Khieu Samphan, though invited, did not attend last night's dinner, at which Thailand signalled what appeared to be formal recognition of the new CGDK. In a dinner speech. Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetasila declared that it was "an honor for us to greet you (Sihanouk) as president of Democratic Kampuchea." The prince will be granted an audience with Thailand's King Phumiphon Adunyadet tomorrow and is to visit a Cambodian refugee camp on Wednesday.

Details of his planned movements after that, notably the date, time and place of his return to Cambodia, have not yet been made public, partly for security reasons and also because the prince himself apparently does not yet know. According to one well-informed West European diplomat, the prince will remain in Cambodia until about mid-July when he may come to Bangkok again for talks with Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr, who chaired a United Nations-sponsored conference on Cambodia in July 1981. Mr Pahr is due in Bangkok July 16-19 after a two-day visit to Hanoi in his capacity as Austrian foreign minister.

News Blackout Imposed

[By Jim Wolf]

[Excerpts] Bangkok, July 5 (AFP) -- Cambodia's three main anti-Vietnamese groups today imposed a news blackout on a reported snag in their plan to proclaim a new union on Cambodian soil. Leaders of the yet-to-be formalized Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea (CGDK) and their top aides were withholding all comment on when, where and by exactly whem the alliance would be declared.

No word filtered on a three-way meeting here last night between Prince Norodom Sihanouk, nominal Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan and Son Sann, who heads the non-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF).

Son Sann was reported to have left Bangkok shortly after the summit for a guerrilla zone in Cambodia, but his top aides were refusing requests for details. Prince Sihanouk was being granted an audience this evening by King Phumiphon Adunyadet of Thailand. There was no word on the exact whereabouts of Khieu Samphan.

Last night's tripartite meeting was the first at summit level since the signing of the coalition pact in Kuala Lumpur on June 22 after more than a year of negotiations over its terms.

Apart from the reported flap over where to set up the headquarters, observers noted there had not been word of agreement on the makeup of the four planned "coordination committees" that are to act as tripartite ministries. The names of these members of the government are to be released officially when the coalition is proclaimed in Cambodia, probably very close to Thailand's eastern border.

SRV Attacks Postpone Plans

[Excerpt] Vietnamese attacks forced postponement yesterday of plans to form the coalition government in northern Kampuchea, diplomatic sources said.

Prince Norodom Sihanouk cancelled a planned trip to enter Siem Reap Province to declare the coalition official with a meeting between him Son Sann and Khieu Samphan.

The prince today will remain in Thailand to visit the giant Khao I Dang refugee camp north of Aranyaprathet.

About half of the 90,000 Khmer refugees in Thailand are at Khao I Dang, and Sihanouk's first visit ever to a refugee camp is expected to be an emotional one.

Sihanouk To Return by 10 July

[Text] Bangkok, July 6 (AFP) -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk and his two uneasy allies have agreed on a D-day for formalizing their anti-Vietnamese coalition on Cambodian soil by Saturday [10 July], diplomats said today.

The diplomats, relaying the best information available, were unwilling or unable to say precisely when and where the much-discussed proclamation ceremony would take place. They said the prince would dart across Thailand's eastern border to a new tripartite headquarters "some time" during a three-day visit to the area starting tomorrow. Joining him will be his partners in the new Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea -- Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan and anti-communist chief Son Sann, who heads the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF).

Both Son Sann and Khieu Samphan, who are based in the bush near Thailand, have already left Bangkok where the three ironed out final hitches after Sihanouk flew in Saturday. The prince, who is expected to return here by Saturday, is to begin his homecoming with what are certain to be tumultuous visits to Cambodian refugee camps in the border area.

Agreement on the D-day plans came after the Khmer Rouge and Son Sann's KPNLF, still deeply suspicious of each other, struck a deal on where to pitch camp together.

According to Cambodian sources, they had been at loggerheads once again over a reported Khmer Rouge insistence that the government be set up in Khmer Rouge-controlled territory.

Son Sann was said to be reluctant to yield because of the tainted image of the Khmer Rouge, who turned Cambodia into a kind of vast terror-stalked work camp from April 13, 1975 until Vietnam drove them from Phnom Penh 44 months later.

The Cambodian resistance groups set up their loose alliance in Kuala Lumpur on June 22 after more than a year of difficult negotiations over merger terms. The plan to formalize the pact on home ground is important mainly for appearances sake, especially to counter any suggestion it is a government-in-exile. The government is being formed under the banner of Democratic Kampuchea, a member state of the United Nations.

HUN SEN INTERVIEWED ON KHMER COALITION

[Text] Phnom Penh, 5 Jul (SPK) -- This morning, prior to his departure for the 6th for ministers conference of the three Indochinese countries which will be held in Ho Chi Minh City on 6 July, PRK Foreign Minister Hun Sen gave an interview to SPK.

Here are the questions and answers:

Question 1: The president of the so-called "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea" is now visiting Thailand. Comrade minister, can you give us your opinion on this subject?

Answer: While trailing behind the Chinese hegemonist-expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists in the supply of arms, ammunition and food and in the granting of "sanctuaries" to the remnants of the Pol Pot army and other reactionary Khmer forces, the Thai authorities have nonetheless continued to proclaim a policy of "neutrality." At present, they have unmasked themselves by welcoming the disguised Pol Pot gang and creating favorable conditions for them to carry out their activities against the rebirth of the Kampuchean people. The PRK Government severely condemns this gross interference by the Bangkok authorities in the internal affairs of Kampuchea.

Question 2: According to the Western press, the three reactionary Khmer groups will meet in the Kampuchean-Thai border region, either in Kampuchean territory or in the "sanctuaries" in Thai territory. What is your opinion?

Answer: It is publicly well known that the Pol Pot clique and other reactionary Khmer forces are spit upon by the Kampuchean people. Therefore, they do not have any refuge in Kampuchean territory. It is thus impossible for them to have such a meeting if they do not enjoy the aid of the Thai authorities in terms of welcome and security matters, in the preparation of the meeting site and in other facilities. People of good conscience should ask themselves the following question: What would the Bangkok authorities think if anyone of their neighbors proceeded in the same manner against them. What an irony when Thai Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon casually declared that the formation of the so-called "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea" strengthens the security of Thailand.

Question 3: Comrade minister, would you please tell us about the foreign policy of the PRK?

Answer: The PRK practices of foreign policy of peace, friendship and cooperation with all peoples, first of all with neighboring countries -- especially with Thailand -- in order to build a region of peace and stability together.

On this occasion, I would like to remind our Thai friends of our good will by quoting the following passage from a letter Chairman Heng Samrin sent to the Thai prime minister on 23 October 1979: "Kampucheans and Thais must live together for centuries to come whatever their respective political regimes.

"Loyal to the tradition of Kampuchean-Thai friendship, in the long-term interests of our two countries and in the interests of peace and stability in Southeast Asia, the PRK would be very pleased to bind with the Kingdom of Thailand relations of good neighborliness and cooperation based on the principles of mutual respect for independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, of noninterference in the internal affairs of each country, of equality and of reciprocal benefit."

HUN SEN, DELEGATION DEPART FOR INDOCHINA CONFERENCE

[Text] Phnom Penh, 5 July (SPK) — A delegation of the PRK Foreign Affairs Ministry led by its minister, Hun Sen, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, left Phnom Penh today to participate in the 6th conference of foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries to be held in Ho Chi Minh City.

He was seen off at his departure by Kong Korm, vice minister of foreign affairs, and other personalities. Also present at the departure of the delegation was Ngo Dien, ambassador of Vietnam to Kampuchea, and Khamphan Vilachit, ambassador of Laos to Kampuchea.

KAMPUCHEA SUPPORTS SOVIET NUCLEAR POLICIES

[Text] Phnom Penh, 2 Jul (SPK) — The newspaper KAMPUCHEA has stressed that the declaration by the USSR that it will not be the first to use nuclear weapons responds to the aspirations of the peoples of the world and to the interests of peace.

In a commentary published on 1 July, KAMPUCHEA recalled the proposals put forward by the USSR at the 36th UN General Assembly which won the support of many countries.

Presently, the newspaper said, there are two noteworthy tendencies: The USSR, the socialist community and the peace-loving and progressive forces in the world struggle to stop the arms race and to defend world peace and detente and the sovereignty and freedom of the peoples, while the enemies of peace and social progress -- with the U.S. imperialists as ringleader — seek by all means to undermine detente and accelerate the arms race. They implement a policy of oppression and intervention in order to crush the national liberation movement.

The imperialists are the only ones to attempt to unleash war. Through it has signed a treaty on nuclear nonproliferation, the United States gutted it of important articles. The Reagan administration is promoting the arms race and the production of nuclear weapons and is deploying medium-range cruise and Pershing II missiles in the territory of its allies. China, itself a nuclear weapons producing country, has in collusion with the United States accused the USSR of seeking nuclear supremacy, with a view to misleading public opinion and masking its plan to produce nuclear weapons. This constitutes a threat to peace and the security of other countries, primarily in Asia.

The newspaper notes the demonstrations staged in West Europe against the policy of military adventure of the Reagan administration and NATO and against the arms race and war. The Kampuchean people fully support the Soviet proposals for peace and detente.

BANGKOK CLOSES BORDER TO 'ALL ARMED FORCES'

BK050050 Bangkok POST in English 5 Jul 82 pp 1, 3

[Excerpt] Thailand will not give arms to the new Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea but will provide other types of aid, informed sources reported yesterday.

This was made known to Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of the new government, during his breakfast meeting with Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon at his new residence, Phitsanulok House, yesterday morning. The kinds of assistance will be decided in consultations with Thailand's ASEAN partners -- Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines.

"No military aid is being given because we are working on a comprehensive peaceful political solution," the sources explained. Besides, Thailand does not possess enough arms and ammunition to give out as aid.

It was also explained to the prince that to prevent the conflict in Kampuchea from spilling into Thailand all armed forces, no matter who they are, will not be allowed to cross the border to Thai territory, or use it as staging areas. The ruling equally applies to forces of the Khmer Rouge, the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPLNF) and the National United Front for an Independent, Neutral, Peaceful and Cooperative Cambodia (FUNCINPEC) as well as to the Vietnamese and Heng Samrin forces. No operational headquarters will be permitted to be set up on Thai soil. These are precautions against providing the Vietnamese with "excuses" for an attack on Thailand, the sources said.

Other than the above principles, Thailand will provide all necessary assistance and take political, diplomatic, economic and other non-military measures that will help the new Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea attain the objectives of the resolutions of the United Nations General Assembly and the International Conference of Kampuchea (ICK).

The government headed by President Sihanouk is expected to obtain military aid from other countries. He is scheduled to visit a number of countries in Asia, Africa, Europe and the Americas and talk to international organisations about the cause of a free and independent Kampuchea.

COMMUNIQUE ISSUED ON PRC CRIMES, U.S. OVERFLIGHTS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 5 -- The Commisssion for Investigation of Chinese Expansionists and Hegemonists War Crimes Against Vietnam today issued the following communique:

In April, May and June 1982, the reactionaries in the Chinese leadership continued their type of sabotage war in many fields against the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

The Chinese authorities have increased their military pressure: On the northern border, China deployed a large armed force and a great quantity of means of war close to the area stretching from Marker Post 13 to Marker Post 24 in Trang Dinh District (Lang Son) and sent 30 150-mm guns to Na Nua near Marker Post 13 in Van Lang District (Lang Son) in an attempt to seize a number of heights on the Vietnamese side along the border of Lang Son Province and actively prepare for another war of aggression.

The Chinese authorities ordered their artillery of various kinds to make 53 shellings on Phong Tho (Lai Chau); the provincial capital of Lao Kai, Bat Xat and Muong Khuong (Hoang Lien Son)' Xin Man, Hoang Xu Phi (Ha Tuyen); Trung Khanh and Ha Quang (Cao Bang), killing or wounding many civilians and killing a number of cattle of the local people. On April 21, 1982 Chinese forces fired more than 40 mortar rounds on Bat Xat District (Hoang Lien Son), killing or wounding seven civilians. On June 8, 1982 over 20 artillery rounds were fired on several hamlets of Tai Ngai Cho village in Muong Khuong District (Hoang Lien Son), killing or wounding five civilians. On June 16, 1982, Chinese troops fired many barrages of artillery on Thuong Phung Village, Meo Vac District (Ha Tuyen), killing a number of cattle of the local population.

The Chinese reactionaries also ordered their troops to make 67 intrusions into Quang Ha in Hai Ninh (Quang Ninh); Dinh Lap (Lang Son); Trung Khanh in Tra Linh (Cao Bang); and Vi Xuyen (Ha Yuyen), for the purpose of killing and looting. Most serious is that on April 24, 1982 some 300 Chinese soldiers and militiamen in uniform used sledgehammers, steel bars and explosives to damage an additional five metres of the Thoang Khoang Dam in Ngoc Khe Village, Trung Khanh District (Cao Bang). Earlier, on January 13, 1982 Chinese troops had used four explosive charges to damage ten metres of the dam. The combined effect of the sabotage caused serious damage to the dam and the flooding of more than 60 hectares of cultivated land. Moreover, on May 19, 1982 Chinese troops from the other side of the border opened fire on villagers who were repairing the dam, seriously wounding two of them.

In addition to armed provocations along the border, Chinese aircraft made thousands of sorties and Chinese armed vessels carried out thousands of operations close to or into Vietnamese airspace and territorial waters. Worthy of note is that on April 19, 1982 a flight of Chinese aircraft intruded from eight to ten kilometres into the airspace of Cao Bang Province; on June 21, 1982 two Chinese gunboats sailed 700 metres deep into Da River in Muong Te District (Lai Chau); on June 13, 1982 thirty Chinese vessels and boats intruded into Bac Luan River mouth (Quang Ninh). In the meantime, the Chinese authorities slanderously charged Vietnam with attacking their vessels and boats in the Tonkin Gulf. The Chinese side continued its proposterous claim over Vietnam's Hoang Sa archipelago they had occupied, and are actively building there a large harbour to serve as a military base, in violation of the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

Besides their hostile military acts against Vietnam, the Chinese authorities brazenly stepped up the espionage and psychological warfare. On the one hand, they sent scouts and commandos into Vietnam to conduct sabotage and establish bases, and on the other, they sent a number of Vietnamese reactionaries, who had fled abroad and had been fed and trained by China, back into the border provinces of Quang Ninh, Lang Son, Cao Bang, Ha Yuyen, Hoang Lien Son ... to build counter-revolutionary bases aimed at fomenting rebellions.

Over the past months, the Chinese side has introduced leaflets of more than 120 kinds into Vietnam in order to join their broadcasting systems and press in slinging mud at the home and foreign policy of the Vietnamese party and state, slanderously charging Vietnam with "lack of goodwill", "straining the Sino-Vietnamese relations", "ingratitude", etc.

China's hostilities against Vietnam have been helped and encouraged by U.S. imperialism and other international reactionary forces. Over the past months, U.S. electronic planes made dozens of reconnaissance flights over the areas off the Vietnamese coast from Nghe Tinh to Phu Khanh provinces.

In particular, on June 25, a flight of U.S. electronic spy aircraft flew 40 minutes over an area about 40 kilometres off the Quy Nhon coast. Troops of the U.S. and a number of Southeast Asian countries conducted joint military operations including landing operations involving different services, thus exacerbating the situation in the region and in the world as a whole. While repeating their false accusations about "Vietnam's invasion of Thailand", "Vietnam's attacks on U.S. vessels" and "Vietnam's use of toxic chemical in Laos and Kampuchea", the U.S., China and their henchmen have left no stone unturned to prevent international organizations and a number of governments from granting humanitarian aid for Vietnam. At the same time, they made intense efforts to team up the genocidal clique and other Kampuchean reactionaries in the so-called "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea" with a view to opposing Vietnam and the [word indistinct] and bringing about a serious confrontation between the Indochinese and A.S.E.A.N. countries.

The above-said criminal acts by the Chinese ruling circles in collusion with U.S. imperialism have once again revealed their deceptive claims about peace and friendship, and constitute blatant violations of Vietnam's national independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity.

The Commission for Investigation of Chinese Expansionists and Hegemonists' War Crimes Against Vietnam denounces before the public at home and abroad these crimes and demands that the Chinese authorities stop immediately all their hostile acts and manoeuvres against the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

PEOPLE DESIRE RESTORATION OF SRV-PRC FRIENDSHIP

OW032132 Hanoi International Service in Mandarin 1230 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Radio talk: "The Vietnamese People Are Willing To Keep Their Friendship With the Chinese People Intact"]

[Text] The Vietnamese people, like the Chinese people, regret the sudden discontinuation of the close comradely and fraternal friendship between Vietnam and China 3 years ago. For a long time, the Beijing authorities have turned the Vietnamese-Chinese border of peace and friendship into a battlefield. The Beijing authorities sent 600,000 troops to invade Vietnam, destroyed towns, villages, farmland, factories, enterprises, hospitals and schools in six northern Vietnamese provinces, and committed bloody crimes against the Vietnamese border residents. The world public sternly denounced the armed aggression launched against Vietnam by the Beijing authorities in February 1979. The Chinese people also whipped up an angry tide to condemn the Beijing leaders' betrayal. The Chinese people regard the war of aggression against Vietnam in February 1979 as a blemish on the history of China.

To deceive the Chinese people, the present Beijing leaders are playing the trick of putting the blame on others and distorting facts. They slander Vietnam for being ungrateful, following the Soviet Union to oppose China and undermining Chinese-Vietnamese friendship. The reactionary Beijing ruling clique and its psychological warfare and propaganda apparatus talk endlessly in sweet words about maintaining Chinese-Vietnamese friendship and advertising that they are exerting their utmost to restore the Vietnamese-Chinese friendship which was cultivated by Chairman Ho Chi Minh.

The Beijing authorities even make great efforts to lavish praise on Hoang Van Hoan, a scum of our nation who has been sentenced to death by the Vietnamese people. They are talking such nonsense as "Hoang Van Hoan has joined the Chinese people in a struggle to restore Vietnamese-Chinese friendship." This is indeed absurd.

There is a long friendship between the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples. The Vietnamese people have a very profound friendly feeling for the Chinese people The friendship is fully shown in Chairman Ho Chi Minh's words "profound kindness, affectionate relationship and long friendship." In the past, the Vietnamese and Chinese people fought side by side and established close militant unity and friendship in the long arduous struggle against imperialism, colonialism and feudalism. The Vietnamese people treasure friendship with the Chinese people very much. They sincerely thank the Chinese people for giving tremendous assistance. At the same time, the Vietnamese people are proud that they have successfully fulfilled their obligations to the fraternal Chinese people as they should fulfill them.

The Chinese leaders once said: Vietnam is the front. The Vietnamese people have made great sacrifices not only for the cause of liberation of their Vietnamese fatherland, but also for the defense of the Chinese people. It is China's bounden duty to aid Vietnam.

The lofty and profound friendship between the Vietnamese and Chinese people is immeasurable. The Beijing authorities attempted to use their aid to force Vietnam to attach itself to China. In violation of the Chinese people's national interests, the present Beijing leaders are following the imperialists and uniting with U.S. imperialism, Japanese militarism and all other reactionary forces to recklessly pursue an anti-Soviet and anti-Vietnamese policy and seriously undermine Vietnamese-Chinese friendship. They meaninglessly sacrificed 60,000 Chinese youth in the war of aggression against Vietnam. Deng Xiaoping flagrantly said: The attack on Vietnam is launched for others to watch. Therefore, we don't mind losses. It was just for this reason that Deng Xioping ruthlessly let those 60,000 troops die. Nevertheless, the Chinese people did not want that war. Only U.S. imperialism wanted it.

The Vietnamese people, like the Chinese people, are longing for peace and friendship and earnestly hope that peace and tranquillity will exist forever and the people of both countries will live in harmony in the Vietnamese-Chinese border area. Just as the political report of the Fifth National Congress of the Vietnamese Communist Party pointed out: The Vietnamese people resolutely struggle to smash the Chinese power-holders' schemes to annex and invade Vietnam. However, the Vietnamese people are willing to keep their friendship with the Chinese people intact and adhere to the policy of friendly and goodneighborly relations with the Chinese people. Vietnam stands for settlement of all disputes through negotiations and restoration of the normal relations between Vietnam and China on the basis of peaceful coexistence and mutual respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity. We believe that the wishes of the Vietnamese and Chinese people for peace will surely come true in Vietnam and China. No enemy can undermine the profound Vietnamese-Chinese friendship which has taken deep roots in the hearts of the Vietnamese and Chinese people.

HANOI SCORES THAI-KHMER COALITION RELATIONS

[Text] Thai Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon told a press conference on 23 June that the setting up of the coalition government of three Khmer resistance groups in exile is beneficial to Thailand's security. In his words, the stronger the tripartite coalition, the better the Thai-Kampuchean border situation. Also, the Thai leader said his country would consider military aid and other forms of aid for the Khmer coalition government.

Our radio has this commentary: The Thai prime minister's statement should not pass without comment, since it leaves one with much doubt about the real situation along the Thai-Kampuchean border. In fact the presence of Khmer bandits on Thai soil in the past few years has been a heavy burden on Thailand's economic, political and security affairs. More than once the remnants of the Pol Pot genocidal clique got involved with fighting for their own interests and even clashed with Thai Government troops. Not a few officials in the Prem government have grumbled about these mixups. Indeed, one can hardly understand why Prem Tinsulanon reasoned that the tripartite Khmer coalition government is beneficial to Thailand's security. But one thing is certain: A number of Thai authorities joining the Chinese expansionists and the U.S. imperialists in this political gamble have been hoisted with their petard. This dangerous precedent will encourage Beijing to gather and force the rebel groups to oppose other Southeast Asian countries from within.

The three Khmer reactionary groups in exile are also Beijing's henchmen, like the Maoist rebel groups in Thailand. One still remembers that while seizing power in Phnom Penh, the Pol Pot genocidal clique not only provoked Vietnam and Laos, but many times crossed the border into Thailand for plunder and sabotage. At that time, Pol Pot's representatives met on Kampuchean territory with leaders of Maoist rebel groups from Thailand to discuss the coordination of subversive activities. Notably, there are now grumblings in some Southeast Asian capitals that the Pol Pot bandits have secretly sold China-supplied weapons to some Maoist rebel groups in Thailand. Whether Prem Tinsulanon had heard of these grumblings or not before pledging to proceed with military aid to the Khmer coalition government, this regretable thing will not affect the Khmer nation's resurrection. It is widely believed that the so-called coalition government of three Khmer reactionary groups in exile is merely cheap makeup for the Pol Pot genocidal clique or something like a [words indistinct] to keep its political corpse from rotting.

Probably it is because of Beijing's cheap sale of some crude oil and cement to Thailand. But the Chinese are pragmatic and not foolish at all. They have just thrown a small fish to draw Thai authorities into opposing the Indochinese countries. In so doing, they hope to weaken both Thailand and Indochina in order to annex one country's after another. To pit one nation against another is a devilish crime of the Chinese authorities which will do more harm than good to Thailand's security and relations with the Indochinese countries.

A Thai proverb says a [word indistinct] can make a river and three households a hamlet. The peoples of Vietnam and Thailand have long established their neighborhood. Now would be the time to promote close cooperative relations. Of course, Thailand and Vietnam still have some differences, but share a common aspiration for a Southeast Asia of peace and stability. So the best way is to sit together to clear up our differences. We have made some progress in this direction. The solution of the problem now depends solely on the other side.

PHAM HUNG MEETS PUBLIC SECURITY FORCES

OW032358 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 3 July 82

[Text] A report from a Ho Chi Minh City-based Voice of Vietnam correspondent says that recently Comrade Pham Hung, member of the Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and concurrently minister of interior, attended and addressed a meeting of the city's grassroots-level public security forces.

After praising these forces' achievements, Comrade Pham Hung stressed the new situation and tasks, exposed the enemy's perfidious schemes, and gave directives on a number of specific tasks that should be carried out urgently and efficiently in order to foil the acts of sabotage by the imperialists-Beijing expansionist clique; preserve political security, public order and social security; make worthy contributions to national defense and nation-building undertakings; and be worthy of the people's trust and love. Then, Comrade Pham Hung cordially got in touch with and attentively listened to the views of a number of representatives.

FRASER QUESTIONS LABOR'S STAND ON U.S. ALLIANCE

[Text] The prime minister, Mr Fraser, says the opposition leader, Mr Hayden, has again raised doubts about the Labor Party's commitment to the Australian-American alliance. Mr Fraser said Mr Hayden had apparently repeated the statement that Australia must be able to veto all American orders initiating military action that might go through the joint communication system at the North West Cape in western Australia. He said North West Cape was a relay station that ensured that information could always be transmitted to submarines even when they were underwater. Mr Fraser said the most urgent messages would concern American response to an aggressor and in such a situation Mr Hayden's proposed veto would be absurd. The prime minister said the North West Cape facilities were part of the American nuclear war deterrent system and Mr Hayden's position would seriously weaken the system to the detriment of the security of Australia and all other western nations. Mr Fraser said Australia would not expect to be able to dictate to the United States what messages it could send through North West Cape.

LABOR PARTY NATIONAL CONFERENCE OPENS IN CANBERRA

[Text] The Labor Party's national conference has opened in Canberra with a warning to the party from its president, Mr Wran, to prepare for an early election. Mr Wran said in his opening address that the conference had to assume there would be an election before the end of the year -- the fourth premature election in 8 years.

The New South Wales premier told delegates that since Prime Minister Fraser took over leadership of the Liberal Party, Australian political and economic affairs had been conducted in an atmosphere of almost perpetual electioneering. He claimed Australians had paid a heavy price for it in terms of political instability, loss of national cohesion and gross economic mismanagement.

FRENCH NUCLEAR TEST RECORDED IN WELLINGTON

[Text] France is reported to have exploded another nuclear device at Muroroa Atoll in the South Pacific, the second in less than a week. The New Zealand Government's director of seismology, Dr Warwick Smith, said in Wellington that the latest test had been monitored in the Cook Islands. He said the blast had been in the range of 20 kilotons — equivalent to 20,000 tons of TNT. Dr Warwick Smith said that in terms of nuclear tests at Muroroa Atoll, in the past 2 years, the latest blast had been quite a big one. The previous explosion was also recorded in the Cook Islands. Following that blast, as a matter of policy, France refused to confirm or deny whether it had carried out a nuclear test.

FOREIGN MINISTRY DENIES JAPAN TO EVADE U.S. EMBARGO

[Text] Tokyo, July 8, KYODO -- Foreign Ministry officials denied Thursday that the government plans to sidestep a U.S. ban on exports to the Soviet Union of equipment made in Japan under U.S. license or by U.S. subsidiaries. "We are studying the situation and have not made any decision to notify the United States regarding our position," a senior official told journalists.

The mass-circulation YOMIURI SHIMBUN reported Thursday that Japan planned to notify the United States that it would not comply with a recent U.S. extension of economic sanctions against the Soviet Union to include goods produced overseas under U.S. license or by U.S.-affiliated firms.

President Ronald Reagan announced the extended sanctions on June 18 to protest the continuation of martial law in Poland. The YOMIURI said officials of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) said Japan had decided to "overlook" any such exports to the Soviet Union, and would notify the United States by letter.

"That report is unfounded," the Foreign Ministry official said. He said a decision whether to approach the United States would depend on the results of the government's current study of the issues affecting Japan.

European countries have strongly criticized Reagan's move, aimed to withhold vital U.S. technology and delay completion of a natural gas pipeline between the Soviet Union and Western Europe. However, Foreign Ministry officials said the European pipeline was a very different problem from the Soviet-Japanese offshore oil and natural gas development near Sakhalin, which until last year had been excluded from U.S. sanctions. They discounted the possibility of Japan and the European countries coordinating their positions or adopting a joint approach vis-a-vis the U.S. embargo.

TRADE MINISTER CRITICIZES U.S. ECONOMIC POLICY

[Text] Hakone, Kanagawa Pref., July 8, KYODO -- Japan's trade minister Thursday criticized the Reagan administration for its economic sanctions against the Soviet Union and high interest rate policy.

Shitaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry, said that the United States' unilateral decision to expand sanctions against Moscow without full prior consultations with its allies in Western Europe and Japan have created problems within the Western alliance. "America's high interest rates have had serious effect" on the economies of West European countries and Japan, he said. "The United States needs to listen to the voices of its Western allies."

Abe took the swipe at the American policy in a speech before a two-day Japan-U.S. businessmen's meeting which opened here with some 100 industrialists and bankers of both countries participating. President Reagan's announcement of the sanctions last month has delayed the completion of a natural gas pipeline connecting Siberia with Western Europe and a Russo-Japanese oil project off Sakhalin.

Forign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said in a prepared speech that Japan will purchase some yen 3 billion worth of American wheat this year, or three times the 1981 level, as part of food aid to poor countries. The arrangement, he explained, will represent an expansion of food assistance to developing countries by Japan and the United States and help America dispose of its surplus grain.

Former U.S. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal stated that the present U.S.-Japan relationship is at its lowest point with Japan being in an "imports or death" situation following an "exports or death" situation in the 1960s. Blumenthal, who served under the Carter administration, said the Japanese yen was overly undervalued and called on Japanese monetary authorities to take steps to prop up the currency to a range of yen 180 to 200 to the U.S. dollar. The yen was traded at 258.75 to the dollar in early trading on the Tokyo foreign exchange market.

ROK FOREIGN MINISTER LEAVES FOR HOME

SUZUKI COMMENTS ON INCREASED DEFENSE SPENDING

[Excerpts] Tokyo, July 7, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki indicated Wednesday that Japan's defense expenditure may exceed 1 percent of the country's gross national product in fiscal 1985.

The prime minister told newsmen his government is likely to hold defense spending to within 1 percent of the GNP in the budget for fiscal 1983 starting next April 1. The government has been keeping defense outlays to less than 1 percent of the GNP in coping with the so-called defense buildup outline drawn up by the government in 1976.

The U.S. has been pressing Japan to raise its defense expenditure to counter the Soviet Union's military buildup.

In his remarks regarded as hinting at a possible rise in Japan's defense outlays beyond 1 percent of the GNP in 1985, Prime Minister Suzuki said he believed there is no need to increase the amount beyond that level for the time being, but added that no one knows what the economy would be like in fiscal 1985-1987.

Suzuki's government budgeted yen 2.5 trillion (dollar 10 billion) for defense in the current fiscal year. This is 0.93 percent of the country's GNP and represented an increase of 7.75 percent from last year's spending.

Suzuki's remarks confirmed his reply to an opposition interpellator in the Diet Tuesday saying for the first time that defense spending may exceed the 1 percent limit in and after fiscal 1985.

BANK OF JAPAN GOVERNOR ON YEN DEPRECIATION

[Text] Tokyo, July 7, KYODO -- In a major policy switch, the governor of the Bank of Japan suggested Wednesday the central bank is prepared to apply a special interest rate to help shore up the yen's sagging value against foreign currencies. Haruo Maekawa told a news conference the bank would "take all necessary measures" to stem the yen's depreciation.

Maekawa told a Lower House Finance Committee session earlier in the day he would carefully discuss which action would have better effect -- continuing the present policy of guiding short-term interest rates higher or involking the Lombard-like special interest system.

The remarks represented the central bank's firm determination to support the yen using every means available, including application of the Lombard-like facility, central bank officials said later.

Maekawa also said at the news conference the West German mark's depreciation is one of reasons for the yen's continuing decline. "But that is not the sole cause of the yen's depreciation," he said. Maekawa defended his bank's interest rate policy, which he said is understood by monetary authorities abroad.

The dollar rose further on the Tokyo foreign exchange market Wednesday, hitting the yen 259 mark momentarily for the first time in 27 months. The greenback closed out the day at yen 258.85.

FUJITSU, HITACHI, NEC DEVELOPING SUPERCOMPUTERS

[Text] Tokyo, July 5, KYODO -- Fujitsu, Ltd. Monday unveiled a computer for scientific use claimed to have the world's fastest processing speed. A Fujitsu spokesman said the supercomputer, Facom VP-200, has a data processing speed of 500 million flops (floating operations per second). This compared with the U.S. Cray Research, Inc.'s Cray X-MP and the American Control Data Corp. (CDC)'s Cyber 205, both with a speed of 400 million flops, so far known to be the fastest in the world, the spokesman said.

Hitachi, Ltd., another major computer maker, is believed to announce shortly the development of a supercomputer of about the same capacity as Fujitsu's VP-200 model.

Nippon Electric Co. (NEC) told KYODO news service that the company is also developing a supercomputer for scientific use with a data processing speed of 800 million flops. The model will be announced next year with marketing beginning from 1984, a NEC spokesman said, commenting on Fujitsu's announcement. Fujitsu, Hitachi and Nippon Electric have been keen to make an inroad into the scientific-use supercomputer market, so far nearly monopolized by Cray Research.

The Fujitsu spokesman said the new computer is for use in nuclear calculation, the analysis of meteorological data and data transmitted by resources exploration satellites and in the structural analysis of super-high-rise buildings and long and large bridges.

The supercomputer has also these features, according to the spokesman: It adopts the 64-kilobit static ram (random access memory), equivalent to the 256-kilobit dynamic ram, for the main storage for the first time in the world; it is as easy to handle as a general-use computer; it may be used in combination with not only Fujitsu's general-use computer but also with an IBM computer.

The spokesman said Fujitsu has already begun accepting orders, adding that shipment of the new model will begin in the October-December quarter of 1983. The rental charge for the VP-200 supercomputer will be yen 69 million (dollar 271,000). The spokesman said Fujitsu plans to lease 30 units of the new model in Japan and 50 to 60 units overseas, chiefly in the United States, over the next five years.

The VP-200 model is one of the two new supercomputer models announced Monday by Fujitsu. The other, VP-100, has a data processing speed of 250 million flops. Shipment of the VP-100 model will also begin in the October-December period of 1983, and the rental price will be yen 50 million (dollar 196,00) per month.

Takuma Yamamoto, president of Fujitsu, declared in announcing the supercomputer model that his company would maintain its existing computer strategy -- manufacturing computers compatible with IBM models. Referring to the recent computer espionage incident involving Hitachi and Mitsubishi Electric, Yamamoto said he ordered the staffers in charge of technology and development to be mroe careful in collecting information.

DPRK SCORES SOUTH'S DMZ 'PROVOCATIONS'

According to the statement of the secretary of our side Colonel Kim Yon-ki, the South Korean puppet army on June 30 fired many rounds of machinegun and "M-16" automatic rifle bullets at out post near the Military Demarcation Line on the western sector of the front. The puppet army brought recoilless guns and mortars into several spots of the Demilitarized Zone on July 4 and 5 and brought there over 150 military personnel on July 3 to build a fortification.

The South Korean puppet army on June 27 hurled more than 30 fully armed combat personnel into a spot of the Demilitarized Zone to stage a military exercise and the U.S. imperialist aggressor army on June 25 brought 20-odd personnel armed with machineguns and automatic weapons to the Oryonggye Post in the MAC headquarters area for a military exercise. The violations of the armistice agreement committed by the enemy in the Demilitarized Zone and the MAC headquarters area numbered more than 880 cases in the period from June 23 to July 5 alone.

Saying that due to the criminal acts of the enemy a tense situation has been created in the Demilitarized Zone which may lead to an armed conflict between the two sides any moment, the secretary of our side lodged a strong protest with the enemy against its criminal acts. He strongly demanded the enemy side to take responsible steps lest such violations should be committed again.

Colonel Kim Yon-ki denounced the enemy's crafty attempt to justify its unwarrantable acts at the last MAC meeting by bringing forward secondary and business-like matters concerning the procedures of the meeting.

BURUNDI LEADER MEETS KYE UNG-TAE, DELEGATION

[Text] Pyongyang, July 8 (KCNA) -- Jean-Baptiste Bagaza, president of Burundi, on July 5 met the delegation of the Workers Party of Korea headed by Comrade Kye Ung-tae, alternate member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and vice-premier of the Administration Council, attending celebrations of the 20th anniversary of the independence of Burundi, according to a report.

The head of the delegation conveyed cordial regards of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to the president. The president expressed deep thanks to the great leader for offering cordial regards and sending a high-level delegation to attend celebrations of the 20th anniversary of the independence of Burundi and asked the head of the delegation to convey his wholehearted greetings to the great leader. He said that the attendance of the delegation of the Workers Party of Korea to independence day celebrations of Burundi was an expression of the excellent friendly relations existing between the Burundi and Korean peoples.

Though our two countries are far away from each other geographically, they are closely linked in ideology and purpose for the commonness of their past positions, he said. Noting that Burundi was following developments in Korea, the president unconditionally supported the struggle of the Korean people to reunify the country independently in accordance with the proposal but forward by the great leader President Kim Il-song at the Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea and the proposal for national reunification advanced by him. We reject the South Korean puppets, he said, and stated: This is our basic principle and accords with the interests of our people.

The conversation proceeded in a friendly atmosphere. Present there were DPRK Ambassador to Burundi Sin Pyong-chol and Kanonko Philippe, member of the Central Committee of the Burundi Party of National Unity and Progress and national secretary in charge of production and economic development of the National Permanent Secretariat of the party.

'TEXT' OF KIM IL-SONG REUNIFICATION CONVERSATIONS

[Text] Pyongyang, July 4 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN July 4 carries the full text of the conversation of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song with the South Korean delegates to the high-level political talks between North and South Korea, on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the publication of the historic North-South joint statement. Carrying the conversation, the paper says in its preface:

On May 3 and November 3, 1972, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song received the delegates of the South Korean side who came to North Korea to attend the North-South high-level political talks and conversed with them.

In his talk with South Korean delegate Yi Hu-rak on May 3, 1972, the great leader clarified the historic three principles of national reunification. In his talks with South Korean delegates Choe Kyu-ha, Yi Hu-rak and Chang Ki-yong on November 3, 1972, he mentioned the question of North-South cooperation.

The three principles of national reunification set out by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his talk with the South Korean delegates became the basis of the North-South joint statement, and they serve as the only correct reunification programme which enjoys the unqualified support and approval of the entire Korean people.

The three principles, the question of North-South cooperation and other reunification proposals advanced by him demonstrate their correctness and vitality more dearly as the days go by, and powerfully inspire the entire Korean people in their struggle for the countrys independent and peaceful reunification. Follows the full text of the conversation of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song with the South Korean delegates "on the three principles of national reunification":

Kim Il-song: On the three principles of national reunification conversation with the South Korean delegates to the high-level political talks between North and South Korea, May 3 and November 3, 1972.

1. On the three principles of national reunification

I am glad to meet you today. I am much delighted and also greatly moved that we, fellow countrymen, have met after a long separation owing to the division of the nation. You say you have come to discuss the question of national reunification in spite of all obstacles. Your act is very courageous and daring. It is very gratifying that the South Korean authorities have made a decision to participate in the North-South political talks and sent you as the delegate. We warmly hail the step.

In my speech of August 6 last year, I made it clear that we are ready to come into contact with all political parties including the Democratic Republican Party, social organizations and individuals of South Korea at any time. A few days after my speech, the South Korean side responded, with a proposal for North-South Red-Cross talks. Thus began the preliminary talks between the Red-Cross organizations of the North and the South, which led to the high-level North-South political conversation.

Between the North and the South which stood alienated from each other for a long time, the doors for contacts and dialogues have been opened and it has become possible for high-level representatives to meet and exchange their views with an open mind. This is a big step forward in the solution of the reunification question. At present the whole nation is longing for the reunification of the country. Today nothing is more urgent for the Korean people than national reunification. If we should fail to reunify the country as soon as possible and should allow national division to drag on, our nation may become a plaything of great powers and be divided into two for ever.

The most important indication which characterizes a nation is the commonness of language and cultural life. Even people of the same descent cannot be regarded as belonging to the same nation if they use different spoken and written languages and their cultures and customs differ. Now, as our country remains divided for long, the language, as well as the culture and way of life, is changing already in the North and the South. The longer the division of the nation, the greater the difference in the language and way of life will be.

After liberation some people in the northern half of the country insisted that the Korean alphabet should be reformed. But I opposed it. If we carry out an alphabet reform when the country is not reunified, the Korean people will be divided in two for ever. So I told the linguists at the time that an alphabet reform should be introduced, if ever, after the country has been reunified, but never before reunification. If any one side should carry out an alphabet reform while the country is divided, the North and the South will come to use different letters. Then, in the end our nation may be divided into two nations once and for all.

We cannot tolerate the Korean nation to be split into two for ever. We should reunify the country as soon as possible and hand over a unified country to the posterity. If we end national division and achieve reunification, our country can become a powerful state with a population of 50 million, a brilliant national culture, and a powerful national economy, which no one will dare provoke.

In order to reunify the country, it is necessary to correctly establish the fundamental principles which can provide the solution of the reunification question. This is most important. Only when there are fundamental principles agreed upon by the North and the South, can the two sides make joint efforts for reunification and successfully solve all problems concerning it. I believe that our reunification question should on all accounts be settled independently without foreign interference and peacefully on the principle of promoting great national unity.

First, national reunification should be achieved independently without reliance on outside forces and free from their interference.

Solving the reunification question independently on the principle of self-determination of peoples is the principled stand invariably maintained by the government of our republic.

If we depend on outside forces we cannot solve this problem. The question of Korean reunification is entirely an internal affair of our country. If we try to solve our internal affair by relying on outside forces without settling it on our own, it is a shame of our nation.

Some people are now trying to solve the reunification problem with guarantees afforded by foreign big powers. It is a great mistake. The imperialist powers do not want to see our country reunified. By nature, they like division and attempt to divide other countries and peoples by all means, because it is difficult to rule when the latter are united. Therefore, we should on no account rely on the great powers in settling the reunification question.

If contacts are established and talks are held within our nation, we can remove distrust and misunderstanding and achieve national unity and reunification. Why then should we ask for the help of great powers?

Under no circumstances should we tolerate foreign interference in the internal affairs of Korea. No foreign force has the right to meddle in the Korean affairs, and while there is foreign interference the question of national reunification cannot be solved in keeping with the desire and interests of our nation. The reunification of the country should be achieved by the Korean people themselves free from any foreign interference.

You say that the South Korean authorities, too, are opposed to foreign interference and intend to settle the question of national reunification independently of U.S. and Japanese involvement, and pledge that you will never become a stooge of the United States or Japan. If this is true, it is excellent.

If we are to reject foreign intervention and reunify the country independently, we must categorically oppose flunkeyism towards great powers.

I always say to our officials: If a man takes to flunkeyism, he will become a fool; if a nation falls into flunkeyism, the country will go to ruin; and if a party adopts flunkeyism, it will make a mess of the revolution and constructive work. If a man wants to be an independent being, he must never take to flunkeyism which means worshipping others blindly.

As our country is geographically located among big countries, flunkeyism has found room a great deal among our people historically. It hampered the advance of our people in building a new society after liberation. So we have tirelessly combated flunkeyism.

Let me take an example from the days after liberation. Immediately after liberation there were quite a few people who had been affected with flunkeyism even among those who styled themselves as communists. In Seoul at that time, a fellow, Pak Hon-yong by name, raved that he would make our country a member republic of another country. This had a very bad influence on the South Korean people and greatly hindered the settlement of the reunification question. Hearing his words, some people feared if our country was going to be subjugated again to a foreign country. In my speech before the people, therefore, I said that we would build a democratic society of Korean type, not a Soviet or American type, in the interests of the Korean nation.

When we advanced the policy of agricultural cooperativization in the postwar years, a number of people tried to find fault with it. Some argued how could we cooperativize agriculture when our industry had been devastated, alleging that European countries with developed industries had not yet undertaken full-scale agricultural cooperativization. Since flunkeyists used to accept willingly what people of big countries said, I refuted their argument with the words of Lenin. Lenin had said that a communal economy set up by a simple merger of peasants lands and farm implements would be much more superior to a private economy. So I said that our partys policy of agricultural cooperativization was in accord with Leninism and was to meet the requirement of our reality. I asked them how it could be that agricultural cooperativation after industrialization was the only correct way. In the end, they admitted that our policy was correct.

At that time, the circumstances of our peasants, in fact, were such that they would be unable to live on unless they united their efforts through cooperativization. The war had devastated agriculture, and the peasants were short of draught cattle and farm implements. The same was true of rich farmers. In this context, we saw to it that peasants organized cooperatives on the principle of voluntary membership and ran them by united efforts.

Originally, we Koreans are fond of pooling efforts and helping one another. Traditionally, our people have a good custom. For instance, if a neighbour has a wedding ceremony, the whole village offers the family contributions and various other aid, calling on them to congratulate them and have a pleasant time with them. In the postwar years, there were not many modern farm machines in our country. But we were able to cooperativize agriculture rather smoothly in a short time because life itself required it urgently and the peasants actively supported the cooperative policy.

In establishing economic relations with other countries, we have thoroughly rejected the flunkeyist tendency and held fast to an independent stand.

We have not tolerated any relations that may result in our economic dependence on other countries. We have established and developed economic relations with them on the principle of defending the national economy thoroughly, on the principle of complete equality. In our trade with developed socialist countries, we have made sure that we give them raw materials they need only when they give us those we need, and that we buy their machines only on condition that they buy ours. If this principle was not maintained in our economic relations with developed countries when our technology is not yet very highly developed, we would have to keep supplying raw materials to them and buying manufactured goods. This would end in leaving only empty mountains riddled with holes in our country. We cannot hand down such mountains to our posterity, can we?

We strove hard not to be economically subordinated to another country, that is to be self-supporting in the economy. If a people do not achieve economic independence through the building of an independent national economy, they cannot hope to exalt the external authority of their country and to have a say on the international arena. Since we have pursued an independent policy in the sphere of economic construction and built an independent national economy, nobody dares apply pressure on us.

In the past the worship of great powers was glaring in the field of literature and art, and we waged a resolute struggle against it.

Some of the writers and artists worshipped the European literature and art and produced works which were neither to the liking of the Koreans nor understandable to them. Once there were poets who worshipped Pushkin and musicians who adored Tchaikovskiy. Even in creating an opera, these people patterned it on Italian ones. Flunkeyism was so rampant that some artists drew foreign landscapes instead of our beautiful mountains and rivers. During the fatherland liberation war I dropped in at a hospital where I found a picture of a Siberian landscape. It showed a bear crawling about the snow-covered ground under a large tree. So, I severely criticized people concerned. I told them: "There are many renowned mountains such as Mts. Kumgang and Myohyang. Why did you hang that kind of picture instead of a beautiful Korean landscape? What is the good of hanging such a picture in educating our people?"

The Korean people have a brilliant culture and have long lived in the beautiful land of three thousand ri. They will live in our beautiful homeland in the future, too. They cannot live in Siberia or in Europe. Therefore, our literature and art should, on all accounts, serve the education of our people in patriotic spirit. Internationalism cannot exist apart from patriotism. He who does not love his own country cannot be true to internationalism. Koreans do not like European artistic works. They do not want to enjoy artistic works which are not to their liking. We do not need the works which Koreans do not like and which are not congenial with their national feeling. That is why I gave a definition that the literature and art of socialist realism are national in form and socialist in content.

We conducted the struggle against flunkeyism by means of ideological struggle. Theoretical struggle to root out ideas of flunkeyism remaining in the minds of people. Through many years of struggle against flunkeyism, we could eradicate it completely and hold fast to chajusong (independence) in all spheres of the revolution and construction.

In the efforts to solve the question of national reunification, we must strongly oppose the tendency of flunkeyism to rely on foreigners disbelieving the strength of our own nation. We must reunify the country independently by the united efforts of the Korean nation.

Secondly, great national unity should be promoted by transcending the difference in ideas and systems. The question of our countrys reunification is not one of who prevails over whom. It is one of attaining the unity of a nation which has been divided by an outside force and realizing national sovereignty. In order to reunify the country, therefore, it is essential to proceed from endeavours to achieve unity between the North and the South and promote great national unity.

In order to promote great national unity, the North and the South should transcend their ideas and systems and refrain from pursuing hostile policies towards each other.

At present there exist different ideas and systems in the two parts of our country. In this situation, the North and the South should not try to impose their ideas and systems upon each other. We do not intend to impose the socialist system and communist ideology on South Korea. Neither should the South Korean authorities insist on "unification through annihilation of communism" or demand that we desist from communism. In other words, they should discard their "anti-communist" slogans.

The north and the south should discard hostile policies which obstruct unity and join efforts to find common denominators. If each side does not endeavour to find common denominators but opposes the other and argues over things of the past in an attempt to justify itself, the gap between the two sides will grow wider and wider and the reunification of the country will be delayed still more. This would be a grave crime against the country and the nation.

In our opinion, it is quite possible to find common denominators if the North and the South make joint efforts, basing themselves on a sincere desire for unity. We have worked hard to search for such common denominators in order to hasten the countrys reunification.

Of late, the South Korean authorities talk about "self-help", "self-reliance" and "self-defence". We considered that it is possible to find some common denominators here. We think that their "self-help", "self-reliance" and "self-defence" may have some common points with the independent policies of our party and the government of the republic. The country's reunification will be hastened if the North and the South find out one by one common denominators existing between them and, on this basis, achieve their unity.

What is important in achieving the great unity of the nation is to remove misunderstanding and mistrust between North and South.

Our country has been divided so long that there are a number of points on which the North and the South differ from each other and misunderstand and mistrust each other. As long as the two sides misunderstand and distrust each other, there cannot be achieved a genuine unity of the nation. A family cannot be formed without deep trust between husband and wife.

Even in the case of husband and wife, if they do not trust each other, they cannot live together and, in the long run, they will have to divorce. The North and the South should strive to eliminate mutual misunderstanding and mistrust.

If the North and the South are to eliminate misunderstanding and mistrust, the authorities and many personages of the two parts of the country should frequently get in touch with each other and have dialogues in good faith. If they get together and discuss any matters frankly and seriously, misunderstanding will be removed and mutual trust deepened.

Through our dialogue with you this time, the misunderstanding between the North and the South has already been alleviated to a considerable extent. The dialogue between the North and the South should have been held a little earlier.

We have thought that the South Korean authorities are going to be lackeys of U.S. imperialism and Japanese militarism and sell out the country. But you say that such will never be the case. You also say that the South Korean authorities will neither bring Japanese militarists into South Korea again nor sell out the country as the lackeys of the United States and Japan, and request us over and over again to believe it. So we can believe you and get rid of our past distrust.

The South Korean authorities say they have had a misunderstanding that we are going to "invade the South" and "communize" South Korea. But we have no intention to do these. We have declared on many occasions that we have no intention to "invade the South". We reaffirm this to you today. As for "communization", neither do we intend to "communize" South Korea nor would it be "communized" even if we tried to. Therefore, I think that you can now dispel the misunderstanding you have had because of the alleged "invasion of the South" and "communization". If we remove our misunderstanding and deepen trust through contacts and dialogue in this way, we will be able to achieve great national unity regardless of the differences in ideas and ideals, systems and religious beliefs.

Another important factor in achieving great national unity is that the North and the South should refrain from abusing and slandering each other.

For unity and cooperation, both sides should respect each other rather than abuse and slander. Should they continue abusing and slandering each other as they do now, the North and the South would not get on intimate terms, but rather the gap would widen. That is why they should first stop abusing and slandering each other.

Realizing economic cooperation between the North and the South is also very important in attaining great national unity.

The Northern half of the republic abounds in natural resources and has a developed heavy industry. South Korea has some foundations of light industry from the past. If the North and the South effect economic cooperation and meet each others needs, they will be better able to solve immediate economic problems, and rapidly develop the national economy with their own efforts without introducing foreign capital. If the national economy is developed through North-South cooperation, our nation will be better off than Japan or any other countries that are said to be developed.

The North and the South should advance jointly in the external relations, too. Only then will we be able to demonstrate the unity of our nation.

We consider that the North and the South will be able to promote great national unity in spite of the differences in their ideas and systems, political views and religious beliefs, if they all take a patriotic attitude and stand for national reunification. At present, even those countries and nations which have different ideas and systems, are in friendly relations and get along well. And there is no reason why the differences in ideas and systems should prevent our nation, which is of the same blood, from uniting and cooperating.

Whether one believes in communism, nationalism or capitalism cannot be an obstacle to great national unity. We are not opposed to the nationalists and capitalists in South Korea. The majority of the South Korean capitalists are national capitalists. We have been pursuing a policy of protecting national capitalists. For the sake of national reunification, we will unite and cooperate with the people of all strata in South Korea including nationalists and national capitalists.

Thirdly, national reunification should be achieved by peaceful means without resorting to arms.

The North and the South, one and the same nation, must not fight each other. We must reunify the divided country peacefully by all means. If peaceful reunification fails and another war breaks out in Korea, our nation will undergo disasters.

At present great powers of the world want to get on well with one another, refraining from quarrelling. Some time ago U.S. President Nixon visited China and said that it would be desirable to abstain from quarrelling with each other and maintain peace for one generation's time. After inspecting the Great Wall of China, he even said that no barrier should divide the people of the world. In the joint statement of China and the United States published as a result of Nixon's visit to China, the United States approved the five principles of peace which it had so far refused to recognize. It is good that the United States approved these principles. Needless to say, we shall have to wait and see how the Americans would put their words into action. More often than not the imperialists go back on their words. So there is no knowing clearly if Nixon spoke sincerely or not in China.

Commenting on Nixon's trip to China, our NODONG SINMUN wrote: If Nixon's words uttered after inspecting the Great Wall are serious, why does he not make efforts to remove the military demarcation line which runs across the central part of our country and to withdraw the U.S. soldiers who are swaggering about, wearing steel-helmets with the inscription of "MP"? I think this commentary is correct.

Nowadays, big powers of the world are trying to abstain from quarrelling and get on harmoniously with one another. Then why should one and the same nation fall out with itself? At the same nation, we must not quarrel among ourselves; we must reunify the country by peaceful means.

If the country is to be reunified peacefully without quarrelling between the North and the South, it is imperative, first of all, to reduce the armies of both sides. On several occasions, I said in my open speeches that the armies of the North and the South should be reduced sharply.

Reduction of the armies is the way to ease the tension between the two sides and to lessen the military burdens. The present military burdens of the two sides are very heavy.

We should make joint efforts to remove the military demarcation line which divides our country into North and South.

Danger of war cannot be removed in the present situation when large numbers of armed forces of both sides stand in confrontation across the military demarcation line. In such a situation, if the commander of a regiment or a division stationed in the area along this demarcation line lets firing start by mistake at a place, both sides will come to exchange fire, and this may lead to a conflict. This is very dangerous.

If in the future the North and the South give guarantees against the use of armed forces between them through sincere consultation, and put this into practice, their military equipment and personnel deployed in the areas on the military demarcation line will become unnecessary and the line itself can be eliminated.

At present, the North and the South say their armies are for self-defence. However, they should not undertake "self-defence" against each other. They must join efforts to defend themselves against foreign invasion.

The self-defence of our republic is always meant to oppose foreign aggression against our nation. We will never tolerate the aggression of outside forces against our country and people.

When the U.S. imperialists sent their armed spy ship "Pueblo" into the territorial waters of our republic, the naval forces of our peoples army captured it. This was a legitimate self-defense measure of our People's Army whose mission is to defend their country. But instead of apologizing to us, the Americans threatened us by bringing large forces including the aircraft carrier "Enterprise" to the East Sea. It was a flagrant infringement on and a grave challenge to our nation's sovereignty. We did not yield to the Americans threat and pressure. They attempted to start war by mobilizing large forces, so we made a firm determination to fight against them. Seeing that we did not succumb to their threat and pressure, they gave up starting a war and fled away. Had they unleashed war at that time our nation would have gone through another war and the authorities of the North and the South could not meet and have a peaceful talk like this today.

If any foreigners invade our land in the future, the North and South must unite and repulse the invaders. When all the Korean people unite their strength, they will certainly smash any aggressor.

We must eliminate military confrontation and ease tension between the North and the South by joint efforts, so that we can prevent another war in Korea and achieve the peaceful reunification of the country.

Through the recent talks we have found important common denominators of the North and the South and reached an agreement regarding the most cardinal problems.

The three principles which must be adhered to in realizing independent reunification without outside interference, in achieving great national unity by transcending the difference in ideology, ideal and system, and in reunifying the divided land by peaceful means without recourse to armed forces, are the starting point of and the basis for the solution of our reunification question.

You have agreed to solve the reunification question on the three principles, and you say the highest authorities of South Korea would also agree. So we can say we have reached a complete agreement on the three principles of national reunification.

I am very pleased that the three principles of national reunification have been agreed upon between the North and the South in our talks today.

The three principles of national reunification upon which the North and the South agreed through joint consultation are absolutely just principles which will enable our nation to solve the reunification question in conformity with its aspirations and demand. We must reunify our country on the basis of these three principles. You said that you would take them as the basis for your future actions. If you do so, other problems concerning the solution of the reunification question can also be settled successfully and our nations reunification will be achieved at an early date.

Now that the basic principles of reunification have been agreed upon, we must find the concrete ways of putting them into effect to unite the whole nation and reunify our country. We must proceed from the three principles in seeking concrete ways for national reunification. When the North and the South study profoundly and sincerely consult each other on the basis of the three principles of independence, great national unity and peaceful reunification, they will be able to find the successful way towards reunification.

To find the reasonable way to the independent and peaceful reunification of the country, we have to develop further political consultations between the North and the South and carry on contacts and dialogues more briskly.

I think that political consultations have already begun through the meetings and talks held this time between the high-ranking representatives of the North and the South. North-South political consultations having been started, we must further them to bear a good fruit.

You have come first to Pyongyang, so I would like to send our representatives to Seoul in reply. I think that if mutual trust increases and various conditions become ripe in the process of frequent visits of representatives from the North and the South, summit talks will also become possible.

In the future representatives of the North and the South must exchange frequent visits and have talks on many occasions.

The misunderstanding and distrust created between the North and the South during the nearly 30 year-long division after liberation can never be eliminated through one or two contacts and dialogues. With one or two consultations we will never be able to find enough concrete ways for the solution of the reunification question. Through our talks this time we have solved fundamental problems upon which the North and the South misunderstood each other and have found important common denominators, but many problems are yet to be solved to reunify the country. These problems can be solved only through frequent contacts and sincere consultations between representatives of both sides.

In the North-South negotiations and consultations, the points of mutual misunderstanding and all other problems concerning national reunification must be discussed. Any dissenting opinions must be aired frankly for discussion. If they are kept to oneself, the differences cannot be solved. A midunderstanding, however insignificant, must be discussed openly and settled in good time.

The North-South negotiations must proceed from the principle of deepening mutual understanding, finding common points and increasing their unity. Our representatives and yours may advance different views in seeking the way to national reunification. So they may argue for the justness of their own views respectively. But the arguments should always be intended for finding commonness and achieving unity; they should not head for split.

I think it reasonable to organize and run a North-South Joint Commission or the like in order to coordinate the North-South relations correctly and successfully solve various problems regarding the reunification of the country.

Coordinating work should be conducted in practice by organising a joint commission. If only general talks are held, big progress cannot be made in bringing about national unity and reunification.

The joint commission will be so-chaired by persons in high authority appointed respectively by the authorities of the North and South and be composed of necessary members. It takes only a little time to fly between Pyongyang and Seoul. So, the commission can be steered, you coming over to Pyongyang and our people going to Seoul.

Once the joint commission is formed, there will be many problems to be settled by it. It should opportunely discuss and settle various problems arising from the relations between North and South, including the problem of one side refraining from slandering the other side and the problem of preventing military conflicts. At the joint commission one side should not force its will upon the other; problems raised should be seriously discussed until mutual understanding is reached to conform with the purpose of unity.

A direct telephone line may be installed between Pyongyang and Seoul, by which to discuss problems at any time. If there arises even a minor problem which may hamper national reunification or cause misunderstanding between both sides, it is necessary to inquire about it at once by telephone, talk it over and settle it promptly.

The three principles of national reunification agreed upon this time between North and South serve as a reunification programme to be put into effect jointly by the entire Korean nation. I think it a good idea to make public these three principles so that the entire Korean people and the worlds people will know them.

The publication of the three principles of national reunification is good both for the education of our people and for demonstrating the unity of the Korean nation to the world. If we publish the reunification programme agreed upon between North and South, all compatriots at home and abroad will have a consensus of opinion, being aware that we are going to reunify the divided country independently and peacefully on the principle of a great national unity, and all segments of people will have a great encouragement from it. When we publish the joint reunification programme of the nation, the world's people will know that the Korean people are a great united people and the foreign forces opposed to our country's reunification will clearly understand that they will never be able to divide the Korean nation permanently, however hard they may try.

As for when and how we should publish the three principles of national reunification, it had better be discussed in the course of the forthcoming dialogue. I think it will do to publish it after you go back to Seoul and the South Korean authorities have discussions and delegates of the North and South meet again and reach an agreement.

Since you took the trouble to come to Pyongyang, you had better stay another day and have talks with our officials.

Your visiting us is a patriotic deed. Man should be a patriot, not a quisling. Man should do things beneficial to his country and people even if he lives for a day. Only such a life is glorious and worthwhile.

We can say that the current North-South talks were a success. I hope you to come to Pyongyang frequently from now on.

2. On realizing North-South collaboration.

It gives me pleasure to meet you South Korean delegates again. Last time the delegate came alone from the South Korean side. But this time you have come together. If the North and South have frequent contacts like this, it will be greatly helpful towards the settlement of the question of national reunification, I think.

There was some progress in the work for national reunification after the publication of the North-South joint statement. In the past our people, torn apart in the North and the South, were even unable to meet each other. But, today delegates visit each other to meet. This is already a progress. If delegates of the North and South visit and meet each other frequently, get acquainted and exchange views with each other, they can settle many problems for national reunification.

We must reunify the country as soon as possible at all costs. If we fail to reunify the country and keep it divided, our nation will remain partitioned in two for ever.

Our nation must never be divided in two. Koreans have lived as a single nation on one and the same territory from remote times. Our people are of one and the same blood and have one culture and history. The Korean people have a strong national spirit and a high national pride. Having occupied our country for 36 years, the Japanese imperialists even forced the Koreans to change their surnames in Japanese style, fussing about "Japan and Korea are one." But they could not succeed in making Japanese of Koreans. How can such a nation be divided into two today? We must never allow our nation to split but reunify the country without fail within our generation.

Brothers both in the North and the South must be having the same desire for national reunification. I think you are on this visit to us because you, too, wish national reunification.

But since even the publication of the North-South joint statement, "confrontation accompanied with dialogue," "competition accompanied with dialogue" are voiced from among the press circles in South Korea. Confrontation or competition literally means contending with each other for victory. In that case, there will be winner and loser. Contending with other country or other nation might be a different matter. But one and the same nation should not engage in confrontation and competition. If they do this, they will not be able to unite and reunify the country.

The North and the South should cooperate, instead of engaging in confrontation and competition. Cooperation implies united efforts and joint work. Since the North-South dialogue has begun, I think, it is time for cooperation now. The North and the South must not confine themselves to the dialogue, but must go one step forward to cooperation.

When the North and the South cooperate with each other, strengthen of the nation will further grow in this course, and solid foundations for national reunification be laid. Only when they work together, can they overcome all their difficulties successfully and achieve earlier the cause of reunification, the greatest national desire.

The North and the South should cooperate, to begin with, in the economic field.

If they begin with economic cooperation and work together step by step, they will be able to remove misunderstanding and understand each other better. If they merely say they trust each other, it will be impossible to know who has what in his mind. When working together, they will resolve misunderstood problems, trust each other better and achieve national unity.

Our country has a large population and rich natural resources. The North-South cooperation will enable us to develop our national economy rapidly and make our country rich and strong. Economic cooperation between the two parts of the country will resolve the problem of the people's livelihood better and bring as happy a life to our people as any other people enjoy.

There is every possibility of this economic cooperation. The North and the South can exploit mineral resources jointly, develop the division of labour and interchange and use jointly the results of scientific and technological researches.

The northern half of the republic is very rich in mineral resources, deposits of iron ore in particular is unfathomable.

The Japanese imperialists are said to have plundered a great deal of our resources in the past. But they just licked the rind of a watermelon, so to speak. Our prospecting workers have discovered large iron ore deposits in the places where the Japanese imperialists said there was nothing. An iron ore deposit with an estimated amount of hundreds of millions of tons was recently discovered in Kaechon District and another with thousands of millions of tons also was secured in South Hwanghae Province. A colossal amount of iron ores is deposited in Pungsan and many other northern inland areas. It is more than ten billion tons even according to the preliminary estimate made by our prospectors.

The quality of our iron ores is very high. All our iron ores contain over 35 per cent of iron. This indicates that they are of good quality from an international point of view. At present the Japanese gloat over our iron ores.

The northern half is abundant not only in iron ores, but also in other mineral resources such as lead, zinc and copper. In former days the Japanese imperialists claimed that there was no nickel in our country. However, we found it for ourselves later and are producing a great deal of alloys.

It is said that South Korea is building industry, but I presume that it is a problem how to supply the raw materials it needs. They may import them, but why buy them from far-off foreign countries, while our country has inexhaustible resources? If the North and the South join hands and develop the abundant mineral resources, it will be possible to develop the metal and engineering industries and many other branches, without going to the trouble of importing them.

Only when we rely on our own raw materials in developing the engineering industry, can we increase the economic power of the nation. Since immediately after liberation we have exerted great effort to develop the engineering industry. The result is that it is on a very high level of development now. If we are to maintain economic relations with other countries on an equal footing and improve the people's living conditions, we should develop the engineering industry and make machines for export. At present we export trucks, tractors and many other machines, and there are large demands for them.

Aquatic resources, too, are abundant in the northern half of the republic.

Every year 5-6 million tons of pollacks swarm into our East Sea. This is the figure estimated by scientists and the exact amount still remains unknown. It is said that when their swarming is at its height, the shoal is 3,000 metres wide and 5,000 metres long and the depth is unfathomable. Though such a tremendous amount of pollacks rush in shoal after shoal, we are in a position to catch only 600,000 tons at most. This means that we catch only 10 per cent of the fish that surge in. According to scientists, the resources of pollacks do not shrink even if they are caught up to 50 per cent. Therefore, we may catch 2.5 million tons of pollacks, in our East Sea every year. If the fishermen in the North and the South pool their efforts, it is possible to catch a great deal of them.

This will enable them all to be well-off.

We deem it necessary that the North and the South divide work in the economic sphere. If the economy is developed through division of production between the North and the South, one producing this and the other producing that, this will markedly lighten the burdens of both sides and give them much benefits economically.

We should realize North-South cooperation in the cultural sphere, too.

This alone will enable the Korean people to preserve their peculiar national traits as a homogeneous people and will ensure the uniform development of our national culture.

The North and the South should cooperate in the sphere of linguistics and develop our national language in a unified way. When people from both parts of the country meet and speak to each other, they find many words incomprehensible, and this sometimes causes misunderstanding between them. If the North-South gap in language is enlarged, national division cannot be evaded. We should thoroughly prevent the language differentiation from causing our nation to be split into two different nations. Linguists in the North and the South should cooperate with each other in their research and readjustment work for ensuring the commonness of spoken and written language. When they get together and discuss, they will be able to keep the merits of our language alive and to develop them further.

In the sphere of science, too, the North and the South should realize exchange and cooperation. In the two zones there are many talented scientists. In one scientific branch the scientists in the North may be better informed than those in the South, and in another scientific branch the latter better informed. Therefore, if the scientists in the two zones join strength and wisdom, they can achieve great success in scientific research and rapidly develop our country into a modern industrial state.

We should also realize cooperation in the field of sports. If the North and the South cooperate in this sphere, they can bring about good results in international contests. Our sportsmen register excellent results in international events even when taking part in them separately. If the North and the South form a single team and jointly enter international games, they will be able to hold the supremacy. Originally, the Korean people have a strong fighting spirit. This is well known to the people of the world. In international events our sportsmen win the games more often with their fighting spirit than with their techniques. In the future, we must see to it that a single team is formed with excellent players selected from the two zones to participate in Olympic and other international games.

The North and the South should cooperate with each other not only in the economic and cultural fields but also in the political domain.

Economic and cultural cooperation should naturally develop into political cooperation. Only when we cooperate with each other politically, can we effectively cooperate both in economic and cultural fields.

You and we differ from each other in the methods of viewing things. So there may be difference in views in realizing cooperation. You look into each of the problems separately as if they were isolated, but we study things from the viewpoint that they are all interrelated, acting upon one another. All fields of society including politics, the economy, culture and military are related with one another and develop through interaction. This is a law of the social movement. No social problem can find a correct solution unless it is viewed in its relation with other problems. If political questions are to be settled, economic and cultural problems should be resolved and vice versa.

If the North and the South do not cooperate politically, their economic and cultural cooperation cannot be realized effectively, even though both sides wish to.

For instance, the problem of finding out families and relatives separated to the North and the South now under discussion at the talks between the Red Cross organizations of the North and the South looks like a simple question at first, but it cannot be settled easily so long as political distrust exists between the North and the South.

It is said that among the representatives from South Korea at the time of the North-South Red Cross talks there was a person who had his relative in the North. I was told that, when our officials had asked him to meet his relative over here, he had declined it, saying that he would meet him later. I think this was because he was hesitant to see his relative in the northern half. I presume that at present there are people in South Korea who are hesitant to meet their relatives in the North and also those who make a secret of their relatives living in the North. Such being the situation, the efforts of the North-South Red Cross organizations alone would not be enough to find out properly the families and relatives separated to the North and the South and help them meet each other freely. So we consider that if this matter is to be settled satisfactorily, political cooperation must be realized between the North and the South.

The question of easing the tensions between the North and South and reducing armaments, too, can only be resolved when political cooperation is realized.

As a matter of course, the problem of peacefully reunifying Korea without recourse to arms between the North and South is clarified in the North-South joint statement. Although the joint statement declared that the North and the South would not resort to arms, both sides are continuing war preparations, for fear of possible war in the future. You continue to purchase guns from abroad with aid from the United States and we continue to manufacture them on our own. As long as this situation continues, tensions in our country cannot be eased. Today in our country there are many soldiers, and the military burdens on our people are heavy. A total of 200,000 troops for the North and South will be enough to defend the country from foreign invasion. If they cooperate politically, the North and the South can deepen their trust, ease tensions, reduce the military strength to some 100,000 respectively and thus lighten the military burdens on the people.

Only when political cooperation is realized can all problems arising in the economic, cultural and military fields be settled. Therefore, we should not confine ourselves to economic and cultural cooperation, but go further to political cooperation.

Political cooperation is not a difficult problem at all. There is no reason why we should not cooperate politically. The existence of different systems in North and South is by no means an insurmountable barrier to political collaboration.

It seems that at present some people in South Korea take socialism for something to fear, but it has nothing to be afraid of.

We set off to build socialism immediately after the war. I proposed a task of building socialism in the theses published in April 1955.

The building of socialism was urgently required in view of the situation in our country after the war. The three-year war reduced towns and villages to ashes and utterly destroyed industry and agriculture. During the war, most of moderately well-off and rich peasants in the countryside had been bankrupt, to say nothing of poor peasants and handicraftsmen. Traders and manufacturers, too, had been reduced to the same plight as handicraftsmen or small traders were in.

In a word, they could hardly earn their living unless they pooled their efforts, and they urgently demanded cooperativization. Hence, we advanced the policy of cooperativizing the individual economy in town and country and carried it out strictly according to the principle of free choice. We did not expropriate rich peasants in the countryside and private traders and industrialists in towns, but drew them into socialist cooperatives and made them socialist builders.

We lacked in cattle, farm implements and manpower after the war. Even under this difficult situation we effected agricultural cooperativization and pooled the peasants efforts, with the result that we were able to carry out irrigation projects on a large scale and develop the rural economy quickly.

I will not go into details of the advantages of the socialist system set up in the northern half of the republic. When South Koreans witness the reality here in the North in the future, they will know that the socialist system is in no way something to fear but a good system. So, there is no reason that the North and the South cannot realise political collaboration and unity.

I consider it reasonable to effect the North-South confederation in carrying out political collaboration between North and South.

The north-south confederation we propose is to set up a unified state leaving for the time being the present political systems both in North and South as they are. Representatives of all political parties and social organisations, delegates of all strata and prominent figures will get together to organize a Supreme National Council, in which they will jointly discuss and decide important problems for the development of the nation and carry out activities on the international arena under a single state name. This will precisely be the confederation. It would be a good idea to call the confederal state the Confederal Republic of Koryo after a unified state that is well known to the world. This confederation will make it possible to fully realize contact and collaboration between the North and the South throughout all spheres and increase the international prestige of our nation.

Why should we, the homogeneous nation, enter the international arena as two states? I never agree to the separate entry of North and South into U.N. as long as our country remains divided.

I think we will reach a better agreement if we further discuss specific matters concerning the confederation in future.

I was told that you have no objection either to bringing about political, economic and cultural collaboration between the North and the South. Then, you should strive to put it into practice quickly.

What is important in realising collaboration between North and South is to discard each others misunderstanding and distrust. Smiling in appearance while misunderstanding and distrusting each other at heart will not settle the matter. Both sides should remove each others misunderstanding and distrust; this is the only way to quickly realize the North-South collaboration, I think.

We will believe you since the South Korean authorities say that they will push U.S. troops out and will not usher in Japan. The question is that the South Korean side misunderstands and distrusts us. We are the same fellow countrymen gathered here, so, if there is anything you are misunderstanding, you should tell us frankly. If you conceal your disagreement and just read out the prepared statement before going back, it is impossible to remove misunderstanding.

In order to dispel misunderstanding, we should have a frank dialogue. If they are to achieve unity and cooperation, the North and the South must refrain from abusing and slandering each other. We are taking patience with regard to the slanders of the South Korean authorities against us. If you really want collaboration with us, you must stop your anti-communist propaganda. Since we are desirous of collaborating with the South Korean side, we will not slander you. When I met the South Korean representative last, I said it would be better to form and run a kind of North-South joint commission so as to properly coordinate North-South relations and successfully solve problems arising in reunifying the country. We should form a North-South Coordination Commission this time. I think there will be no big trouble. We should form it quickly and run it properly.

The coordination commission should not engage in empty talks but properly coordinate North-South relations and steadily solve various problems arising in national reunification one by one. It would be a good idea that upon the formation of the commission, both sides, in token of mutual trust, should take measures to curtail their respective armed forces, set political prisoners free and guarantee the freedom of activities to political parties.

The door between the North and the South, which has been opened now, must not be closed again. If it is closed again, we shall be blamed by the world's people as well as by our nation. Once we have opened the door and begun to tackle with the task, we should acquit ourselves well of it and exalt the honour of the Korean nation before the whole world.

The sooner the country's reunification, the better. If we delay the solution of the reunification question indefinitely, there will be nothing good for us. We should, all of us, work together and reunify the country as early as possible.

RPR 'WHITE PAPER' MARKS 4 JULY ANNIVERSARY

['White Paper' published on 4 July by the Revolutionary Party for Reunification Central Committee on 10th anniversary of the publication of the 4 July North-South joint communique]

[Text] Today the Korean people mark the 10th anniversary of the announcement of the historic 4 July North-South joint communique which threw new light on reunification of the land of 3,000 ri. Assuming as its main point the three great principles of independence, peaceful reunification and grand national unity for reunification of the fatherland, which were put forward by Comrade Kim Il-song, the pivot of fatherland's reunification and the sun of the nation, the 4 July North-South joint communique was a solemn national salvation cannonade sounded across the barriers of the truce line for the first time. It was a common national program for reunification reflecting the desire and will of fellow countrymen for the reunification.

Those who saw a red light in the colonial rule on Korea from the North-South joint communique, a milestone for reunification, were none other than the U.S. imperialists. Due to the U.S. imperialists' two-Koreas plot, the dawn of reunification, which was once illuminated with the ideas of the 4 July communique, is fading into the tragedy of permanent division and the truce line splitting the nation's land is turning to a border line.

The history of the past 10 years fully reveals that the U.S. imperialists are a curse in the road of reunification, trampling underfoot the Korean people's sovereignty, and are the incarnate of aggression and splittism. On the occasion of the 10th anniversary of the publication of the 4 July North-South joint communique, the Central Committee of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification announces its white paper charging the criminal acts of the U.S. imperialists who hindered our people's independence and sacred cause of reunification and pursued permanent division.

1. The fatherland's reunification will put an end to the U.S. imperialists' colonial policy on Korea and permanent division of the nation will open up a road for the U.S. imperialists' colonial policy on Korea. The policy of the two states and two peoples is the target of the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule over Korea and a basic strategy on the Korean Peninsula. Proceeding from this, the U.S. imperialists are desperately adhering to the two-Koreas plot.

Even at the time when the North-South joint communique was announced, the cunning U.S. imperialists sounded two different and contradictory tunes of "welcome" and "rejection." The official announcement issued by the spokesman of U.S. State Department on 5 July 1972, the day after the announcement of the joint communique, was that the United States welcomed the communique. However, this was a cunning trick of the splittist U.S. imperialists to embellish themselves as friends of the Korean people and supporters of reunification of the fatherland. The true intention of the United States was exposed to the public when the people's spirit for reunification was enhanced like an active volcano.

The U.S. imperialists, extremely embarrased by the rapidly growing cause for reunification of the fatherland, instigated the South Korean rulers to rave that they cannot judge their destiny from a piece of paper and that we should not be excessively excited. They also raved that even if talks between the North and the South progress, the United States will remain in South Korea as a powerful force.

This was the official reaction of the White House applying the brakes to the realization of the North-South joint communique. The opposition of the United States to the 4 July North-South joint communique was more nakedly revealed by its act of totally rejecting the principles of independence, peaceful reunification and grand national unity. Achieving reunification in an independent manner is the great principle for reunification of the fatherland. The principle of independence is a basic cornerstone for reunifying the nation by ourselves. However, the U.S. imperialists challenged the principle of independence. They maintained and strengthened the U.S. Army and Air Force in South Korea rather than withdrawing U.S. troops and discontinuing intervention in the internal affairs of South Korea. They took the rude attitude of ruler and aggressor, raving that they would protect South Korea in any case. On 5 July 1972, the day after the announcement of the 4 July joint communique, former Deputy Assistant Secretary of the U.S. State Department Marshal Green rushed to Seoul and met traitor Pak Chong-hui. He conspired on permanently stationing U.S. troops in South Korea. Former U.S. President Ford met traitor Pak Chong-hui in November 1974 and promised that he would double the number of U.S. troops to cope with the future situation.

They instigated the South Korea rulers to rave that U.S. troops are not outside forces, and that the UN forces, in view of the nature of the role they are playing, can be considered as part of our people, etc. The U.S. imperialists also incited Pak Chong-hui to make absurd remarks at a meeting of the officials from the Korean Central Intelligence Agency and Foreign Ministry in August 1972 that the United Nations and UN troops should not be regarded as outside forces. The definition of outside forces should be made based on the concept of national crisis. What becomes an issue is not blood but the value of the role being played. The U.S. troops are our supporters and protectors. Therefore, they should no be called outside forces.

Pak Chong-hui's absurd remarks that the U.S. troops are regarded as our people are a sophistry representing the aggressive intent of the White House.

Achieving the cause of reunification in a peacful manner, not by confrontation and conflict, is an important principle elucidated in the 4 July reunification charter. The principle of peaceful reunification is a cornerstone for solving the reunification question, reflecting the desire and will of the 50 million fellow countrymen. However, the U.S. imperialists, regarding war as a means of survival, have actively inspired the military confrontation between the North and the South and committed the criminal act of disturbing peace on the Korean Penisula. The White House and Pentagon have pursued the confrontation between the North and the South for permanent division, not the North-South dialogue for the reunification of the Korean Peninsula. They have been aggravating tension, not easing tension; fostering strength, not abandoning strength. Raving that superiority of strength should be retained. The U.S. imperialists instigated the South Korean rulers to confrontation and division. On 29 July 1972, the former deputy secretary of the U.S. State Department openly stressed that the United States should assist South Korea so as to keep it powerful and that only the superiority of strength can achieve the aim of victory over communism. As a result, running counter to the principle of peaceful reunification, the beefing up of U.S. and South Korean armed forces has been unprecedentedly accelerated, over 2,000 nuclear weapons have been deployed in South Korea and over 370 large-scale war exercises premised on attacking the North, including the yearly Team Spirit exercises, have been staged every year for the past 10 years.

One shortcut to achieving national reunification on the basis of the principles of the 4 July reunification charter is to realize grand national unity. It is a shortcut to reunification to realize grand national unity by transcending differences in ideas, ideologies and systems. However, the U.S. imperialists externally have driven the South Korean rulers on the road of anticommunist confrontation with the North and, internally, have made them cling to antinational fascism against the people.

Under the instigation of the U.S. imperialists on 25 June 1974 the traitorous, anticommunist maniac Pak Chong-hui outrageously babbled. We are of the same blood, but we cannot go on living with communists in the North. If we are to live, we must defeat them in struggle. The communists in the North cannot be the same people as us. Annihilation of communism is the only way for our survival.

Pulling the strings of the South Korean military rulers, the United States has created a whirlwind choking the reunification forces by turning South Korea into a fascist slaughterhouse.

By overturning the three principles for national reunification, the U.S. imperialists have employed every means to hinder the solving of any problem between the North and South. They have laid obstacles to the realization of collaboration and exchanges among our people as well as to our efforts for eradicating military confrontation and easing tension between the North and South.

Not only have the U.S. imperialists tactlessly and nakedly trampled upon the 4 July North-South joint communique, but they have also acted as ringleader and controller in fabricating two Koreas.

Former U.S. Ambassador to South Korea Habib told Pak Chong-hui: The North-South dialogue carries the great danger of communizing the South. In confronting the North, we must establish a more powerful system superior to that in the North and perpetuate the division. In practice, it is the United States which determines the direction of national division policy in South Korea, and the pro-U.S. flunkeyist traitorous group executes it.

In an attempt to keep the North and South forever hostile and confronting each other by dividing a unified nation, the U.S. imperialists have handed over to the South Korean ruling authorities proposals for simultaneous UN admission by the North and South and for cross recognition, which are designed to make two Koreas a fait accompli. A product of such a wicked U.S. plan was the notorious 23 June special statement of 1973. The 23 June statement, focusing on simultaneous UN admission by the North and South, was an extremely traitorous plan designed to have two Koreas recognized in the international community by blocking our country's reunification and by adopting the method of dividing another's country.

Dialogues have been attempted to no avail. Repeated efforts for reunification year after year failed to root out the tragedy of division. The U.S. imperialists are wholly responsible for this. Indeed, the U.S. imperialists are the ones who have violently trampled upon the 4 July North-South joint communique -- the reunification charter for coexistence for the nation. They are the archvillains responsible for the disruption of the North-South dialogue and the declared enemy to our national reunification who have schemed against the nation's reunification and maneuvered for perpetual division of the nation.

2. The United States' maneuvers for perpetual division, which run counter to reunification, are the inevitable product of its policy toward the Korean Peninsula and a direct extention of its neocolonialist policy. The United States, which maintains the two-Koreas policy as the basis of its policy toward the Korean Peninsula, is trying to secure a perpetual colony and a military base in South Korea by perpetuating the division of our country.

South Korea is a typical modern colony to which the United States is exporting its neocolonialism. The United States is a sponsor of South Korea's politics, and Seoul's political weather chart reflects Washington's moods. South Korea has its name, the Republic of Korea, National Assembly -- a self-styled house representing public opinion -- and judiciary organizations, but these are nothing but tools serving to execute U.S. neocolonial rule and controlled by the United States. The Washington POST, a U.S. paper, commented that the South Korean Government and National Assembly are deceptive means designed to appear independent of U.S. domination. This assertion expresses the fact that it is the United States which decides which direction the South Korean Government should follow and that it is the United States which coordinates the schedules of the National Assembly.

As string-puller of a puppet named the Republic of Korea, the United States determines the fate of the South Korean rulers as it pleases, as it does in other aspects. Who will hold power in South Korea is not decided by public opinion but by the U.S. ruling class. Whether one is obedient or not to U.S. colonial policy becomes the absolute qualification for becoming a man of power in South Korea. According to this qualification, the United States elevated pro-U.S. dictator Syngman Rhee to the presidency in 1948 and, following 19 April, put another traitor, dictator Pak Chong-hui, in fascist power. Again, following the 26 October incident, the United States has put the military hooligan Chon Tu-hwan in Chongwadae to become its master.

It is well known, through the utterances of the U.S. controllers, that the scenarios for the transition of power in South Korea are being written in the United States and are being staged by the White House.

Touching on the 16 May military coup d'etat, Allen Dulles, former U.S. CIA director, revealed in a speech at his retirement ceremony on 23 May 1964: The most successful in U.S. CIA overseas activity during my tenure was the military revolution in South Korea.

At the time the 12 December military coup d'etat to purify the military, which was part of plan to elevate Chon Tu-hwan to power, the United States even handed to Chon Tu-hwan troops under the U.S. Forces Command, the 9th and 20th Divisions and the special warfare group positioned along the truce line, along with dozens of tanks and armored cars.

While frequently summoning the South Korean rulers in answer to the need for its policy toward South Korea, the United States is subordinating all political life in South Korea under its aggressive intention. The South Korean economy is a subcontract economy which depends on the United States. The United States is committing the most truculent economic aggression of annexing the South Korean economy, using aid and loans as leverage, and reducing our masses to slaves to the U.S. monopolists. The aid which the United States is professing is not an almsgiving, but is its own policy -- a political investment for the benefit of the U.S. imperialist interests under the pretext of danger from communism. The U.S. aid to South Korea is being invested to maintain its military and strategic interests and the 700,000-strong South Korean troops in accord with its policy in the Far East.

The United States is making huge profits through the aid. About $5 billion yearly is required to maintain the U.S. troops -- equal to the 700,000-strong South Korean troops -- in South Korea. However, only 1/25 of the amount is needed to maintain the South Korean Army. Nevertheless, in recent days the United States is paying merely $5 million, a hundredth of the expenses necessary to maintain the South Korean Army. The United States is forcibly demanding that almost all expenses to maintain the South Korean Army be appropriated from our South Korean people's blood tax. Although our 700,000-odd youths and adults have been commandeered in the South Korean Army for the United States, our masses are groaning under a miserable condition under which they have to bear the expenses to maintain the army.

Today the national industries in this land are completely ruined owing to the flood of U.S. industrial products. Due to the introduction of a large quantity of U.S. surplus farm produce, agriculture is also on the wane. Weighed down by foreign debts amounting to $35 billion, the South Korean economy is dying. The South Korean economy has been reduced to a malformed colonial economy which depends for its raw materials, resources, equipment and technologies on foreign countries. This is the result of U.S. economic aggression. To make matters worse, the South Korean economy in recent years has been suffering a catastrophic crisis in which it cannot find a way out because of the world-wide economic upheaval. A U.S. critic once said: South Korea's fate is in the hands of the United States militarily and economically. This is a naked revelation of the colonial nature of South Korea.

From a military veiwpoint, too, South Korea is a complete U.S. military colony which has been deprived of its sovereignty. Making South Korea a military base constitutes the cornerstone of the U.S. colonial policy toward South Korea. Ever since the United States occupied South Korea, it has exerted all efforts to turn South Korea into a militarized country and a military barracks. In South Korea all personnel and material resources, above ground and under the ground, have been tapped for militarization work. The United States is militarily dominating South Korea by having the command of the vast military power composed of the main force of the 40,000-strong U.S. troops and of the local mercenary of the 700,000-strong South Korean Army.

As confessed by persons in authority in the United States, the South Korean Army is a watchdog which is made use of to protect the U.S. ruling authority in South Korea and is used by U.S. troops to oppose the North -- the compatriots -- according to a U.S. policy for the Korean Peninsula. The South Korean Army is a colonial mercenary which is commandeered for other's wars, as it was dispatched to Vietnam during the Vietnam war.

Under the agreement on transferring the prerogative of command and the memorandum of the Korea-U.S. talks, the South Korean Army is completely subordinated to the United States and the U.S. forces.

The actual prerogative of supreme command of the regular South Korean Army and other civilian forces in South Korea has been given to the commander of the U.S. Forces Command in South Korea. Therefore, the commander of the U.S. Forces Command — under the name of the commander of the Korea-U.S. Combined Forces Command — is arbitrarily holding sway over all things ranging from the authority of command, mobilization of defense capabilities and planning of defense-related foreign policies to the reorganization of the South Korean Army's organizational system and personnel administration.

The Japanese magazine THE ECONOMIST has analyzed, without exaggeration, the status of South Korea's military colony by reporting that the South Korean Government cannot take any independent operational actions without approval and command from the United States in all aspects of weapons and ammunition and various equipment -- not to mention the prerogatives of supreme command. Indeed, the 37 years of South Korean-U.S. relations were an ignominious course in which domination and enslavement has been rapidly deepened, and South Korea has been turned into a colony and military base for the United States.

3. In trying to keep South Korea as their colony and military base, the U.S. imperialists have established an unprecedentedly harsh fascist ruling system in South Korea and devoted themselves to most vicious and ignominious suppression and despotism. In the past 37 years, a history of crimes, they have strangled our national sovereignty and civil rights and soaked this land with blood shed by our fellow countrymen, devoting themselves to committing crimes of thwarting the people's will for reunification and driving them to confrontation and war.

From the moment they landed in this land, the U.S. imperialists have reigned as occupiers, not as liberators of the Korean people; as an enemy, not as friends. After occupying this land, the U.S. aggressors established a military rule and treated the Korean people as if they were inferior Negro slaves, showing hostility to them as if they were the people of a country they had defeated.

(Scrane), regimental commander of U.S. (?20th Division), an obscure army officer of the United States -- a nation which gained independence less than 200 years ago -- outrageously insulted our people with a 5,000-year history by calling them Oriental Negros, a third-rate people possessing no self-governing ability. His outrageous remarks reflect the attitude of the U.S. occupation forces who viewed our people as inferior.

As soon as he stepped in Inchon Harbor, MacArthur declared in his first decree a military rule in South Korea and ordered the Korean people to unconditionally obey the occupation forces. This reflects U.S. hostility to the Korean people, who were regarded as no more than criminals. When Jim, an American reporter, says the U.S. troops in Korea acted like an enemy of the Korean people, it is by no means an accident.

The Korean people wanted to exercise their sovereign rights as liberated people, but the U.S. imperialists robbed them of the rights to rule through an illegal military occupation and practiced a bloody, tyrannical rule of obliterating all the anti-U.S. antigovernment democratic and patriotic forces.

The U.S. imperialists, who have reigned over the Korean people as the absolute ruler by monopolizing the rights to rule in South Korea, subjected the communist party members, revolutionaries and patriots to an indiscriminate suppression by fabricating such an incident as counterfeit money of (Chongpansa) -- a Korean version of the arson at the Nazi German Reichstag -- and gunned down the masses who, aspiring for the rights to existence, freedom and national sovereignty, rose in fury following the September all-out strike, October democratic resistance, 7 February national salvation struggle, Hawido Island peasants' resistance, 3 April Chejudo uprising and struggle waged against the 10 May single party election and brutally massacred thousands and thousands of innocent people.

In the 3 April Chejudo uprising alone, the U.S. aggressors killed one-third of the population of Chejudo, submerging Cheju Island in a sea of blood. The fact that the number of prisoners in 1948 was more than four times that of the Japanese imperialist ruling era at its peak nakedly indicts the dark aspect of the U.S. military rule.

The purpose of the U.S. military rule in South Korea, a country which has not been defeated and in which the United States has committed extremely vicious suppression and despotic actions, was to force the Korean people to adopt American systems and way of life and to lay a foundation for U.S. domination of South Korea by using leverage -- violence personified in the occupation troops.

Unable to maintain a military rule indefinitely in South Korea, the United States finally established a pro-U.S. dictatorial government and set out on a road of fascist suppression on the strength of the dictatorial government. All the past South Korean regimes, products of the United States, atrociously suppressed and massacred our people with bayonets supplied by the United States and at the order of the United States.

First of all, the U.S. imperialists robbed the Korean people of their independent demand as a whole and then turned the brunt of their fascist suppression toward the Korean people in their just struggle for independence, democracy and reunification. These beasts instigated the South Korean dictators to brutally suppress the just and patriotic struggles such as 19 April, 4 March and 3 June uprisings and soaked the streets of resistance with the blood shed by the patriots.

The barbarous act of murder committed by the United States, which treats the Korean people like an enemy, culminated in the bloody Kwangju incident. It was the U.S. imperialists who uttered outrageous and murderous remarks that the patriotic acts of 300,000 Kwangju citizens should be dealt with by an iron fist. It was none other than the U.S. imperialist aggressors who indirectly murdered the Kwangju citizens by mobilizing the U.S. forces and South Korean special warfare group. It was the U.S. imperialists who masterminded the 17 May violence which ignited the bloody Kwangju incident. On 23 May 1980, at a breakfast with majority and opposition party members of the National Assembly, former U.S. Ambassador to South Korea Gleysteen said that the United States had already expressed its recognition of the expansion of martial law throughout the nation. Chon Tu-hwan also told South Korean newspaper editors and publishers that all the incidents had already been reported to the U.S. authorities beforehand and approved of by the United States.

Never have the occupiers committed a crime of killing and wounding thousands and thousands of people by mobilizing thousands and thousands of special warfare group troops in a city like Kwangju -- in peacetime, not wartime -- and started a bloodbath for their colonial rule as the U.S. occupation forces did in Kwangju.

The U.S. imperialists, ruthless and vicious as they are, harshly and bloodily suppressed the democratic and patriotic forces hindering their colonial rule. Because they have aspired for rights to existence, democratic and civil rights and national reunification, the revolutionaries and patriots have languished in cold prison cells, been crippled by torture and executed at the gallows. Their exact number is unknown.

The kidnapping of Kim Tae-chung, which stirred the world, was a culmination of a U.S. imperialist terror operation designed to obliterate the democratic and patriotic forces. Regarding democratic personage Kim Tae-chung's patriotic activity in exile in a foreign country for democratization of South Korea and national reunification as a threat to their colonial rule, the U.S. imperialists hatched a wicked plot to bury him forever.

The brigandish kidnap incident -- Kim Tae-chung was kidnapped in broad daylight on Tokyo's busiest street and was brought to South Korea -- was a great international gangster act conducted jointly by South Korea and Japan under the direction of the U.S. CIA. Even today the U.S. imperialists, with a vicious plot to murder the democratic personage Kim Tae-chung in prison, are instigating the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique to inflict unbearable physical and spiritual suffering on him.

In describing South Korea, a Japanese monthly magazine denounced it, saying that it is beyond imagination that such a regime can exist on earth. It said that South Korea is a large prison and that all the South Korean people are prisoners.

The U.S. imperialists, regarding the war as a means to survive, have been endlessly staging war exercises under the veil of peace. Under cover of a fabricated threat of a southward invasion, the U.S. imperialists are mobilizing all human and material resources available in South Korea for criminal war preparations while maintaining a semi-war footing.

Under the aegis of security touted by the U.S. imperialists, the only thing increasing in South Korea year after year is a war budget, the only thing that is being accelerated is the modernization of the armed forces and the only thing that is being strengthened are the launching bases for a nuclear attack.

In South Korea, with its relatively small territory and backward economic potential, the defense expenditures for war preparations amount to astronomical figures. In this year alone, defense expenditures have been drastically increased to 3.3 trillion won -- equivalent to 34 percent of the national budget. Due to this, our people are under a heavy burden of an unprecedentedly harsh tax: 268,000 won per capita and 1.34 million won per family.

The bellicose U.S. war maniacs, while beefing up the armed forces on a large-scale and turning South Korea into a nuclear base, have recently made public the possibility of a nuclear war on the Korean Peninsula and randomly made provocative remarks that they would not rule out the use of nuclear warheads in an emergency.

Indeed, all these facts show that the U.S. imperialists are ruthless imperialist fiends who do not hesitate to chain the Korean people to a most horrible fascist shackle, choke and murder all the masses to secure South Korea as their colony and are 20th century man-eaters who brutality and cruelty are matchless.

The U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression against South Korea and hostile acts against the Korean people committed since they landed in South Korea run counter to the interests and will of the South Korean people, who are aspiring for independence, sovereignty, democracy and reunification.

Our Korean people, who have suffered and been maltreated and hurt under the harsh U.S. colonial rule for 37 years, which is longer than the 36 years of Japanese imperialist colonial rule, are belatedly aware that the realization of three principles for national reunification or the realization of the cause of independence, democracy and reunification are impossible to hope for under the U.S. imperialist occupation and their colonial rule. This is a precious lesson learned by the Korean people under the harshest circumstances. It is the immutable truth.

Now the banner which should be lifted by our people is the sacred banner of national liberation. The slogans our people must shout are of anti-U.S. independence for national liberation. Struggle for national liberation. This is the only way to achieve democracy and reunification we hope for in our dreams, to enjoy true life and to achieve national prosperity. Waging a vigorous struggle for national liberation under the slogan of an anti-U.S. movement for independence is the only way to end the U.S. imperialist colonial rule. It is the only way to find our way to explore our own fate.

Today, our people are no longer the people of the past [word indistinct] but a proud people who rose bravely in a sacred struggle to turn the country, ruined by a pro-U.S. feeling, into a correct position of an anti-U.S. feeling.

Yesterday, anti-U.S. flames flared up in Kwangju, Pusan and Chunchon. Today the flames of anti-U.S. national salvation are spreading in Seoul and elsewhere in the country. By fanning this anti-U.S. flame to make it a sacred flame of national liberation flaring elsewhere in the nation, the masses of all strata should establish a new South Korea free of outside forces and independent.

To make the anti-U.S. national liberation struggle smoothly advance, it is important to wage a vigorous struggle to bury the domestic fascist dictators sponging off outside forces.

The masses of all strata should create a whirlwind of antifascist struggle to overthrow the fascist military Chon Tu-hwan clique -- the bastards of the U.S. imperialists -- and provide a new democratic climate. The anti-U.S. independence movement is directly linked to independent reunification -- the supreme desire of the nation. All the South Korean patriotic masses should resolutely join the struggle to crush the plot of the U.S. imperialists and their stooge for fabrication of two Koreas and to achieve the sacred cause of national reunification. When they struggle in unity under the lofty banner of national liberation, the new day of national independence and the morning of democracy and reunification will dawn brightly. The struggle for national liberation waged vigorously by the South Korean people under the banner of the great chuche idea will be triumphant.

NODONG SINMUN URGES REUNIFICATION COMPLETION

[Text] Pyongyang, July 4 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today dedicates an editorial titled "Let Us Vigorously Pave the Road to Reunification and National Salvation Under the Banner of Independence Against U.S. Imperialism" to the tenth anniversary of the publication of the July 4 North-South joint statement.

Noting that reflecting the earnest desire of the fellow countrymen for reunification, we have made every possible effort to carry into practice the three principles of national reunification, the editorial says:

We did not cease efforts for reunification even after the opposite side violated the agreed points of the North-South joint statement and openly declared the creation of "two Koreas" a policy. Even when a political confusion occurred in succession and the "regime" was changed in South Korea, we proposed with sincerity and broadmindedness to jointly open the door of reunification through collaboration and unity.

Why the question of Korean reunification has not yet been solved for all the efforts of the whole nation? Within our nation there is no basic obstacle to national reunification. The obstacle to it is not within our nation but outside. It is precisely U.S. imperialism which does not want Korean reunification.

The developments over the last ten years show with increasing clarity that it is the U.S. imperialist aggressors who overruled the July 4 North-South joint statement and brought the North-South dialogue to rupture and have barred the reunification of our country.

The U.S. imperialists paid lip-service to dialogue, but their real intention was to keep our country divided into "two Koreas" for ever. Through the splittist "June 23 declaration" whose keynote is "simultaneous entry of the North and South of Korea into the United Nations" was made public by the puppets, its author was U.S. imperialism.

It was not without reason that when this splittist declaration was issued, the bosses of the United States expressed "support" to it before anyone else and claimed that "one of things conducive to South Korea is to legalise the division."

The presistent obstruction to Korean reunification by U.S. imperialism proceeds from its aggressive design to keep hold on South Korea as its colony by creating "two Koreas." South Korea is a colony of U.S. imperialism where everything is decided according to the aggressive demand and interests of the United States and completely subordinated to it. The real ruler of South Korea is the U.S. imperialists.

In order to convert South Korea into their permanent colony, the U.S. imperialists did not hesitate to impose any sacrifice upon the South Korean people and the whole of our nation, to say nothing of hindering the reunification of our country.

South Korea has turned into a big nuclear base and powder magazine for the execution of the Far Eastern strategy of U.S. imperialism. The tension in our country is being heightened with each passing day. Pointing out that all the disasters imposed on our people have been caused by the U.S. imperialists, the editorial continues:

As long as the U.S. imperialist aggression forces are left intact in South Korea, the democratisation of South Korean society, peace in our country and her independent reunification cannot be realised nor can any problem of the nation be solved. In order to accomplish the cause of national reunification in keeping with the interests and demands of our nation, we must proceed from this lesson of history. It is imperative, first of all, to drive the U.S. imperialist aggression forces out of South Korea and terminate the U.S. imperialist interference in the domestic affairs of our country.

The proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song embodies the noble idea and principles of the July 4 North-South joint statement and fully reflects the actual conditions of our country where there exist different ideologies and social systems in North and South.

When the U.S. imperialist aggression forces are withdrawn from South Korea and the U.S. imperialists interference in the internal affairs of our country is ended, our people will be able to found an independent, neutral, democratic and peaceful confederal state by their own efforts and achieve the historic cause of national reunification.

The U.S. imperialists are loudly crying that if they withdraw from South Korea there may break out a war in the Korean Peninsula. But, this is a robber's sophistry. If there are no U.S. imperialist aggression forces in South Korea, it would be good not only to our nation desirous of reunification and the world peace-loving people but also to the American people.

The U.S. imperialists must not think that the South Korean people would reconcile themselves to the destiny of colonial slavery forever, but discard the foolish thought that the Korean people would give up the cause of national reunification and accept "two Koreas."

They must withdraw all their aggression forces from South Korea without delay and stop meddling in the internal affairs of our country. To put an end to the U.S. imperialist policy of aggression and intervention, their stooges must be dismembered. The flunkeyist treacheries of the South Korean puppets in offering South Korea to U.S. imperialism as its colony and leaving the country to the tender mercies of foreign forces should never be tolerated and the Chon Tu-hwan clique betraying the fellow countrymen and depending on outside forces should be removed.

National sovereignty is violated in South Korea and the dark clouds of permanent division are heavily hanging over our fellow countrymen. This reality demands that the whole nation turn out in a more vigorous anti-U.S. national salvation struggle.

If a person truly loves the country and desires reunification, he must demand the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces from South Korea before anything else and fight to force them out of there.

Independence against U.S. imperialism -- this is a true patriotic banner to be held high by all the Koreans. Independence against U.S. imperialism -- this leads to democracy, reunification and national prosperity.

All the Koreans in the North and South and abroad should firmly unite under the banner of independence against U.S. imperialism and staunchly fight on under this banner.

In conclusion, the editorial expresses the belief that the world's peace-loving people will as ever bitterly denounce the U.S. imperialists occupation of South Korea and "two Koreas" plot and wage a more vigorous anti-U.S. joint struggle on a worldwide scale for the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces from South Korea.

ROK TO LIMIT 1983 BUDGET TO $13.5 BILLION

[Text] Seoul, July 5 (YONHAP) -- The Korean Government and the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) will limit the 1983 national budget to 10 trillion won (about 13.5 billion U.S. dollars), the same level as 1982.

Major party leaders said Monday that budgetary retrenchment is unavoidable because of expected deficits following the June 28 economic revitalization measures and the protracted business slump.

Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister Kim Chun-song advocated a tight-financing policy when he met the press and answered questions from lawmakers at the National Assembly last week.

The June 28 economic rejuvenation package cut interest rates on all bank loans to 10 percent per annum beginning in July and reduced corporate tax rates to 25 percent annually beginning next year.

The conservative budget policy was confirmed at a meeting of government and party officials at DJP headquarters Monday morning. The meeting was attended by Economic Planning Minister Kim and Party Secretary General Kwon Ik-hyon and other key party functionaries. At the meeting, the government's economic policy for the first five months of this year was reviewed, and a fiscal plan for the second half of the year, including the implementation of the June 28 economic package, was discussed.

KNP LEADERS CRITICIZE ECONOMIC MEASURES

[Article from column "Tidbits"]

[Text] Saying that a series of recent economic measures taken by the government are so shocking that the people may be embarrassed, Kim Chong-Chol, president of the Korean National Party [KNP], declared on 7 July: The government's policy should be carried out on the basis of the people's understanding, and reforms should be made in conformity with their will. He added: The government should avoid giving the people the impression that national affairs are decided by a bureaucratic elite. When the government repeatedly uses trial and error in the course of implementing a policy, the policy -- albeit the best alternative -- has no value as a policy.

He said: In spite of an early announcement that it will cut taxes, the government is planning to issue government bonds for an inevitable reason. This is a cowardly policy. He demanded that the government drastically reduce its budget.

Noting that a series of recent government economic packages contradict each other, KNP Vice President Yi Man-sop urged the government to adopt economic measures, which directly affect the people's living, after consulting with the National Assembly and political parties and not be so hasty.

HERALD HITS NORTH'S FISHING BOAT SEIZURE ATTEMPT

[Editorial: "N. Korean Abduction Attempt"]

[Text] A North Korean patrol craft fired on an ROK fishing boat on the high seas off the east coast Monday afternoon in an apparent attempt to abduct it to the communist North.

We are relieved that the boat narrowly escaped the piracy thanks to the quick-witted bravery of its crew.

The incident took place in international waters -- about 220 miles northeast of Ullung-do, an island in the East Sea -- and far outside the so-called 200-mile economic zone arbitrarily claimed by North Korea. With all this taken into account, the abortive act of piracy can not be justified whatever excuses Pyongyang may produce.

Abduction of our fishing vessels by the northern communists is nothing new. They have taken South Korean fishing boats to the North on 500-odd occasions ever since the Korean Peninsula was divided in 1945. Thirty ROK fishing boats are still in captivity along with 450 fishermen.

Monday's incident appears to have its own typical implications. It, above all, gives an inkling of the evolving situation in the North whose leadership must have found it necessary to create an incident to divert the North Korean people's attention now focusing on the ongoing move to carry out a hereditary succession amidst growing economic hardship. Understandably, Kim Il-song is now faced with strong repercussions against his attempt to make his son, Chong-il, his successor -- and eventuality unprecedented in the communist world. Reports have had it that riots and upheavals, inconceivable in the iron-rule dictatorial society only years ago, have broken out in North Korea. A recent report said that the number of those slipping out of North Korea is increasing and that some of them are ranking military officers.

Allies of Pyongyang also seem reluctant to approve of Kim's dynasty plans despite their pretense to remain aloof from the issue. This attempt has become the target of scorn among many nations and has hindered Pyongyang's efforts to win the support of the Third World which it regards as a main booster of its diplomatic stature.

This dilemma seems to have prompted the Pyongyang regime to seek a breakthrough by instigating provocations against the South on land and sea. In attempting provocative acts, the northern communists may try to make the most of the rivalry between the Soviet Union and Communist China. In order to keep Pyongyang in its own fold, neither of the communist giants would constrain North Korea's reckless behavior regardless of its wish to do so.

In view of their past behaviors, the North Korean communists obdurately repeat their provocative attempt and such a situation may go on if unchecked. We must keep ourselves fully prepared to preclude any northern provocations as well as to foil all types of aggressive acts. We should also press for North Korea's return of all our fishing boats and their crew members in capitivity while sternly protesting against the latest incident through the cease-fire mechanism.

FOREIGN MINISTER RETURNS FROM U.S., JAPAN TRIP

SK080119 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 8 Jul 82 pp 1, 2

[Text] Minister of Foreign Affairs Yi Pom-sok yesterday said the greatest achievement made during his trip to Japan was to reopen the almost stalled negotiations over the economic cooperation issue pending between the Republic of Korea and Japan.

Upon his arrival at Kimpo International Airport, he said: "The exchange of views he had with U.S. and Japanese top diplomats and other influential persons will be of great help to Korea's diplomacy."

In Washington, he held talks with Secretary of State Alexander Haig on the promotion of cooperation between the two countries. He also called on Vice President George Bush and met with Defense and Treasury officials to confer on the exports of U.S. licensed defense equipment and FMS (foreign military sales) loans.

Returning from the United States, Minister Yi visited Tokyo last Saturday to break the impasse in the negotiations over the Korean request for an economic cooperation loan from Japan.

He met with Foreign Minister Sakurauchi twice and called on Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and four former premiers while in Tokyo. He also discussed the pending issue with Japanese economic ministers. Meanwhile, YONHAP reports from Tokyo quoted Minister Yi as saying Korea and Japan have almost reached an agreement on the "amount and interest rates" of the loan sought by the Korean Government.

According to the news agency, Minister Yi told reporters that the Japanese Government understands Korea's "intentions" well and committed itself to an early settlement of the issue. However, he cautioned it is too early to discuss any specific results of his visit to Japan, it said.

HERALD CITES PRC VICE PREMIER ON SPORTS TIES

[Text] Tokyo (special) -- Chinese Vice Premier Wan Li showed deep interest in an exchange of sports between the Republic of Korea, North Korea, Japan and China, the YOMIURI SHIMBUN here reported Tuesday.

Wan asked about the possibility of sports exchanges including youth soccer games among the four Asian neighboring countries in order to ease tensions on the Korean Peninsula. Yosoji Kobayashi, director of the Japanese newspaper, who met with him in Beijing Monday afternoon, replied that he would like to begin mutual efforts for that goal.

About the question of concrete ways to facilitate communication of views between South and North Korea, he said that he had discussed the matter with the Americans, adding that stable peace in Northeast Asia was of primary concern with the two hegemonisms and that North Korea would not attack the South, according to the report.

CHIT HLAING LEAVES FOR PRC, DPRK; BCP DISCUSSED

[Text] Rangoon, July 8 (AFP) -- Burmese Foreign Minister Chit Hlaing left here last night for Pyongyang and Beijing with the issue of China's support for the Burmese Communist Party (BCP) still affecting relations between the two countries.

Chit Hlaing, who became foreign minister last November, is beginning his two nation tour in North Korea, which unlike Beijing, recognises the ruling Burma Socialist Programme Party (BSPP). An official news release announcing the trip said Burma's relations with both Beijing and Pyongyang were good.

Government-to-government relations with China appear to be more or less on the upswing as China extends technical and financial assistance to Burma and a major highway bridge spanning the Rangoon River is to be built with Chinese help.

However, thanks to Beijing's moral and material support, the BCP remains the main insurgent group fighting the Rangoon government.

Prior to Chit Hlaing's departure the government news media had been drawing attention to the BCP's reported increased involvement in the drug trade.

A newspaper editorial said that political analysts here interpret the media play-up of the BCP's drug-related image as a subtle reminder that it would be in Beijing's interest to reevaluate their existing fraternal links with the BCP. The editorial commented that no political group worth its salt dared to have itself linked with narcotic drugs in any way and risk its demise. The fact that the BCP had been openly engaged in opium producing and trafficking shows that they have already suffered a political demise and exist only as terrorists and extortionists, it said.

Late last year, secret peace negotiations with the BCP broke down, when the Burmese Government rejected BCP demands that the communist party be allowed to exist, their armed forces be left intact and the border areas they occupy remain their base of operations.

Chinese sources here deny any knowledge of what Chit Hlaing is to discuss with their leaders. They indicated, however, that Beijing continued to search for a solution to the long-standing BCP problem troubling Sino-Burmese relations.

Mr. Hlaing and his entourage of seven are to stop over in Beijing for one day today before flying on to Pyongyang, and will begin their official visit to Beijing on July 13, although it had earlier been announced that the Burmese delegation would stay in China for almost a week before going on to Pyongyang.

Under a technical and economic cooperation agreement signed in 1977 North Korea has been providing Burma with machinery and technical expertise for several industrial projects.

SIHANOUK VISITS BAN SA-NGAE, REFUGEE CAMP

[By Charles-Antoine de Merciat]

[Text] Ban Sa-Ngae, northwest Cambodia, July 7 (AFP) -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk, leader of the newly-formed Cambodian coalition government in exile, called here today on Cambodians to expel the Vietnamese "colonialists" and install parliamentary democracy in Cambodia (Kampuchea).

It was the first time the former leader had returned to Cambodia for three-and-a-half years. He was ousted as head of state in 1970. He now heads a coalition of three anti-Vietnamese Cambodian movements comprising the Beijing-backed Khmer Rouge, non-communist groups supporting former Cambodian Prime Minister Son Sann, and pro-Sihanouk supporters.

He spent about two hours at Ban Sa-Ngae, a Son Sann guerrilla base just across the border from Thailand. Mr. Son Sann welcomed him on his arrival from Bangkok, but there were no Khmer Rouge to greet him. In his welcoming speech, Mr. Son Sann said he favoured union between his own supporters and those of Prince Sihanouk, describing such a development as "unavoidable."

Prince Sihanouk replied that "after recovering its independence, Cambodia must become a democracy on the model of the free world, with a parliamentary system." Prince Sihanouk also called on Cambodians to "forget their quarrels", adding: "May Kampuchea conquer the Vietnamese, who are acting like colonialists by occupying our country."

The 600 guerrillas and 500 civilians present at the meeting gave Prince Sihanouk a friendly but not especially enthusiastic welcome.

But shortly afterward, he was greeted with cheers when he visited Thailand's biggest camp for Cambodian refugees, Khao I-Dang, which is near Ban Sa-Ngae. In a speech at the camp, which houses 34,000 refugees, he urged his audience to enroll in the resistance forces fighting the Vietnamese troops supporting the Cambodian Government. He presented camp authorities with a gift of 10,000 dollars, which he said came from North Korean President Kim Il-song. Prince Sihanouk also gave 1,000 dollars to a group of Buddhist monks at the camp.

SPK HAILS INDOCHINESE CONFERENCE IN HCM CITY

[SPK commentary: "A Consistent Policy of Good Will and Peace"]

[Text] Phnom Penh, 8 Jul (SPK) -- A sincere wish to contribute to peace and stability in Southeast Asia is incontestably the idea which emanates from an initial study of the final communique issued at the end of the sixth conference of the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao foreign ministers in Ho Chi Minh City.

The ministers of the allied Indochinese countries dealt with the hottest questions of the region -- from their relations with China to Kampuchea's relations with Thailand -- and proposed for each of these questions a solution to which no interested person of good will could remain indifferent.

This semiannual conference, which gathers the heads of diplomacy of the three Indochinese countries, the first of which was held in Phnom Penh in January 1980, reflects the confirmation of the three people's growing solidarity despite the attempts of Beijing, in collusion with Washington and other reactionaries, to divide them.

It reflects the unanimity of the ministers not only regarding the solutions which have been envisaged or their assessment of the situation but also their long-term policy toward the countries of the region, first of all those of ASEAN, on whom China has worked incessantly in order to pit them against the Indochinese countries.

It also reflects the reasonable policy pursued by the Indochinese countries for the sole purpose of reducing the tension that Beijing has persisted in maintaining between them and their neighbors, first of all Thailand, and of developing relations between the two groups of countries in the region on the basis of the principles of equality, mutual respect and noninterference in the affairs of other peoples.

The ministers of the Indochinese countries thus dealt with questions particularly sensitive to the ASEAN countries, namely: the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, security at the Thai border, an international conference and the Kampuchean seat at the United Nations.

The announcement made by Kampuchea and Vietnam about a partial withdrawal of Vietnamese combatants from Kampuchea during the current month is above all a sign of the stability of the situation inside Kampuchea and of the solidarity of the regime 3 years after the overturn of the genocidal Pol Pot clique. It would be careless to judge this gesture as representing a weakness of any sort on the part of Kampuchea or Vietnam; for events during the past 3 years have demonstrated that no pressure was able to shake them. There is only one correct interpretation: Kampuchea and Vietnam have a sincere desire to establish an atmosphere of peace, stability, friendship and cooperation in their relations with Thailand and the other countries of ASEAN.

However, the communique of the three ministers also implies that Kampuchea and Vietnam cannot tolerate Thai territory being used by Beijing to maintain and supply the Pol Pot elements and other reactionary Khmers in their activities against the rebirth of Kampuchea.

It is true that insecurity at the Thai border stems from the very policy of Bangkok itself which accords refuge to the Pol Pot terrorists and other Khmer traitors. If Thailand had adopted a policy of noninterference regarding Kampuchea, had denied shelter to the Pol Pot criminals following their overturn or had refused to give them access to Chinese supplies, the Pol Pot gang would not have survived and the mere presence of Kampuchean border guards would have been more than sufficient at Kampuchea's western border. It is in this order of ideas that Kampuchea proposed "for want of a demilitarized zone that Thailand is not yet ready to accept" -- as Minister Hun Sen declared to SPK -- the establishment of a zone of security on both sides of the border in which there will only be Kampuchean and Thai troops in their respective territories.

The Pol Pot elements and the other terrorists maintained by China and international reaction must be disarmed. They and the "refugee camps" -- a kind of rear-base for the reactionaries -- must be kept at a distance from this security zone.

Such flexibility in approach also reflects the good will of Kampuchea, which goes even further by proposing international supervision for the implementation of such an agreement. In its efforts to reach such an agreement, the PRK has never raised the question of its recognition by Thailand and its allies.

Concerning Southeast Asia, the three Indochinese countries propose an international conference based on the principle that regional problems should be settled by the countries of the region without violating the sovereignty of or interfering in the internal affairs of any country. For such a conference, the Indochinese countries are prepared to talk with the ASEAN countries in order to agree on the date, location, participants, agenda and so on, which offers a wide range of topics for discussion.

The conference also examined the question of Kampuchean representation at the United Nations. The Vietnamese and Lao ministers supported the proposal of their Kampuchean colleague who delcared that in the immediate future the PRK would not reclaim the UN seat which belongs to it by right and recommended that the seat be left empty should the Pol Pot assassins or their surrogates be driven out of the international organization. This position is most constructive. The goal is to eliminate the so-called "Democratic Kampuchea" from the United Nations, for it is a genocidal regime spit upon by men of conscience, a regime which violates the noble aspirations of the organization, a regime that the sponsors have recently sought to disguise as a "coalition government" presided over by the volatile Sihanouk.

The Kampuchean people warmly support the stands taken by the PRK Government at the Ho Chi Minh City conference. They express satisfaction with the unanimity of views of the participants, which is proof of the fraternal friendship and militant solidarity uniting the three Indochinese peoples. This display of good will by Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos shows their confidence in the future, their strength, their faith and in the just cause they defend. It is certain that this good will will be welcomed by progressive opinion throughout the world, including the ASEAN countries, for it responds to the interests of the world's people, first of all the interests of the Southeast Asian countries.

VODK ON INDOCHINESE FOREIGN MINISTERS MEETING

[Station commentary: "What Tricks Are the Vietnamese Le Duan Enemy Aggressors and Exterminators of the Kampuchean Race Up To in Saigon?"]

[Summary] "The Vietnamese Le Duan enemy aggressors and exterminators of the Kampuchean race are staging a play of their Indochinese countries foreign ministers' conference in Saigon at a time when they are encountering more difficulties and a greater impasse in all fields than during their previous meetings. They have more difficulties in the military and political fields on the Kampuchean battlefield and in the diplomatic field on the international scene."

The Vietnamese enemy aggressors were defeated during their dry season operations and they were bogged down at the beginning of this rainy season. There are more desertions among the Vietnamese troops. Many Khmer soldiers and militiamen, who were forced by the Vietnamese to serve them, have deserted and mutinied against the aggressors. Politically, the Vietnamese Le Duan enemy aggressors have also been defeated. The entire Kampuchean people oppose them.

"The Vietnamese Le Duan enemy aggressors have been shamefully and successively defeated in their tricky diplomatic maneuvers. Whether the Vietnamese stage their maneuvers about the regional conference, the establishment of a demilitarized zone along the Thai-Kampuchean border, the partial withdrawal of troops from Kampuchea or leaving the Democratic Kampuchean seat vacant at the United Nations, all peace and justice-loving countries in the world, particularly the ASEAN countries and the UN General Assembly, reject all these tricks. They firmly stand on the principles of the UN Charter and international law and strongly oppose the Vietnamese Le Euan enemy's aggression in Kampuchea and call on the Vietnamese to respect and implement the resolutions of the UN General Assemblies by withdrawing all of their aggressor troops from Kampuchea and allowing the Kampuchean people to determine their own destiny by themselves with no external interference."

Therefore, the Vietnamese Le Duan enemy aggressors are in a complete impasse on the Kampuchean battlefield and on the international scene.

"Their exit is through their tricky diplomatic maneuvers. The Vietnamese Le Duan enemy aggressors, especially Nguyen Co Thach, are busily waging their tricky diplomatic maneuvers. Before Nguyen Co Thach visits some Southeast Asian countries to tell lies and perform his tricky maneuvers, the Vietnamese Le Duan enemy aggressors are staging a play with a conference of their puppets and running dogs from Phnom Penh and Vientiane in order to issue these new tricky maneuvers. Even before the event, everbody knows the essence of the tricks that the Vietnamese will disclose in their current play. It is nothing less than their maneuvers to try to bury the UN General Assembly resolutions and to draw international opinion into finding a solution to the Kampuchean problem through other means leading to the acceptance of their aggression in Kampuchea as a fait accompli. Therefore, no matter how the Vietnamese dress up their new maneuvers, they will dupe no one."

"All peace- and justice-loving countries -- which firmly hold a principled stand and are concerned with security, stability and peace in Southeast Asia and in the whole world -- will reject all the maneuvers of the Vietnamese Le Duan enemy which are contrary to the principles of the UN Charter and international law and the UN General Assembly resolutions and which would let the Vietnamese achieve their plan to swallow Kampuchea and use it as a springboard for them and the Soviets to implement their aggressive and expansionist southward strategy."

"The Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea categorically oppose the maneuvers of the Vietnamese Le Duan enemy aggressors in their attempt to deviate from the resolutions of the 34th, 35th and 36th UN General Assemblies and the declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchea and solve the Kampuchean problem by other means."

GDR ECONOMIC DELEGATION ARRIVES FOR VISIT

[Text] Phnom Penh, 29 Jun (SPK) -- A delegation of the GDR Joint Economic Committee led by Guenter Jury, deputy chairman of the State Planning Commission, arrived in Phnom Penh on 28 June for a friendship visit to Kampuchea.

The delegation was greeted by Ti Yav, deputy minister of planning. GDR Ambassador to Kampuchea Gunther Horn was also present.

[Text] Phnom Penh, 3 Jul (SPK) -- Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers, received in Phnom Penh today the visiting GDR Joint Economic Committee delegation led by Guenter Jury, vice chairman of the State Planning Commission. Chan Si expressed high appreciation for the development of relations of friendship, solidarity and close and multifaceted cooperation between the PRK and GDR during the past 3 years. He deeply thanked the GDR party and govenment for their firm support for the just revolutionary cause of the Kampuchean people. He denounced the imperialists and their lackeys for seeking to undermine the national economy, cause instability and impede the revolutionary advance of Kampuchea as well as that of other socialist countries and developing countries in the world.

Guenter Jury stressed the intensification of economic cooperation between the GDR and PRK. The GDR party and government, he said, closely follow the revolutionary struggle of the Kampuchean people, particularly the restoration of their national economy. He highly appreciated the rebirth of Kampuchea and the struggle of the Kampuchean people under the just leadership of the KPRP.

Ti Yav, deputy minister of planning, and Gunther Horn, GDR ambassador accredited to Kampuchea, were present at the meeting.

BCP DAILY INTERVIEWS PHOUMI VONGVICHIT

AU062055 Sofia RABOTNICHESKO DELO in Bulgarian 5 Jul 82 pp 1-6

[Text] Phoumi Vongvichit, Politburo member of the LPRP Central Committee, deputy prime minister, and LPDR minister of education, sports, and religious affairs, was kind enough to receive Svetoslav Terziev, BTA special correspondent in Laos and grant a special interview for the daily RABOTNICHESKO DELO.

Question: Comrade Vongvichit, how can you describe the essential achievements of socialist construction in Laos?

Answer: After the successful conclusion of the national democratic revolution on 2 December 1975, we have now entered the first stage of the transitional period to socialism, skipping the capitalist stage of development. For over 6 years the people of Laos have supported and followed the revolutionary government and have been implementing the correct party policy. We have reorganized production and distribution in order to step by step transform Laos, which is still a backward agrarian country suffering from the consequences of reactionary feudalism and from the results of the devastating wars waged by the French colonialists, by the American imperialists and by their lackeys. It is our goal to transform Laos into an industrialized, socialist country.

Question: What kind of reorganization do you mean in particular?

Answer: We are trying to persuade the farmers to join cooperative farms on a voluntary basis. We have already succeeded in establishing timber and agricultural cooperatives, as well as state farms serving as models of socialist production. We have restored and reorganized the plants abandoned by the U.S. imperialists and by their lackeys. We are now operating many such electric power stations, water purification installations, factories producing beer and soft drinks, as well as timber-processing enterprises and others. We have also built new enterprises producing agricultural tools and consumer goods. We have now set up 31 agricultural and forestry farms and 1,343 agricultural cooperatives. The state exerts control over 189 industrial enterprises employing 15,000 workers. The state also exerts control over air transportation, over 60 percent of motor transportation and over a considerable part of international transportation.

After the nationalization of banks and the establishment of the Lao National Bank, production and trade were encouraged. Our commodities' turnover has increased seven times over the past.

As to food supplies, we have produced about 1.5 million tons of rice in 1980. Such achievements have never been attained in our country's history. They are unprecedented. In 1981 our harvest was even more satisfactory. Thanks to such successes we were able to satisfy the needs of our entire population for rice and other foodstuffs.

Question: How are you strengthening your country's defense power?

Answer: We succeeded in involving our entire population in the consolidation of national defense and in protecting our security. Our people's armed forces have developed in size as well as qualitatively. Thanks to this we defeated the gangs and spies sent by our enemies to rob our country and to engage in sabotage during the last 6 years. We have been able to protect our young republic, which is one of the frontline countries of the socialist community.

Question: Comrade Vongvichit, how do you evaluate the prospects for further development of the situation in Indochina?

Answer: The American imperialists who have been fully defeated in all three Indochinese countries pursue their hostile maneuvers, but in a subtler form, by intending once again to subordinate the people of Laos. The reactionary leadership in Beijing is hoping with their help to carry out its ambitions for control over the three Indochinese countries in Southeast Asia. Nevertheless, the poverty and backwardness existing in China, to which the daily intensifying internal contradictions are added, are creating great obstacles to the achievement of expansionist goals. The conspiracy of Beijing with the American imperialists and other reactionaries cannot help this country get rid of its internal difficulties. American imperialists are involved in their own crisis. The attempts to restore American influence in the area with the assistance of Beijing have failed and are still subject to failure. They will continue to fail also in the future. The Lao revolution is firmly relying on the solidarity between the Lao and Vietnamese peoples, as well as on the solidarity with the people of Kampuchea and on the solidarity and cooperation with the Soviet Union and the other fraternal socialist countries and with all peoples struggling for peace, national independence and social progress.

Question: What is your opinion of the relations between Bulgaria and Laos, between the BCP and the LPRP?

Answer: The relations between the two countries have existed for a long time. During our national liberation struggle, party and other Bulgarian delegations came to us in the woods and in the caves of the liberated zones to share our joys and difficulties. The mutual visits of delegations have always stimulated friendship between our two peoples.

A great step forward in consolidating solidarity between our two countries was made with the visit to Bulgaria of a Lao delegation headed by Kaysone Phomvihan, our LPRP Central Committee secretary general and prime minister of the LPDR, as well as with the visit paid by a Bulgarian party and government delegation headed by Todor Zhivkov, BCP Central Committee secretary general and State Council chairman of the People's Republic of Bulgaria. Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism are the basis of our mutual relations. Our best friends, the Soviet Union and the other socialist community states, are also something we have in common. All countries, struggling for peace, independence and social progress are also our common friends. For over 6 years since our liberation in 1975, the BCP and the Bulgarian people have been rendering valuable assistance to us in all sectors, assistance to the party and people of Laos.

I take the opportunity to express our most profound gratitude to the BCP and to the Bulgarian people, as well as our resolve to do everything within our power to consolidate solidarity and friendship between our two parties and peoples.

ASEAN FOREIGN MINISTERS TO MEET AUSTRIA'S PAHR

BK071429 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 7 Jul 82

[Text] ASEAN foreign ministers are expected to meet Dr Willibald Pahr, federal minister for foreign affairs of Austria, in Bangkok on 17 July, one day after the minister arrives in Bangkok. Thai Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila had invited his four other ASEAN counterparts from Malaysia, Singapore, the Philippines and Indonesia to brief the Austrian foreign minister, chairman of the International Conference on Kampuchea held in New York under the United Nations' sponsorship last year.

Dr Pahr is scheduled to pay an official visit to Thailand during 16 to 19 July as official guest of Thai Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila. He will leave Bangkok on 19 July for a visit to Burma and will also make a short stopover in Bangkok on the way home.

NATION VIEWS SRV OFFER OF PARTIAL PRK PULLOUT

[Editorial: "Hanoi's Carrot and the Stick to Thailand"]

[Text] When the so-called "Indochinese foreign ministers" conference in Ho Chi Minh City, or Saigon as it was formerly called, announced the withdrawal of a "significant" number of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, Hanoi definitely thought that it was perfect timing. The announcement came close on the heels of the Kuala Lumpur signing of the three Khmer patriotic factions establishing a coalition government and on the day when President Norodom Sihanouk of Democratic Kampuchea set foot on Kampuchean soil after nearly three years. But from our point of view it was not "perfect timing" but a reaction to the turn of events, the formation of the coalition, primarily engineered by ASEAN.

Vietnam has said that she had withdrawan some troops from Kampuchea last year and no reason has been given why Hanoi kept that withdrawal a secret for such a long time. There are several United Nations resolutions demanding the withdrawal of "foreign forces" from Kampuchea but until now Vietnam has pooh-poohed them. But the very fact that Vietnam called the conference as "Indochinese" means that Vietnam will continue to back the Heng Samrin regime, whose foreign minister was present, and then militarily back it up.

There are several implications in the announcement made by Vietnam Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach that his country was pulling out troops. Even if we try to put the most optimistic colouring on that announcement, we have to point out that Thach did not say what he meant by "significant". From his point of view, any number one can guess could be called significant but the only fact that we know is that 200,000 Vietnamese troops are in Kampuchea and Hanoi must be rather ashamed that it has not been able to root out all resistance and proclaim the vaunted "greater Indochina federation".

This time Thach, in a somewhat puerile fashion, has brought out the carrot and the stick against Thailand. The carrot is that more troops will be pulled out of Vietnam if Thailand submitted to the condition of not helping the Khmer patriotic forces. The stick is that Thailand will have to bear the brunt of any Vietnamese reaction to the policy which Thailand has been following in close cooperation with her ASEAN partners. It is strange that the accent, as usual with these conferences, is not an offer to have a discussion between ASEAN and the three Indochinese states.

It has been traditional for Vietnam, in all references to her invasion and occupation of Kampuchea, to make China the villain of the piece with the United States thrown in for good measure. While a thumping majority in the United Nations has repeatedly demanded the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops, it was China who said in the New York conference on Kampuchea last year that she will re-open talks with Kampuchea [as published] if there is a gesture of goodwill by Vietnam by withdrawing a token number of forces. There was no reply from Hanoi at that time.

China has never changed her policy of "bleeding Vietnam white" and ASEAN has not changed its policy of finding a political solution to the tragedy that is Kampuchea. Everybody knows that China is supplying arms to the Khmer Rouge primarily and to other factions secondarily. It is also known to everybody that the Vietnamese troops cannot be fighting Kampuchea without extensive military support from the Soviet Union. These factors cannot be changed by ASEAN although it is committed to a different goal of finding a political solution.

But let us put the best complexion on Thach's announcement and believe what Vietnamese diplomats say -- the number of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea will be reduced to less than 150,000. One way of looking at it is that it is a sufficient number to keep Heng Samrin in the saddle in Phnom Penh. The other way, and the possible one, is that Hanoi is unable to maintain so many troops in Kampuchea and the Soviet Union is finding it difficult to throw good money after bad.

But the most important point is that China does not come in for her normal quota of vilification. If in reality there is a withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, token or otherwise, China is in the record saying that she will sit down at the conference table with the Vietnamese and discuss the Kampuchean problem. Let us be optimistic, keep our fingers crossed, and believe that the formation of the coalition government with Sihanouk at the head has produced a positive reaction from Hanoi.

POST COMPARES AFGHAN, KHMER REFUGEE SITUATIONS

[Editorial: "The Ultimate Waiting Game"]

[Text] Prince Sihanouk's visit to his countrymen at the Khao I-dang centre has engendered fresh hope in the minds of these refugees that someday they may be able to go home again. The visit also serves to assure them that they have not been forgotten and acts as a reminder that Kampuchea is where they belong and not overseas in some distant 'third country' where they will have to grapple with an alien language, unfamiliar customs and a minority and in some cases unwelcome, status.

But while political and other developments have given the Khmers cause for hope, the same cannot be said for 2.7 million other refugees who have found themselves cast adrift from their native country -- Afghanistan -- and encamped in shelters in Pakistan. They also have seen their country overrun by foreign invasion forces and have watched in despair as the world's attention switched elsewhere and forgot about them, their country and its Soviet occupiers.

Pakistan has offered these Afghans food, shelter and a reasonable mode of living on a termporary basis and still maintains the hope that conditions in Afghanistan will change to make it possible for them to eventually return home with a degree of security.

Such a hope seems unlikely to materialise in the near future. These Afghans have no wish to live further away from their homeland than the border areas and Pakistan is likely to continue playing its host role for a considerable time to come. The UNHCR oversees this Afghan relief programme, which is administered by the Pakistanis, with assistance also being provided by the World Food Programme, UNICEF and the World Health Organisation. The bill for this miserable situation comes to a staggering U.S.$409.28 million for 1981-82.

The Pakistani Government has offered to enter into negotiations for a political solution to the Afghan crisis but obviously cannot allow those negotiations to be held in a manner which would imply recognition of the Soviet-installed Babrak Karmal regime. The eventual success of such negotiations would obviously depend on the withdrawal of occupying Soviet forces, who continue to defy resolutions passed by both the Islamic Conference and the United Nations.

The parallels with Kampuchea are obvious and a solution equally difficult to implement. Meanwhile millions of refugees wait and continue to hope that their homeland will be returned to them, either through forces of arms or just and effective diplomacy.

GENERAL SAN ON POSSIBLE POLITICAL ROLE

BK080542 Bangkok SIAM RAT in Thai 3 Jul 82 pp 1, 12

[Text] Gen San Chitpatima, commenting on reports of senators entering politics, said the choice is up to the individual senators. He added he will not say now whether or not he will enter politics. He noted that the reason he will not make a decision now is not because he is hesitating but because he has not given any thought to the subject.

Regarding those senators who are military officers and are looking forward to political careers, General San asked whether or not senators are considered members of the political parties. He said that it is not right to say that senators are members of political parties or members of a government-run party because to be so is prohibited by the constitution.

General San said he supported the amendment of the constitution which was proposed by the MP's in principle. He said everyone must decide for himself whether or not the senators' opposition to the amendment indicates a divergence of views.

According to General San, he has been asked to join political parties but has not committed himself because to do so would invalidate his position as a senator. Regarding the reported plan of Col Prachak Sawangchit and former young Turks to enter politics, General San said he agrees with the idea if a majority of the people thinks it is the right decision.

THACH DISCUSSES INDOCHINESE CONFERENCE RESULTS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 7 -- The sixth ministerial conference of the three Indochinese countries ended in great success in Ho Chi Minh City this afternoon. The foreign ministers of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea adopted a communique and advanced new proposals of good-will concerning peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

In a press conference attended by more than one hundred Vietnamese and foreign journalists, Vietnam's Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said the conference had reviewed friendly cooperation among the three countries and preparations for an indochinese summit to be held in December.

Nguyen Co Thach underlined the new proposals put forth at the conference: the withdrawal of a number of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, the seeting up of a security zone along the Kampuchean-Thai border, the convention of an international conference on Southeast Asia, and the intention of the People's Republic of Kampuchea to leave vacant Kampuchea's seat at the United Nations if this international body expels the Pol Pot or disguised Pol Pot clique. The People's Republic of Kampuchea may also consider a United Nations control of peace and stability along the Kampuchean-Thai border, Nguyen Co Thach added.

For one and a half hours many questions were put, especially about a Vietnamese withdrawal. On the latter question Nguyen Co Thach said that such a withdrawal would be possible because of the steady improvement of the situation in Kampuchea. It would also indicate the good will of the three Indochinese countries, he stressed.

Concerning the reactionary tripartite Kampuchean "coalition," Nguyen Co Thach said it was only a farce.

"We are very optimistic," Nguyen Co Thach said, "knowing that the proposals we just made will certainly help advance the cause of peace and stability in Southeast Asia."

Comment on Troop Withdrawal

[By Michel Blanchard]

[Excerpts] Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam, July 7 (AFP) -- Indochinese foreign ministers today announced a "significant" partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops in Cambodia beginning this month and called for an international conference on Southeast Asia.

In a communique at the end of their two-day biannual meeting here, the ministers of Vietnam, Laos and the Phnom Penh government did not say exactly how many of Hanoi's estimated 180,000 troops would be pulled out. But Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach told a news conference here that the number to be withdrawn this month would be "significant." He added that some soldiers had been quietly pulled out (?last) year and informed sources said they totaled between 20,000 and 30,000.

Today's announcement was seen by analysts here as a "good will" gesture to the non-communist Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), which has sponsored United Nations resolutions calling for the withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops followed by U.N.-monitored elections.

The possibility of a partial Vietnamese pullout from Cambodia was first raised by Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach in May. A few weeks later his deputy, Vo Dong Giang, spoke of "a certain number of positive factors" for a withdrawal.

Among those factors, Mr Giang said, was a changing perception in some ASEAN countries that the Cambodian crisis is not an East-West proxy confrontation but a Chinese-Indochinese conflict. He also mentioned the stabilization of the Sino-Vietnamese border and the military weakening of the ousted Khmer Rouge regime.

NHAN DAN ON INDOCHINESE PEACE PROPOSALS

[NHAN DAN 8 July editorial: "Important Initiatives for Peace and Stability in Southeast Asia"]

[Text] The communique of the sixth conference of the foreign ministers of Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam, held in Ho Chi Minh City on 6 and 7 July, reflects the firmness and strength of the revolutionary cause in each country. Once again, it reiterates the unswerving policy of peace followed by the three Indochinese countries.

Entering the year 1982, the peoples of the three fraternal countries on this peninsula have continued to record achievements in many fields. The desperate plan of subversion by the Po Pot bandits has been smashed. The Kampuchean people, undergoing a vigorous revival, have consolidated their right to mastery throughout the country and in all aspects of life. The Third LPRP Congress and the Fifth VCP Congress were major milestones on the path of advance of the two peoples. Despite no small difficulties, there have emerged from the economies of the three countries new factors that are bringing about very significant initial changes.

Indochinese solidarity and the relations between the three Indochinese countries and the Soviet Union and the other countries in the socialist community have been constantly strengthened and comprehensively developed. Realities confirm that the odious scheme by the expansionists and hegemonists in the Beijing ruling circles, who are acting in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces to oppose the Indochinese countries, has met with serious failure.

The situation in Southeast Asua, meanwhile, has continued to develop in favor of the forces of peace and national independence.

Although the reactionary forces in the Chinese ruling circles are striving to incite confrontation and conflict among the countries in the region and pit the ASEAN countries against the Indochinese countries, the trend of dialogue has still developed. World public opinion and even a number of personalities in the ruling circles of ASEAN have clearly recognized that the main cause of tension and instability in Southeast Asia lies in the expansionist and hegemonist policy of the reactionaries in the Beijing ruling circles.

Time is now and has always been on the side of the peoples of the three Indochinese countries. A factor in their success is the militant solidarity and relations of comprehensive cooperation between the three fraternal countries. For this very reason, we are greatly enthused by the announcement that a summit conference of the three countries will be held by the end of this year. This event will enhance the position and strength of the three countries and further develop the special relationship between the peoples of Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam.

We fully agree with the measures proposed in the communique of the Ho Chi Minh City conference with the aim of promoting peace and stability in Southeast Asia. Proceeding from the current setting of the actual situation and from their own peaceful foreign policies, the foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries put forth a series of important initiatives and proposals, as follows:

Concerning China, the peoples of the three countries assert that they have always thought highly of the age-old relations of friendship and cooperation with the Chinese people -- relations that have been obstructed and undermined by the reactionaries in the Beijing ruling circles.

The three countries once again call on the PRC to sign bilateral or multilateral treaties of peaceful coexistence with Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam. Vietnam proposes a resumption of Vietnamese-Chinese talks to settle their bilateral problems.

Concerning Thailand, the three countries are ready to negotiate with Thailand on all necessary measures to ensure the security, independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of each country and are ready to meet with Thailand to discuss and settle problems of interest to each party. In reaffirming their stand on the withdrawal of a number of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, the PRK and the SRV agreed to take the first step in their relations with Thailand: they decided to withdraw a number of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea in July of this year. Depending on the state of security and stability at the Kampuchea-Thailand border and on Thailand's response, the two countries might consider a further withdrawal of Vietnamese troops in the coming period.

The PRK reasserts its proposal put forth 2 years ago concerning the establishment of a demilitarized zone along both sides of the Kampuchea-Thailand border. If Thailand is not yet prepared to meet this proposal, Kampuchea proposes the setting up of a security zone along both sides of the common border. Under this plan, only the armed froces of the PRK will be present in the part of the security zone situated in Kampuchea and only the armed forces of the Kingdom of Thailand will be present in the part situated in Thai territory. The two parties will agree on the status and the width of the security zone and on an international supervision.

Concerning the ASEAN countries, the three countries propose the convening of an international conference on Southeast Asia. Such a conference would be convened on the principles that regional problems should be discussed and resolved by the countries in the region without infringing upon the sovereignty or interfering in the internal affairs of each country and that all problems between Southeast Asian countries and countries situated outside the region will be settled by Southeast Asian countries and those countries. This international conference will be held with the participation of the Indochinese and ASEAN countries, Burma, the five countries that participated in the International Conferences on Indochina -- namely, the Soviet Union, China, the United States, France and Great Britain -- and India, a country that has maintained longstanding relations of friendship with the Southeast Asian countries and has greatly contributed to safeguarding peace in Indochina and Southeast Asia over the past 20 years.

The UN secretary general will be invited to attend this conference in his personal capacity. Should the Pol Pot clique be expelled from the United Nations, the UN secretary general will take part in the coference in his capacity as an official representative of the United Nations.

The three Indochinese countries resolutely demand that the United Nations expel the Pol Pot or disguised Pol Pot clique and restore the UN seat to the PRK -- the sole genuine and legal representative of the Kampuchean people. However, the PRK declares that, in the immediate future, it does not require that the United Nations accept its representation in case the United Nations expels the genocidal Pol Pot criminals and the Kampuchean seat at the United Nations can be left vacant.

Any conscientious person can see the great significance of the initiatives and proposals mentioned above. They are important proposals that cover various relationships in a practical, rational and reasonable manner and respond to the expectations of public opinion. Highlighted throughout these proposals is the unswerving peaceful policy and the sincere good will of the three Indochinese countries. The three countries only wish to promote good relations of friendship and cooperation with all neighboring countries and other countries in the region. The peoples of the three Indochinese countries pose no threat to anyone. On the contrary, over the past 3 years thy have had to cope with the perfidious schemes of the reactionaries in the Beijing ruling circles who, acting in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces, have put pressure on them in an effort to force them into submission and annex their countries.

The presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea is just, legal and necessary. It is in response to the request of the Kampuchean people and is in conformity with the terms of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation. It is there to counter the threat from the Chinese reactionaries, who are acting in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces. As assessed by the fraternal peoples of Laos and Kampuchea, our army has made and is making great and valuable contributions to the defense of peace and independence of the three countries.

Indochinese solidarity and the just struggle of the three fraternal nations have achieved great successes. We have won victories and grown big and strong. The policy of aggression and intervention pursued by the hostile reactionary forces has been dealt a staggering blow. The road of causing tension and confrontation is at variance with the aspirations of the peoples in the region and is obviously leading to failure and an impasse. The new initiatives and proposals of the three Indochinese countries create conditions favorable for accelerating the trend to embark on the road which public opinion recognizes ever more clearly as the only right road for promoting peace and stability in Southeast Asia -- that of reconciliation, peaceful coexistence and cooperation between the countries in the region.

Public opinion has the right to demand that the new initiatives and proposals of the three Indochinese countries be met with a positive response. The conference of the foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries marks a new success for the solidarity between the three fraternal countries and for the line of peace and friendship. It also contributes to the cause of peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

FATHERLAND FRONT CALLS FOR MASS PEACE MOVEMENT

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 2 -- A national movement for peace and disarmament and against the war schemes of U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces was launched at a meeting here this morning of the Presidium of the Vietnam Fatherland Front Central Committee and the Presidium of the Vietnam Peace Committee.

In his opening speech, Huynh Tan Phat, Presidium member of the Fatherland Front C.C., warmly welcomed the Soviet Union's peace initiatives and called on the entire Vietnamese people to enthusiastically take part in the movement. He also called on the world public to urgently demand that the Reagan and other reactionary administrations end the arms race and effect disarmament.

Phan Anh, president of the Presidium of the Peace Committee, said that this movement was a positive response to the world people's common struggle for disarmament and against the arms race, particularly the nuclear arms race being feverishly accelerated by the U.S. and its allies. He highlighted the progress of the peace movement in the world and expressed firm support for the new peace initiatives of the Soviet Union and other socialist countries with which, he said, the world people would foil all adventurous military plots and actions of the U.S. and other war-like forces.

Phan Anh particularly welcomed the Soviet Union's commitment to refrain from using nuclear weapons first as a very important contribution to the world people's struggle for peace and security.

Nguyen Van Tien, general-secretary of the front Central Committee, read out an appeal of the meeting calling on the entire Vietnamese people to contribute most positively to the world movement for peace and disarmament.

REPORTAGE ON LABOR PARTY NATIONAL CONFERENCE

Fraser Rebuts Wran Comment

[Excerpts] The Labor Party's National Conference has opened in Canberra with a warning to the party from its president, Mr Wran, to prepare for an early election. Commenting on Mr Wran's statement, Mr Fraser said he was sticking to his earlier commitment that parliament should run its full term. He accused the Labor Party of deliberately promoting the idea of an early election. However, Radio Australia's political correspondent says in the past few days, both the deputy prime minister, Mr Anthony, and the defense minister, Mr Sinclair, have made references to the possibility of an early election.

[Text] The opposition leader, Mr Hayden, and the former union leader and prominent Labor Party member, Mr Hawke, have joined forces to oppose moves by left-wing unions to amend the Labor's prices and income policy. The two men told the party's national conference in Canberra that a successful prices and income policy will be the key to Labor's successfully handling the economy.

The left-wing move was defeated by 55 votes to 41. Mr Hayden said that if the party could not agree on a prices and income policy it would have problems. The Labor could find itself tied into policies which would harm rather than help the people it wanted to assist.

Uranium Mining Ban Upheld

[Text] The National Conference of the Australian Labor Party [ALP] in Canberra has reaffirmed its opposition to uranium mining. The vote came at the end of a lengthy debate on the issue. Much of the discussions centered on differing proposals for the uranium industry if the Labor Party was elected to office.

The opposition leader, Mr Hayden, told the conference it would be an electoral disaster to propose an immediate shutdown of uranium projects. His speech brought angry accusations from leftwing delegates who accused him of being scared of the electorate.

A Radio Australia reporter covering the conference says the rightwing section of the party wanted to change the present hardline policy banning the mining and treatment of uranium and calling for the repudiation of existing supply contracts.

'Leave ANZUS' Motion Rejected

[Text] The National Conference of the Labor Party has rejected leftwing moves for a policy to withdraw Australia from the ANZUS defense treaty with the United States and New Zealand. Leftwing delegates argue that the alliance made Australia subservient to the United States and prevented it from having an independent voice in world affairs. But the Labor leader, Mr Hayden, said it would be disastrous to drop the ANZUS treaty without having an alternative foreign policy. The conference voted against the withdrawal from the treaty by 58 votes to 31. The Labor conference has also rejected proposals that its policy should be to close American bases in Australia and to stop nuclear-armed or powered ships from entering Australian ports.

Leadership Debate 16 July

[Text] The parliamentary Labor Party will meet in Canberra tomorrow week to decide the Labor leadership. The opposition leader, Mr Hayden, announced the meeting to put to an end what he called a deliberate campaign to destabilize the Labor Party. Mr Hayden said the campaign had undermined the gains of this week's National Conference in Canberra and was doing serious damage to the morale and credibility of the party.

Mr Hayden said he had resisted taking any action until now because of the party's need to concentrate on policies this week. But he said the destructive exercise had gone on long enough and no leader could tolerate such insidious destabilization of the party's team effort.

The Labor Party backbench parliamentarian and former trade union leader, Mr Bob Hawke, has been suggested as an alternate leader of the party.

OFFICIAL CRITICIZES NATO'S 'LACK OF RESOLVE'

[Text] The federal minister for industry and commerce, Sir Phillip Lynch, has accused members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization of lacking resolve in dealing with the threat from the Soviet Union. Speaking in Paris, Sir Phillip said the Soviet military might had never been so threatening. Yet, NATO's perception of how to deal with it had never been so divergent. He told the Fifth Party Leaders Conference of the European Democratic Union that Australia believed the West should make a substantial effort in the area of conventional arms in order to remove temptation from the Soviet Union to exploit its existing advantage. Sir Phillip said that at the same time, detente should be part of the solution together with an agreed policy among Western nations on economic relations with the Soviet state.

The minister said NATO's lack of resolve toward the Soviet threat was causing concern to Pacific nations. He added that the biggest problem facing the Association of Southeast Asian Nations was the Soviet-supported occupation of Kampuchea by Vietnam.

SINCLAIR LEAVES FOR UK TO DISCUSS INVINCIBLE

His trip follows last week's announcement by Britain's Defense Minister, Mr Nott, that the Invincible could be retained as part of the rearmament program.

FOREIGN TROOPS SIGHTED ON SEMPADAN ISLAND

[Text] Jakarta, July 6 (AFP) -- Foreign troops have occupied the tiny Indonesian island of Sempadan, east of Borneo between the Malaysian state of Sabah and Indonesian East Borneo, the evening newspaper SINAR HARAPAN reported today.

The paper said an Indonesian sea patrol recently spotted a number of troops engaged in unspecified activities on the island. East Borneo Military Commander Brig. Gen. Henry Santoso was quoted by the paper as saying that he was studying the report.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the presence of foreign troops on the island had been known. He did not specify the nationality of these troops, but added without elaborating: "We shall settle the problem in a friendly way".

The six square kilometre island used to belong to the former Bulungan and Tidung sultanate which was then included in the former Dutch East Indies.

A military spokesman later confirmed the report saying that Indonesian authorities were approaching a certain country to secure a friendly settlement of the problem. He refused to name the country involved, but it was believed to be Malaysia.

Jakarta is believed to be committed to a negotiated settlement. So far no country has claimed the island which used to be a transit point for inter-island shipping.

Ship Patrolling Close

[Text] Jakarta, July 7 (AFP) -- An Indonesian Navy ship has been patrolling close to the island of Sempadan near the border with the Malaysian state of Sabah which was recently occupied by foreign troops, the official organ of the ruling Golkar Party, SUARA KARYA (VOICE OF THE WORKERS) reported goday.

Confirming the presence on the island of the foreign troops, the Foreign Office said yesterday that it would settle the problem in a friendly way. It did not name the nationality of the troops who were believed to be Malaysian.

In a report from Tarakan, East Borneo, SUARA KARYA said the foreign troops who wore green trousers and yellow khaki shirts, emerged from the jungle to watch the ship, but it gave no details of what had happened afterwards.

The waters around the island are frequently visited by foreign fishing vessels, but traditional Indonesian trawlers are generally unable to get close to the island because of big waves, the paper said.

The island, thickly covered in jungle, has oil resources while coconut trees and turtles are to be found on the beaches. The island's coastal waters are known to be rich in fish.

Indonesia had strained relations with Malaysia in 1963 when the late President Sukarno launched an armed confrontation policy against Malaysia in opposition to the formation of the Malaysian Federation which he said had been used by the "British colonialists" to encircle Indonesia. Indonesian troops were dropped into the Malaysian Peninsula, Sabah and Sarawak, but Sukarno's confrontation fizzled out as the Indonesian Communist Party staged an abortive coup d'etat which eventually led to his downfall.

Meanwhile, the official ANTARA news service reported that a total of 18 Malaysian trawlers had been captured by Indonesian patrol vessels in an operation to prevent illegal fishing in Indonesian territorial waters.

The operation last week near the Jamur Batu Mandi Islands in the Malacca Strait was the largest held so far against foreign ships operating without permits in Indonesian waters, ANTARA said. It quoted local Navy spokesman Major O. Siahaan as saying that all the trawlers and their crews were held at Belawan Port near Medan in north Sumatra. The number of Malaysian trawlers seized was the biggest in one single operation, during which 12 other trawlers managed to escape, ANTARA added.

In another report, ANTARA said the Indonesian frigate Kri Ngurah Rai had detained two Taiwanese ships for fishing without permits in east Indonesia. The ships, Chang Ey No. 1 and Chang Ey No. 12, with 16 crewmen each were held in the Aru Sea a few days ago, ANTARA added.

Sudomo Denies Report

[Text] Commander of the Security and Order Restoration Command and armed forces Deputy Commander Admiral Sudomo has said that there have been no activities by foreign forces on Sempadan Island -- a small island in East Kalimantan. Admiral Sudomo said that according to the Dutch-British treaty of (?1861), the status of the island remained unclear. The issue was discussed by the Indonesian and Malaysian foreign ministers in May 1980, but no agreement was reached.

Admiral Sudomo made these remarks in denying Jakarta press reports that foreign forces were active on Sempadan Island. Jakarta papers also reported that the island has oil and gas reserves.

Negotiating With Malaysia

[Text] Jakarta, July 7 (AFP) -- Indonesia today charged that Malaysia had put two Indonesian islands on the Malaysian map. "We are negotiating with Malaysia to solve the problem," State Secretary Lieutenant General Sudharmono said after a cabinet meeting. Dismissing newspaper reports earlier today that the island of Sempadan had been occupied by foreign troops, he said the foreign ministers of the two neighbouring Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) countries had negotiated the status of the two islands.

The other one is Legitan. They lie between the Malaysian state of Sabah and Indonesian East Borneo.

The two islands were included in a Malaysian map in 1980. He called on the press not to build up the island story saying that a peaceful settlement was being sought.

He denied reports that there were oil resources on the islands. "They are not inhabited either. But they are mainly rocks," General Sudharmono added.

A leading member of Parliament today called on the Indonesian Government to use diplomatic and physical means to gain control of Sempadan Island. Gde Jaksa, deputy chairman of the Parliamentary Foreign Affairs Commission, told newsmen the island should remain part of Indonesia. "The government must use every means to control the island, whether through diplomacy or force. We had better talk with Malaysia first under the spirit of brotherhood, Mr Jaksa said. He stressed that the islands were strategically important for Indonesia.

Dr Khalik Ali of the Moslem United Development Party (PPP) today said Indonesia had better use physical means if it was unable to drive the alleged foreign troops out through diplomacy.

The Foreign Office appeared to have failed to seek a settlement through diplomacy as foreign troops were allegedly still there, despite its diplomatic negotiations that had been going on for over 1 year, he said.

He added that he regretted the Foreign Office did not inform Parliament over the islands dispute.

KOMPAS COMMENTS ON KHMER COALITION GOVERNMENT

[Editorial: "The Kampuchean Coalition Government"]

[Text] Finally, the declaration on the establishment of the Democratic Kampuchea Coalition Government has been signed. The event, which took place in Kuala Lumpur, can be considered as an historic event, especially in the history of the Khmer people.

With the signing of the declaration, leaders of the three Kampuchean resistance factions agreed to foster their unity toward the reconstruction of the Kampuchean state and people. First, however, they must strive to secure the withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea. It would be ideal if the withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops could be arranged through negotiations. As Prince Sihanouk has said, however, Vietnam only knows the "language of force" and does not seem to understand the language of diplomacy.

If Prince Sihanouk is right, then the war in Kampuchea will never end.

As a country which used to boast that it is opposed to interventionby other countries in its internal affairs and attempts to dominate it, Vietnam should be ready to allow the Kampuchean people to form their own government and handle their own affairs. Vietnam's logic has always been that its presence in Kampuchea is at the request of the Heng Samrin regime, and in order to prevent Vietnam from being pinned down from two sides, it must abandon that logic.

The question is whether the Heng Samrin regime has been fully accepted by the majority of the Kampuchean people and whether it has a mandate to invite Vietnamese troops. This is the first reason. Secondly, if every country could justify occupying another country giving as its reason that it will be pinned down by two of its immediate neighbors, many countries will do the same thing. As a result, our world will constantly be plagued by wars that could threaten many countries.

If Vietnam criticizes the current Israeli invasion of Lebanon, then Vietnam also has to admit that its military invasion of Kampuchea is wrong. Israel's logic is almost identical to that of Vietnam's. It worries about the PLO's domination over Lebanon, which could be turned into bases of operations against Israel. Apart from its worries about the PLO, the Israeli invasion of Lebanon also stems from its concerns about Syria, with which it has no friendly relations but which has a strong position in Lebanon.

If Vietnam wants to be consistent with its frequently declared principles, then it should withdraw its troops from Kampuchea and allow the Kampuchean people to run their own government without its intervention. How the troop withdrawal should be implemented could be discussed with the parties who are now united in the coalition government.

Of course, the three parties in the coalition -- the Kampuchean People's National Liberation Front, the Kampuchean Democratic Party and the Kampuchean National Liberation Movement -- should first reach a consensus. They have to prove what they have spelled out in Kuala Lumpur that the most important thing facing them at present is to strive for the establishment of a new, independent and peaceful Kampuchea.

They would be better off not presenting a certain country as their backing, especially maintaining dependence on the People's Republic of China. For Vietnam this would be just like unfurling a red cloth in a bullfight. On the other hand, the coalition side cannot afford to have Vietnam's position in Kampuchea simply be replaced by the People's Republic of China.

What Sihanouk stressed at a press conference in Kuala Lumpur was right: "The place for the Russians is in the Soviet Union, the Americans in the United States and the Vietnamese in Vietnam."

FRENCH TRADE MINISTER'S ACTIVITIES REPORTED

Meeting With Prawiro

[Text] The visiting French trade delegation headed by Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert today held talks with Trade and Cooperatives Minister Radius Prawiro to discuss cooperation in further promoting Indonesian exports of nonoil and nonnatural gas commodities to the EEC. At the meeting, Minister Prawiro briefed his guest on the 1982 export package aimed at increasing Indonesian exports of nonoil and nonnatural gas commodities.

After the meeting, Minister Prawiro said that in addition to discussing bilateral trade relations he also expressed the hope that Minister Michel Jobert, on his return home, would explain the Indonesian situation to the EEC. On trade between Indonesia and France, he said it is continuing to increase.

Calls On Suharto

[Text] Efforts to further promote trade relations between Indonesia and France were discussed by French Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert when he paid a courtesy call on President Suharto at the Merdeka Palace this afternoon. In response to questions by newsmen on Indonesia's new export policy on nonoil and nonnatural gas commodities, the pragmatic French minister said he would accept whatever could be implemented well.

Trade and Cooperatives Minister Radius Prawiro, who accompanied Minister Jobert at his meeting with President Suharto, said the volume of trade with France is small if compared with those of other European countries. But France plays an important role in the EEC, particularly in agricultural products. Therefore, it is necessary to further expand trade with France. Efforts will be made to see that exports of Indonesian tobacco will not be hampered by very high import duties imposed by the EEC.

Minister Radius Prawiro said it is necessary to see that Indonesian smoking tobacco is subjected to the present import duties paid by the European countries. In this regard, France would continue to support Indonesian interests in its export of tobacco and rice bran in order to enable Indonesia to increase the income of farmers.

Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert, who arrived in Indonesia on Sunday as guest of Trade and Cooperatives Minister Radius Prawiro, yesterday held a first round of talks with Minister Prawiro. The talks will be resumed today. Minister Jobert today will also hold meetings with Coordinating Minister for Economics, Finance and Industry Wijoyo Nitisastro, Communications Minister Rusmin Nuryadin, State Minister and State Secretary Sudharmono and Industries Minister A.R. Suhud. The French minister will return home this evening via Singapore.

KALIMANTAN JOINT COAL MINING -- Jakarta, July 6 (ANTARA) -- Work contracts for the joint mining of coal between the Indonesian coal-mining company Pt Tambang Batubara and Hanil Cement of South Korea, Tasek Cement of Malaysia, Siam Cement of Thailand and Enadimsa of Spain is now expected to be signed soon. The proposal for the signing of the contracts by the government has already obtained the green light from the DPR (Parliament). Spokesman of Tambang Batubara A.H. Sazili expected Tuesday the contracts would most probably be signed between the Indonesian company and its foreign partners next month (August). If the signing materializes as expected, then works for the joint mining operation will possibly be started toward the end of this year. Tasek Cement and Siam Cement would do mining works in South Kalimantan. Hanil Cement's mining area will be East Kalimantan. Enadimsa had also asked for mining contract in South Kalimantan. Four companies are already mining coal in East and South Kalimantan, namely Pt Arutmin Indonesia, Pt Utah Indonesia, Agip-Consol and Pt Kaltim Prima Coal. DEFENSE OFFICIAL NOTES MILITARY SPENDING CUT

BK061430 Kuala Lumpur NEW SUNDAY TIMES in English 4 Jul 82 p 5

[By Sabry Sharif]

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, Sat. -- Defence spending for this year may be trimmed by about $1 billion as part of the government's economy drive. Deputy defence minister, Abang Abu Bakar Mustapha, in an interview today, hinted that the slash will be between $800 million and $1 billion.

However, the purchase of weapons vital to the nation's security such as frigates, minesweepers, armoured personnel carriers, fighter bombers and small arms will not be affected, he said. The cutback in some development projects must not be seen as crippling the armed forces, he said. Existing facilities are able to cope with the nation's security needs.

The bulk of the cut will be from the $2.7 billion development expenditure allocated to the Defence Ministry under the 1982 budget. The remainder of the cuts, which are marginal compared with the cuts to development expenditure, will be from the ministry's $2.1 billion operating expenditure. This, said the deputy defence minister, will mean, among other things, the cutting down of spending on courses for officers.

Among the major casualties are the Johore and Sabah recruit training centres which will be closed temporarily, deferment of the air force training base in RMAF Gong Kedak in Kelantan, naval forward bases in Hohore Baru, Labuan and Kuching, purchase of medium-weight tanks and the $333 million Armed Forces Defence College. There will also be a freeze in the recruitment of new staff. Only those with specialised skills like doctors and engineers will be employed.

Abang Abu Bakar said the Pulada recruit training centre in Johore and the Kota Kinabalu training centre will be closed down for a period of probably two to three years. He said the recruit training programme will now be carried out at the army's Port Dickson Camp, the other recruit training centre in the country. The move will also allow the training officers at the centres to be deployed to different army units to help ease the shortage of officers. The territorial army will see a slower intake of officers and recruits this year.

COMMENTARY ON HO CHI MINH CITY CONFERENCE

[Unatrributed commentary]

[Text] The current meeting at Ho Chi Minh City between the foreign ministers of the Vietnamese and Lao Governments as well as representatives from the puppet Heng Samrin regime in Phnom Penh will not be successful in deflecting attention from the new realities that have emerged over the last 2 weeks. The Democratic Kampuchean Government was recently expanded into a coalition government with Prince Sihanouk as the president, Son Sann as the prime minister and Khieu Samphan as the vice president in charge of foreign affairs.

The Democratic Kampuchean Government has already gained international recognition by being given the Kampuchea seat at the United Nations. This action and the gesture of recognition by a vast majority of nations had already assured the new expanded coalition government of the attention, acceptance and recognition that has been denied to the puppet Heng Samrin group.

The Vietnamese purpose of using the Ho Chi Minh City conference as a counterpoint to the formal inauguration of the coalition government on Kampuchean soil would surely meet with failure.

Hanoi had failed earlier to gain recognition for its puppet government in Phnom Penh even when the Democratic Kampuchean Government was composed entirely of representatives from the hated Khmer Rouge faction. The Khmer Rouge were successful in gaining recognition even with their past record of genocide and of waging war on their own people because the international community accepted them as being the truly genuine representatives of the Kampuchean people as opposed to the Heng Samrin group which was the creation of Hanoi and which is even today totally and pathetically subservient to it.

The Ho Chi Minh City meeting would have served no purpose if indeed its intention was to deflect attention from the inauguration of the new coalition government on Kampuchean soil. The new realities and the movement toward the formation of the government that is synonymous with Kampuchean patriotism and national honor, is too strong for it to be derailed by a meeting of ministers. This meeting is also expected to repeat its previous proposal of a partial troop withdrawal if the Thais promise not to support the Kampuchean resistance movement.

This proposal will again ignore the realities of Kampuchea. Instead of trying to implicate the Bangkok Government, those who made this proposal should ponder the new reality that there is in fact now a new coalition government and the Coalition Democratic Kampuchean Government has every right to ask for any assistance from any other government or group. This is the inherent right of all government and it can perhaps be said that more than any other government, it is the Coalition Democratic Kampuchean Government that is in need of aid and comfort.

It has also been stressed time and again that what is required in Kampuchea is a total and complete withdrawal of all Vietnamese troops and not a partial withdrawal which would serve no purpose. Once this withdrawal is effected, then a UN-sponsored and supervised election can be held to give the Kampuchean people a chance to express their will and bring about a government that they want. It would be useful to remember that ultimately only that solution will prevail that will allow for the creation of a truly Kampuchean government that will help to secure Kampuchea's independence, territorial integrity and national pride.

FRG TO GIVE NONMILITARY AID TO KHMER COALITION

Mr Abdul Kadir later expressed his disappointment to newsmen on the result of various conferences held and agreements reached on commodities such as the International Tin Agreement [ITA] and the International Natural Rubber Agreement. These agreements were meant to protect the interests of both producers and consumers through fixing the floor and ceiling prices. However, when prices of these commodities were falling, consumers were either too slow or reluctant to fulfill the obligations to help stabilize prices.

He said the West German deputy minister also expressed disappointment over the attitude of the Soviet Union and the United States for not participating in the Sixth ITA. She has also agreed to convey Malaysia's view and concern on the free enterprise system to the EEC countries. Steps could then be taken for a more equitable and fair trade arrangement.

KUALA LUMPUR TO RECEIVE VIETNAM'S THACH

[By N.G. Nair]

He has indicated that his talks in Singapore, Thailand and Malaysia, three of the five ASEAN members, will cover bilateral relations and problems relating to regional peace and security, meaning the Cambodian crisis. The talks are expected to zero in on the "significant" partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia announced by Indochinese foreign ministers in Ho Chi Minh City (ex-Saigon) yesterday along with their call for an international conference on Southeast Asia.

In the absence of Mr Ghazali, currently on a European tour, Malaysian Foreign Ministry officials were reluctant to give details of what Mr Thach would discuss here. But they pointed out that Mr Thach's visit was important, coming as it does in the wake of yesterday's Ho Chi Minh announcement. The latest Vietnamese pronouncements indicated a flexible attitude on the part of Hanoi, although Hanoi's partial pull-out due to begin this month falls short of the total withdrawal of Vietnamese troops called for in United Nations resolutions, they added. Malaysia, like its ASEAN partners, will be in a better position to assess the Vietnamese attitude after hearing from Mr Thach details of Hanoi's troop withdrawal plans and other steps to ensure peace and stability in the region, the officials indicated.

Mr Thach, who will be accompanied by three senior officials, will call on the Prime Minister Dr Mahathir Mohamad during his stay here. He is expected to visit a fourth ASEAN country, Indonesia, in September and has sent out feelers about a possible trip to the Philippines, the fifth ASEAN member.

The Malaysian Foreign Ministry was meanwhile studying the announcement on the troop withdrawal and the proposed international conference on Southeast Asia. A spokesman said that the ministry was awaiting official reports from its missions in Vientiane and Hanoi on the latest development. The Vietnamese Embassy here told AFP that it hoped to send the official text of the Ho Chi Minh City communique to the Malaysian Foreign Ministry by tomorrow.

ASEAN capitals are also in touch with each other for consultations. A joint stand is expected to be worked out by the time ASEAN foreign ministers meet in Bangkok on July 16. The meeting has been called by Thai Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, the current chairman of the ASEAN Standing Committee, to enable the ministers to confer with their Austrian counterpart Willibald Pahr. Mr Pahr, who chaired last July's UN-sponsored International Conference on Cambodia, will be in Bangkok from July 16 to 18 immediately after a two-day visit to Hanoi.

MRS MARCOS HOLDS TALKS WITH SOVIET LEADERS

[Text] In Moscow the first lady has begun meeting with top Russian leaders. Yesterday she conferred with Vasiliy Kuznetsov, the first vice president of the Soviet Presidium. The Soviet leader assured Madam Marcos of Russia's friendship for the Filipino people. In another meeting, the first lady pledged that the Philippines will do its modest share in the quest for world peace. She voiced the Philippine policy of friendship with all nations during her talks with Soviet Minister of Culture Demichev. Demichev praised the Philippine policy and predicted that the 5-day visit of the first lady to the Russian capital would further enhance cultural and political relations between the Philippines and the Soviet Union.

Soviet leaders led by Foreign Minister Andrey Gromyko pledged Russia's continuing friendship with the Filipinos and peace to peoples of Southeast Asia. Gromyko discussed with Mrs Marcos the aspects of Soviet-Philippine relations and international issues of mutual concern. TASS news agency said the talks were friendly.

The Soviet leader Kuznetsov said Russia seeks reduction of arms on the basis of security, and reiterated that Russia will not be the first to use nuclear weapons.

[Text] Soviet Foreign Minister Andrey Gromyko has assured the first lady of Russia's continuing desire to maintain friendly relations with the Philippines. Mrs Imelda Romualdez Marcos met with the foreign minister and held talks for 2 hours. During the course of their meeting, the Soviet foreign minister greeted Mrs Marcos as an outstanding representative of the Filipino people who has made significant contributions to the social life of her country, international politics and bilateral ties between Moscow and Manila. The Russian official also assured his country's desire to see Southeast Asia and a zone of peace.

Wednesday night the first lady was to be honored at a dinner in the Kremlin to be hosted by Vasiliy Kuznetsov, vice chairman of the Soviet Presidium.

MINDANAO MILITIA READY FOR CPP INSURGENTS

HK070317 Davao PEOPLE'S FORUM in English 24-26 Jun 82 pp 1, 8

[Text] About 5,000 members of the civilian Home Defense Force are scattered all over Regions 11 and 10, and all are ready to meet the threat of communist insurgency by the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP).

This was disclosed by Capt. Ramon P. Hongo, battalion commander of the 1st Battalion of the Home Defense Force based in Trento, Agusan del Sur. The militiamen trained under his battalion complement those who were already trained under the constabulary.

More militiamen will be trained and armed, he said, because of the communist threat in the two regions, particularly in Davao City and the three Davao provinces, Butuan City and two Agusan provinces aside from Surigao. The training under his command for militiamen started only last October of last year. The militiamen, he said, are also being prepared in case an army or PC battalion is pulled out from a once critical area to continue with the job of maintaining peace and order.

The militiamen, he said, can also be utilized by the mayors and governors because the purpose is actually to give back to the local government executives the power of supervising them in times of emergency.

Capt. Hongo said that not all can become militiamen. They are selected by the Baranggay captains, the municipal mayor and the provincial governors and the PC still conducts a background test on them before they could quality for training. They are also covered by the articles of war and can be disarmed and court-martialed if they commit offenses as militiamen.

13 Killed in Mindanao

[Text] Nine suspected members of the New People's Army were killed in an encounter with government troopers in (the Bicol) and in southern Negros during the last 2 weeks. Three of those killed clashed with elements of the 601st PC [Philippines Constabulary] Company in Barangay (Saransanan), Camarines Sur. Yesterday's encounter was reported to Camp Crame by Col (Nesso Ramos), Task Force (Radena) commander.

In southern Negros, Task Force (Salong) sources said six NPA members, including a commander, were slain in separate encounters with the military in the city of (Kapone), Barangay (Kamindangan), (Spalay) in (Sussidurin), Barangay (Ashia) in (Debaan), (Vode) in Negros Occidental.

Seventeen other terrorists were captured by military agents also during the past 2 weeks.

VIRATA STRESSES INDUSTRIAL RESTRUCTURING

HK040030 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 3 Jul 82

[Text] Prime Minister Cesar Virata yesterday said the government will soon launch an industrial restructuring program to boost the country's export drive. Virata made the announcement in a news conference to outline the government's program to change the composition of the country's exports, following a decline in demand and prices in the world market. The prime minister said industrial restructuring is needed so that more Philippine manufactured products could be exported.

Virata, who arrived from a meeting with World Bank officials in Tokyo, said despite protection and incentives given by the government to manufacturers, Philippine products have yet to make a major breakthrough in the international market. He noted that some vested interests are making it difficult for Philippine products to be exported, despite protective support from the government. At the same time, he said the country's energy development and conservation program, which gained the support of the World Bank, will cut down the country's dependence on imported oil to about 50 percent.

PARLIAMENTARY DELEGATION LEAVES FOR ROK

[Text] Tokyo, July 9, KYODO -- Six members of the Japan-(South) Korea Parliamentarians' League left for Seoul Friday for two days of talks with South Korean national assemblymen. The talks will focus on an agenda and other details of a joint session of the league and its South Korean counterpart, to be held in Tokyo in September.

The six Diet members, including former Upper House Speaker Ken Yasui, will also pay a courtesy call on Prime Minister Kim Sang-hyop and President Chon Tu-hwan during their stay in Seoul.

KOMOTO ON JAPAN-EEC OPPOSITION TO U.S. SANCTIONS

[Text] Tokyo, July 8, KYODO -- Japan's top economic policy planner indicated Thursday Japan should join the European Community nations in seeking Washington's policy change in connection with tightened U.S. economic sanctions against the Soviet Union.

Toshio Komoto, director general of the Economic Planning Agency, told an association of major Japanese trading firms that Japan "should keep step with the Common Market -- not blindly follow Washington's policy." Komoto made the remark in reply to a request from the Foreign Trade Council that the government cope with the issue from a long-term perspective because the Soviet Union offers potentially large demand.

The remark was understood to mean Japan should follow the lead of the Common Market, which decided at a community summit in late June to urge a change in the U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union.

DEFENSE SPENDING TO INCREASE IN FISCAL 83

[Text] Tokyo, July 9, KYODO -- The government has agreed to increase defense spending for fiscal 1983 by 7.34 percent to yen 2,776 billion (about dollar 10.76 billion), yen 190 billion more than this year, officials said Friday. The agreement was reached after hard bargaining between Finance Minister Michio Watanabe and Defense Agency Chief Soichiro Ito lasting from Thursday morning through early Friday.

Some yen 2,586 billion (about dollar 10 billion) was budgeted for defense in fiscal 1982 which started last April 1. This was 0.93 percent of the gross national product (GNP) and represented an increast of 7.75 percent from fiscal 1981.

At the meeting, Ito first called for a 9.7 percent or yen 250 billion increase, which Watanabe flatly rejected, officials said. The finance minister offered a 6.9 percent or yen 179 billion boost instead, the officials said. The Defense Agency reduced its request to an 8.42 percent or yen 218 billion increase later before agreeing on the 7.34 percent advance, the officials said.

The boost for defense is notable among major budget items in view of the government's current financial difficulties. The government planned to issue as much as yen 10.44 trillion (about dollar 40.5 billion) worth national bonds for fiscal 1982. The amount was 21 percent of Japan's total spending for the year which stood at yen 49.68 trillion (about dollar 192.5 billion). The cumulative balance of bond issues is estimated to reach about yen 93 trillion (about dollar 360 billion) by the end of March 1983, according to official figures.

In addition, the national treasury has suffered tax revenue shortfalls in a protracted recession. Fiscal 1981 tax revenue fell short by yen 3,334 billion (about dollar 12.9 billion) or 10.3 percent of the original estimate, government figures show. As a result, the government urged agencies and ministries to cut their budgetary requests for fiscal 1983 by a uniform 5 percent. However, defense, foreign aid, energy and technology were major items exempted from cuts.

Despite the increase, the United States, which has pressured Japan to make greater defense efforts, may still be dissatisfied, defense analysts said. This dissatisfaction may surface at a working-level meeting of Japanese and American defense officials scheduled in Hawaii from August 30 through September 1. Washington is expected to urge Tokyo to spend even more, particularly to build up Japan's defense capabilities to protect sealanes of up to 1,000 miles from its coast as promised by Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki in May 1981, the analysts said.

CABINET APPROVES WATANABE'S BUDGET LEVELS

[Text] Tokyo, July 9, KYODO -- The government Friday decided on a principle of slashing ministerial fiscal 1983 budget requests by 5 percent from this year's levels. This ceiling, reported by Finance Minister Michio Watanabe, was approved at a Cabinet meeting.

General expenditures were set at yen 33.070 billion (dollar 128.18 billion), up 1.4 percent. Defense spending was increased by 7.346 percent or yen 190 billion (dollar 736.4 million). Special accounts, in which larger sums were allocated from the previous year, were increased by yen 680 billion (dollar 2.64 billion). They included a yen 110 billion (dollar 426.3 million) increase for personnel costs, a yen 240 billion (dollar 930.2 million) rise for annuities and pension for war-bereaved families, a yen 51 billion (dollar 197.7 million) increase for official development assistance (ODA) and a yen 13.5 billion (dollar 523 million) rise for science and technology.

Ministries and government agencies will make their budget requests by August 31.

More on Budget Plans

[Excerpts] Tokyo, July 9, KYODO -- Japan will hold down its fiscal 1983 government spending to below yen 33.07 trillion (about dollar 128 billion), up only 1.4 percent from fiscal 1982, the government said Friday.

The total, which excludes bond-issuing costs and allocations to local autonomous bodies, is yen 450 billion (about dollar 1.74 billion) higher than yen 32.62 trillion (about dollar 126 billion) in the current fiscal year starting last April. Japan's general-account budget for the next fiscal year is expected to reach at least yen 51 trillion (about dollar 198 billion) because of swelling bond costs.

The government will compile its fiscal 1983 budget in December following talks between the government agencies and the Finance Ministry and between government and ruling Liberal-Democratic Party leaders.

Business leaders have already expressed dissatisfaction about the government "ceiling" on budgetary requests. Bumpei Otsuki, president of the Japan Federation of Employers' Association, said a five percent cut is not enough and a 10 percent reduction is necessary. Yoshihiro Inayama, president of the Federation of Economic Organizations, said the government should be austere against requests for rice price hikes and wage increases for public servants.

ROMANIA LIBERA INTERVIEW WITH KIM IL-SONG

AU081025 Bucharest ROMANIA LIBERA in Romanian 5 Jul 82 pp 1, 6

[Text] Comrade Kim Il-song, secretary general of the Korean Workers Party [KWP] Central Committee and president of the DPRK, recently gave an interview in Pyongyang to Mircea Moarcas, deputy editor-in-chief of our newspaper. Follows the text of the interview.

Question: Greatly esteemed Comrade President, what do you think of recent developments in Romanian-Korean relations in the light of the visit recently paid to Pyongyang by President Nicolae Ceausescu and Comrade Elena Ceausescu, and of the agreements concluded on that occasion?

Answer: We were very pleased to meet again with the esteemed Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, who recently visited our country for the third time, and who brought with him feelings of profound friendship for the Korean people. Our people received Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu with happiness and warmth, as an old friend, and greeted him enthusiastically as a very distinguished guest.

Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu's recent visit to our country constituted a forceful expression of Korean-Romanian friendship and solidarity, and an event of overwhelming historical importance for the development of the traditional relations of friendship and cooperation between our parties, countries and peoples toward a superior stage.

In our recent official talks with Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, we exchanged views on the further development of Korean-Romanian friendship and cooperation, and on international questions of joint interest. On all the matters discussed our views were identical. Various agreements were concluded between the DPRK and the Socialist Republic of Romania during the visit, with a view to consistently developing bilateral relations and promoting the revolution and development in both countries. This constitutes an eloquent expression of the increasingly profound mutual confidence between the Korean and Romanian parties, governments and peoples.

The friendship and solidarity between Korea and Romania constitute a model of revolutionary solidarity between socialist countries, based on sovereignty. The Korean and Romanian peoples are class brothers and great friends, since both oppose imperialism and struggle for the triumph of the cause of socialism and communism. Our parties and peoples have long since established ties of lasting friendship based on the principle of independence and full equality. Throughout this period, they have efficiently helped each other and have cooperated closely. Following the conclusion of the 1975 treaty of friendship and cooperation between the DPRK and the Socialist Republic of Romania, in Bucharest, these relations of friendship and cooperation have been developing extensively in all areas: political, economic and cultural.

The relations of friendship and cooperation between Korea and Romania, which are based on revolutionary principles and which have overcome historical difficulties, will increasingly develop and consolidate, in keeping with the two peoples' interests. These relations of friendship and cooperation which are continuously strengthened and developed will greatly contribute to the scope of the revolutionary struggle and to our countries' development, to strengthening the unity and solidarity of the socialist countries and of the international revolutionary forces. In the future, too, the Korean people will increasingly strengthen their friendship and solidarity with the fraternal Romanian people in the struggle against imperialism and for the final triumph of the cause of socialism and communism, and will resolutely struggle, together with the peoples in socialist countries and to all other nations supporting the cause of independence.

Question: The extensive events devoted to your 70th birthday anniversary served to highlight the great achievements attained by the DPRK, under your direct leadership, in building socialism in your country. Greatly esteemed Comrade President, what do you consider to be the most important experience gained by people's Korea in the course of this vast work?

Answer: Under the correct leadership of the party, our people have attained great successes in the socialist revolution and construction, and amassed valuable experience in the process. The most important of the experiences gained by our people throughout their revolutionary struggle points out that victory and success in all areas can be guaranteed through the adoption of an independent position. In each country the party and the people are the masters of their own revolution. Hence, they must adopt an attitude worthy of revolutionary leaders, and must promote independent stands in all areas. Viewing the promotion of an independent position as one of the essential and decisive issues of the fate of the revolution and of development, our party has always adopted such positions resolutely, ever since it assumed leadership of the revolution. It has independently mapped out its policies, in accordance with the requirements of the Korean revolution and the interests of our people, and resolved all the problems that emerged in the process of revolution and development on the basis of its own convictions and judgment. Both the efforts to educate and change the people, and those aimed at economic and cultural development have been carried out in our own manner.

An independent position means implementation of the chuche concept in the areas of ideology, political sovereignty, economic independence and self-defense. Our party has defined those principles as the guiding ideas in our revolution and has resolutely endeavored to give them a concrete shape.

By resolutely promoting the chuche ideology and strictly implementing the principles of political sovereignty, economic independence and self-defense, we have spiritually freed the people from all the obsolete ideas that had for a long time been eroding their aspirations to national independence, and have transformed our backward country into a strong socialist state, worthy of respect, politically sovereign, and with an independent and sound national economy and a strong capability for national defense.

Another important experience we had in the course of revolutionary leadership is the realization that the mainspring of the force necessary to accelerate revolutionary and development processes lies in the efficient chanelling of the revolutionary enthusiasm and creative genius of the people's masses. The working masses are the engineers of history, directly responsible for the revolution and for development. They possess an inexhaustible force and intelligence, and rich practical experience. Nothing in the world is stronger or wiser than the working masses. In the final analysis, the success of the revolution and of development depends on the mobilization of the inexhaustible force of the masses. Convinced that the fundamental means of successfully completing the revolution and construction work is to optimally mobilize the revolutionary enthusiasm and the creative talents of the masses, our party has promoted the following principle: Solutions to all problems must be based on the force and wisdom of the masses. Whenever great and complex tasks, difficulties and trials emerged in the revolutionary struggle and in the development process, our party was among the people, stimulating their revolutionary enthusiasm, energetically mobilizing and organizing their creative talents. Thus, we were capable of successfully overcoming difficulties and obstacles, of promoting a revolutionary upsurge in the socialist construction on all fronts, and of securing our revolution's vigorous progress in the spirit of chollima, the battle against time.

Our experience in the process of revolutionary and development leadership also demonstrates that the three revolutions -- ideological, technological and cultural -- constitute the basic means of conquering the ideological and material fortresses of communism. Essentially, the revolution is a struggle for the independence of the working masses. To fully achieve such an independence, the working masses must be freed from all forms of social domination, subordination and inequality.

As the masses are freed from class domination and enslavement through the revolutionary transformation of an obsolete political and economic system, they can be freed from ideological constraints and from an obsolete political and economic system. They can be freed from ideological constraints and from an obsolete technology and culture through an ideological, technological and cultural revolution. To successfully complete the work of changing man, society and nature, these three revolutions must be efficiently implemented. Consequently, all members of society must be transformed into communist-type people, and the necessary socio-economic conditions must be created for achieving complete independence for the masses. The three revolutions are very important for countries that never went through an industrial revolution, or were colonized or semicolonized by imperialists before proclaiming their independence, and that are now building a new society.

Immediately upon engaging in the building of a new society, our party adopted the pursuit of the three revolutions -- ideological technological and cultural -- a guidance, and energetically acted along those lines. After the victory of the socialist revolution and the establishment of a socialist regime in our country, the party defined the three revolutions as the main objective of a socialist society, and resolutely promoted them in all areas.

Giving absolute priority to the ideological revolution and at the same time vigorously promoting the technological and cultural revolutions, our party succeeded in obtaining noteworthy successes in changing man, in technological restructuring and in cultural development, and rapidly advanced our revolution and development. The victories and successes attained by our people in their revolutionary struggle and in construction activities clearly demonstrate the correctness and invincible vitality of the ideology of the three revolutions, and confirm the fact that the ideological, technological and cultural revolutions constitute the basic means of building communism.

On the basis of our achievements and experience to date, we will further preserve our independent position in all areas of the revolution and of development, will further efficiently organize and mobilize the revolutionary enthusiasm and creative talents of the masses, and will strictly implement the ideology of the three revolutions: ideological, technological and cultural, with a view to accelerating the final victory of socialism and communism and of our bright future.

Question: The Sixth KWP Congress established a vast program of national development for the 1980's. The motto of this program is confidence in the country's own forces. Greatly esteemed Comrade President, what significance and contents do you ascribe to this national motto for the DPRK's current development stage?

Answer: As you know, the Sixth KWP Congress defined the 10 future objectives of socialist economic development for the 1980's. Throughout all sectors of the national economy we will increase production rapidly, so that in the near future we will produce 100 billion kWh electrical power annually; 120 million tons of coal; 15 million tons of steel; 1.5 million tons of non-ferrous metals; 20 million tons of cement; 7 million tons of chemical fertilizer; 1.5 billion meters of textiles; 5 million tons of maritime products; and 15 million tons of grain. In the coming 10 years we will reclaim 300,000 zangbo (approximately 300,000 hectares) of saline land. Those are the ten future objectives of socialist economic development that we plan to achieve in the 1980's.

In order to efficiently work to attain those great objectives of socialist economic development for the 1980's it is important to consistently promote the principle of self-reliance. Self-reliance constitutes a revolutionary spirit and a militant working style since, in order to resolve all the problems raised by the revolution and by development, one must rely on one's own capabilities. The working masses must assume responsibility for and resolve all such problems through their own means. Naturally, a certain foreign aid may be invoked in the revolution and for development, but the essential factor is one's own forces.

When you are dependent on others you cannot devise judicious solutions to your own problems. The working masses will only be able to resolutely promote the revolution and development if they remain faithful to the principles of confidence in their own forces.

Self-reliance is the revolutionary principle which our people unremittingly follow in their revolution and development. Assiduously promoting the revolutionary principle of self-reliance in the struggle for sovereignty, independence and socialism, our people have succeeded in bravely overcoming all difficulties and trials, in progressing with confident strides along the path of victory, in eliminating their centuries-long backwardness and poverty within a short period of time, and in forging an independent and developed socialist national economy. In the past our country was not capable of manufacturing the simplest agricultural tools. Today, it has a forceful and independent socialist national economy capable of producing everything that is necessary for building socialism and for the people's well-being. This is due to the fact that our people have implemented the revolutionary principle of self-reliance. The practice of struggle for building socialism in our country has clearly demonstrated the great vitality of the principle of self-reliance.

Our people are inspired by the desire and unswerving determination to achieve the 10 great future objectives of socialist economic development for the 1980's through their own forces: By firmly promoting the revolutionary principle of self-reliance. The assiduous promotion of the revolutionary principle of self-reliance guarantees a continual upsurge in production and development, it guarantees success in the achievement of the 10 great future objectives of socialist development.

In the struggle to achieve our future objectives we will resolutely promote, as in the past, the revolutionary principle of self-reliance. By firmly implementing this revolutionary principle, we will meet our own requirements -- through research and inventions -- and will honorably achieve the 10 future objectives of socialist economic development through our own forces, our own technology and our own resources.

Question: As is known, the current international situation features very complex aspects. Greatly esteemed Comrade President, what is your view on the efforts currently being made in the world to safeguard international peace and security? What is the DPRK position on the major international problems?

Answer: As you correctly stated, the current general international situation is very complex. The complexity of and tension in the international situation are due to the increasing intensification of the imperialists' aggressive plots. Alarmed by the increase and consolidation of independent, anti-imperialist forces, the imperialists are doing the impossible to preserve their sphere of domination at any price. They are continuously staging armed interventions, subversions and sabotage in order to stifle the peoples' struggle for national independence and the building a new society; are bolstering considerably their aggressive armed forces in areas that are rich in natural resources and in strategically important areas; and are stubbornly endeavoring to establish new aggressive military blocs. As a result of their aggressive, warmongering plots, peace and security are threatened in many areas of the world, internationaltensions are reaching peak intensities, and the danger of a new world war is growing from one day to the other.

The current situation makes it urgently necessary for the nations of the world to resolutely struggle to preempt and thwart plots aimed at provoking a new war and to safeguard international peace and security. Currently, many countries in Europe and in other parts of the world are intensifying their struggle against the arms race, against the production of new types of nuclear weapons, and for establishing denuclearized and peace zones.

We highly appreciate the active efforts made by the Romanian party and Government, led by Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, to defend peace and security in Europe, to relax international tension, to cut back armaments and to eliminate nuclear arms.

If the many peace-loving peoples on all continents and in all countries unite closely and energetically struggle against imperialism and war, they will succeed in thwarting the imperialists' plots aimed at provoking a new world war, and in safeguarding international peace and security.

The Korean people greatly value peace, our party and government have set, as a consistent political guideline, constant actions to preserve a lasting peace and security in the world. In close unity with the peoples in socialist and nonaligned countires and with the other progressive nations of the world, we will resolutely struggle to preempt and thwart the imperialists' aggressive and warmongering plots,and to maintain a lasting peace and security in the world.

One of the problems that must be solved to preserve international peace and security is that of halting increases in armed forces and the arms race carried out by the imperialists, and the achievement of total disarmament. Increases in armed forces and the arms race, increases that are intensifying with each passing day, exacerbate international tension and seriously endanger international peace.

All progressive and peace-loving peoples in the world are dutybound to resolutely struggle to halt increases in armed forces and the arms race of the imperialists, and to impose general and complete disarmament.

The imperialists' aggressive military blocs seriously and permanently endanger the cause of international peace and security. As long as they continue to exist, international tension will continue to mount, something that will finally bring about a new world war. International peace and security will not become lasting until all military blocs and all means of warfare are eliminated from the face of the earth.

We advocate the complete dismantling of the aggressive military blocs of the imperialists. When those military blocs are completely abolished, the military blocs of the socialist countries opposing them will lose their reason for existence. Simultaneous with the dismantling of military blocs, the aggressive military bases located on foreign territories must also be dismantled, and all foreign troops stationed there must be withdrawn. The imperialists have installed aggressive military bases almost everywhere in the world, and on them they have stationed aggressive armed forces; they are using those bases and troops to plot aggressive schemes and interventions against the countries representing the new emerging forces, and to repress the revolutionary struggle of the nations. We demand the dismantling of all foreign military bases in South Korea and in other parts of the world, and the unconditional withdrawal of the aggressive troops from those areas.

To save mankind from the disaster of a nuclear war, all nuclear weapons must be destroyed and denuclearized regions as well as regions of peace must be established everywhere in the world. This is the only factor that can completely eliminate the danger of a nuclear war and that can genuinely guarantee peace and security. Our people are endeavoring to turn more than just the Korean Peninsula into a denuclearized region of peace; they are giving active support to peace-loving nations throughout the world in their struggle to establish denuclearized and peace areas in Asia, the Near and Middle East, Africa, Latin America and Europe.

One of the major current problems concerning the safeguarding of international peace and security is that of peaceful settlement of conflicts between the countries representing the new emerging forces. The imperialists are subtly taking advantage of complex problems, particularly of border disputes -- a consequence of colonial domination -- to sow discord and enmity between the new emerging forces, to cause disagreement, conflicts and clashes between them. As a result of those imperialist actions, hostilities are breaking out in various areas of the world even between fraternal countries, and international peace and security are seriously threatened.

The conflicts between countries representing the new emerging forces constitute internal problems between brothers who are jointly advancing toward their common goal; hence, they cannot be solved by outside forces. Those countries must settle their conflicts through negotiations, without any foreign interference, in accordance with their mutual interests and with the interests of international peace. As for those conflicts, our party and government refrain from helping or opposing any of the sides involved; they are consistently maintaining an impartial position and are guided by the principle of helping the sides involved to solve their conflicts themselves, peacefully, in accordance with their own interests. This equitable position adopted by the party and government of our republic has been warmly hailed by all nations in the world, and has contributed considerably to safeguarding peace and security in the world.

Question: The Romanian people are following with feelings of militant solidarity the Korean people's struggle for the peaceful and independent reunification of their country -- their supreme national aspiration. Greatly esteemed Comrade President, what do you think is the way to overcome the current difficulties and obstacles that prevent the Korean people from achieving this supreme national ideal?

Answer: Immediately after the division of our country, we advanced a large number of very equitable and reasonable proposals for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country, reflecting the unanimous will and aspiration of all the Korean people; we made every possible effort to achieve this aspiration. Nevertheless, due to the hostile plots of internal and foreign enemies, our country is still divided, and there are still many difficulties and obstacles in the way of our fatherland's reunification.

The occupation of South Korea by American troops and the interference of American imperialism in the internal affairs of Korea constitute the major obstacle for the independent and peaceful reunification of our country. The American imperialists not only occupy South Korea -- using enormous armed forces for that -- but also promote the policy of "two Koreas", aimed at delaying our country's reunification and at perpetuating its division. Currently, the American imperalists are doing everything they can to fabricate "two Koreas", a strategy they view as fundamental to their policy toward Korea. As long as the American imperialists occupy South Korea and continue to interfere in the internal affairs of our country, it will be impossible to successfully resolve the problem of the country's independent and peaceful reunification. Were the United States in the least interested inthe problem of our reunification, it would withdraw their aggressive armed forces from South Korea as soon as possible, would give up the policy of "two Koreas" which contravenes the aspirations of the Korean nation and contemporary trends, and would stop interfering in Korea's internal affairs.

Another obstacle in the way of our country's independent and peaceful reunification is the dependent policy promoted by the South Korean puppet clique and its militaristic and fasicst aims. Under the pretext of the "threat of aggression against the South", a threat which is in fact nonexistent, the South Korean puppet clique bets to make the occupation of South Korea by the imperialist aggressive troops permanent, and uses all possible means to promote the policy of the "two Koreas" practiced by the American imperialists. Hoping to stay in power for a long time, and taking advantage of a permanent division of the country, the puppet clique mercilessly throttles democracy in all social areas and brutally represses the struggle of the South Korean people for democracy and reunification.

Our country will be reunified independently and peacefully only when the subservient and treacherous policy of the South Korean authority is defeated and the South Korean society democratized. The defeat of that policy and the democratization will make the conflicts and mistrust between North and South disappear, and will permit rapid progress toward reunification.

Our people are facing great difficulties and obstacles in their reunification efforts; however, strengthened by efficient support and encouragement from all nations in the world, they will honorably overcome them and will finally carry out the historic reunification.

In order to eliminate the obstacles preventing the reunification, it is essential to forge a great national unity. The unity of our entire nation will permit us to foil hostile plots, however perfidious, hatched by internal and foreign divisionists, and effect an independent and peaceful reunification. All Koreans in the North, South and abroad must closely unite under the banner of reunification, must overcome differences of ideology, system, party membership and political ideas, and must engage as one in the sacred struggle for the withdrawal of the aggressive troops of the American imperialists from South Korea and for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

Strengthening the solidarity with the international revolutionary forces is the revolutionary line that our party and government consistently promote in the struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

Due to the correct revolutionary line of our party and government, international solidarity with our revolution is growing daily. Our people's revolutionary struggle for independent and peaceful reunification enjoy an increasingly active support and encouragement from the entire world. An unprecedented number of people are expressing support and sympathy for our revolutionary work.

The Romanian party, government and people are energetically expressing their multifaceted support and sympathy for our people in their revolutionary struggle for their country's independent and peaceful reunification. This constitutes a great encouragement for our people in their struggle for their just revolutionary cause.

I want to take this opportunity to express sincere thanks to the RCP, to the Government of the Socialist Republic of Romania and to the fraternal Romanian people for the encouragement and efficient and sincere support given to our people in their struggle for the country's independent and peaceful reunification.

N. KOREA TROOPS FIRE ON S. KOREA DMZ OUTPOST

[Text] Seoul, July 9 (YONHAP) -- North Korean troops opened machine-gun fire at a South Korean outpost across the demilitarized zone (DMZ) Friday prompting South Korean guards to return fire in self-defense, the Defense Ministry announced. A brief ministry announcement said the exchange of fire that lasted several minutes took place in the buffer zone's northeasternmost area.

There were no casualties on the southern part by the firing, the fourth so far this year started by North Korea in the DMZ in violation of the 1953 armistice agreement, it said.

The latest northern provocation, the announcement said, came four days after a South Korean fishing boat with a crew of 38 narrowly escaped an abduction attempt by a North Korean patrol boat on the high seas 220 miles northeast of Ullung Island in the East Sea.

Friday's incident that began at 1:10 pm occurred at about the same area, where a northern spy was killed by southern soldiers in May of last year while attempting to sneak into the South and where North Korean troops started firing against the southern outpost on June 7.

Meanwhile, the United Nations Command said an investigation was under way to look into the latest shooting and that it would lodge a protest with North Korea against the provocation following the probe.

NEW MAC MEETING PROCEDURES PROPOSED BY UNC

[Text] Panmunjom -- The U.N. Command proposed to the northern side yesterday two-point procedures aimed at operating the meetings of the Military Armistice Commission (MAC) reasonably.

One of the two is that both sides observe the March 1972 subsequent agreement to the armistice agreement on three-hour recesses of the MAC meetings unless one side has begun its final statement and chooses to continue even though the session would continue beyond the three-hour limit.

The other point is that the side making the final statement would be required to call a recess at the three-hour limit unless the ending statement would not exceed 20 minutes, which is the length of a recess.

The proposal was made by Col. Patrick H. Brady, UNCMAC secretary, at the 466th meeting of the MAC Secretariat, which was called by the UNC side. Col. Brady said that the purpose of the overture was to ensure that unnecessary disruption such as occurred at the 414th MAC meeting do not recur. At that meeting, held last June 16, the North Korean side attempted to prevent the UNC senior member from making his final statement by insisting the UNC must first propose a 20-minute recess since the meeting had gone on for three hours. The two sides had provided for such interim recesses in a subsequent agreement to the 1953 armistice agreement in March 1972.

The UNCMAC secretary noted a number of minor deviations from this procedure by both sides in the past, saying that the UNC believed these deviations were reasonable, workable and should continue unless a closing statement was rather lengthy.

Col. Brady's northern counterpart Col. Kim Yon-ki responded that the UNC's proposal was intended only to cover up its senior members' violation of the recess procedure at the 414th MAC meeting. He said no new agreement was necessary if both sides abided by that procedure.

IECOK PLEDGES 'ALL POSSIBLE ASSISTANCE' TO ROK

[Text] Paris, July 8 (YONHAP) -- The 12th General Meeting of the International Economic Consultative Organization for Korea (IECOK) ended its two-day session here Wednesday with a pledge to extend "all possible assistance" to South Korea's Fifth Five-Year Economic Development Plan.

In a joint communique issued at the end of the conference, the IECOK, comprised of 10 industrialized countries including France and the United States, officially recognized major Korean economic goals such as gross national product growth rates, price stabilization and social welfare projects as envisioned by the five-year plan.

South Korean Commerce and Industry Minister Kim Tong-hwi, the chief Korean delegate to the meeting, told the conference that the Korean economy has regained stability, overcoming the setbacks it suffered in the wake of President Pak Chong-hui's assassination in October 1979.

The IECOK advised Korea to improve its export competitiveness, to liberalize foreign investment activities through capital market decontrol, and to initiate measures designed to increase domestic investments. It also underscored the need for major customers of Korean-made products to further open their markets to Korean exporters. Endorsing Korea's continued international economic policies, the IECOK expressed optimism about the country's foreign debt servicing ability in the years to come, despite the uncertain export market.

The meeting was also attended by representatives from international financing establishments such as the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank. The IECOK was inaugurated in 1963 to aid Korean development projects. The member countries are the United States, Australia, Belgium, Canada, the United Kingdom, West Germany, France, Italy, Japan and Austria.

HERALD WELCOMES IECOK PLEDGE, ECONOMIC UPTURN

[Editorial: "IECOK Support"]

[Text] This year's IECOK (International Economic Consultative Organization for Korea) meeting which closed in Paris yesterday deserves particular attention as it had to face an unfavorable environment. It is gratifying that the 10-nation organization concluded with an agreement to help supply Korea with foreign capital needed to implement its Fifth Five-Year Economic and Social Development Plan which started this year.

Of course, there are several problems which are likely to hinder some of the plan's goals as the International Bank of Reconstruction and Development evaluation of the Korean economy points out. Possibly throughout the plan period, our efforts will confront high energy costs, high interest rates and low GNP growth in advanced economies. The World Bank suggested slowing down Korea's growth rate projected at 7-8 percent for the five-year plan.

Although the IBRD suggestion no doubt merits our attention, there are positive factors supporting the five-year plan. As IECOK noted in a closing statement, the Korean economy is now resurging, though slowly, after a two-year slump. Its exports are also expected to increase again. This year's good performance, thus far, and the improving international payments situation in particular, gives rise to favorable prospects for the economy as a whole.

As Korea's chief delegate Minister of Commerce and Industry Kim Tong-whi told the conference, inflation, which has slowed down to six percent this year, and the decline in the current account deficit also add to the degree of resilience of the Korean economy. As it stands, the current account deficit is likely to fall sharply from last year's level.

The foreign capital requirements for the five-year plan, which visualizes a second takeoff of the economy for the 80s, totals $46.5 billion. Of this total, $37.5 billion is to be sought in long-term loans. What is noteworthy, in this connection, is the prospective drop of the nation's debt service ratio to 11.2 percent by 1986, the final year of the five-year development plan. This prospect, as well as the feasibility of the plan, will assure potential creditors of the worth of their capital involvement in the Korean economy.

After enduring two oil shocks and a subsequent recession, which still lingers on, the Korean economy is about to revive its dynamic growth. The basis for stability has been strengthened in the process of coping with recent throes, as demonstrated by the steady price movement, among others. Also, incentives for investment are being increased through a set of new financial measures.

The six-month performance of the economy this year suggests a six percent growth in real terms for the first year of the Fifth Five-Year Plan, and there are increasing signs of a steady economic pick-up. These developments, coupled with the government-led efforts to invigorate the capital market, will brighten the chances for inducing foreign capital.

NATION DETAILS SIHANOUK'S 8 JULY ACTIVITIES

[By Winit Kamchon]

[Excerpts] Phum Thmei, western Kampuchea -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk stepped back into Kampuchean soil for the second time in two days yesterday -- to meet his former enemies, the Khmer Rouge leaders, who, toasting champagne amidst cheering armed fighters, put up a warm welcome to mark the "great national union against the Vietnamese."

Sihanouk and Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan climbed up on elephants after a four-hour meeting with the top Khmer Rouge leaders in the presence of about 2,000 armed guerrillas and disappeared into the jungle, reportedly to inspect a major military camp. Reporters were told to leave the camp after that. It was about 3 pm.

It was the first time since the Khmer Rouge, who had put Sihanouk under house arrest throughout their reign until January, 1979, that the prince stepped back on an area controlled by the Khmer Rouge.

Most of the top Khmer Rouge leaders were on hand to greet the prince when he arrived with his wife, Princess Monique, and four other top aides from Bangkok at around 11 pm at this village, Phum Thmei, which means "new village." They included Ieng Sary, former deputy premier and foreign minister of the Khmer Rouge, Ieng Thirith, Thiounn Thioum, Son Sen, Thuch Ron, Pech Cheang and several other DK's ambassadors posted abroad.

The prince and his entourage walked across a bridge from the Thai frontier over a large banner which proclaimed: Welcome, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea. . . . Sihanouk held an hour of talks with the Khmer Rouge leadership apparently to discuss the future of its coalition and some final touch to the cabinet list, expected to be announced today or tomorrow.

After the session, the prince and his entourage were led to another thatched-roof tent which had been turned into a canteen. The food and beverage were apparently well-stocked. The scene was, however, a paradox to an extreme. The sight of Sihanouk holding court with Khmer Rouge leaders recalled the old days of soured relations between the two. The sight of Princess Monique seated next to Ieng Thirith, both trying to look normal and amicable, was gingerly ironical.

Commenting on Hanoi's announcement that there will be a partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, Sihanouk said: "It has no significance. It is just a propaganda without any good consequence for the Cambodians or future of Cambodia. Sihanouk charged that Vietnam "is not ready to give up its process of colonizing Cambodia."

The smiling prince told the reporters that he had a plan to travel to a number of countries after his visit here. He listed China, North Korea, France, England, U.S., Belgium and Japan as among the countries he will visit.

He also reiterated his intention to represent Democratic Kampuchea in the September meeting of the non-aligned countries in Iraq. While in New York, he said, he will attend the UN General Assembly on behalf of Democratic Kampuchea.

He told the jungle press conference that the partners in the coalition government had yet to re-examine the cabinet list before it could be finalized. He said Son Sann "had not appointed senior enough people to the cabinet." "We have to re-examine the list. We are in the middle and are doing something to present a good list," he said laughingly.

Sihanouk also confirmed the NATION's report that Deputy Khmer Rouge Premier Ieng Sary was nominated to the Economic and Finance Committee of the new cabinet while Son Sen was nominated to the Defence Comittee. Thiounn Thioeunn, a powerful Khmer Rouge leader, was nominated to the Public Health Comittee and Thuch Rin to the Education and Culture Committee, he said.

It was obvious to most reporters at the scene that both sides were trying to cover up their former "nightmarish" experience. This village just across the Thai border has been used as a reception area, consisting of a row of thatch-roofed guest houses and bunkers, each of which could house up to 20 persons. Asked whether the area had come under attack at all, a Khmer Rouge liaison officer admitted that some Vietnamese shells had landed on the village. According to informed sources, this village is not located too far from a major Khmer Rouge jungle base which houses some 6,000 men.

Last night, it remained unclear where Sihanouk was staying. He did not return to the Erawan Hotel after the visit to the Khmer Rouge camp although he had earlier been scheduled to visit a camp of the Sihanoukist Moulanaka camp today. All concerned parties refused to disclose Sihanouk's whereabouts last night.

HENG SAMRIN CRITICIZES COALITION GOVERNMENT

[Text] Phnom Penh, 8 Jul (SPK) -- The formation of the so-called "coalition government of traitors Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan by the Beijing expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and the reactionary circles of ASEAN does not serve the interests of the Kampuchean people, stressed Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State.

During his visit Tuesday, 6 July, to the cadres of the Ministry of Interior, Chairman Heng Samrin congratulated them on their efforts to maintain social order and security.

Over the past 3 years, he pointed out, under the just leadership of the KPRP and fortified by national and international solidarity, particualrly with Vietnam, the Kampuchean people have won considerable successes in all fields. In every state of the struggle for independence and freedom, the strategic Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos alliance is a factor determining the success of the Kampuchean revolution in particular and that of the Indochinese countries in general.

Chairman Heng Samrin talked about the attempt of Beijing expansionism-hegemonism, U.S. imperialism and the reactionary forces to undermine the rebirth of the Kampuchean people. The people and revolutionary army of Kampuchea, he said, have foiled the enemy maneuvers and are consolidating the revolutionary power, Beijing expansionism, U.S. imperialism and their lackeys are the long-term enemies of the revolution of the three Indochinese peoples.

General Secretary Heng Samrin called on them to preserve and consolidate the strategic alliance and cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries to frustrate the perfidious maneuvers and psychological war of the enemies and to maintain order, security and the revolutionary gains.

Khang Sarin, minister of interior, accompanied Chairman Heng Samrin during his visit

HUN SEN, DELEGATION RETURN FROM HO CHI MINH CITY

[Text] Phnom Penh, 8 Jul (SPK) -- The Foreign Ministry delegation led by Minister Hun Sen member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau returned to Phnom Penh today at the end of the sixth foreign ministers conference of the three Indochinese countries held in Ho Chi Minh City on 6-7

It was greeted at Pochentong Airport by Sar Kheng, deputy chief of cabinet of the KPRP Central Committee, and personalities from the Foreign Ministry. Vietnamese Ambassador Ngo Dien and Lao Ambassador Khamphan Vilachit were present.

Interview on Conference

[Text] Phnom Penh, 7 Jul (SPK) -- Following are questions and answers of the interview given by PRK Minister of Foreign Affairs Hun Sen to our correspondent at the end of the conference of the ministers of foreign affairs of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos held in Ho Chi Minh City:

Question 1: Comrade Minister, would you please tell as about the conference's assessment of the situation in Southeast Asia?

Answer: According to the conference's assessment on Southeast Asia, despite collusion between Beijing expansionists, the United States and other reactionary forces in order to maintain and intensify the tension and sabotage the revolution of the three Indochinese countries, the situation continues to develop in favor of the revolution. In Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea, the revolution continues to develop and consolidate day after day. In Kampuchea we can state clearly that:

After the overthrow of the genocidal regime by the revolutionary forces, the Chinese and Thai reactionaries helped remnants of the Pol Potist army settle down in Thailand and used them, as well as other Kampuchean reactionaries, to serve their purpose of preventing the rebirth of the Kampuchean people. Yet, in a period of over 3 years, not only has life been restored but the revolution has also made remarkable progress. On the contrary, the Pol Potists continue to struggle in the quagmire of defeat. During the last dry season, a number of their bases at the Thai-Kampuchean border were destroyed. A certain number of underground refuges inside the country were discovered and neutralized. A fairly large number of spies and terrorists were captured or surrendered to the authorities. Many people who inadvertantly followed the reactionary gangs have changed sides and joined the population.

Our enemies have tried by all means to maintain the United Nations' seat illegally occupied by Pol Pot, but the representatives of this genocidal regime have more and more been exposed by world opinion.

Question 2: Comrade Minister, how did the conference evaluate the formation of the so-called tripartite coalition government of the Khmer reactionaries?

Answer: The conference considered the formation of the so-called "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea" of the three Kampuchean reactionary groups simply a farce to hide the ugly face of the Pol Potist clique.

We all know that for the past 3 years, the expansionists exclusively counted on the group of Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan. By trying to give the clique a new image, Beijing has acknowledged its failure.

By concluding a pact with the genocidal criminals, Sihanouk and Son Sann have become Pol Potists. On the other hand, Sihanouk and Son Sann have realized their weakness and are hoping, in vain, that this collusion will consolidate their position. The mask has been pulled aside and none of these sinister people can expect to deceive either the Kampuchean people or world opinion. By this coalition farce, the Beijing expansionists, the imperialists and the Thai reactionary circles have demonstrated their passivity and proved their obstinate hostility towards us again. Such stubbornness only stirs up our people's hatred and makes the people strengthen their vigilance.

In recent years, under the leadership of the KPRP and with our national unity and solidarity with the world, especially with Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, we have progressed from victory to victory. It is certain that by continuing along this direction, our people will foil all maneuvers of the enemy.

Question 3: Would you please tell us about proposals made at the conference concerning Kampuchea?

Answer: Here are the proposals, in short, concerning Kampuchea.

The presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea was the result of an agreement between the governments of Kampuchea and Vietnam in order to deal with the threat from the Chinese expansionists ... When the threat disappears, Kampuchea will work with Vietnam on the repatriation of the Vietnamese troops. Please underline, by the way, that the Kampuchean people always desire to live in peace with the Chinese people and that they will never consider the Chinese people with hostility.

Concerning Thailand, the presence of Vietnamese fighters in Kampuchea in no way threatens Thailand. If Thailand disarms the forces of Pol Pot, stops giving them supplies and sheltering them inside Thai territory where they launch sabotage against the Kampuchean revolution, Kampuchea will make an agreement with Vietnam on the partial withdrawal of the Vietnamese army. As a gesture of good will, Kampuchea and Vietnam have decided to take the first step: A number of Vietnamese troops will be withdrawn from Kampuchea during the month of July. If Thailand responds favorably and if there is security and stability along the Thai-Kampuchean border, a further withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea might be considered in the future. On the contrary, if this first withdrawal is used as an opportunity to step up activities against the Kampuchean people, our country and Vietnam will work together over the appropriate riposte to be made in conformity with their treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation, signed on 18 February 1979. If Thailand is not ready to accept the proposal on the establishment of the demilitarized zone immediately, we propose the setting up of a safety zone along each side of the Thai-Kampuchean border. Once the troops of Pol Pot and other reactionaries stationed in Thailand have been disarmed and the refugee camps have been moved away from the safety zone, Vietnamese troops will also be withdrawn. There will remain only Thai troops on the Thai side of the border and Kampuchean troops on the Kampuchean side of the border under the safety zone.

Question 4: What is the signification, Comrade Minister, of this partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops in July?

Answer: The first withdrawal of Vietnamese troops is a gesture of good will on the part of Kampuchea and Vietnam. If the Thai authorities do not respond to it, their reactionary nature will be laid bare and then the world will better understand the just cause of our people and will give us more support.

The partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea also shows that Vietnam's aid to Kampuchea is unselfish aid. Today as yesterday, Vietnam will not hesitate to support the Kampuchean revolution at the expense of the blood of its best children. The purpose of Vietnam's aid to our country is to allow us to be strong in all aspects as soon as possible in order to be able to defend and reconstruct the country ourselves.

Also, the partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea is proof of stability in Kampuchea. The forces of Kampuchea have grown bigger. The Kampuchean revolution continues to consolidate day after day. The army and people of Kampuchea have made progress.

Question 5: In your opinion, Comrade Minister, what do we have to do in order to achieve more victories?

Answer: Our people warmly hail the success of the 6th conference of the foreign ministers of our three countries. Our people fully support the logical and reasonable proposals, the just cause and the good will of our government and our two fraternal countries. We are convinced that the three Indochinese countries' just cause will earn support from progressive mankind. However, we must not delude ourselves with illusions about the struggle so that we will achieve new victories.

In order to respond to the decisions adopted at the conference and to step up our offensive against the enemy in all areas, our compatriots, cadres and combatants must energetically compete in best achieving the following major tasks:

Strengthen unity of the people and the army, strengthen our solidarity with the world people, especially with Vietnam, enhance vigilance and be ready to fight.

Increase agricultural production in order to achieve a good harvest for this main season,

Continue to consolidate our revolutionary forces in every respect.

KHIEU SAMPHAN SCORES SRV TROOP WITHDRAWAL

["Statement made by Khieu Samphan to a reporter from the Voice of Democratic Kampuchea" -- dated 8 July 1982; read by announcer]

[Text] The Hanoi Vietnamese aggressors have said that they will carry out a partial withdrawal of their troops from Kampuchea. This is a cheap lie and a trick, something they do by habit and tradition.

The Vietnamese will not effect a partial withdrawal of their troops from Kampuchea -- not even a single soldier will be withdrawn. They will continue to carry out their policy of forced conscription in Kampuchea and will send more reinforcements from Vietnam. We have waged a bloody struggle on the real and physical battlefield against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors every hour of every day of the year. Therefore, we are fully aware of their tricks and will not let them dupe us.

Our Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas are initimately acquainted with the tricky behaviour of the Vietnamese enemy aggressors. They have always fought vigorously and valiantly against the Vietnamese Enemy, gradually wearing them down until they are finally defeated and completely driven out of our beloved Kampuchean territory.

Our position is always firm. We seek to implement the resolutions of the 34th, 35th and 36th UN General Assemblies, which called for the Vietnamese aggressors to withdraw their troops completely and unconditionally from Kampuchea and leave the Kampuchean people to solve their own problems by themselves through a free election under UN supervision.

[Station editorial: "Peace and Friendship Are Our Most Important Goal"]

[Text] The sixth conference of the foreign ministers of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos held in Ho Chi Minh City from 6 to 7 July, 1982, proceeded smoothly and was crowned with brilliant success.

Elated, the Kampuchean people express warmest greetings for the brilliant outcome of this conference.

During this session, the participants proceeded to an analysis and correct assessment of the situation in Southeast Asia during the recent past, making the Kampuchean people very happy and confident. The conference observed that though the Beijing expansionists, in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces, have continued to seek by all perfidious means to sabotage peace and create tension against the revolution of the hree Indochinese countries, they have not succeeded in checking the steady development of the three nations. The all-consuming revolutionary movement of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos is continuing to progress and advance on the path to victory.

In particular, the Kampuchean revolution is increasingly solid and powerful in all fields. During the past more than 3 years, Kampuchea has experienced a rapid rebirth and the Kampuchean people have enjoyed improved living conditions. On the other hand, the enemies of the revolution have gone from one setback to another. With every passing day, they are plunging deeper toward bankruptcy.

In order to redress this situation of defeat, the Beijing expansionists, in collusion with U.S. imperialism and the reactionary forces in the ASEAN ruling circles, have staged the farce of the formation of the so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea [CGDK] aimed at covering up the ugly features of Pol Pot, who is genocidal criminal thoroughly stained with the blood of the Kampuchean people. This struggle to ease out of the impasse, however, can only further lay bare the treason of Sihanouk, Son Sann and Pol Pot vis-a-vis the nation and the people. This can only invite more heated indignation, hatred and abuse on the part of the Kampuchean people. The so-called CGDK is certainly Pol Pot under disguise.

The PRK has delcared that in the immediate future it does not plan to reclaim the Kampuchean seat at the United Nations which rightfully belongs to it and has recommended that if the United Nations expels the Pol Pot gang from this international organization the Kampuchean seat should be left vacant. Any prolonged presence of Pol Pot or his surrogate can only harm the position and prestige of the United Nations.

The Kampuchean people agree with and fully support the conference's proposal on the establishment of a safety zone on both sides of the Kampuchean-Thai border. If Thailand disarmed all the remnants of the Pol Pot army and other reactionary Khmer forces and if it moved the refugee camps away from the safety zone. Vietnamese troops on their internationalist duty in Kampuchea would not be stationed in this zone either. Thus, only the armed forces of the Kingdom of Thailand will be in the safety zone in Thai territory and only the forces of the PRK will be in the safety zone in Kampuchean territory.

Another important question is that Thailand must not allow Beijing to use its territory to continue channeling food, medicine and arms to the Pol Pot remnants and other reactionary Khmer in their activities against the rebirth of the Kampuchean people.

The Kampuchean people would like to once again assert that the presence of the Vietnamese force in Kampuchea is a matter relating to the internal affairs of the two countries made by virtue of the treaty of peace and comprehensive cooperation between Kampuchea and Vietnam and at the sacred request of the Kampuchean people. This presence is for the defense of the PRK's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity. It is not a threat to Thailand which shares a border with Kampuchea.

All of this shows our sincere gesture of good will toward Thailand. The Thai authorities must carefully reconsider their position in order to reduce tension along the border of the two countries in the common interests of the Kampuchean and Thai peoples and in contribution to ensuring peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

This is a very reasonable, fair and mutually beneficial proposal. In order to further show their good will Kampuchea and Vietnam will make another step. They have decided to partially withdraw Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea during the current month of July.

If Thailand still remains indifferent to these good-will acts and gestures, the Thai ruling circles will certainly unmask their reactionary nature to the whole world, and our just position will win greater support and sympathy from world public opinion. This partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampichea is also proof that the strength of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Army has further developed and that the Kampuchean revolution is solid and ever victorious. This gesture reflects the truth that Vietnam's support for and aid to Kampuchea are sincere and selfless. In the past, as at present, Vietnam has spurned hardships and made sacrifices in life and blood by sending its best sons and daughters to help the Kampuchean revolution most sincerely.

The sixth foreign ministers conference of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos held recently in Ho Chi Minh City is therefore most important in the reestablishment of peace and stability in Southeast Asia through compromise between the groups of the Indochinese and ASEAN countries on the basis of the principles of peaceful coexistence.

In order to further develop the brilliant success of this conference and give it greater significance, all of our army and people must increase internal and international. solidarity, particularly with Vietnam, heighten combat spirit and always remain combat ready to foil all perfidious activities and maneuvers of the enemies, vigorously accelerate productive labor, particularly agricultural production, and continue to build our revolutionary forces more firmly and forcefully in all fields.

The Kampuchean people throughout the country express warmest congratulations to the sixth foreign ministers conference of the three Indochinese countries for its brilliant success and express total unanimity with and full support for the reasonable proposals, the just and fair position and the good-will gestures of our government and the fraternal Vietnamese and Lao governments. We firmly believe that the just stand of our three Indochinese countries will certainly be sincerely welcomed, applauded and supported by world oublic opinion and peace and justice-loving progressive mankind.

GDR ECONOMIC DELEGATION LEAVES PHNOM PENH

DPRK ENVOY'S PRESS CONFERENCE -- Vientiane, June 26 (KPL) -- The ambassador of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Yun Chong-sop, on June 24, gave here a press conference to mark the anti-imperialists month (June 25 July 27) and the month of international solidarity with the Korean people. Among those who attended the press conference were representatives of the Lao news agency and Press Department of the Foreign Ministry and a number of Lao and foreign journalists. The ambassador of DPRK said that the interference of the U.S. imperialists in South Korea is the major obstacle for peaceful reunification of an independent Korea. He also recapitulated the plots of the imperialists. The conference ended up by a film projection. [Text] [Vientiane KPL in English 0920 GMT 27 Jun 82 BK]

THAI REACTION TO SRV'S KAMPUCHEA PROPOSAL

Foreign Ministry Reaction

BK091115 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 9 Jul 82

[Text] Information Director General Chet Sucharitkun, in his capacity as the Foreign Ministry's spokesman, told mass media representatives at the Foreign Ministry's Information Center this morning about Thailand's reaction to the joint communique issued at the end of the meeting of Vietnam, Laos and the Heng Samrin regime in Ho Chi Minh City. He said:

[Begin recording] I was asked many questions yesterday about Thailand's reaction to the joint communique issued at the meeting of Vietnam, Laos and the Heng Samrin regime in Ho Chi Minh City. The Thai Foreign Ministry just received the text of the joint communique this morning when the Vietnamese ambassador called on the deputy foreign minister between 0900 and 1000. The Foreign Ministry needs time to study the details of the joint communique.

I have studied excerpts of the document and found four notably significant points as follows:

1. Vietnam proposed a partial withdrawal of its troops from Kampuchea;

2. A safety of demilitarized zone should be set up;

3. An international conference on Southeast Asia should be held;

4. They then talk about the Democratic Kampuchean seat in the United Nations.

I would like to tell you about the initial reaction of the Foreign Ministry as follows:

1. The proposals made by Vietnam have made no changes in its original intention to draw Thailand into the Kampuchean conflict.

2. The proposals made by Vietnam, Laos and the Heng Samrin regime are aimed at legitimizing Vietnam's aggression against Kampuchea. Regarding the international conference, Thailand holds that this matter should be worked out by the United Nations. [end recording]

The Foreign Ministry spokesman continued: Touching on the safety or demilitarized zone, this proposal was made by Vietnam on several occasions in the past and was always rejected by Thailand and the other ASEAN members. Thailand maintains that the instability along the border was caused by Vietnam's aggression and its continued military occupation of Kampuchea. The Ho Chi Minh City joint communique's proposals are concerned with the Heng Samrin regime's stability, not the stability of other countries. The communique says they want to ease tension. This has confused the Thai side because what is happening now can be attributed to Vietnam's aggression and continued military occupation of Kampuchea. Thailand is not a party in the aforementioned conflict. Therefore Vietnam cannot refer to its announced partial withdrawal as a good will gesture toward Thailand.

The Foreign Ministry spokesman noted that no one is sure of what is meant by an international conference on Southeast Asia. As for Thailand and the other ASEAN members, the existing problem is Vietnam's aggression and continued military occupation of Kampuchea. The communique does not mention the Kampuchean people's right to self-determination.

We would like to ask Vietnam if it wants to see an independent, neutral and nonaligned Kampuchea or not.

Prasong: Proposal 'Diversion'

BK090450 Bangkok NATION REVIEW IN English 9 Jul 82 pp 1, 2

[Excerpt] Secretary general of the National Security Council, Squadron Leader Prasong Sunsiri, yesterday described as "a clear attempt on Vietnam's part to divert world attention from the real issues, "Vietnam's latest three-point proposal announced on Wednesday in Ho Chi Minh City. "There are also various points of ambiguity that Nguyen Co Thach (Vietnamese foreign minister) would have to clarify when he visits various ASEAN countries, including Thailand," Prasong told the nation in an interview.

On the offer to withdraw a "significant" number of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea this month by Hanoi, the NSC secretary general said: "How many? When" and Where to?" Prasong quoted intelligence reports as saying that in late May, Vietnam sent in about 20,000 troops from the Thrid and Fourth Divisions from North Vietnam to Kampuchea. "Some troops might have been withdrawn from Kampuchea but that was because many of them suffered from malaria and others were pulled back to take care of logistical problems," the NSC secretary general said. He said that "total withdrawal" is what the UN resolutions have demanded of Vietnam and nothing short of a specific time-frame for total withdrawal would be acceptable to Thailand.

On the proposed "safety zone" offer, Prasong said the idea, identical to the earlier proposal for a "demilitarized zone" put forth by Vietnam, has been rejected by Thailand and SEAN. "We have no common border with Vietnam. It is a problem between Vietnam and the Khmer resistance force. So if anything, the DMZ should be inside Kampuchea between the Vietnamese and the Khmer resistance force," he said.

Commenting on the third point of the proposal for an international conference by Vietnam to include Burma, India, ASEAN, Indochinese countries and the five permanent members of the UN Security Council, the NSC secretary general said: "Superficially, this may sound like Vietnam wants to be flexible and talk peace. But the subject is so broad that Vietnam could raise any issue -- the Spratley Islands or American bases in Subic Bay -- without discussing Kampuchea at all." Prasong said Vietnam was trying to divert world attention from the International Conference on Kampuchea (ICK) which is already well in progress under UN sponsorship. "Why doesn't Vietnam join the ICK if it was serious in finding a political solution to the Kampuchean problem?"

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila, contacted by the NATION, yesterday would only say that he would study the joint communique issued Wednesday after the meeting of foreign ministers of Vietnam, Laos and the Heng Samrin regime in Ho Chi Minh City before making any official comments. "Some people had expected Vietnam to strongly criticize the Khmer coalition government. But maybe, the latest developments contain something. I just don't know," he said.

POST Urges Caution

[Editorial: "Hanoi's Sincerity in Question"]

[Text] Thailand and its ASEAN partners have to be most careful in considering the offer made by Vietnam to make a partial withdrawal of its forces from Kampuchea. The offer, made as a result of the recent meeting of the foreign ministers of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea in Ho Chi Minh city is full of traps for the unwary. It is possible that the offer is meant as a propaganda ploy to give the impression to the rest of the world that Vietnam is "reasonable". To those people who are not well acquainted with implications of the Kampuchean conflict -- which means most of the ordinary people of the world -- the Vietnamese proposal may appear to be a "positive" move to try to resolve the problem.

In examining the offer closely, we note that, first and foremost, it fails to fulfil the main requirement of the United Nations General Assembly's resolution on Kampuchea. This resolution calls for a total withdrawal of Vietnamese forces from Kampuchea. Whether we should accept "half a loaf" rather than have "no bread" at all is the crucial question. No details have been provided on the number of troops to be withdrawn, although the word significant" has been used. Nor has the type of troops to be withdrawn been announced. Are they combat troops or support troops or logistic troops?

What makes it necessary to conduct such an inquiry is the fact that the Vietnamese have been withdrawing forces, particularly the wounded and the war-weary, and those forces whose morale has declined. However, such troops have since been replaced by fresh soldiers ready for battle. Recently it was estimated that 20,000 new soldiers were introduced to Kampuchea,

The partial withdrawal of forces at this time could also be a tactical measure since the dry season offensive has ended with the advent of the rainy season. The Vietnamese may not need those forces there. It must be mentioned that there always exists the probability that the troops which are withdrawn can be brought back secretly to Kampuchea later.

The ASEAN governments may be able to respond favourably if Hanoi makes it very clear that the partial withdrawal is the first phase of an operation which will lead to total withdrawal. We understand that an immediate total withdrawal will create problems for both the Vietnamese Government and the returning soldiers who have to adjust to civilian life. We believe that ASEAN will be most willing to assist in any programme of this nature and will indeed mobilise the aid of their friends to help Vietnam overcome the difficulties.

Only total withdrawal can provide the people of Kampuchea with the unfettered freedom to choose a government of their own. A government that can be neutral and will not be a threat either to Thailand or Vietnamese. If that is Hanoi's goal ASEAN can work with Vietnam to achieve it.

NATION: SRV Feels Pinch

[Editorial: "Vietnam Is Feeling the Pinch"]

[Text] Facts, an old adage says, speak louder than voices. We have had all sorts of reaction from various countries to Nguyen Co Thach's announcement of a significant pullout of troops from Kampuchea. The staid reaction came from the United States which said that Vietnam should pull out all of the troops from Kampuchea according to the UN General Assembly resolutions. Since when did the U.S. think that General Assembly resolutions have had any effect on nations which commit aggression? The Thai Government has fallen back on the tried and true principle of consultation with fellow-members of ASEAN. China did not in one whit deviate from her consistent stand, dismissing the troop pullout announced by the Vietnamese foreign minister after the "Indochina foreign ministers conference," as merely cosmetic.

If facts speak louder, what are the facts? Vietnam has the fourth biggest standing army in the world, something it does not take much intelligence to perceive that she cannot afford it. The war she has been waging in Kampuchea since December, 1978, has been estimated to cost over $4 million a day. The Soviet Union is, of course, footing the bill but she is also footing the bill for her invasion and occupation of Afghanistan which is estimated to cost $8 million a day. Since Vietnam invaded Kampuchea, four dry seasons have passed and she has not been able to liquidate opposition by guerrilla warfare. The total conquest of Kampuchea has not been the piece of cake which Hanoi and Moscow expected it to be. The UN seat is held by Democratic Kampuchea with the help of a thumping majority in the General Assembly.

These are the facts but there is another two-pronged fact: ASEAN has scored a signal victory in her search for political solution by enabling a coalition government of the Khmer patriotic factions to be formed while China is trying relentlessly to find a military solution. We will be a bunch of fools to think that Hanoi and Moscow do not realize these facts and two possible scenarios emerge. Moscow may think that Vietnam has let her down (unlike Cuba in Angola) and Vietnam may think that she is not getting enough Soviet support to finish off the 'job'. The second is that China might be right and Vietnam is "bleeding white" earlier than expected.

If we take all these into consideration a very similar situation arises which happened when the Paris peace accords were signed to end the Vietnam war in January, 1973. Hanoi and Moscow may well be dusting off those events and may be presenting them with a new coat of paint in what has been billed by Thach as a new Geneva-type international conference. Not one country outside the Soviet bloc has objected to such a conference and as a matter of fact President Norodom Sihanouk of Democratic Kampuchea was the first to suggest it. But sometimes memories are conveniently short, since Hanoi and Moscow appear to ignore the fact that an International Conference on Kampuchea (ICK) was convened last year under the UN auspices to find a political solution.

But the Soviet Union and Vietnam chose to avoid that conference but nevertheless are stuck with its outcome. If Hanoi wants to change the nomenclature of the conference, nobody will have any objection; if she wants to have India and Burma also at the conference table, nobody, again, will have any objection. But if she expects such a conference to produce something like the Geneva accords or something like the Paris peace accords -- winning by peaceful accords signed and sealed what she could not win on the battlefield -- she has another thing coming. It is just not a case of "once bitten twice shy", it is a simple matter of China just not accepting any such tomfoolery.

Now, going back to the facts again, we have to believe a lot of what Thach has said. Vietnam just cannot afford to keep her huge 200,000-man army in Kampuchea and Moscow cannot afford to foot the bill on an indeterminate basis. Vietnam just didn't deliver the goods to the Soviet Union as Cuba did in Angola and the Kremlin takes a dim view of failures. From ASEAN's political point of view and from China's military point of view, Hanoi is feeling the pinch very seriously; whether she is feeling the pinch from the Soviet Union is a moot point. But there is no question, in interpreting what Thach said, that Hanoi is [illegible] for a victory through peace in Kampuchea because it already appears that mi[illegible]ly she has failed.

VNA INTERVIEWS NGUYEN CO THACH ON MINISTERS' MEETING

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 8 -- Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has granted the following interview to VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY on the Indochinese foreign ministerial conference:

Question: How did the conference assess the Southeast Asian situation over the past few years?

Answer: Over the past four years, the reactionary elements in the Beijing leadership in collusion with U.S. imperialism and reactionary forces in the A.S.E.A.N. countries have resorted to all plots -- economic, political, diplomatic and military -- to reverse the revival of the Kampuchean people and to subdue the three Indochinese countries. However, they have failed in these plots and the A.S.E.A.N. countries are being caught in deadlock.

The Kampuchean situation has developed satisfactorily in all economic, political, military and diplomatic fields. Laos and Vietnam have step by step solved their economic problems caused by 35 years of war and natural calamity. In spite of innumerable difficulties, the three Indochinese countries have stood firm and closely united.

Public opinion has seen more and more clearly that the so-called "threat from Vietnam and the Soviet Union to the A.S.E.A.N. countries" is merely a slander made by the reactionaries in the Beijing ruling circles to cover up the real danger to Southeast Asia, namely China's policy of expansion and hegemony. Evidently, China has continued using the pro-Chinese rebels to interfere in the internal affairs of the Southeast Asian countries and to pit the A.S.E.A.N. countries against the Indochinese countries with the aim of fomenting trouble in the region.

Public opinion now sees clearly that far from solving any problems in Southeast Asia, the creation of confrontation only harms peace and stability in the region, runs counter to the aspirations and interests of the Southeast Asian peoples, and serves China's schemes of expansion and hegemony in the region. The only correct way to solve the problems in Southeast Asia is that of reconciliation, peace and cooperation between the Southeast Asian countries. This is also the only way to peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Question: Why do the People's Republic of Kampuchea and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam declare to partially withdraw Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea?

Answer: Everyone knows that the history of the past 35 years has shown that nobody can bring pressure to bear on Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam. At this conference of the three foreign ministers, the People's Republic of Kampuchea and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam declared to withdraw a number of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea in July, 1982, and might consider a further withdrawal if Thailand gives practical acts in response. Our first steps show that the situation in Kampuchea is ever being consolidated and the Indochinese countries have the goodwill of living in peace, friendship and cooperation with A.S.E.A.N. countries.

Question: Formerly the three Indochinese countries had proposed to convene a regional conference to discuss regional problems. Now, they propose the convening of an international conference on Southeast Asia. Would you elaborate the significance of this new proposal?

Answer: Recently, the Indochinese countries proposed the convening of a regional conference to discuss regional problems, and A.S.E.A.N. countries proposed the convening of an international conference on Kampuchea.

The new proposal of the three Indochinese countries on an international conference on Southeast Asia proves that the Indochinese countries have goodwill and have taken into account the proposals of the other parties to settle all problems on the basis of equality, mutual respect and non-imposition of one party's views upon the other.

Question: Could you tell us how the Indochinese ministerial conference considers the so-called "Kampuchean tripartite alliance"?

Answer: This is merely a farce aimed at covering up the genocidal nature of Pol Pot. In fact, the Pol Pot clique still controls military and diplomatic affairs, and whenever there are differences between the three parties they will decide everything in the name of the so-called "Democratic Kampuchea".

The formation of this alliance by China, the United States and A.S.E.A.N. constitutes a gross interference in Kampuchea's internal affairs, and only renders the situation in Southeast Asia more tense. This move is aimed at coping with public opinion's demand for expulsion of the Pol Pot clique from the United Nations.

To facilitate the United Nations' work and enable it to contribute to the cause of peace in Southeast Asia, the People's Republic of Kampuchea has taken a constructive stand by declaring its willingness to leave Kampuchea's seat at the U.N. vacant in case the U.N. expels the genocidal Pol Pot clique or any disguised Pol Pot clique from this international organization.

SRV, KAMPUCHEA SIGN HISTORICAL WATERS AGREEMENT

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 8 -- Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach and his Kampuchean counterpart, Hun Sen, on July 7 signed in Ho Chi Minh City an agreement on the historical waters of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the People's Republic of Kampuchea.

Under the agreement, the waters located between the coast of Kien Giang Province, the Phu Quoc Island and the Tho Chu archipelago of Vietnam on the one side, and the coast of Kampot Province and the Poulo Wai islands of Kampuchea on the other, form the historical waters of the two countries placed under the juridical regime of their internal waters. The two countries will hold at a suitable time negotiations to delimit the maritime frontier in their historical waters. Pending the delimination of the maritime frontier, patrolling and surveillance in the historical waters will be jointly conducted by the two countries while the exploitation of natural resources in this area will be decided by common agreement.

Text of Agreement

[Agreement on historical waters of Vietnam and Kampuchea signed by Vietnamese and Kampuchean foreign ministers in Ho Chi Minh City on 7 July 1982; all longitudinal coordinates as received]

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 8 -- Following is the text of the agreement on the historical waters of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the People's Republic of Kampuchea:

The Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the Government of the People's Republic of Kampuchea,

Desirous of further consolidating and developing the special Vietnam-Kampuchea relations in the spirit of the Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation between the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the People's Republic of Kampuchea signed on February 18, 1979,

Considering the reality that the maritime zone situated between the coast of Kien Giang Province, Phu Quoc Island and the Tho Chu archipelago of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam on the one side, and the coast of Kampot Province and the Poulo Wai group of islands of the People's Republic of Kampuchea on the other, encompasses waters which by their special geographical conditions and their great importance for the national defence and the economy of both countries have long belonged to Vietnam and Kampuchea,

Have agreed on the following:

Article 1

The waters located between the coast of Kien Giang Province, Phu Quoc Island and the Tho Chu archipelago of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam on the one side, and the coast of Kampot Province and the Poulo Wai group of islands of the People's Republic of Kampuchea on the other, form the historical waters of the two countries placed under the juridical regime of their internal waters and are delimited (according to the Greenwich east longitude):

To the northwest by a straight line stretching from coordinates 09 degrees 54'2 north latitude-102 degrees 55'2 east longitude and coordinates 09 degrees 54'5 north latitude-102 degrees 57'2 east longitude of Poulo Wai Islands (Kampuchea) to coordinates 10 degrees 24'1 north latitude-103 degrees 48'0 east longitude and 10 degrees 25'6 north latitude-103 degrees 49'2 east longitude of the Koh Ses Island (Kampuchea) to coordinates 10 degrees 30'0 north latitude-103 degrees 47'4 east longitude of Koh Thmei Island (Kampuchea) to coordinates 10 degrees 32'4 north latitude-103 degrees 48'2 east longitude on the coast of Kampot Province (Kampuchea).

To the north by the coast of Kampot Province stretching from coordinates 10 degrees 32'4 north latitude-103 degrees 48'2 east longitude on the terminus of the land border between Vietnam and Kampuchea on the coast.

To the south-east by a line stretching from the terminus of the land border between Vietnam and Kampuchea on the coast to coordinates 10 degrees 04'42 north latitude-104 degrees 02'3 east longitude from the An Yet point of Phu Quoc Island (Vietnam) and along the northern coast of this island to the Dat Do Point situated at coordinates 10 degrees 02'8 north latitude-103 degrees 59'1 east longitude, and from there to coordinates 09 degrees 10'1 north latitude-103 degrees 26'4 east longitude of Tho Chu Island (Vietnam) to coordinates 09 degrees 15'0 north latitude-103 degrees 27'0 east longitude of Hon Nhan Island in the Tho Chu archipelago (Vietnam).

To the south-west by a straight line stretching from coordinates 09 degrees 55'0 north latitude-102 degrees 53'5 east longitude from Poulo Wai Islands (Kampuchea) to coordinates 09 degrees 15'0 north latitude-103 degrees 27'0 east longitude of Hon Nhan Island in the Tho Chu archipelago (Vietnam).

Article 2

The two sides will hold at a suitable time negotiations in the spirit of equality, friendship and respect for each other's independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and the legitimate interests of each side in order to delimitate the maritime frontier between the two countries in the historical waters mentioned in Article 1.

Article 3

Pending the settlement of the maritime border between the two states in the historical waters mentioned in Article 1:

-- The meeting point 0 of the two base lines used for measuring the width of the territorial waters of each country situation on the high sea on the straight line linking the Tho Chu archipelago and Poulo Wai Isalnd will be determined by mutual agreement.

-- The two sides continue to regard the Brevie Line drawn in 1939 as dividing line for the islands in this zone.

-- Patrolling and surveillance in these historical waters will be jointly conducted by the two sides.

-- The local populations will continue to conduct their fishing operations and the catch of other sea products in this zone according to the habits that have existed so far.

-- The exploitation of natural resources in this zone will be decided by common agreement.

Done in Ho Chi Minh City on the 7th of July 1982, in two languages, Vietnamese and Khmer, both being equally valid.

Minister for foreign affairs of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam	Minister for foreign affairs of the People's Republic of Kampuchea

NHAN DAN Editorial

[Text] Hanoi, VNA July 9 -- The signing of an agreement on the historical waters of Vietnam and Kampuchea on July 7 was a new expression of the two countries' militant solidarity and all-sided cooperation, says NHAN DAN's editorial today.

"The agreement", the paper says, "bespeaks mutual trust and assistance in all fields on the basis of respect for each other's independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and legitimate interests, of non-intervention, of equality and mutual benefits, in conformity with the Vietnamese-Kampuchean Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation signed on February 18, 1979. The agreement also testifies to the people's determination to defend their rights on their own waters according to international law and practice and in contribution to peace and stability in Southeast Asia".

The paper recalls that Vietnam and Laos also concluded a treaty delineating their national borders on July 18, 1977, and thatit has been implemented successfully over the past five years. "The Vietnamese-Kampuchean agreement on historical waters", the paper notes, "has promptly settled a historical problem, and is the first step toward a treaty on national borders on the basis of existing ones".

Pointing out that Vietnam and Kampuchea have thus shown their determination to join efforts in establishing a common border of lasting peace, friendship and fraternity, NHAN DAN says:

"While promoting their solidarity and all-sided cooperation, Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea wish to have good relations of friendship and cooperation with all neighbours and other states in Southeast Asia. This is clear from their tireless efforts to help make Southeast Asia a region of peace, stability and cooperation, especially from the proposals of goodwill put forth at the sixth Indochinese ministerial conference on July 7".

PHAM VAN DONG ON MILITARY SERVICE LAW

[Text] The Council of Ministers recently held a conference in Hanoi to discuss the law of military service which was adopted by the National Assembly and promulgated by the Council of State. Comrade Pham Van Dong, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers, addressed the conference.

Opening the conference, Comrade To Huu, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, said:

The law on military service is an important law of our country. It serves as the legal basis for building a powerful people's army capable of remaining ready to defend the fatherland. Therefore, it is necessary to propagate and teach this law widely among the entire party, state organs and the people throughout the country, especially among youths of military age. We must make everyone understand and comply correctly with the law's stipulations.

The comrade vice chairman of The Council of Ministers reminded various sectors and echelons of those tasks to be carried out quickly and those points to be given much attention so as to ensure satisfactory enforcement of the law on military service and to systematize and gradually perfect this enforcement task.

On behalf of the Ministry of National Defense, Col Gen Le Trong Tan, member of the party Central Committee and chief of the VPA General Staff, read a report in which he pointed out the basic substance and concepts of the law on military service, saying that they are aimed at institutionalizing the all-people national defense line and building the people's armed forces and the people's army, thus contributing to making the country ready to cope with any war of aggression, to defending the socialist Vietnamese fatherland firmly, and to protecting the people's peaceful labor and happiness.

Various comrade ministers and the chairman of many provinces, cities and special zones as well as other participating delegates spiritedly discussed and showed a high identity of views on the tasks of building the armed forces and strengthening national defense. Many delegates presented the actual situation in their localities and of their sectors and voiced their determination to comply strictly with the law's stipulations.

Addressing the conference, Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong, on behalf of the party Central Committee and the Council of Ministers, heartily lauded the delegates of various sectors and localities for having contributed many opinions and discussed many realistic measures aimed at enforcing our state's law on military service satisfactorily. This law marks a new developmental step in the tasks of building the armed forces and strengthening national defense might, thus creating conditions for making our armed forces sufficiently strong and ready to defeat the enemies of all stripes and to defend our beloved socialist fatherland firmly.

The comrade chairman of the Council of Ministers expressed his pleasure over the fact that at this conference, the delegates from various central government organs and from various provinces had reflected the people's unanimous joy over promulgation of the law on military service.

As everyone realizes that our state's law on military service is just, logical and sensible, we must map out a satisfactory plan to enforce the law stipulations and we must perform this task even more satisfactorily in the years to come in order to ensure that all youths reaching military age, except for those who are entitled to exemption or deferment as stipulated by law, are drafted into the army. Along with building a regular army, we must satisfactorily build a reserve force and make it possible for those who have completed their military service to continue their obligatory work in the reserve force. This is a huge force comprising millions of people who have gone through combat training in the great school -- the armed forces.

The comrade urged the Ministry of National Defense to work out a satisfactory plan to train and use youths during their years of military service. The armed forces are an army which possesses great strength, which was once praised by Uncle Ho as capable of fulfilling all assigned missions, overcoming all difficulties and defeating the enemies of all stripes, which deserves the people's trust and love and the noble name the people have lovingly given it: Uncle Ho's army.

Sen Gen Van Tien Dung, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and minister of national defense -- who was designated by the Council of Ministers to preside over the conference -- delivered a concluding speech. A comrade highly appraised the outcome of the conference and regarded the display of unanimous views and determination by the many key cadres from various ministers, provinces and central-level public organs and mass organizations as a basis on which a new mood can be created among the people, sectors, echelons and localities to enforce the law on military service satisfactorily.

Comrade Van Tien Dung heartily lauded the participating delegates for having suggested many positive measures with a determination to make it possible for their sectors or localities to fulfill all their tasks most satisfactorily and to contribute effectively to the causes of building the armed forces and strengthening national defense. He regarded this as a manifestation of our nation's finest traditions of militant solidarity.

The comrade pointed out those tasks to be carried out as directed by the Council of Ministers and unanimously agreed upon during various discussions. Specific attention must be given to carrying out satisfactorily the task regarding registration for military service in order to grasp firmly the number of youths who are readily available for military induction and the number of reserve troops. As an immediate task, it is necessary to organize satisfactorily the second military draft drive of 1982 and to deal carefully with all policies on discharged soldiers and to try those cases of violations in accordance with the law. In addition, all sectors and localities must urgently strengthen their responsible organs in order to systematize the enforcement of the law and must step up political indoctrination and develop the role of various mass organizations in propagating, educating and motivating the people of all strata, especially youths, to become fully aware of the basic points of views of our party and state and to join the army enthusiastically to strengthen national defense, thus contributing to building socialism successfully and defending the socialist Vietnamese fatherland firmly.

DEFENSE SPENDING TO EXCEED 1 PERCENT OF GNP

[Text] Tokyo, July 11, KYODO -- Japan's defense expenditures for front-line equipment in the new five-year mid-term program estimate will total around yen 4.4 trillion ($17.12 billion), government sources said Sunday. In the new estimate for the Defense Agency's shopping list for military hardware, covering fiscal 1983 to 1987, defense expenses are virtually certain to exceed the level of 1 percent of Japan's gross national product (GNP), the sources said.

Opposition parties will undoubtedly attack the government for virtually ignoring the 1 percent level in fixing defense spending, they said.

The new plan, being negotiated between Defense Agency and Finance Ministry officials, will not make the 1-percent level an issue in its planning stage, however, because the government's current economic plan, on which the defense plan is based, overestimates the GNP growth rates, the sources said.

The government agreed at a Cabinet meeting in November, 1976, that Japan's total defense budget be kept below the level of 1 percent of the GNP. It has since become a practice to review the agency's procurement estimate every three years.

In the current military equipment purchasing program, adopted in 1979, spending on front-line equipment totaled yen 2.7 to 2.8 trillion ($10.50 to $10.89 billion). Japan's defense spending has been expanded recently in contrast to other government expenditures which have been cut in line with sluggish economic growth.

The sources said the mid-term program estimate will be submitted to the Defense Council later this month or early in August after officials of the two government offices finalize it.

They said, however, the two offices have agreed on major points of the estimate including the number of F-15 fighter planes to be procured set at around 155, an increase of 75. The number of P3C antisubmarine surveillance planes will be set at just below 80 by adding 50 new planes to the 25 already ordered. The number of naval destroyers will be set at 60, they said. The Defense Agency will also order 375 tanks and 40 antitank helicopters to form three squadrons, the sources said. They said, however, the extent and quality of destroyers and other details are not yet fixed. Also pending are Japan's next surface-to-air missile, SAMX, and fighters to support ground troops, FSX.

The Finance Ministry has insisted that the program estimate be kept below yen 4.2 trillion while the Defense Agency says it will cost about yen 4.7 trillion, the sources said. They said it should be settled at between yen 4.3 to 4.5 trillion.

A ceiling for defense outlays in fiscal 1983 starting April 1 next year has been set at yen 2.776 billion (about $10.76 billion), an increase of 7.34 percent or yen 190 billion from the current fiscal year.

The Japanese decision has aroused some criticism in U.S. Government circles which have called for Japan to increase its defense spending, the sources said. Japanese Government officials are working hard to increase defense spending in this period of low economic growth, they added.

PRC Envoy Hosts Party

[Text] He Zhangming, charge d'affaires ad interim of the Chinese Embassy in Pyongyang, gave a reception the evening of July 9 on the occasion of the 21st anniversary of the conclusion of the Korea-China Treaty of Friendship, Cooperation and Mutual Assistance. Invited were Comrades O Chin-u and Ho Tam, and Kim Ki-nam, Kim Kwan-sop, Choe Chong-kun, Pak Chung-kuk, Chang Chol, Yu Yong-kol, Kim Chae-suk, Om Tok-hwan, Won Chol-kap and Wang Kyong-hak.

Charge d'Affaires Ad Interim He Zhangming spoke at the reception. Noting that the conclusion of the China-Korea Treaty of Friendship, Cooperation and Mutual Assistance was an important event in the history of the development of the China-Korea friendship, he said it further consolidated the great friendship between the Chinese and Korean peoples which has been sealed in blood in the protracted joint revolutionary struggle.

The conclusion of a fraternal and militant treaty between China and Korea has played a basic role not only in guaranteeing the security of our own two countries, but also in defending peace in Asia and the world.

The Chinese people as greatly rejoice over all the successes achieved by the fraternal Korean people under the wise guidance of their great leader President Kim Il-song and the Workers Party of Korea as over their own. They fully support the Korean people's just struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country, he stated. The Chinese people, he stressed, will make every effort in the future to further develop and strengthen the relations of fraternal friendship and cooperation between the two countries. He believed that under warm care of the leaders of the two countries, Chinese-Korean friendship will be brought into fuller bloom and inherited generation after generation.

Ho Tam, vice premier and foreign minister, spoke next at the reception. Over the last 21 years since the conclusion of the treaty of friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance between the two countries, the Korean and Chinese peoples have accelerated the revolution and construction, further strengthening their traditional friendship and unity in every way while expanding and developing their relations of mutual cooperation, he said.

He stressed: Today the friendship and unity between the Korean and Chinese peoples is steadily developing and consolidating and the Korea-China friendship is being brought into fuller bloom under the deep care and concern of the great leader of our people Comrade Kim Il-song, the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, respected Comrade Chairman Hu Yaobang and respected Comrade Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping.

He hoped that the Chinese people, rallied close around the Communist Party of China headed by respected Comrade Chairman Hu Yaobang, would score greater success in the struggle for building a modern, socialist highly democratic and civilized, socialist power, and in carrying out the sacred cause of restoring Taiwan to the motherland and reunifying the whole country.

The attendantsdrank a toast to the everlasting militant friendship and unity between the Korean and Chinese peoples, to the good health and long life of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, to the good health and long life of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, to the good health and long life of respected Comrade Chairman Hu Yaobang and to the good health and long life of respected Comrade Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping.

NODONG SINMUN Views Treaty

[11 July NODONG SINMUN article: "Invincible Friendship and Eternal Solidarity"]

[Text] The 11th of July is a significant day in the history of Korea-China friendship. On this day 21 years ago, the two countries of Korea and China concluded a treaty of friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance. This was not only a great event which strengthened and developed the friendship between Korea and China to a new, higher stage but was also a clear expression of the determination of the peoples of the two countries to continue endlessly the joint struggle against imperialism and for the victory of the anti-imperialist cause.

Marking this day, the Korean people extend enthusiastic congratulations and warm greetings to the fraternal Chinese people. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The peoples of the two countries of Korea and China have shared joy and sorrow in the course of implementing the joint cause of national sovereignty and socialist construction and have always supported and cooperated with each other. Korea and China are intimate neighbors linked by mountains and rivers. The peoples of the two countries are revolutionary comrades-in-arms and class brothers who have always shared their destinies -- no matter whether there was sorrow or joy.

Korea-China friendship is a militant friendship sealed and deepened in blood in the protracted and complicated struggle against common enemies and for national liberation, class liberation, socialist revolution and socialist construction. It is also an invincible friendship which has surmounted all sorts of historical trials. The friendly and cooperative relations between the peoples of the two countries have expanded and strengthened particularly since the treaty of friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance was concluded between them.

The friendship and solidarity between the peoples of Korea and China have been constantly strengthened and developed amid the concern and care of the great leader of our people Comrade Kim Il-song, the glorious party center, esteemed Comrade Chairman Hu Yaobang and esteemed Comrade Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping.

Today, firmly rallied around the Chinese Communist Party headed by Comrade Hu Yaobang, the fraternal Chinese people have vigorously struggled to implement the decisions of the 3d and 6th Plenary Sessions of the 11th Chinese Communist Party Central Committee and to build the country into a highly democratic, highly civilized, modern socialist state, while adhering to the four modernizations.

The Chinese people, who have achieved stability and unity throughout the country, have effected new revolutionary upsurges in all fields of the revolution and construction through the struggle to implement the policy of the Chinese Communist Party and the Chinese Government on establishing the spiritual and material civilizations and ensuring the readjustment, reorganization, restructuring and upgrading of the national economy.

The international prestige of the People's Republic of China is rising with each day. Our people sincerely rejoice over all successes attained by the Chinese people and sincerely wish the Chinese people a brilliant victory in the cause of building a powerful, modernized socialist state and in reunifying the country by having Taiwan returned to the fatherland.

Under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party center, our people are constantly struggling to thoroughly implement the decisions of the sixth congress of the party, upholding the banner of the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture, and to reunify the divided fatherland. South Korea, a colony of the U.S. imperialists, has today become the most dangerous source of war in Asia. The South Korean clique is a puppet regime which plays the role of concealing the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule and is a culprit in executing the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression and war against Asia.

While desperately hindering the reunification of Korea in a bid to continuously hang on to South Korea as their colony and military base, the U.S. imperialists have more viciously than ever before strengthened the two-Koreas plot and schemes for provoking a new war. The U.S. imperialists have continuously dragged weapons of mass destruction into South Korea under the pretext of military exercises and have waged war exercise rackets against our country in the sky and on land and sea. They have also tried to inspire the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique to divide the nation permanently and to trigger a new war. As a result, today in Korea a dangerous situation has been created in which a war may break out at any moment.

The U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their policy of war are the basic obstacle to peace in Korea and its peaceful reunification and are major factors threatening peace in Asia and the world.

The fraternal Chinese people have actively supported and encouraged our people's cause of national reunification, while sternly condemning the policy of two Koreas and the schemes for a new war by the splittists at home and abroad.

Our people are happy to have around us such comrades-in-arms as the Chinese people, who are faithful to revolutionary duty. Korea-China friendship, shining with a long tradition and countless, unforgettable emotional events, is blooming with each passing day.

Our people will, in the future, too, make every possible effort to consolidate and develop the traditional Korea-China friendship and will vigorously struggle for the final victory of the cause of anti-imperialism and independence by firmly uniting forever with the fraternal Chinese people, not wavering in any circumstances.

A conversation took place in a cordial atmosphere.

Present on the occasion were Han Nianlong, adviser to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of China; Qian Liren, deputy head of the International Liaison Department of the CPC Central Committee; Lu Zhixian, vice minister of Culture of China; and Chon Myong-su, Korean ambassador to China.

PRC Presents Books

[Text] Beijing, July (KCNA) -- A ceremony for presenting 150,000 volumes of books to the Grand Peoples Study House of our country from the Ministry of Culture of China on the instructions of Hu Yaobang, chairman, and Deng Xiaoping, vice-chairman, of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China, was held at the Great Hall of the People in Beijing on July 8.

Present there were Zhu Muzhi, minister, and Lu Zhixian, vice-minister, of culture of China, and a deputy head of the International Liaison Department of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China, and other personages concerned. Also present were Hyon Chun-kuk, member, and vice-director of a department of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, who came to Beijing to take over the books, and Korean Ambassador Chon Myong-su and officials of his embassy in Beijing.

Lu Zhixian, vice-minister of culture of China, and Hyon Chun-kuk, vice-director of a department of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, spoke at the ceremony.

In his speech Vice-Minister of Culture Lu Zhixian, referring to the traditional friendship between the parties and peoples of China and Korea, said: What delights us particularly is the fact that in recent years the leaders of our two parties and countries had cordial meetings many a time, powerfully promoting the constant development of the very close China-Korea friendship. The Chinese people greatly value this friendship and are making consistent efforts for it.

He went on: The heroic Korean people under the wise leadership of President Kim Il-song and the Workers Party of Korea achieved shining successes on all fronts of socialist construction and in the struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country by implementing the revolutionary line of independence and self-reliance in economy and defence and vigorously carrying on the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural.

The magnificent Grand Peoples Study House erected recently in Pyongyang, the capital of your country, is another proud success achieved by the Korean people. This house will certainly play a big role in enriching the cultural life of people and raising their scientific and cultural level.

He expressed the belief that the books presented this time would play a positive role in developing the friendship between the parties and peoples of China and Korea and in promoting cultural exchange between China and Korea. He hoped that the China-Korea friendship would be ever green.

Speaking next, Vice-Director Hyon Chun-kuk said that he was very happy to attend a ceremony for presenting books to the Grand Peoples Study House of our country from the Ministry of Culture of China. He expressed deep thanks on behalf of the Central Committee of our party to respected Comrade Chairman Hu Yaobang and Comrade Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping and to the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China and the fraternal Chinese people. He said:

Our scientists, technicians and students will long preserve and read the valuable books presented by the Chinese people as another clear token of the Korea-China friendship and as a precious gift conveying the friendly feelings of the class brothers, the closest comrades-in-arms.

This time the Ministry of Culture of China presented valuable books to the Grand Peoples Study House of our country on the instructions of respected Comrade Chairman Hu Yaobang and Comrade Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping. This will bring the Korea-China friendship into more beautiful bloom and record another brilliant chapter in the annals of this everlasting friendship.

He stressed that the friendship and unity between the parties and peoples of Korea and China would be everlasting.

The books presented by the Ministry of Culture of China to the Grand Peoples Study House of our country this time are 150,000 volumes of 10,000 kinds. Among them are works of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song published in China, and books on science, technique and social culture.

Prior to the ceremony, Zhu Muzhi, minister of culture of China, met Vice-Director Hyon Chun-kuk and his party and had a conversation in a friendly atmosphere. The presentation ceremony was followed by a cocktail party.

Qiao Shi, head of the International Liaison Department of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China, met Vice-Director Hyon Chun-kuk and his party on July 7 and had a talk with them in a friendly atmosphere.

[Speech by Ho Tam, vice premier and minister of foreign affairs, at 10 July banquet arranged for the Burmese delegation headed by U Chit Hlaing, minister of foreign affairs, at the People's Cultural Hall — read by announcer]

[Text] First of all, I warmly welcome once again Your Excellency esteemed foreign minister and members of the government friendship delegation of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma who have visited our country, cherishing the warm emotions of friendship of the Burmese people toward the Korean people.

Your current visit to our country is an expression of enthusiastic trust in our people and vividly shows that the friendly relations between Korea and Burma are favorably developing with each passing day. Developing the friendly and cooperative relations between our two countries, which are both located in Asia and maintain close ties, not only accords with the interests of the peoples of the two countries but also constitutes a contribution to strengthening the friendship and solidarity among the Asian people.

Today, the friendly and cooperative relations between Korea and Burma have been extensively strengthened and developed on the basis of the close relationship of intimacy forged between Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of the Korean people, and His Excellency Chairman U Ne Win, the wise leader of the Burmese people. We are very pleased with this and believe that the relations between the two countries will be more excellently strengthened and developed in the future.

The Korean people are proud of having such intimate friends in Asia as the Burmese people and [words indistinct].

We are well aware that under the wise leadership of the Socialist Program Party of Burma, the diligent and able Burmese people have firmly deepened the sovereignty of the country and have excellently built the national economy and culture. Such changes taking place in Burma today prove the correctness and vitality of the independent policies enforced by the Burmese Government and show that when a people who have embarked on a road of creating new life advance, mobilizing their own efforts while firmly maintaining independence, they can surmount any difficulties and achieve the prosperity and development of their country. We enthusiastically congratulate the successes attained by the Burmese people in the construction of a new society and sincerely wish them greater success in their future struggle. Our people will, in the future, too, actively support and encourage the just cause of the Burmese Government and people advancing along the road of independence.

Today, upholding and following the programmatic tasks elucidated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his policy speech at the joint meeting of the KWP Central Committee and the DPRK Supreme People's Assembly, the Korean people are vigorously struggling to realize the modeling of the whole society on the chuche idea, following the guidance of the glorious party center, and to achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

The Korean people will surely achieve the historic cause of national reunification with the active support and encouragement of the peaceloving people of the world, including the Burmese people. I take this opportunity to express deep thanks for your government's and people's support for our people's just cause of the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

Today, the international situation is very complicated and tense because of the schemes of the imperialists for aggression and war. The DPRK Government and the Korean people will make all possible efforts to encourage the just cause of the fighting Lebanese people, the Palestinian people, the Syrian people and all the Arab people. In accordance with the ideals of independence, friendship and peace, our people will firmly unite with the peoples of the newly-emerging countries and the progressive peoples of the world who are safeguarding independence and will vigorously struggle with them for realizing world independence.

In conclusion, wishing that you Burmese guests spend as joyful and as pleasant days in our country as in your own, I propose a toast to the friendship and solidarity between the Korean and Burmese peoples; to the long life and good health of His Excellency Chairman U Ne Win, the esteemed leader of the Burmese people; to the long life and good health esteemed His Excellency President U San Yu; to the long life and good heatlh of Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of our people; to the longlife and good health of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il; to the health of His Excellency Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing; and to the health of comrades and friends present here.

U Chit Hlaing Speech

[Excerpts] Pyongyang, July 11 (KCNA) -- The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea arranged a party on July 10 at the People's Palace of Culture for the government friendship delegation of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma on a goodwill visit to our country. Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister Ho Tam spoke first at the party. Head of the delegation U Chit Hlaing, minister for foreign affairs, spoke next. Declaring that Burma and Korea have established close bonds of friendship, he said: Looking back upon the history of development of our relations, we recollect the visit of President Kim Il-song, the respected leader of Korea, to Burma and the visit of our Chairman U Ne Win to Korea. Friendship visits were also exchanged between the premiers of our two countries. Besides these high-level visits, there have been frequent exchange of delegations at different levels. Such exchange has helped develop the friendly relations between our two countries.

Burma and Korea estimate each others desire and cooperate with each other in keeping with such bonds of friendship. It gives us particular pleasure to note that economic cooperation between our two countries is increasing year after year and bearing fruits.

I am happy to have opportunities of meeting with many cadres of Korea and seeing at first hand the Korean people working energetically in unity for the construction of the country under the leadership of august President Kim Il-song, he said.

He proposed a toast to the lone life in good health and happiness of His Excellency Kim Il-song, president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, to the long life in good health and happiness of the dear leader His Excellency Kim Chong-il and the everlasting friendship between the peoples of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. The party proceeded in a friendly atmosphere.

HERLAD REPORTS KIM IL-SONG KIDNEY TROUBLE

[Text] North Korea's Kim Il-song, who had one of his kidneys removed by Russian doctors, is now suffering from trouble with the other kidney, the TONG-A ILBO reported yesterday. A report by the daily's Hong Kong correspondent said Chinese doctors are presently in Pyongyang attending to Kim's troubled kidney.

Quoting a reliable "neutral diplomatic source" in Hong Kong, the newspaper said a growth Kim has on the back of his neck is not malignant and it therefore does not threaten his life, but the worsening kidney trouble does, it said. The source further said the kidney trouble is forcing Kim to hasten the project of turning over his power to his son Chong-il according to TONG-A.

PRESIDENT CHON INSPECTS DMZ TROOP READINESS

[Text] Seoul, July 10 (YONHAP) -- South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan Saturday made an inspection tour to military units on western and central frontlines facing North Korea to encourage military men there and to check up the military combat preparedness.

Chon told military men that South Korea's armed forces must always remain prepared, mentally and physically, to repel any possible all-out aggression from the North in its early stages. Chon noted that in modern wars, in which most sophisticated weapons are mobilized, success or failure is supposed to be decided on in three days or so. Chon added that especially military units on frontlines must be trained to become winning ones under any circumstances.

JAPANESE RESPONSE TO ROK LOAN BID EXPECTED

[Text] Seoul, July 10 (YONHAP) -- Japan is expected to respond to South Korea's latest proposal for Japanese loans by the end of this month, and future negotiations hinge on the content of that response, Korean officials said Saturday.

The officials said the nearly year-long negotiations made substantial headway during South Korean Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok's talks with his Japanese counterpart Yoshio Sakurauchi in Tokyo early this week, and added that Japan's response to Korea's offer will determine the progress of future talks.

The latest Korean request, initially conveyed through Japanese Ambassador to Seoul Toshikazu Maeda in late June and reiterated by Minister Yi in Tokyo this week, reportedly calls for 2.3 billion U.S. dollars in low interest Official Development Assistance (ODA) loans and 1.7 billion dollars in commodity credits. South Korea originally requested six billion dollars in ODA loans during a Korean-Japanese foreign ministers' meeting in Tokyo last August. In April, Japan counteroffered 1.5 billion dollars in ODA loans and 2.5 billion in Japanese Export-Import Bank loans. "Now that we have made concessions on the total size of the loan package, we expect the Japanese to respond favorably to our revised request" said one KOrean official.

SIHANOUK COMMUNIQUE ON COMPOSITION OF CGDK

BK111050 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampucuea 0900 GMT 11 Jul 82

Communique on Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea:

I have the great honor to announce today at this historic place the formation of the CGDK in accordance with the statement that I signed in Kuala Lumpur on 22 June with His Excellency Son Sann and His Excellency Khieu Samphan. The CGDK is composed of the inner cabinet, which has already been made public, that is:

Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea;
His Excellency Khieu Samphan, vice president of Democratic Kampuchea in charge of foreign affairs;
His Excellency Son Sann, prime minister;

And four coodinating committees under the inner cabinet, which have just been formed. The composition of these committees is as follows:

1. The Coordinating Committee for Economy and Finance: Ieng Sary, Buor Herl and Boun Sai.

2. The Coordinating Committee for National Defense: In Tam, Im Choudeth and Son Sen.

3. The Coordinating Committee for Culture and Education: Chhoy Vi, Chak Saroeun and Thuch Rin.

4. The Coordinating Committee for Public Health and Social Affairs: Dr Thiounn Thioeunn, Dr. Bou Kheng and Prince Norodom Chakkrapong.

The purpose of the CGDK has already been defined in the 22 June 1982 statement, that is:

1. To mobilize all efforts in the common struggle to liberate Kampuchea from the Vietnamese aggressors with the view to restoring the fatherland as a sovereign and independent country;

2. To bring about the implementation of the declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchea and other relevant UN General Assembly resolutions. After the withdrawal of the Vietnamese aggressor troops from Kampuchea, all the Kampuchean people must be able to fully exercise their right to decide their destiny by themselves through a general, free and secret election under UN supervision.

In my capacity as president of Democratic Kampuchea, I solemnly declare that our duty requires us to resolutely fulfull the mission assigned us in the struggle to liberate our nation.

I would like to make an urgent appeal full of patriotism to all of our compatriots everywhere, inside or outside the country, to come and join us in the struggle against. the foreign aggressors.

I would like to appeal to all friendly countries and governments to please provide support to the sacred cause that we are defending in order to restore peace in Kampuchea and the balance, stability and security in this part of the world.

I would like to express my most profound gratitude to the Royal Government of Thailand and the governments of the other ASEAN countries for giving unswerving support and assistance to us in our national liberation struggle.

I would also like to express my most profound gratitude to all our friends throughout the world for giving support and assistance to us in this noble and heavy task.

Made on 9 July 1982,

[Signed] Norodom Sihanouk

VODK REPORTS ON SIHANOUK-KHIEU SAMPHAN TALKS

[Text] Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, his wife Princess Monique, his daughter Princess Arunrasmi and entourage paid a visit to the Democratic Kampuchea zone on 8 July. The samdech arrived at 1100. In the middle of the bridge with a post holding a sign saying "Democratic Kampuchea" on the side and "The Kingdom of Thailand" on the other, the samdech and his wife received welcoming bouquets from three young girls. Afterwards, Khieu Samphan, Ieng Sary, Son Sen and Mrs Ieng Thirith, who were waiting for the samdech at the foot of the bridge came onto the bridge to greet him. The samdech and Khieu Samphan embraced each other and chatted in a very joyous and warm atmosphere with dozens of foreign journalists crowding around them and jostling each other in a bid to record, photograph and film for television the event.

After a brief welcoming speech, Khieu Samphan invited the samdech to review an honor guard standing at attention in salute to him. Afterwards, the samdech was greeted by the ministers and heads of Democratic Kampuchean diplomatic missions accredited to friendly countries and various international organizations in the world. A long-drum dance, folk music, applause and cheers broke out in warm welcome to the samdech president of Democratic Kampuchea. "Long live Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea!" "Long live the Great National Union of Kampuchea to fight the Vietnamese aggressors in defense of the Kampuchean race!" "Long live the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea!" "The struggle to defend the Kampuchean nation and race will surely triumph!" "Resolve to fight the Vietnamese aggressors in defense of the Kampuchean race and to win victory!" "Long live independent, united, sovereign, peaceful, neutral and nonaligned Kampuchea!"

The samdech, Khieu Samphan, Princess Monique and guests of honor walked under a large banner in the middle of a fence of honor made up of a large crowd of more than 3,000 people who lined the way, clapping and cheering without interruption. The procession of the guests took over half an hour to reach the place of honor where they viewed a traditional dance of welcome to the samdech. The samdech watched the dance and repeatedly thanked everybody for this very warm reception. Finally, the samdech, Khieu Samphan, Princess Monique and other guests of honor reached the reception center where the samdech was saluted by another armed unit at attention.

Inside the pleasantly bedecked reception center, Khieu Samphan invited the samdech, his wife and other guests of honor to take a rest in a hall where drinks were dispensed. After a chat and reminiscing about the past, Khieu Samphan led the samdech and his wife to specially prepared quarters. At 1230, accompanied by colleagues of both sides, the samdech and Khieu Samphan started talks on political matters, particularly on the formation of the CGDK. The talks proceeded in an atmosphere of great unity, cordiality and warmth.

On the same occasion, Khieu Samphan introduced to the samdech the four committee chairmen from the Democratic Kampuchean side to take part in the CGDK coordination committees.

Afterwards, the samdech and Khieu Samphan introduced the four committee chairmen to the press: namely, Ieng Sary, Coordination Committee for Economic and Financial Affairs; Son Sen, Coordination Committee for National Defense; Thuch Rin, Coordination Committee for Culture and Education; and Thiounn Thioeunn, Coordination Committee for Health and Social Affairs.

After completing the talks on political affairs, Khieu Samphan hosted a banquet for the samdech, his wife and other guests of honor during which a traditional music band played. In their toasts, Khieu Samphan and the samdech wished each other good health and expressed determination to rally the forces of great union to increase the anti-Vietnamese resistance for the liberation of the fatherland and race until final, total victory.

At the end of the banquet, a popular dance was performed by a dance troupe for the samdech and all guests of honor. As the dance finished, the samdech shook hands with artists and musicians, repeatedly admiring the beauty of their performance and once again expressing his thanks for the warm reception.

At 1500, Khieu Samphan presented a number of gifts made of rattan and bamboo to the samdech and each guest of honor. He invited the samdech to take an elephant ride from the reception center to a work site to resume the discussion on the formation of the CGDK coordination committees.

SIHANOUK'S PRESS CONFERENCE IN BANGKOK REPORTED

[By Jim Wolf]

[Text] Bangkok, July 12 (AFP) -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk, equating the present Hanoi leadership with Hitler, vowed today to step up the diplomatic and military fight against Vietnamese troops in Cambodia. In a 90-minute news conference here, the colorful prince also compared himself with Shakespeare's Hamlet, referred to his sexual exploits and called on friendly countries to aid his struggle.

"Vietnam wants to Vietnamize Cambodia, swallow up Cambodia, wipe Cambodia from the map and from universal history," he said. Hitler is dead, but Hitler is alive in Hanoi."

Prince Sihanouk, president of a newly proclaimed tripartite resistance coalition, indicated he was assuming his new functions enthusiastically, despite earlier qualms about associating with the feared Khmer Rouge, ousted by Hanoi in January 1979. The coalition, proclaimed Friday on Cambodian soil, weds Prince Sihanouk's FUNCINPEC group with the United Nations-recognized Khmer Rouge and an anti-communist group led by former Premier Son Sann.

The prince said that as president of Democratic Kampuchea, the official name of the deposed government, he would seek material and other aid for the alliance as a whole, not only as its non-communist components. "I will not act as Sihanouk, or leader of FUNCINPEC (National United Front for an Independent, Neutral, Peaceful and Cooperative Cambodia), but as president of the coalition," he declared.

But the prince, once a virtual prisoner in his palace of the Beijing-backed Khmer Rouge when they were in power 1975-79, seemed to express doubt the Khmer Rouge had actually changed their brutal ultra-revolutionary policies. "To be or not to be, that's the question;" he said, "The question is to be eaten by the Khmer Rouge or by Vietnam." "Being nationalists, we prefer to be eaten by other Cambodians" he said, calling himself and Son Sann a couple of "lambs" compared with the Khmer Rouge "wolf".

Son Sann, head of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (PKNLF), and Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphn are Sihanouk's partners in the new three-man "inner cabinet" but their appointees to a tripartite defense "coordinating committee" represented the other two groups at the news conference here.

Alluding to his reputed sexual prowess -- it is said he does not even know how many children he has fathered -- the prince, 60, said he was no longer a playboy and "did not conquer any Vietnamese girls when I was a playboy."

He invited Vietnam and its Soviet backer to take part in a second session of the United Nations-sponsored International Conference on Camodia, which both boycotted during a first session last July.

The prince, who said he would leave "Thailand and Cambodia" on Saturday, is to make official visits to China and North Korea before becoming a kind of traveling salesman for the new coalition. He reiterated he would like to address the non-aligned summit in Baghdad in September before speaking to the new UN General Assembly session in New York. The prince also announced plans to go to Washington, though he said he had not been invited, as well as Western Europe, Australia and New Zealand.

SON SANN ISSUES STATEMENT TO MARK FORMATION OF CGDK

[Text] Democratic Kampuchea Prime Minister Son Sann insisted yesterday that his non-communist resistance group will retain its own organisation, political identity, and "freedom of action" within the newly-formed coalition government.

In a statement released to mark the proclamation of the new government, Son Sann, leader of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), said his group would "continue to work tirelessly and resolutely to defend and to serve our guiding political principles."

The newly-proclaimed prime minister also called for a new era of peaceful cooperation between the Kampuchean and Vietnamese people. "On this historical day," Son Sann said, "I wish to renew our repeated appeals to the peoples of Vietnam and Cambodia to start, beginning right now, to cooperate with one another, and to reduce little by little the karma of hatred which has existed between the two neighbouring peoples for centuries."

He said that an immediate withdrawal of the Vietnamese occupation forces, along with "the reduction and the elimination of mutual suspicions" between Kampucheans and Vietnamese, and the implementation of the declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchea and all relevant General Assembly resolutions, would pave way towards much-needed cooperation between the two neighbouring peoples. He warned Hanoi's leaders they would be facing "growing difficulties everywhere until the day when they will be compelled to remove their occupation troops from our homeland."

Winding up his statement with a flourish, Son Sann declared: "The Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea is born! It is a new and normal government with the consent of the three Cambodian parties. A government which possesses the rights and the duties of a sovereign and independent state. And it is here to stay!"

HUN SEN GIVES INTERVIEWS AT END OF INDOCHINESE CONFERENCE

Station Correspondent

BK091224 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 9 Jul 82

[Text] [Question] Comrade Minister, please tell us about the major achievements made by the Kampuchean people during the past 3 years, particularly about our PRK's international prestige.

[Answer] Kampuchea has been liberated for more than 3 years now. During this period — which is short considering the amount of destruction our country experienced — many praiseworthy achievements have been made by our people, party and government of the PRK. We have revived many things which were put to death under the Pol Pot regime. The living conditions of the people have been restored and improved step by step. Now, we can say that, in general, our people have enough food to eat. This is politically significant as it has created growing confidence on the part of the people in the party and government of the PRK. In general, the situation is stable. Not only is this stability a factor making it impossible for the enemies to reverse the Kampuchean situation, but it is also a basis for us to advance into the future.

Regarding the PRK's international prestige, as all of you know, the Chinese expansionists in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces have sought by all means to isolate the PRK on the international state. However, they have not been able to check our advance. Our house has two doors. They have succeeded in closing one of them; but they still cannot stop us from getting out. Through the remaining door, we have traveled and safely, too. What is most agreeable is that the militant alliance between Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos is flourishing and so are the solidarity and multisided cooperation between Kampuchea and the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. At the same time, public opinion has become well aware of the rebirth of the Kampuchean people and the legitimacy of the PRK.

[Question] What is your opinion on the partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea during the current month of July?

[Answer] Regarding the partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, I see three significant points: First, it clearly reflects the stability of Kampuchea. This troop withdrawal is not the result of pressure by the "coalition governemnt" or by the Chinese expansionists in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces. This withdrawal is based on the stability of the situation in Kampuchea and the fact that Kampuchea's army and security forces have greatly developed and are capable of taking over responsibility for national defense step by step.

Secondly, it proves that Vietnam's assistance is a most correct and sincere gesture. Twice in the past, during the struggle against French imperialism and later on against U.S. imperialism, Vietnam came and, after fulfilling its duty, withdrew. At present, Vietnam is to withdraw wherever the Kampuchea army and people can take over.

Thirdly, it reflects the good will of the PRK and SRV and is part of the policy of peace pursued by the two countries. We have repeatedly declared that the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea is at the request of the Kampuchean people and by virtue of the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation between the SRV and PRK. This presence does not pose any threat to Thailand. For this reason, we have always earnestly asked Thailand to stop supplying arms, ammunition and shelter to the Pol Pot gang so that it would be possible for us to pull some of the Vietnamese troops out of Kampuchea. Because of stability and also because of our good will, we have now agreed to take a further step by deciding on a partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea during this month of July, and if there is a positive response from the Thai side and if the security at the Kampuchean-Thai border is guaranteed, we will consider another partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea. However, let me tell you that we have already warned that should there be any attack on Kampuchea during the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops we will reconsider implementing the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation between Kampuchea and Vietnam in order to take appropriate measures to cope with any act of aggression or attack against the PRK.

[Question] Recently, according to Western media, a number of persons in the Thai ruling circles said the reactionary Khmer groups' so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea is a guarantee for Thailand's security. What is your observation regarding such remarks and acts of the Thai authorities?

[Answer] We have already heard of this theory. Now, after the formation of the tripartite Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, they again said that such a formation is a guarantee for Thailand. Therefore, what is weakness for Kampuchea seems to be strength for Thai side. In this connection, let me recall some events in our history. Thailand has always tried to invade and weaken Kampuchea. After we had liberated Phnom Penh from the Pol Pot regime, Thailand mustered the remnants of the Pol Pot army and other reactionary Khmer forces in order to undermine the PRK. We therefore see that such activities are part of the efforts to implement the scheme of the Chinese expansionists to sabotage and topple the PRK as well as to oppose the two other countries: Vietnam and Laos. Regarding this, we have often posed a hypothetical question to Thailand, asking it what it would do should any of Thailand's neighbors carry out hostile acts against the Thai Government like Thailand is doing to Kampuchea? Let me tell you, the Thai remark that the birth of the reactionary Khmer groups guarantees its security is true only for the present. In the future, when China has more deeply interfered in Thailand, it will become a danger not for Kampuchea, Vietnam or Laos, but for Thailand itself, for there are Maoist rebels in Thailand and the Pol Pot gang are also Maoists. They will surely join hands to overturn the Thai Government.

[Answer] It is an act of good will by the Kampuchean side. That proposal was actively supported by the SRV and LPDR during the conference. Thailand has always said that there is a threat from Kampuchea because of the presence of Vietnamese troops in our country. At the same time, we have also charged that there is a threat from Thai territory because Thailand has connived with China in using the Pol Pot gang and other reactionary Khmer groups in Thai territory. The situation in the Kampuchean-Thai border region has always been tense and explosive and there has always been the likelihood of a fierce war [sangkream sahav] between Kampuchea and Thailand.

We have paid special attention to finding various solutions in a move toward turning this border region into a zone of security and stability. In the past, we proposed the establishment of a demilitarized zone between Kampuchea and Thailand. Now, as Thailand is not yet ready to accept the idea of a demilitarized zone, we have proposed a plan to create a safety zone along the Thai border. This safety zone in Kampuchean territory will be policed by Kampuchean, not Vietnamese, troops. The Vietnamese troops which are on their internationalist duty in Kampuchea will pull back. Also in this safety zone in Thai territory, there will be only Thai forces. Therefore, the Pol Pot and other reactionary Khmer forces and the refugee camps will be moved out of this safety zone. As for the size of this safety zone, it will be agreed upon by both sides. We hold that if the Thai side responds positively to the proposal of the Kampuchean side, the tense situation will be greatly eased and the fierce war I have mentioned above will be avoided. At the same time, in order to ensure the success of this formula, we have also thought about international supervision and, in case Pol Pot is expelled from the United Nations, we will also consider having UN supervision in this safety zone.

[Question] What is your impression of the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea by the three reactionary Khmer groups?

[Answer] The so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea is a farce staged by Beijing in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces in the ruling circles of the ASEAN countries. As for us and world public opinion, however, we are not duped. The formation of this coalition government is in no way a victory for them. On the contrary, it reflects a bitter setback for Beijing and ASEAN countries in collusion with U.S. imperialism. As is widely known, the Chinese expansionists have always trusted the reactionary Pol Pot Khmer forces. They never cared about the role of Sihanouk or Son Sann before. Now, however, they pay attention to the role of Sihanouk and Son Sann. Why?

We already know that Pot Pot has failed both at home and abroad. Inside the country, the people do not support him. The Kampuchean people have a strong loathing for the Pol Pot regime which is genocidal and which left behind most serious consequences for the Kampuchean people after liberation on 7 January 1979. For this reason, Pol Pot has no source of forces, no source from which he can get reinforcements for the ranks of his depleting army. Abroad, Pol Pot was vehemently condemned by world public opinion, including a number of countries which voted for his representative at the United Nations. The trend to abandon Pol Pot was growing. Afraid to see its lackeys lose the Democratic Kampuchean seat at the United Nations, Beijing was forced to implement shroud-changing tactics. In other words, Beijing attempted to use Sihanouk and Son Sann to cover up Pol Pot's crimes. What did Beijing use to lure Sihanouk and Son Sann into its service? It used the positions of president and prime minister as bait to entice Sihanouk and Son Sann into joining the CGDK. Sihanouk is a loser. Though he suffered from the genocidal regime -- 20 of his children and grandchildren as well as many of his supporters were killed or suffered badly under the Pol Pot regime -- he still thinks that the post of president is sweet to him. Everybody knows that this prince is power crazy. No matter how savage and fierce the Pol Pot regime was, Sihanouk has readily agreed to be president. Though that government is a government in exile, it is still a convenient vehicle for Sihanouk to get his bread and butter for the rest of his life. Moreover, Sihanouk loves the limelight. The presidency might give him the fanfare which would be denied him if he remained a refugee-cum-tourist abroad.

Regarding the ASEAN countries, in setting up this coalition government, they had to face a partial setback. Why? Let me tell you why. Previously, the ASEAN countries liked Son Sann and trusted his forces, but Son Sann did not live up to their expectations. His forces have always been insignificant. Most of the Son Sann soldiers are noncombatants, corrupt hooligans. Their major duties are to control black markets in Thai territory. For this reason, the ASEAN countries needed to use so-called military aid for anti-communist forces in Kampuchea as a stick to get Son Sann into the Pol Pot-influenced CGDK. This plays right into the hands of the Chinese expansionists who want to see the three forces unite to topple the PRK in order to return the genocidal Pol Pot regime to Kampuchea and let it massacre the Kampuchean people again. In the past, Son Sann was heard condemning Pol Pot; but, later on, I saw reports in some newspapers, particularly Thai newspapers, published in Bangkok carrying excerpts of Son Sann's remarks saying that he wanted to sit in a clean chair but this would have meant a long wait. For this reason, he agreed to sit in a blood-stained chair. It is because Son Sann wanted to sit in a prime minister's chair that he had to turn a blind eye to his principles and accept by joining the reactionary Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang -- a genocidal regime unprecedented in the history of mankind.

All of this shows the passivity of both the masters and their lackeys who ultimately reached the stage of the formation of the so-called CGDK.

As for the Kampuchean people, we are not duped. At this point I would like to recall the assessment made long ago by our KPRP and PRK Government when they informed our people throughout the country that Sihanouk and Son Sann are Pol Pot. This theory has now been vindicated. It has become a reality, a concrete fact. Therefore, our people throughout the country must heighten vigilance to foil the maneuvers of the reactionaries. At the same time, we must realize that though the CGDK has already been signed by Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan, these latter still have fundamental differences. The sharing of portfolios in the cabinet of Democratic Kampuchea has been completed, but the power sharing in the four committees that they have planned has not yet been. It is rare to see wild beasts living at peace in the same cage. Their bosses have made tiresome efforts in this direction. I, however, believe that they will fail. Even if the coalition is successful, they will never be able to turn it into a force which would pose any threat to our independence, sovereignty and security.

Vietnamese TV

[Text] Phnom Penh, 10 Jul (SPK) -- Foreign Minister Hun Sen has said that the stabilization of the situation in Kampuchea and the development of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Armed Forces are the primary reasons for the partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea.

During an interview with Vietnamese television, Hun Sen indicated:

The reduction of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea reflects the stability of Kampuchea and is not because of pressure from the reactionary Khmer coalition government, the Chinese expansionists acting in collusion with the U.S. imperialists or because of other reactionary forces. We have decided on this withdrawal because of the stability in Kampuchea, the development of the armed forces and the ability of the armed forces to accomplish their tasks.

This action shows that Vietnam's aid is unselfish. This partial withdrawal of Vietnamese combatants from Kampuchea will be conducted along the lines of the two previous occasions -- following the struggles against the French colonialists and the U.S. imperialists.

The PRK and the SRV pursue a foreign policy of peace and we adopt an attitude of good will. We have stated several times that the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea is at the request of the Kampuchean people in keeping with the terms of the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation concluded between the PRK and the SRV. It does not threaten Thailand.

Internal stability and good will have led us to take the first step in deciding to withdraw part of the Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea this July. If Thailand responds in a positive manner to this overture and if security along the Thai-Kampuchean border is assured, we will consider further withdrawals. On the other hand, if Thailand takes advantage of the withdrawal, we will implement the Vietnam-Kampuchea treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation and take appropriate measures to thwart all aggression against the PRK.

When asked about the significance of the Kampuchean proposal to establish a zone of security on both sides of the Thai-Kampuchean border, Hun Sen said:

This act of good will on the part of the PRK was supported by the SRV and the LPDR at the conference. Thailand often claims that the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea poses a threat to Thailand. We reassert that the threat comes from Thailand, which, together with China, has sheltered the Pol Pot remnants and other reactionary Khmers on its territory.

The situation along the Kampuchean-Thai border is tense and a war could break out between Thailand and Kampuchea. We are paying particular attention to seeking ways to establish a zone of security and stability along the Kampuchean-Thai border. Thailand has not accepted our previous proposals for the establishment of a demilitarized zone along the Kampuchean-Thai border. We are now submitting a proposal for a zone of security along the Kampuchean-Thai border to be occupied exclusively by Kampuchean and Thai troops and where there will no longer be any Vietnamese troops. Concequently, the Pol Pot remnants and other reactionary Khmers and the refugee camps must be moved out of this zone. The dimensions of this zone will be defined jointly by the two parties.

A positive response from Thailand will be an effective step toward easing the tension and eventually eliminating the risk of war.

To ensure the effective implementation of this solution, we have proposed that it be implemented under international supervision and, if Pol Pot is expelled from the United Nations, we will place this zone under UN control.

Regarding the formation of a "coalition government" by the reactionary Khmers, Minister Hun Sen dubbed it a "farce staged by Beijing in collusion with Washington and other reactionary forces in ASEAN." As for us and the rest of the world, he stressed, we consider it to be a stinging defeat for them, far from a victory, even though Son Sann and Sihanouk have joined it.

In the international arena, some countries have withdrawn their support for the Pol Pot clique. Beijing took another tack by using the Sihanouk and Son Sann card to cover up the crimes of their Pol Pot lackeys in the hope of maintaining Democratic Kampuchea's seat at the United Nations. By so doing, Sihanouk and Son Sann have become Pol Pot. Ferocious beasts penned in the same cage will undoubtedly tear at each other's throats and this will lead to a pitiful failure for Chinese expansionism, U.S. imperialism and their ilk.

Hun Sen went on to say: The formation of this "government" is far from ensuring security for Thailand. After the liberation of Kampuchea from the genocidal Pol Pot regime, Thailand mustered the remnants of the Pol Pot gang and other reactionary Khmers in order to sabotage the PRK. We realize that all these activities are for the purpose of implementing the designs of Beijing expansionism and destroying the PRK as well as Vietnam and Laos.

If one of Thailand's neighbors were to manifest the same degree of hostility toward the Thai Government that Thailand has shown Kampuchea, what would Thailand think? Thailand might think that rallying the reactionary Khmers will ensure its own security. But in the future, through its stranglehold in Thailand, China itself will be a danger, not only for Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos, but particularly for Thailand, because there are Maoist forces there and, together with the Maoist Pol Pot forces, they will overthrow the Thai Government.

Touching on the achievements made by the Kampuchean people during the past 3 years, Hun Sen stressed: Kampuchea was liberated 3 years ago. This is a brief period of time, considering the scale of our history, in which to restore a country as badly devastated as ours. What we have achieved during these 3 years, however, is highly significant for the people, party and government of the PRK; for we have succeeded in reviving everything that died under the genocidal regime. The life of our people is gradually becoming stable. We can say that our people have become self-sufficient in food. These victories significantly contribute to the consolidation of the people's power and confirm the confidence of the Kampuchean people in the leadership of the party and government of the PRK. The stability of the situation in the PRK makes the Kampuchean revolution irreversible and serves as a basis for its advance.

The prestige of the PRK has soared to new heights in the international arena. The Chinese expansionist, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries, are seeking to isolate the PRK but their efforts are to no avail.

Nothing can thwart the advance of the Kampuchean revolution. Our house has two doors. One has been blocked, but we cannot be kept inside indefinitely. We will leave the house safely through the other door. One factor which we enjoy is the steadily growing strategic alliance between Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos and the development of the multifaceted cooperation between the PRK and the Soviet Union and the other countries of the socialist community.

VODK CALLS SRV TROOP WITHDRAWAL 'TRICK'

BK091135 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 8 Jul 82

[Station commentary: "Why Is Nguyen Co Thach Peddling the Partial Troop Withdrawal From Kampuchea Trick So Hard?"]

[Text] Since the end of the 1981-82 dry season, the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors have had plenty to say about the partial Vietnamese troop withdrawal from Kampuchea. And now Nguyen Co Thach has taken to the stage at the foreign ministers conference in Saigon and declared that the Vietnamese are planning to withdraw an important part of their forces of aggression from Kampuchea this month. This is a most perfidious and tricky maneuver of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors. Any maneuver to partially withdraw the Vietnamese aggressor troops from Kampuchea is against the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchea which the Vietnamese -- the aggressors in Kampuchea who are violating the principles of the UN Charter, the law on relations between states and international law -- to completely and unconditionally withdraw their aggressor troops from Kampuchea and allow the Kampuchean people to determine their own destiny by themselves without outside interference.

Why are the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors brazenly peddling this trick about a partial troop withdrawal from Kampuchea?

The main reason is that the Vietnamese face many difficulties on the Kampuchean battlefield. They are at a complete impasse in the military and political fields. After their operational plans for the 1981-82 dry season had been completely and shamefully defeated, the Vietnamese enemy aggressors went on the decline and faced a worse impasse. It is obvious that the Vietnamese are strategically defeated. If they let the situation continue as it is, the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors will undoubtedly be completely defeated in the near future. They are therefore trying their tricky maneuver to extricate themselves from this difficult situation and to delay their defeat. The successive tricks tried by the Vietnamese up to now -- including the regional conference, the establishment of a demilitarized zone along the Thai-Kampuchean border, leaving the Democratic Kampuchean seat at the United Nations vacant as well as their maneuver to gradually withdraw a part of their troops from Kampuchea -- are attempts to fool international opinion. They are trying to bury the resolutions of the UN General Assembly which call for their complete and unconditional withdrawal from Kampuchea and hoodwink the world into following their tricks and legalizing their aggression in Kampuchea.

The world clearly realizes the facts of the Kampuchean problem. It is an issue which was completely due to the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy's aggression against Kampuchea -- a sovereign and independent state and a legal member of the United Nations.

Therefore, all peace and justice-loving countries in the world have firmly opposed the Vietnamese enemy's aggression in Kampuchea and adopted the resolutions in the UN General Assembly three times and the declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchea once, calling for the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors to completely and unconditionally withdraw their troops from Kampuchea, to respect the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Kampuchea and to respect the right of the Kampuchean people to determine their own destiny by themselves without outside interference.

We would like to appeal to all peace and justice-loving peoples and countries in the world and to the United Nations to categorically denounce and reject the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors' tricks about a partial or gradual troop withdrawal from Kampuchea and to continue to unite in bringing pressure to bear on the Vietnamese until they unconditionally withdraw all of their troops from Kampuchea in conformity with the resolutions of the UN General Assembly.

The entire Kampuchean nation and people as well as Democratic Kampuchea -- a sovereign state -- have been victims of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy's aggression. We categorically oppose and reject the Vietnamese tricks on their partial or gradual troop withdrawal from Kampuchea. We also are against and denounce all Vietnamese maneuvers which are contrary to the resolutions of the 34th, 35th and 36th UN General Assemblies and the declaration of the July 1981 International Conference on Kampuchea.

The Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea firmly call on the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors to respect and implement all resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the Declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchea by completely and unconditionally withdrawing their troops of aggression from Kampuchea. This is the only key to solving the Kampuchean problem.

ATTACKS FROM THAILAND FOR 2-8 JULY REPORTED

SK120651 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1442 GMT 10 Jul 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 10 Jul (SPK) -- Between 2 and 8 July, Thai aircraft -- C-47's, L-19's, OV-10's and jet fighters -- made 11 reconnaissance flights over the sectors north of the Preah Vihear temples, west of Poipet, Yeang Dangkum, Soda and Kamrieng, and north of Samraong between 15 and 17 km from the border, according to military sources.

Attacks using 120-mm and 82-mm mortars from Thailand were recorded 56 times. There were 8 on the Preah Vihear temples and the area south of the border junction (Peah Vihear Province); 120-mm and 82-mm mortars and H-12 rockets hit Kon Kak, Thmar Puok, Yeang Dangkum and Tailin (Siem Reap and Battabang provinces) 16 times; the sectors west and northwest of Smat Deng (Pursat Province) was hit 17 times and there were 3 mortar attacks on Hill 343. These localities are between 1 and 1.5 kms from the border.

Thai ships and armed vessels were reported inside Kampuchean territorial waters in the vicinity of Kaoh Kong and Kaoh Tang islands 107 times.

INTERIOR MINISTER ON CGDK, REFUGEES

[Excerpt] Interior Minister Gen Sitthi Chirarot told newsmen at the ministry this morning that he did not think the setting up of a government by Prince Sihanouk close to the Thai border would pose a problem. He said harassment by the other side would not depend on whether the government was close to the Thai border or not. He however noted that the general situation along the Thai-Kampuchean border has improved with no increase in Kampuchean refugees coming into Thailand reported. Concerning the repatriation of Kampuchean refugees, he said Thailand will facilitate any repatriation whenever the refugees indicate their willingness and the border points where they want to cross.

VIETNAMESE FORCES PULL BACK 10 KM FROM BORDER

[Interview given by Maj Gen Somkhit Chongphayuha, commander of the 9th Army Division, at a press conference briefing on 11 July — recorded]

[Text] [Somkhit] All Vietnamese troops have withdrawn about 10 km from the border.

[Question] When did they start pulling back?

[Answer] Following their failure in the drive against the Kampuchean resistance forces. Vietnamese troops sustained heavy losses in the drive as well as from malaria. The pullout was made out of necessity. Compared with the previous dry-season operations, this year's drive by the Vietnamese forces was less violent. Though the number of forces massed for the drive was large, there was less fighting and it was less violent than in previous years. The Vietnamese forces suffered heavy losses from attacks by the various Kampuchean resistance groups and guerrillas. Their logistic routes were harassed and cut. A large number of them also suffered from malaria and they lacked medicine for treatment.

[Question] How well prepared are our own forces?

[Answer] We are well prepared, better than they. We are better in manpower, in weapons and in supplies.

[Question] Will there be any new reinforcements?

[Answer] For which side?

[Question] For our forces.

[Answer] There will be no new reinforcements at present.

[Question] Does that mean we have sufficient forces at the border?

[Answer] Yes. I believe that if the situation continues as at present, the situation at the border will gradually improve. Our measures to control border smuggling helped reduce the fighting in Kampuchea. Before the controls, they only needed to carry ammunition with them and could buy medical supplies, food and clothing at the border from the local people. Now, they have to bring everything with them, including food, water, medical supplies, fuel oil and ammunition. Now, after 1 day of fighting, they have to wait 10 days for more supplies. This has reduced the fighting. Our effort to control border smuggling was therefore a factor contributing to improving the situation along the border. It has reduced the fighting inside Kampuchea as well as producing a peaceful atmosphere at the Thai border. I therefore believe we should shift tactics from shooting to economic warfare. This will improve the general situation for the people. This can be seen from the fact that no more refugees have fled into our country. The influx has been stopped. On the other hand, they are returning home. This will improve the situation.

SRV TV INTERVIEWS THACH ON INDOCHINA MEETING

[Television interview with SRV Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach on the sixth conference of Indochinese foreign ministers -- recorded; date, locale of interview not given]

[Text] [Question] Please tell us about the situation under which the Vietnamese and Kampuchean sides have agreed to the partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea?

[Answer] The situation in the three Indochinese countries and in Southeast Asia has changed considerably over the past 3 years. For more than 3 years, China, the United States and the ASEAN countries have resorted to all types of economic, political, diplomatic and military measures to reverse the revival of the Kampuchean people and to subdue the three Indochinese countries. However, all of these measures -- except a major war, which has not been waged -- have failed and the ASEAN countries are at an impasse. Meanwhile the situation in Kampuchea has developed very satisfactorily in all economic, political and military fields. Although Vietnam and Laos are still experiencing many difficulties, we have worked to overcome them step by step. In general, the three Indochinese countries have stood firm and closely united.

We have seen more and more clearly that since 1979 China has used the so-called threat of Vietnam and the Soviet Union against Thailand and the ASEAN countries to cover up the real danger to this region, which is Chinese hegemony and expansionism. We know that for more than 3 years China has opposed all dialogue and a peaceful solution to the problems between the ASEAN and Indochinese countries. China wants to pit ASEAN against the Indochinese countries, creating troubles in Southeast Asia from which it will benefit. At the same time, it continues to support the pro-Beijing rebels in Southeast Asian countries -- ASEAN states as well as Indochina and even Burma.

These plots have exposed China's expansionism and hegemony as the main danger to Southeast Asia. Over the past 3 years, we have witnessed a struggle in Southeast Asia between two policies -- one of confrontation between ASEAN and Indochina and the other proposed by the three Indochinese countries, which is one of conciliation, peace and cooperation. One can see that over the past 3 years confrontation -- even military opposition -- has obviously not resolved anything but has further complicated the situation. Now many people, including those in ASEAN countries, have realized that the sole solution to the problems in Southeast Asia is conciliation, peace and cooperation. It is in this very situation that Vietnam and Kampuchea have decided to show their good will through a partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea in order to contribute to safeguarding peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

[Question] Is there any relationship between the partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and the establishment of the so-called Kampuchean tripartite alliance?

[Answer] Regarding the so-called Kampuchean tripartite alliance, all countries which support the present Phnom Penh government and world opinion see this as merely a farce. A farce cannot solve anything. It is obvious from its establishment that the Pol Pot clique still controls military and diplomatic affairs and retains the decisionmaking role in this tripartite alliance, which is spawned and directed by China, the United States and ASEAN countries. This is a gross intervention into the internal affairs of Kampuchea and is a very bad precedent. The establishment of the tripartite reactionary alliance only creates a more complex and tense situation for Southeast Asia and it cannot solve any problem. Moreover, everyone knows that over the past 35 years nobody has been able to bring pressure -- political or otherwise -- to bear on the three Indochinese countries. The fact that we are proposing a partial withdrawal of troops is due to the stable situation in Kampuchea and the developing situation in Southeast Asia, as I have mentioned before. This demonstrates our good will, which is aimed at contributing to the cause of peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

[Question] How do you believe Thailand should respond to the Vietnamese gesture of good will in partially withdrawing troops from Kampuchea?

[Answer] Everyone knows that Thailand has assisted China and the Pol Pot clique in opposing the Kampuchean people. We have many times made it clear that when Thailand stops allowing China, the Pol Pot clique and other reactionary groups to use Thai soil to oppose the Kampuchean people, we will then partially withdraw our troops. We have mentioned this many times. To show our good will, we are taking the first step by withdrawing some of our troops. Now they have to take the second step and when this has been done we will then continue to withdraw troops. What will the second step be and what is an indication of their action? We will be able to see this in several ways: In the past we made a proposal to set up a demilitarized zone from which the armed forces of both sides must be withdrawn. The Pol Pot clique must be disarmed and various refugees camps must be moved from this zone. Thailand responded to this proposal by saying that if the demilitarized zone is also established on Thai soil then it will affect Thai sovereignty and that since Thailand is not participating in the war it is not right to set up a demilitarized zone in Thailand. This is an irresponsible answer.

Now we have advanced a second proposal for the establishment of a safety zone, with the Thai side of the zone to be occupied by the Thai government forces and the Kampuchean side if the zone to be occupied by the Kampuchean Government forces. On the Kampuchean side of the zone, the Vietnamese forces will be withdrawn. In the Thai side of the zone, all of the other non-Thai forces, including the Chinese, Pol Pot and reactionary forces, will have to be moved out and disarmed. Thus, we have been mindful of Thailand's demand not to withdraw its armed forces from its own territory.

We think that this time Thailand should accept this proposal if it wants to demonstrate its good will. To prevent the possibility of Thailand refusing to accept this proposal due to a lack of good will, this time we have also proposed that strict measures be taken to prevent both Kampuchea and Thailand from allowing the use of their territories for activities against each other. Thus, we have cleared the way for both sides to take the necessary steps to ensure peace and security along the Kampuchean-Thia border. Vietnam has also agreed that there should be international supervision over this zone.

[Question] Mr Minister, at the recent foreign ministerial conference of the three Indochinese countries, the participating comrades presented a new proposal for convening an international conference on Southeast Asia. Could you elaborate on this?

[Answer] Previously, we proposed the convening of a regional conference of only the ASEAN and Indochinese countries. If Burma participated in this conference, the participants would include only the countries in the region. That is why it was called a regional conference with the purpose of discussing Southeast Asian problems. But the ASEAN states, especially Thailand, had rejected such a conference and had wanted to convene an international conference on Kampuchea. In turn, we had also rejected the idea of discussing the internal affairs of a country. However, this time we have taken into account their idea of convening an international conference and we have agreed that there will be a conference with the participation of those countries in the region -- namely the ASEAN and Indochinese countries -- and of six countries will be the Soviet Union, China, the United States, Britain and France -- because they have participated in various international conferences for peace in Indochina, Laos and Vietnam. As for India, we have proposed India's participation because it shares common borders with various Southeast Asian nations and it has long-standing relations of friendship with various Southeast Asian nations. In addition, India has contributed a great deal to the cause of peace in Indochina over the past 20 years.

Thus, we have taken into account their ideas. Such a conference must respect the principles of Southeast Asian problems being solved by the Southeast Asian countries themselves, and of refraining from interfering in the internal affairs of each other's country. Secondly, the problems between Southeast Asia and other outside countries will be settled by the Southeast Asian countries and the other outside countries concerned. Thus, in this foreign ministerial conference, we have set forth the principles needed to deal with the problems.

So, there are two different aspects, namely the composition of the participants and the principles which must be adopted in solving problems. These principles are the old ones which we previously proposed.

[Hanoi International Service in Mandarin at 1230 GMT on 10 July also carries a report on this interview with Nguyen Co Thach which adds at this point:

Question: Mr Minister, please tell us what kind of efforts the United Nations needs to exert in ensuring stability and peace in Southeast Asia?

Answer: We have always respected the United Nations. However, the United Nations has committed a grave mistake on the question of Kampuchea in violation of the UN Charter because it has recognized the Pol Pot clique -- the genocidal clique that has butchered 3 million Kampuchean people -- evoked a war of aggression and created turmoil in the region. If the United Nations removes the Pol Pot clique from the its Kampuchean seat in the United Nations, we will then support the UN role in our region as well as its stand on the Southeast Asia issue and international affairs, even its role with regard to [words indistinct] in Kampuchea and Thailand. However, if the United Nations continues to support Pol Pot, it can never play its role well because its support for the Pol Pot clique will certainly impair its prestige."]

VCP CENTRAL COMMITTEE HOLDS EARLY JULY PLENUM

[Text] During the first week of July 1982, the VCP Central Committee held its second pleanry session to decide on a work program for its entire tenure and to define its work statute in order to implement all the resolutions of the Fifth VCP Congress successfully.

At the plenum, the participants asserted the urgency and importance of improving the working method and system of the party Central Committee in order to enhance party leadership, overcome shortcomings in providing guidance for the implemention of economic, social and other duties, and create changes for the better in all fields of activity. If the decisions taken at the plenum on the work program and statute of the party Central Committee are implemented correctly, they will serve to accelerate the improvement of work throughout the entire party and in all state agencies vigorously.

Speaking at the plenum, General Secretary Le Duan stressed: The activities of the party Central Committee as well as the entire party must serve to enhance the militancy and leadership of the party, develop the socialist collective mastery of the laboring people, increase the effectiveness of the socialist state management and achieve by all means the two strategic tasks and various economic and social targets set by the fifth party congress.

The work programs of the party Central Committee and the Council of Ministers must emphasize the establishment and development of district level authority, using districts as areas in which to combine agriculture with industry.

The plenum highly evaulated the mass movements launched since the fifth party congress and warmly welcomed the efforts and achievements scored by all our people and troops in the areas of production, combat and combat preparedness during the first half of 1982.

VIETNAMESE ENVOY DETAILS LATEST PROPOSALS

[Text] Jakarta, July 9 (ANTARA) -- Indochinese countries continue to seek to establish a peaceful coexistence with the member countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) "although ASEAN has fallen into the Chinese trap," Vietnamese Ambassador Trinh Xuan Lang told the press here Thursday [8 July].

Ambassador Lang explained about the joint communique issued following a meeting of foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries -- Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia -- in Ho Chi Minh City from July 6 to 7.

The joint communique referred among other things to the Vietnamese plan to pull out some of its troops from Cambodia and a proposed international conference on Southeast Asian affairs. According to the joint communique the partial withdrawal will begin this month. The Vietnamese envoy, however, could not mention figures with regard to the planned withdrawal. Vietnam is believed to have stationed around 180,000 of its soldiers in Cambodia.

The proposed international conference on Southeast Asia will involve the three Indochinese countries, the five countries of ASEAN, five permanent members of the Security Council -- the Soviet Union, China, the United States, France, Britain -- India and Burma.

When asked to comment on the newly set up coalition government of Kampuchea made up of the three resistance groups in the war torn country the Vietnamese ambassador said, "It is merely a result of a bogus scheme devised by the Chinese in which ASEAN has let itself be entrapped. What happened in Southeast Asia in the last 3 years clearly showed to the world, especially to a number of prominent leaders in this region, that the causes of tensions and instability in Southeast Asia lie with the authorities in Beijing with their expansionist and hegemonist policies," the ambassador cited, quoting the joint communique.

Like all other countries in this region, Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam cherish a peaceful and friendly atmosphere and seek to foster cooperation with any country in the world, especially with neighbouring countries, including China, he said.

The joint communique also proposed to establish a "safety zone" along the Cambodian-Thai borders, each side to be guarded by troops of each country. The Vietnamese troops, which according to the joint communique are undertaking an international duty in Cambodia, will not be placed on the border areas.

The United Nations secretary general, Javier Perez de Cuellar, is also to be invited to the proposed conference, but only in his personal capacities. "He will be invited as the UN official representative if the Pol Pot clique is expulsed from the UN," the joint communique said further.

Speaking on the bilateral relations between Vietnam and Indonesia, the ambassador said the two countries have continued to seek to foster good relations despite differences in certain points.

The ambassador refused to talk about a possible visit here of Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach. Minister Nguyen Co Thach plans to visit three other ASEAN countries -- Malaysia, Singapore and Thailand -- this month. When asked about the possibility of a visit to Vietnam by Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmadja the ambassador said: "We will certainly welcome him. Please make the suggestion to him."

MERDEKA ENDORSES SRV TROOP WITHDRAWAL OFFER

[Text] Jakarta, July 12 (AFP) -- The Indonesian daily newspaper MERDEKA (FREEDOM), who often voices support for Hanoi over the Cambodian issue, today called on the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN) to give serious consideration to the announced partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia.

Reiterating its view that China is the main threat to Southeast Asia, the paper said in an editorial that the purpose of the planned withdrawal should not be misinterpreted. "The Vietnamese decision (to withdraw its forces) and the consequences thereafter must be followed thoroughly without fabricated stance. All parties concerned must face the Vietnamese move without skepticism, but they must direct it towards a positive development for the interest of the Southeast Asian region," the paper said.

It criticised Prince Norodom Sihanouk (leader of Cambodia's newly-formed anti-Vietnamese coalition government), Thailand and China for their negative reactions to the recent Vietnamese pull-out announcement. "Why do Sihanouk, Bangkok and Beijing give a simultaneous stance with the same tone? Because Sihanouk and Bangkok are both a tool of Beijing's strategy in Southeast Asia and they cannot do anything but what Beijing wants," the paper added.

MOKHTAR ON ISLAND DISPUTE WITH MALAYSIA

[Text] Jakarta, July 9 (AFP) -- Indonesia and Malaysia have agreed to halt discussions about the status of the disputed islands, Sempadan and Legitan, lying between Indonesian East Borneo and the Malaysian state of Sabah, Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmadja said today.

The foreign minister refused to say if the discussions would be continued (?and) also denied reports that unidentified foreign troops had occupied the Sempadan. Several Indonesian members of parliament reacted strongly here over the reports and suggested Indonesia should use force should it fail to settle the problem diplomatically. Meanwhile, national security chief Admiral Sudomo has called on the Indonesian press not to build the story up. Reports alleging foreign troops to have occuped the island could give an impression that the Indonesian Armed Forces had been stabbed in the back, he said.

CULTURE MINISTER ARRESTED FOR MURDER, BAIL DENIED

[Excerpt] Kuala Lumpur, July 10 (AFP) -- Mokhtar Hashim, Malaysia's minister for culture, youth and sports, was remanded in police custody today in connection with the murder of Mohamad Taha, speaker of the Negri Sembilan State Assembly. Mr Taha was shot dead outside his house in Gemenche village near Tampin, about 100 km (62 miles) from here on April 14, eight days before the general election.

Four others who appeared in the Tampin magistrate's court this morning along with the minister, were also charged under Section 302 of the penal code and remanded in custody. The section deals with pre-meditated murder for which the guilty are liable to be sentenced to death.

Bail was not allowed by the magistrate, Sukri Mohamad, who ordered the case to be transferred to the Kuala Lumpur High Court. The attorney-general Mr Abu Talib Othman, in applying for the case to be transferred to the Kuala Lumpur High Court, described it as a security case to be tried under special security cases regulations. The case will be mentioned in Kuala Lumpur High Court on Tuesday, July 13.

Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed announced the arrest of the 41-year-old cabinet minister this morning. Later he said in reply to questions from pressmen that Mokhtar still remained a minister, although "obviously he cannot attend cabinet meetings." "He has been arrested, but he is innocent until proved guilty," Dr. Mahathir said.

The four persons produced in the magistrate's court along with Mr Mokhtar are Mohammad Nordin Johar, 33, a businessman, Rahmat Sukiman, 54, a village headman, Aziz Tumpuk, 53, a businessman and Aziz Abdullah, 65, self-employed.

In rejecting the application for bail, the magistrate said bail could not be allowed because the case was being tried under Section 302 of the penal code where the sentence was death and also because it was tried under the security cases regulations.

The sensational arrest took place last night when police stopped Mr. Mokhtar on his way home and took him to police headquarters. He was brought back at 0500 and allowed to spend half an hour with his wife and two children before being driven off again.

OFFICIAL SAYS SRV PULLOUT 'POSITIVE MOVE'

BK111319 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 11 Jul 82

[Text] Malaysia and other ASEAN countries are watching to see if Vietnam will carry out its stated intention of withdrawing some of its troops from Kampuchea. BERNAMA quoted a senior government official as saying that although there is nothing new in the proposal, the physical withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea will certainly be a positive move. He pointed out that Hanoi had on many occasions announced that it would pull out its troops from Kampuchea if China stopped threatening it. According to a communique issued in Ho Chi Minh City last week, a number of Vietnamese troops will be withdrawn from Kampuchea within this month.

The official confirmed that the text of the communique has been officially handed over to the secretary general of the Foreign Ministry, Tan Sri Zakaria Mohamed Ali, by the Vietnamese charge d'affaires in Kuala Lumpur. Its contents are expected to be discussed during the visit to ASEAN later this month by the Vietnamese Foreign Minister, Mr Nguyen Co Thach.

GOVERNMENT PROTESTS U.S. SANCTIONS AGAINST USSR

[Text] Tokyo, Jul 13, KYODO -- The Japanese Government has unofficially protested against the recent U.S. tightened sanctions against the Soviet Union through its ambassador to Washington, Yoshio Okawara, according to government sources. The U.S. Government decided June 19 to tighten sanctions against the Soviet Union.

The sources at the Ministry of International Trade and Industry said MITI will consult with the Foreign Ministry shortly to decide whether or not to make an official protest to the United States. They said MITI's position was that the sanctions should essentially be applied to American enterprises and their application to enterprises outside the U.S. is unjustifiable.

The unofficial protest was made as the U.S. Government took steps to suspend the use of electric logging and other equipment made by U.S. companies at the Japan-Soviet oil and natural gas exploration project off Sakhalin. The sources estimated that if Japan should cooperate with the United States in its tightened economic sanctions against the U.S., the Japanese companies involved would suffer losses totaling dollar 300 million.

LDP TRADE DELEGATION LEAVES FOR ASEAN, TAIWAN

[Text] Tokyo, Jul 12, KYODO -- A high-powered mission of Japan's ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) left on a 12-day tour of four South-East Asian countries and regions Monday to help ease their growing protectionism against imports from Japan. Headed by Masumi Esaki, ex-minister of international trade and industry, the mission will visit two member countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), Thailand and the Philippines, and Hong Kong and Taiwan.

A similar delegation is scheduled to visit three other ASEAN members -- Malaysia, Singapore and Indonesia -- July 29-August 10 after the first mission returns July 23.

Both missions are designed to help appease complaints about huge trade deficits with Japan that have led to protectionist measures such as Taiwan's ban on imports of some 1,500 consumer goods from Japan. The delegations will propose sending purchase missions to Japan and other measures to help boost Japanese imports.

The mission will be the LDP's first official visit to Taiwan since Tokyo severed diplomatic ties with Taipei in 1972 in connection with the normalization of Sino-Japanese relations. Taiwan is reportedly considering lifting the import ban if the missions shows "friendly" attitudes.

NODONG SINMUN Hails Visit

[Text] Pyongyang, Jul 9 (KCNA) -- Paper here today carry editorial articles hailing the Korean visit of a government friendship delegation of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma headed by Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing.

NODONG SINMUN says in its article: The Korean visit of the government friendship delegation of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma will greatly help towards consolidating and developing the friendly and cooperative relations between the Korean and Burmese peoples, and it will be a great support and encouragement to our people in their vigorous struggle for carrying out the decisions of the Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea, forcing the U.S. imperialist aggression troops to withdraw from South Korea and achieving the independent and peaceful reunification of the country under the wise guidance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party centre.

Our people warmly welcome Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing and his party in our country. The Burmese people, the article continues, under the leadership of the Burmese Socialist Programme Party headed by their outstanding leader His Excellency U Ne Win, have achieved great successes through their energetic efforts to consolidate the independence of the country and build socialism suited to its conditions. Our people sincerely rejoice as over their own over all the successes made by the friendly Burmese people in their efforts to build a new society and wish them greater success in their struggle for building a new Burma, independent and prosperous.

The visit of His Excellency U Ne Win to Korea in September 1977 upon the invitation of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song marked an important landmark of a new flowering time in the development of friendly relations between Korea and Burma.

The Burmese Government and people highly estimate the shining successes made by our people through the application of the immortal chuche idea to the revolution and construction under the wise guidance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party centre and actively support our people's struggle for achieving the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

We are grateful to the Burmese Government and people for this. The Korean visit of the government friendship delegation of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma will prove conducive to the strengthening of solidarity among the peoples of the developing countries in Asia who advocate chajusong (independence) and to the promotion of the accomplishment of their common cause.

The Korean people will make every effort possible to strengthen friendship and solidarity with the Burmese people in accordance with the idea of independence, friendship and peace.

Burmese Tour Pyongyang

SK110941 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0900 GMT 11 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 11 (KCNA) -- The government friendship delegation of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma headed by Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing visited Mangyongdae Saturday morning.

After being briefed about the glorious and brilliant revolutionary history of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the guests saw with keen interest the historic mementoes preserved in his native house in Mangyongdae. They posed for a souvenir picture in front of the native house before going round the historic sites on the Mangyong Hill. They also inspected the Mangyongdae fun fair.

The delegation was accompanied by Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister Ho Tam and Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Cho Kyu-il.

In the afternoon the delegation visited the Tower of the Chuche Idea, the Arch of Triumph and the Pyongyang Metro. It appreciated the music and dance epic "Song of Glory" at the February 8 House of Culture.

Tour Nampo

SK130414 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0400 GMT 13 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 13 (KCNA) -- The government friendship delegation of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma headed by Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing visited Nampo on July 12. The delegation inspected the Kumsong Tractor Plant, the Taean General Heavy Machine Works and the Nampo Glassware Factory and spent a pleasant time on an excursion boat off the coast of Nampo.

The Nampo Municipal People's Committee arranged a party in honor of the delegation. Speaking at the party, Yu Pyong-yon, chairman of the Nampo Municipal People's Committee, said: The industrious Burmese people are waging a vigorous struggle for maintaining chajusong (independence), consolidating the independence of the country and developing the national economy under the leadership of the Burmese Socialist Programme Party headed by Chairman U Ne Win. We rejoice as over our own over the successes achieved by the Burmese poeple in the struggle for the building of a new prosperous and developed society and sincerely wish them greater successes in their future struggle. Our people will, as in the past, so in the future, too, make positive efforts to tighten the bonds of friendship with the Burmese people, he declared.

Speaking next, Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing noted that Burma and Korea have excellent relations of friendship. Our two countries, he said, have a good prospect for further consolidating and developing the friendly relations today and in the future. Burma and Korea were both colonies in the past and are developing countries today.

Your people have already registered successes in all fields and are now working more actively and energetically to achieve greater successes in all the political, economic and cultural fields. We think that you owe your development today to the lines advanced by his excellency president of your country. Your country which had been reduced to ruins in the past war have newly built everything and attained many successes.

The heads of our two countries are pursuing wise and correct policies and our two peoples are making big successes, upholding these policies. It is the commonness of our two countries, I think, that they are building themselves on the independent stand and in the spirit of self-reliance, not depending upon anyone. Our two countries have many points in common not only in the ideas and lines but also in opposing imperialism and building themselves.

He expressed the firm belief that the friendly relations between the two countries would grow stronger and develop in the future.

The attendants at the party toasted friendship and unity between the Korean and Burmese peoples, the good health and long life of the great leader of our people Comrade Kim Il-song, the good health and long life of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, and the good health and long life of esteemed Chairman His Excellency U Ne Win and His Excellency President U San Yu.

Military Fetes Delegation

[Text] The Ministry of People's Armed Forces arranged a party Friday evening for the government military delegation of the Republic of Zambia. Invited to the party were members of the government military delegation of the Republic of Zambia headed by Lt Gen M. N. Masheke, army commander of the Zambian Armed Forces. Attending the party were comrade O Kuk-yol, chief of the General Staff of the KPA, KPA Lt Gen Yi Tong-ho and other general grade officers and military officers. Comrade O Kuk-yol, chief of the General Staff of the Korean People's Army, spoke first at the party. He said:

The delegation's visit to our country is a very important moment in the consolidation and development of the friendly relations between the peoples and armies of the two countries. Today Korea and Zambia are dynamically advancing along the bright road of friendship and solidarity personally provided by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and His Excellency esteemed President Kenneth David Kaunda.

Developing members of the Nonaligned Movement, our two countries are marching forward shoulder to shoulder for the common goal of anti-imperialism and independence. We deem it a great joy to have the fraternal Zambian people as our friend in the far-off African Continent. Today the Zambian people and soldiers are carrying into practice the plan of building "a socialist humanitarian society" put forward by His Excellency esteemed President Kenneth David Kaunda and are firmly defending the sovereignty of the country from the imperialist and racist aggression, subversive activities and sabotage.

Our people and People's Army soldiers sincerely rejoice over your achievements as over their own and sincerely wish them greater success in future.

Lieutenant General M.N. Masheke, army commander of the Zambian Armed Forces, spoke next. He said: From the moment we arrived in your country, we have received the warm welcome of the Korean people. We express our heartfelt gratitude for this. He said that the bonds of friendship between the two countries have long historical roots and are developing further with each passing day. The Korean people clearly show with their practical example what there should be between genuine friends, he said, and continued: The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has given unstinted assistance to the Zambian people in various domains. The current Korean visit of the government military delegation of the Republic of Zambia marks an important occasion in the development of our friendship and cooperation provided by the leaders of the two countries.

Noting that the friendship between the two peoples is a great one, he declared: We will set store by this friendship and further consolidate and develop it. The great Democratic People's Republic of Korea is a model country of socialism. By displaying (?collective wisdom) under the wise leadership of the great leader His Excellency Comrade Kim Il-song, who has dedicated himself throughout his life only to the fatherland and people, the Korean people have firmly laid the foundation for the consolidation of socialism and are marching forward today toward greater success.

In the past fatherland liberation war your people heroically fought, arms in hand, and defeated the imperialists, winning victory. This victory was, indeed, a great one. The Zambian people actively support the new proposal for reunification put forward by His Excellency the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, he stressed.

The attendants drank a toast to the friendship and solidarity between the peoples and armies of Korea and Zambia, to the good health and long life of the great leader of our people Comrade Kim Il-song and to the good health and long life of His Excellency Esteemed President Kenneth David Kaunda.

[Text] Pyongyang, July 11 (KCNA) -- Papers here today dedicate articles to the 61st anniversary of the victory of the people's revolution in Mongolia.

A signed article of NODONG SINMUN says:

The victory of the people's revolution in Mongolia was a fruition of the bloody struggle of the Mongolian people against exploitation and oppression and for freedom and liberation; it was an important event which opened to the Mongolian people a broad road of building a new society.

Freed from the feudal exploitation and oppression, the Mongolian people have turned their country, once backward, into a socialist agricultural-industrial state through their energetic labour over the past 61 years. Today the Mongolian people are striving to carry out the Seventh Five-Year Plan for national economic and cultural development.

Our people rejoice over the successes registered by the Mongolian people in the building of a new society. The Korean people wish the Mongolian people greater success in their endeavours to successfully carry out the tasks set by the 18th Congress of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party.

A signed article of MINJU CHOSON says: Believing that the friendly and cooperative relations between the two peoples will grow stronger and develop in the future, the Korean people wish the Mongolian people great achievements in the fulfillment of the current five-year plan.

DETAILS OF 8 JULY MAC SECRETARIES MEETING REPORTED

[Text] At the 466th [MAC] held on 8 July at Panmunjom, our side lodged a strong protest with the enemy side against its continued military provocations against us in the Demilitarized Zone [DMZ] in wanton violation of the armistice agreement and the agreed upon points between the two sides and demanded that they account for them.

According to the statement by the secretary of our side, Colonel Kim Yon-ki, the enemy side is continuously perpetrating military provocations against us in the DMZ. He protested: The South Korean puppet army committed armed provocations by firing many machinegun and M-16 automatic rifle rounds at 1830 hours on 30 June from a spot 450 meters northeast [as heard] of the Military Demarcation Line [MDL] Markers No 0025 on the western sector of the front and, prior to this, from a spot 750 meters east of MDL Marker No 0400 at about 1012 hours on 24 June. The South Korean puppet army dragged two 90-mm mortars into the area around a spot 1650 meters east of MDL Marker No 0046 on the western sector of the front, at about 1130 hours on 5 July, and one 90-mm recoilless gun to a spot 250 meters east of MDL Marker No 0013, at 0717 hours on 4 July. The South Korean puppet army also constructed fortifications, hurling about 150 military personnel around a spot 1,250 meters south of MDL Marker No 0572 on the central sector of the front at about 1600 hours on 3 July. Prior to this, the South Korean puppet army had been building fortifications everyday around the southern area of the DMZ, including the construction of fortifications by mobilizing about 120 military personnel around a spot 1,350 meters southeast of MDL Marker No 0607, at about 0855 hours on 24 June.

The South Korean puppet army brought about 200 military personnel armed with automatic weapons around areas 600 meters and 1,800 meters respectively south of MDL Marker No 0589, from about 1130 hours to about 1340 hours on 23 June. The South Korean puppet army waged a military exercise by dragging about 30 fully armed combat personnel around a spot 1,350 meters southeast of MDL Marker No 0503, at 0845 hours on 27 June, and the U.S. imperialist aggressive army staged a military exercise by bringing about 20 armed personnel armed with machineguns and automatic weapons to the Oryonggye Post in the MAC headquarters area. Violations of the armistice agreement perpetrated by the enemy side in the DMZ and the MAC Headquarters area numbered more than 880 in the period from 23 June to 5 July alone.

Saying that because of the criminal acts of the enemy a tense situation in which an armed conflict may take place at any moment between the two sides has been created, the secretary of our side lodged a strong protest with the enemy side against its criminal acts and demanded that it take responsible steps to prevent the recurrence of such violations.

The secretary of our side continued to denounce the enemy's crafty attempt to justify its unwarrantable acts at the last MAC meeting by bringing forward secondary and business-like matters concerning the procedures of the meeting.

He strongly demanded that the enemy side take practical measures to stop the violations of the armistice agreement, including military provocations, giving up its attempt to justify the unwarrantable acts at the last MAC meeting.

PYONGYANG DENOUNCES S. KOREAN DMZ 'PROVOCATIONS'

[Text] The South Korean puppet army committed an armed provocation against our side in an area in the demilitarized zone [DMZ] on the eastern frontline.

At 1310 on 9 July, mobilizing scores of armed personnel equipped with heavy weapons and automatic arms at an encampment in the DMZ south of (Samilpo-ri) on the eastern frontline and firing hundreds of rounds of large-caliber machineguns and automatic weapons at our side's civil police personnel on a routine patrol, the South Korean puppet army committed an armed provocation that seriously threatened the safety of the civil police.

Had it not been for our soldiers' restraint, their armed provocative act would have developed into a serious armed clash beyond retrieve between the two sides. Such a provocative act is a premeditated scheme to aggravate the situation.

The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique should clearly grasp that such a military provocation -- which the clique recklessly commits along themilitary demarcation line where the two sides' military personnel are pitted against each other -- could have consequences. They should not irrationally run amok.

KCNA: DMZ CLASH COULD HAVE GONE 'BEYOND REPRIEVE'

[Text] Pyongyang, July 10 (KCNA) -- The South Korean puppet army drove out tens of armed personnel carrying heavy and automatic weapons to its position in the demilitarized zone south of Samilpo-ri on the eastern sector of the front at around 13 hours 10 minutes on July 9 to commit an armed provocation, in which they fired hundreds of rounds of large-calibre machinegun and automatic weapon bullets at civil police personnel of our side who were performing their normal duty on the opposite side, gravely threatening the safety of those personnel of our side.

Had it not been for the patient self-restraint on the part of our armymen, the armed provocation of the puppet army would have expanded into a grave armed conflict beyong retrieve between the two sides. Such provocation of it was a premeditated act for aggravating the situation.

The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique must desist from running riot, clearly mindful what consequence such reckless military provocation in the area of the military demarcation line along which the military personnel of two sides are standing opposed to each other might entail.

VRPR SCORES CHON'S DMZ FRONTLINE INSPECTION

SK112345 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 11 Jul 82

[Text] As reported, on 10 July Chon Tu-hwan filled the air with powder-reeking remarks while inspecting the front lines on the central and western fronts for as long as 5 hours.

Reiterating absurd remarks such as the nonexistent threat of a southward invasion, he nakedly uttered outrageous war-like words, saying that an enemy invasion should be routed in less than 3 days and that the South Korean Army should maintain high combat readiness to repulse the enemy in the initial stages of war.

At a time when people at home and abroad hope for an early accomplishment of peace and reunification on the Korean Peninsula, Chon Tu-hwan made such bellicose remarks without any hesitation on the central and western fronts. This is nothing but a criminal act showing without reserve his bellicose nature. This shows that the peace and reunification he babbles about are stark lies. This, in fact, shows that he is encouraging the South Korean Army to North-South confrontation and that he wants war and division. His remarks and behavior during his inspection of the central and western fronts prove this more clearly.

Appearing unexpectedly on the front line like a stray cat, he told the commanding officers of the army units that the enemy's invasion should be routed in 3 days, thus unabashedly speaking outrageous words of war. This is clear proof that the Chon Tu-hwan ring's preparations for a new war have entered an extremely dangerous and reckless stage under U.S. instigation. As you all know, because of the Chon Tu-hwan ring's adventurous maneuvers to prepare for war, the danger of war is increasing on the Korean Peninsula and an atmosphere of perpetual division, not reunification, is covering the Korean Peninsula more thickly.

It is the Chon Tu-hwan ring which, obstructing reunification and opposing the withdrawal of U.S. troops stationed in South Korea -- the mastermind of war -- brings into South Korea a large quantity of weapons of mass destruction by riding on the coattails of his U.S. master. It is none other than the Chon Tu-huan ring which is fanning a war fever with war exercises -- supposing the North to be the enemy -- staged almost every day under U.S. instigation. Because of the ring's maneuvers to prepare for a new war, our country is in a serious situation in which a war like the Korean war could be triggered at any time. All this eloquently shows that Chon Tu-hwan is not only a fascist monster who has plunged this land into a sea of blood shed by the masses but is also a war maniac who is about to put our people under a pall of war calamities by igniting the flames of a new war of invasion.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring's prattling about a fictitious threat of a southward invasion and his encouragement of war during his inspection tour can be interpreted as a typhoon to mitigate the anti-U.S. aspiration for independence which has been growing rapidly among the people in the wake of the arson at the American Cultural Center in Pusan and the strong anti-Chon Tu-hwan spirit caused by the large-scale loan scandal committed by Chon Tu-hwan and his in-laws. In other words, this is nothing but a foolish maneuver to mitigate anti-U.S. anti-Chon Tu-hwan spirit and to emerge from the isolation he finds himself in by diverting public attention with such maneuvers. It also can be said that his aim is to prolong his deteriorating life by any means, even triggering a new war in this land under the instigation of U.S. aggressors.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring is making its last-ditch efforts to find a way out by triggering a new war which will put our nation under a pall of war calamities. One who enjoys playing a game with fire will die from burns. Our masses will never forgive the Chon Tu-hwan ring's maneuvers to entrench itself in office and its war commotions. The Chon Tu-hwan ring should immediately stop the reckless war commotions and step down from power without delay as unanimously demanded by the people at home and abroad.

12 JUL MAC SECURITY OFFICERS MEETING REPORTED

[Text] Kaesong, July 12 (KCNA) -- A meeting of security officers of the two sides to the Military Armistice Commission was held at Panmunjom today at the proposal of our side.

At the meeting the security officer of our side lodged a strong protest with the enemy side against the fact that from around 10:30 July 8, the day when the 466th MAC secretaries meeting was held, a guard officer and men of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces apprached twice the resting room of security personnel of our side and poked their heads into the window to see its inside, and called it to account for this. Noting that the enemy's criminal act proved to be a premeditated one, he said that the incident was not enlarged entirely thanks to the self-restraint of our security personnel.

We cannot but take it very serious that a guard officer who should control such provocations directly commanded this act, he said. He strongly demanded the enemy side to punish those responsible for this and take responsible steps to prevent the recurrence of such cases.

Then he pointed out that the enemy's provocations and violations, such as levelling a searchlight at our security personnel, throwing stones at them and intruding across the military demarcation line into the portion of our side and bringing more armed personnel than the designated number into the Joint Security Area, numbered 35 from June 8 to July 11.

Noting that the tension in the Joint Security Area has not been removed precisely because of such provocations of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces, the security officer of our side warned that the enemy should look squarely at the situation prevailing in the Joint Security Area and act with discretion.

VRPR REPORTS 'DISPUTE' BETWEEN WALKER, HOLBROOKE

[Talk from "Echo of Public Sentiment" program]

[Text] On the night of 4 July, the day after a fire broke out at the U.S. Embassy in Seoul, U.S. Ambassador Richard Walker and Holbrooke, [as heard] assistant secretary of state for Asia and the Pacific, got involved in a heated dispute during a 30-minute telephone coversation.

Embarrassed by the anti-U.S. spirit in South Korea since publication of Walker's remarks comparing the Korean people to lemmings and the South Korean antigovernment figures to spoiled brats in a Columbia, South Carolina newspaper interview, Holbrooke reportedly has proposed that Reagan should punish Walker.

When the U.S. Embassy in Seoul suffered damage in a fire in the wake of two arsons in Kwangju and Pusan, Holbrooke demanded that Walker be recalled, holding him to account for the fire.

Since then, the confrontation between Holbrooke and Walker has not diminished. According to a news report from the U.S. embassy, Walker angrily told Holbrooke: In regard to the question that I compared the Korean people to lemmings and spoiled brats, you stated your agreement with me at a State Department reception on 28 January. I just made the mistake of making such remarks in public. Frankly, the fact that you have proposed to punish me is an obnoxious betrayal. Do you believe the anti-U.S. struggle in South Korea can be attributed to me? Do you know that is was not I who issued the order to quell (?Kwangju)? You are an inferior, feeble-minded diplomat who does not even know that one plus one equals two.

Angered by this, Holbrooke said: You are a spoiled, ignorant and disoriented diplomat. You would do better to have the official title of a governor-general of a colony rather than that of the U.S. ambassador to South Korea.

Upon hearing this news, people are saying confidently that the flames of the anti-U.S. and independence struggle will spread all over South Korea before long, comparing the dispute between Walker and Holbrooke to a fight between two old surly wolves.

NODONG SINMUN: U.S., SOUTH PREPARE FOR WAR

[NODONG SINMUN 13 July commentary: "The Pro-U.S. Stooges' Fanatacism for War"]

[Text] In accordance with directives from the U.S. imperialists, traitor Chon Tu-hwan has recently visited puppet army units deployed in the western and central frontline sectors and fanned their war zeal. Spreading the theory of non-existent southward invasion, saying that the first 3 days are important when a war breaks out and calling for the maintenance of high-level military capability, he strongly instigated the puppet army soldiers to the cause of confrontation with us. Traitor Chon Tu-hwan's whipping of war sentiment coincided with the provocations the enemy committed against us in the Demilitarized Zone [DMZ].

As is already known, the South Korean puppet army on 9 July committed grave military provocations in the DMZ in the east frontline sector by firing hundreds of rounds of large-caliber machine guns and automatic weapons at our side. This is a dangerous attempt to deliberately heighten tension.

Because of the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets to provoke a new war, peace has been threatened and tension has been heightened in our country. They have staged large-scale war exercises against us, fired guns in the DMZ and greatly increased their military capabilities. After increasing the firepower and mobility of the puppet army, navy and air force by introducing large quantities of sophisticated weapons and military hardware, mastermined by the U.S. imperialists, the puppets are frantically running amok to additionally introduce weapons and military equipment.

After visiting the United States on its demand, the chief of staff of the puppet army is now repeatedly holding war conferences with his masters. It is said that puppets will stop in Japan and conduct negotiations with Japanese reactionaries on the matter of strengthening their military collusion. This shows that the Chon Tu-hwan ring has obstinately clung to an adventurous military policy to start a new war.

To accelerate preparations for tactical operations in accordance with directives from the U.S. imperialists to attack us, traitor Chon Tu-hwan, while fanning the sentiment of North-South confrontation, has called for increasing military capabilities and for developing the frontline.

The puppets have kicked up war rackets on the preposterous pretext of threat from the North. However, no one will believe this. Everyone knows that South Korea has been converted into the military, nuclear base of the U.S. imperialists, in which over 40,000 combat-ready U.S. imperialist aggressive troops and 700,000 regular puppet troops are deployed on a constant basis, equipped with nuclear weapons and that all lethal weapons deployed in South Korea are aimed at the northern half of the republic. The threat of invasion comes not from the North but from the South. The theory of the threat from the North clamored about by the puppets is a disguise designed to conceal the criminal maneuvers for a war of northward invasion.

Colluding with aggressors, the puppets have indiscreetly and frantically maneuvered to fan the sentiment of North-South confrontation, increase their military capabilities, stage war exercises and commit military provocations against us. This has extremely heightened tension on the Korean Peninsula and portends the danger of a war breaking out, at any moment. The Chon Tu-hwan ring's kicking up of war rackets constitutes intolerable treacheries in opposing its fellow countrymen, seeking division and disturbing peace. This is the direct product of the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression against Korea.

Today, the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule over South Korea is facing a grave crisis. Through their experiences, the South Korean people clearly understand that the United States is not their friend but a brazen aggressor and ringleader who has fabricated and patronized the fascist Chon Tu-hwan military dictatorial system. To eliminate colonial terrorist rule, they have rsolutely risen in an anti-U.S. and anti-Chon Tu-hwan struggle. This has dealt severe blows at the U.S. imperialists' colonial policy. While attempting to make a breakthrough in this difficult situation by adopting a policy of confrontation with strength, the U.S. imperialists have deliberately heightened tension by instigating the puppets. They are maneuvering to overcome the crisis and maintain and strengthen their colonial domination by diverting the attention of the people with the fraudulent slogan of coping with the threat of southward invasion and by throwing cold water to the ever-increasing spirit of the anti-U.S. and anti-puppet struggle in South Korea. The U.S. imperialists are the ringleaders who have hindered peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea and who have forced the South Korean people to become colonial slaves. The Chon Tu-hwan ring is the most wicked executor of the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule.

We are keenly watching the war rackets kicked up by the puppets, mastermined by the U.S. imperialists. The people will never tolerate the criminal maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges for a new war. The Chon Tu-hwan ring should refrain from recklessly running amok and should act discreetly.

Only when the U.S. forces withdraw from South Korea and only when the U.S. imperialists and the puppets stop Korea and only when the U.S. imperialists and the puppets stop increasing their military capabilities and kicking up anticommunist confrontation rackets can peace be maintained in Korea. The U.S. imperialists should abandon their anachronistic, wild desire for aggression and withdraw from South Korea in accordance with the demand of our people and the world's people, taking along all their aggressive troops.

VRPR CITES ANTI-U.S STRUGGLE IN S. KOREA

[Diary on anti-U.S. and antigovernment struggle waged during the first half of 1982 from the feature "Hour for Youths and Students"]

[Text] At 1400 on 18 March, patriotic students set fire to the U.S. cultural center in Pusan, an organization of ideological and cultural aggression by the United States, and disseminated anti-U.S. and antigovernment leaflets. The leaflets contained the following anti-U.S. slogans: "The United States, leave!" "The United States should not make Korea its colony but should withdraw!" and "We denounce the neocolonialism of the United States!" The leaflets also contained antigovernment slogans such as follows: "Let us overthrow the Chon Tu-hwan fascist regime!" "We oppose the inducement of the 1988 Olympics!" "Abolish college graduation quota system!" and "We oppose the system of recommending professors!"

On 18 and 19 March, patriotic Korea University students waged a just struggle of spreading antigovernment printed matters in the campus. On 24 March, the patriotic Korea University students who again rose in a just struggle courageously staged a campus demonstration, disseminating antigovernment handbills and shouting slogans demanding traitor Chon Tu-hwan's resignation.

On 9 April, patriotic students of Hanguk University of Foreign Studies disseminated several hundred leaflets entitled "The Declaration of the Struggle for Democratization" and staged a campus demonstration. On 14 April, patriotic students of Ehwas Women's University waged a struggle on the campus by disseminating some 200 antigovernment leaflets and demanding the overthrow of the Chon Tu-hwan fascist dictatorship.

On 15 April, the patriotic students of Korea University rose in an antigovernment struggle on the campus, spreading several handbills entitled "We Speak in the Name of the Nation!"

On the same day, the Korean Christian Activists Organization issued a statement entitled "Our Opinion as to the Arson at the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan" in the name of 42 ministers of Protestantism and Roman Catholicism including Ministers Chi Hak-sun and Pak Hyong-Kyu. In this statement, they condemned Chon Tu-hwan's fascist atrocities of arresting and repressing the students who set fire to the U.S. cultural center in Pusan and the Catholic priest who protected them. They highly praised the arson at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan. Saying that we are poor because of the United States, they demanded deportation of Walker, who made an absurd remark insulting our people, and the former commander of U.S. forces in South Korea, Wickham.

On 16 April, the Standing Committee of the Korean Catholic Diocese issued a statement with similar contents.

On the night of 16 April, some 1,400 college students and Christian youths held a gathering in the Catholic church in Hyehwa-dong, Seoul and staged an antigovernment demonstration, disseminating leaflets demanding the truth about Kwangju.

On 22 April, the patriotic Kangwon University students burned the cursed Stars and Stripes and spread several hundred anti-U.S. and antigovernment leaflets. They waged a powerful demonstration struggle by shouting such slogans as "Yankee go home!" Carried in the handbills they disseminated were anti-U.S. slogans reading "Yankee go home!" "We praise the arson at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan!" and so forth. The leaflets also contained such antigovernment slogans as "we deny the current system!" "We oppose the 1988 Seoul Olympics!" and so forth.

On the night of 26 April, some students and religionists held a gathering in a Myongdong Church in Seoul denouncing the fascist authorities for repressing the persecuted priest, Choe Ki-sik, who protected those involved in the arson at the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan. Several hundred people courageously staged a street demonstration, breaking through the fascist repression by the police who were hurriedly mobilized and shouting anti-U.S. slogans and such antigovernment slogans as "Let us overthrow fascism!" and so forth.

On the night of 27 April, some 300 patriotic students held a prayer meeting for political prisoners in a church in Seoul. Following this, they staged a street demonstration, advancing to the Kwanghwa-mun Street shoulder by shoulder shouting antigovernment slogans.

On the same day, the Korean Christians Council issued a statement denouncing and condemning the Chon Tu-hwan clique for arresting and repressing pries Choe Ki-sik and other religionists in connection with the arson at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan.

On 7 May, the patriotic Songgyungwan University Students staged an on-campus demonstration, spreading such antigovernment handbills as "Murderer Chon Tu-hwan Should Resign!" "Campus Freedom Must Be Guaranteed!" and so forth.

On 14 May, the patriotic Korea University students staged a campus demonstration, shouting antigovernment slogans such as "Chon Tu-hwan Must Resign!" "Freedom of the Press Must Be Guaranteed!" and so forth.

On 18 May, some 2,000 Kwangju citizens and students held a memorial service for victims of the Kwangju popular uprising and commemorated the anniversary of the heroic Kwangju uprising.

They denounced the aggressive U.S. policy toward Korea. After the memorial service, they staged a street demonstration demanding traitor Chon Tu-hwan's resignation.

On 20 May, several hundred patriotic students of Seoul University, who participated in a campus festival, came out to the street and courageously staged a demonstration shouting antigovernment slogans, fighting against the mobile police who were running wild to oppress the students.

On 25 May, the patriotic students of the Sukmyong Women's University rose in a just struggle, disseminating antigovernment leaflets appealing for the overthrow of Chon Tu-hwan.

On 27 May, some 2,000 patriotic Tongguk University students disseminated antigovernment handbills saying "The United States should go out!" "Chon Tu-hwan, resign!" "Let us overthrow the ringleaders of the Kwangju massacre!" "Open to the public the truth about the Chang loan scandal!" and so forth, and persistently fought against the mobile police for almost 4 hours, throwing stones at the police.

On the same day, some 500 patriotic students of Seoul University held a memorial service for Kim Tae-ung who was victimized while shouting against Chon Tu-hwan in the school building during the demonstration struggle a year ago. Following this, they staged an antigovernment demonstration shouting slogans urging Chon Tu-hwan's resignation and punishment of the ringleaders of irregularities and corruption.

On 8 June, some 3,000 patriotic students of Yonsei University staged demonstrations for an hour and a half, shouting antigovernment slogans and disseminating antigovernment handbills calling for Chon Tu-hwan's resignation and urging the United States to stop supporting the Chon Tu-hwan regime, courageously fighting against the mobiel police. On 10 June, students at Hanguk University of Foreign Studies staged a campus demonstration spreading some 300 antigovernment leaflets.

In addition, various forms of anti-U.S. and antigovernment struggles are being continuously waged by students and the people from all walks of life throughout the country.

ROK FISHING BOAT SEIZED BY NORTH KOREANS

SK131110 Seoul YONHAP in English 1100 GMT 13 Jul 82

[Text] Seoul, Jul 13 (YONHAP) — A North Korean patrol boat abducted a South Korean fishing boat with 35 crewmen aboard shortly past noon on Tuesday from the open seas 170 miles northeast of Ullung-do Island off South Korea's east coast, the South Korean Office of Fisheries announced.

Four armed North Korean troops from the patrol boat boarded the 114.4 ton fishing boat "Masan-Ho," and forced the crew to sail it north at gunpoint, the announcement said. The Masan-Ho is among the approximately 170 South Korean fishing boats operating in the Taewatoe fishing ground in international waters, according to the announcement. The incident occured near the site where another South Korean fishing boat was fired on by armed North Korean troops a week earlier in what Seoul said was an abduction attempt.

Since the 1953 signing of the Korean Armistice Agreement, North Korea has abducted 453 South Korean fishing boats with 3,554 sailors, but all but 32 boats and 407 sailors have been released.

TONGIL ILBO: DPRK PLANS ROK INTERNAL UNREST

SK130106 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 12 Jul 82

[Report from KBS correspondent Chong Yong-sok in Tokyo]

[Text] Today's TONGIL ILBO reports that, judging that its operations against South Korea during the last year were not active, North Korea, in an effort to commit subversive operations on a full scale, has comprehensively readjusted the organs and plans for infiltration into South Korea and formed a 5-man council led by Kim Chong-il.

According to TONGIL ILBO published by Japan-residing Korean compatriots, a reliable source from the Pyongyang ruling circles says: The 5-man council led by Kim Chong-il is composed of the Kim Chong-il-lining personages from the KWP and the North puppet army. The main function of the 5-man council is to fully assume responsibility for operations against South Korea to cause social unrest throughout South Korea.

It has been learned that the council plans to cause turmoil across South Korea during September through October. TONGIL ILBO reports that some leading agents under the direct command of the 5-man council have already infiltrated into the area of the south coast, including Pusan. And the 5-man council has established its plan of infiltrating agents on a large scale into Pusan and Taegu by the end of August. TONGIL ILBO further reports that the council plans subversive activities such as destroying the Korean Embassy, the consular offices and the branches of Korean business companies in Japan. In particular, it is scheming to hijack the airplanes of the Korean air line and the Japan air line for Seoul.

HERALD CITES REPORT ON SECURITY OF PENINSULA

[Text] Tokyo (YONHAP) -- Specialists in communist affairs and national defense predicted here Monday that North Korea may trigger another war against the South once Kim Chong-il comes to power following his father's death and that mainland China and the Soviet Union would have no choice but to assist North Korea in the case of a renewed war.

These and other opinions were expressed in a seminar held at the Tokyo press center with the attendance of relevant scholars and specialists from Korea, Japan and the United States. The seminar was designed to analyze the security in northeast Asia, with the emphasis on the Korean Peninsula, and seek strategies for the security of Japan.

Prof. Kim Chong-hwi of the National Defense College of Korea said that North Korea, despite its economic inferiority over South Korea and the smaller population, has completed preparations for a southward invasion. This can be said as North Korea has reinforced its troop deployment along the frontline and it has 100,000-strong guerrilla forces, the largest in the world, he said.

"It should be remembered that once North Korea triggers a war, mainland China and the Soviet Union will have no choice but to come to assist Pyongyang," he said.

Insisting that two aircraft carriers of the Seventh U.S. Fleet moved to the Indian Ocean in relation to the recent Middle East situation, Kim, said it is doubtful whether the United States will be able to provide Korea with effective support, once North Korea launches a surprise attack, in light of the power vacuum created in the Seventh Fleet.

He said Koreans hope that Japan will recognize the communists' expansionism and contribute to its own security by increasing economic cooperation with Korea.

Katsuichi Tsukamoto, an editorial writer of the SANKEI SHIMBUN, said that if the Soviet Union attempts to move its far eastern army and air force to other conflict areas, the U.S. forces in northeast Asia, Japanese self-defense troops and Chinese forces will have no power to check it. On the other hand, he said, the Soviet Union has sufficient power to score decisive outcomes in case it makes an offensive in northeast Asia. The North Korea military power which subsequently ties South Korean and American forces to the Korean Peninsula contributes greatly to the Soviet strategy in the Far East. There will not be any immediate military cooperation among South Korea, the United States, and Japan because Korea and Japan maintain separate treaties with the United States for their security. Furthermore, South Korea's immediate enemy is North Korea whereas Japan feels threatened by the Soviet Union.

Meanwhere, Kim Chang-sun, director of the Institute of North Korean Studies in Seoul, predicted that if North Korea's, Kim Il-song dies in the middle of the 1980s, this will cause an economic catastrophe in the North which will, in return, force his son Chong-il to launch another southward invasion.

PRESIDENT EXPECTS 'FIRMER POSTURE' FROM DPRK

[Text] Seoul, Jul 13 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan warned Tuesday, North Korea was likely to take a firmer posture against South Korea in view of a recent shakeup in personnel in key positions and organizations in the North.

In this connection, all the government agencies and their subordinate organizations should make sure that they are well prepared for any contingency that may be prompted by the North Korean communists, Chon told the Cabinet.

Chairing a Cabinet meeting at his residence for the first time since a partial Cabinet reshuffle late last month, the president noted summer is usually a season in which North Korea steps up its irregular warfares against the South.

ROK-JAPAN PARLIAMENTARIANS DISCUSS LOAN SETTLEMENT

[Text] Michiyuki Isurugi, deputy secretary general of the Korea-Japan Parliamentarians League for the Tokyo side, said yesterday that the Japanese Government understood basically the Korean stand on economic cooperation between the two nations during the recent visit of Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok to Tokyo.

He said that the Japanese members of the league would give advice to their government positively in order to help it solve the points in the Korean side's request. "We will also make efforts to help the Korean side understand the Japanese position," he told a press conference.

He met the Korean press at the Hotel Shilla after the league's secretarial meeting, in which the two sides issued a joint announcement vowing to help actively the negotiations between the two countries on the loan issue for satisfactory settlement at an early date.

Referring to the issue of improving the legal status of 700,000 Korean residents living in Japan, Kosaku Wata, a member of the delegation to the secretarial meeting, said, "It is quite natural that Koreans in Japan must be treated differently from other foreigners because they were forcibly brought to Japan."

Meanwhile, the Korean and Japanese lawmakers in the league stressed in the announcement the need for closer cooperation between them to maintain security and peace in northeast Asia, including Korea and Japan. The announcement said: "We share the view that the two nations should cope together with the unremitting threats of the North Korean communists and the evermounting Soviet military strength.

The Korean delegation to the meeting emphasized the need for closer and broader economic cooperation between the two nations and asked for double efforts to promote balanced expansion of trade and technical cooperation. The Japanese members expressed their deep understanding of this position. "The representatives of the two countries also shared the opinion that increased cultural exchanges between the two states would play an important role in their future relations."

In the meeting, the delegates from the two sides confirmed the agenda items for the 10th general session of the league slated for September 7-8 in Tokyo. They include the world strategy of the United States and Soviet Union; security in northeast Asia; and the promotion of Korea-Japan economic and technical cooperation. Others are concrete plans for increased Korea-Japan cultural exchanges and improvement of the status of Korean residents in Japan.

After the meeting, Representative Yi Chae-hyong, chairman of the league's Seoul side, hosted a reception for the league members at the Shilla Hotel.

Chon Meets Lawmakers

[Text] Seoul, Jul 12 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan, voicing regret the "economic cooperation issue" between Korea and Japan has not yet been settled, said Monday he hopes it could be concluded prior to the general assembly meeting of the Korea-Japan Parliamentarians' Union in September. The economic cooperation refers to Seoul's standing request for six billion U.S. dollars in Japanese loans.

The chief executive made the remarks during talks with six Japanese lawmakers who paid a courtesy call on him at the presidential mansion Chongwadae.

Ken Yasui, the Japanese-side chairman of the Korea-Japan Parliamentarians' Union, said at the meeting, although the bilateral economic issue should primarily be solved by government authorities of the two countries, politicians ought to work for the settlement of the issue before the general assembly meeting of the parliamentary union scheduled for Sept. 7-8, according to Shun's spokesman.

Yasui arrived in Seoul Friday for a four-day visit, leading a group of Japanese parliamentarians who attended a joint meeting of the secretaries of the union.

[Text] Seoul, July 12 (YONHAP) -- Ken Yasui, the Japanese-side chairman of the Korea-Japan Parliamentarians' Union, paid a courtesy call on President Chon Tu-hwan at the presidential mansion Chongwadae Monday to exchange views on matters of mutual concern.

Also present at the meeting were Yasui's Korean counterpart Rep Yi Chae-hyong, Korean secretary general to the union, Rep Yi Sang-ik and Japanese Ambassador to Korea Toshikazu Maeda.

Yasui, a member of the Japanese House of Councilors, arrived in Seoul Friday for a four-day visit.

CHOSON ILBO DISCUSSES SPORTS EXCHANGES, PEACE

SK080501 Seoul CHOSON ILBO in Korean 7 Jul 82 p 2

[Text] It is now international common knowledge that the Kim Il-song clique's stubborn rejection of the North-South dialogue and its policy of opposing North-South exchanges have been the main factor in the mounting tension in northeast Asia.

A decade has already passed since Kim Il-song unilaterally suspended the North-South Korean Red Cross talks and the North-South Coordinating Committee meetings. Thereafter, the South urged several times the North to open the door of dialogue, but the North responded to it with slander and opposition.

On the occasion of the 10th anniversary of the announcement of the 4 July North-South joint statement, the South once again urged the North to resume the dialogue, but the North still opposed the North-South dialogue while calling for the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea and the founding of a Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo. As a result, the relations between the North and the South are being aggravated and a tense situation remains between them.

The North must also be aware of how dangerous and unproductive such political and military tensions are. But North Korea has been desperately opposed to the dialogue and exchanges for fear that they might result in turning the hereditary power system in the North into the laughing-stock. South Korea has no intention whatsoever of interfering in the internal affairs of North Korea or make use of the dialogue and exchanges for schemes against it. The people in the South today only want to alleviate tension, to settle peace and to link the severed national ties through dialogue so that a favorable circumstance for national reunification can be created.

While refusing to meet with the South for dialogue and rejecting any exchanges with the South, the Kim Il-song clique has been loudly demanding the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea and talking about the founding of a Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo.

Peace in northeast Asia cannot be considered separately from the alleviation of tension on the Korean Peninsula. For this reason, Kobayashi, president of the YOMIURI SHIMBUN of Japan was reported to have discussed the Korean question at his meeting with Wan Li, vice premier of Communist China, on 5 July. According to foreign press reports, with a view to increasing opportunitites for contacts and to reducing tension on the Korean Peninsula, Mr Kobayashi reportedly proposed to Wan Li such sports exchanges as youth soccer games among North and South Korea, Japan and Communist China. Wan Li reportedly expresses his interest in this proposal.

Athletic champions of North and South Korea, Japan and Communist China have contested in international games on many occasions so they are not unfamiliar with such contacts in Asian and world games. But they have not had goodwill games among just the four countries.

We understand that the South Korean people welcome the Kobayashi's proposal. Communist China will participate in such games gladly, but only if North Korea agrees. The problem is North Korea's attitude toward the proposal. But, considering the North Korean attitude so far, it is difficult to expect North Korea to agree to this proposal. North Korea does not want to see the tension on this region alleviated.

At the meeting with Mr. Kobayashi, Wan Li said that "peace and stability of northeast Asia is a question that is related to two hegemonist powers," apparently referring to the Soviet Union and the United States. It is obvious that he ruled the United States to be hegemonist from the ideological viewpoint that the United States is a capitalist country and as the United States "is trying to intefere in the internal affairs" of Communist China by selling defense arms to Taiwan.

Kim Il-song might be greatly pleased with Communist China's criticism of the United States because tension on the Korean Peninsula can be greatly reduced once all disputes between Communist China and the United States have been eliminated. In fact, Kim Il-song does not want the alleviation of tension nor peace on the Korea Peninsula. But we have no intention of appealing to North Korea for peace. However, Kim Il-song should not miscalculate our will to seek peace between North and South Korea as our weakness. Kim Il-song should realize that the U.S. forces will stay in South Korea until peace is finally settled in this region.

Sports exchanges among the four in northeast Asia cannot be expected unless the Kim Il-song clique's attitude is changed.

TSEDENBAL GIVES SPEECH ON ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

OW100500 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1702 GMT 9 Jul 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 9 Jul (MONTSAME) -- A joint session of the MPRP Central Committee and the MPR Council of Ministers devoted to the results of the implementation of the state plan on economic and cultural development of the first half of 1982 took place in Ulaanbaatar. A speech was made at the session by Y. Tsedenbal, general secretary of the MPRP Central Committee, chairman of the Presidium of the MPR Great People's Hural.

He noted that by July 1, 1982 the youngstock population stood at 9.4 million head, (?that is) almost 350 thousand more than in the same period of the previous year, and milk procurement increased 1.4 times. The plan for industrial output is fulfilled by 103.9 percent and the produce worth 83 million tugriks has been produced more as compared to the analogical period of 1981. [sentence as received]

[passage indistinct] The time is already ripe to immediately get ready for harvesting and transportation of harvest in the shortest possible time. This year weather conditions favor in general agricultural production. But this does not mean that one can remain calm. We must be ready anytime for a possible worsening of weather, he stressed. The main task rests in prevention of losses of cattle in summer time, in ensuring an increase of its population and its fattening at distant pastures.

The party and the government, Y. Tsedenbal noted, take necessary measures to strengthen the material and technical base and expansion of financial possibilities of agricultural organisations, to improve the well-being of rural working people.

In the last years, besides canceling the debts of some agricultural associations and prolonging the terms of paying off the debts for other agricultural organisations, the state annually allocates significant sums for recovering of losses and reimbursement of shortages of turnover means of certain agricultural economies. In the past 5 years alone the debt to the amount of over 100 million tugriks has been canceled for over 130 agricultural associations.

In 1982 the party Central Committee and the Council of Ministers adopted a special resolution on the improvement of food supply of the population, Y. Tsedenbal proceeded. The unhampered satisfaction of the population in foodstuffs and consumer goods through the utmost mobilization of home resources is the prime task of the ministries of agriculture, food and light industries, other ministries and subordinate departments.

It is necessary to consistently translate into life the militant motto of the party -- to learn to be thrifty in great and small, anytime and anywhere -- Y. Tsedenbal underscored. To this effect it is a must to introduce in the nearest 3 years devices for controlling and measuring expenditure of electricity, steam and heat at enterprises, economies and dwelling houses.

Primary party organisations should carry out individual meetings with every member of a working collective in order to study workers' viewpoints on the implementation of the state plan, to improve the work and eradicate the existing shortcomings. With a view to the same effect it is expedient to organise in towns, aimaks and somons the days of the open letter which are practised in some of our organisations, Y. Tsedenbal said.

In concluding General Secretary Y. Tsedenbal wished fresh successes in implementing the tasks of economic and cultural construction in 1982.

KAMPUCHEA SCORES CGDK, THAI 'INTERFERENCE'

BK121234 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1456 GMT 11 Jul 82

[Text] The journal KAMPUCHEA, in its latest issue, noted that the Democratic Kampuchean regime can not deceive anybody by baptizing itself as a "coalition" and crowning itself with Sihanouk's outdated crown.

During the 3 years, 8 months and 20 days of the genocidal regime of "Democratic Kampuchea", the Kampuchean people and territory were plunged into an ocean of blood, tears and devastation unprecedented in the history of mankind. More than three million Cambodians were barbarously massacred and all social infrastructures were demolished. Every Cambodian family experienced the loss of either a husband, a wife or relatives. Only ruins and common graves were left throughout the splendid Angkor nation.

The so-called "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea" is only a congregation of ghosts which is being used to staunch the offensive smell of the genocidal regime which was vomitted by mankind. Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan are the protagonists in a farce being staged by the ASEAN reactionaries, the Chinese expansionists and the U.S. imperialists. It is an accessory after the fact aimed at maintaining the unsteady seat illegally occupied by the corpse of "Democratic Kampuchea". China and the United States are playing the Sihanouk card, which was thrown in the garbage can of history, with the hope that everybody will forget the criminal acts of the Khmer Rouge and to dupe world opinion. The Pol Pot clique is loathed in the international arena for their genocidal acts. The armed forces of Sihanouk and Son Sann are small and the scope of their diplomatic maneuvers is limited. These two groups are living with the aid of the imperialists and the international reactionaries. Although they have opposing interests, they have reluctantly agreed to associate themselves with Pol Pot and be supported by Beijing. They have become Pol Pot gangs. These two traitors will be swallowed by the Pol Pot gangs in the long run.

Thailand has provided sanctuary from which the Khmer reactionaries can wage their activities, which are sapping the revival of a people who have suffered from many misfortunes and who aspire to live peacefully.

Thai Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon noted that Thailand intends to allow the eventual supply of military aid to the "coalition" of Democratic Kampuchea. With this attitude, Bangkok is demonstrating its open hostility toward Kampuchea and it represents a flagrant interference into the internal affairs of Kampuchea -- an independent and sovereign state. Such a maneuver cannot assure security at the Thai border as it pretends to be doing. On the contrary, it is a scheme aimed at instigating confrontation with the Kampuchean people and it is contrary to the proper interest of its own people.

Under the pretext of "security", Bangkok is continuing to execute Beijing's plans, although some ASEAN and Western countries refuse to provide military aid to the Khmer reactionaries. In doing so, they realize that this aid serves the aims of the Chinese expansionists and constitutes a serious threat to peace and security in Southeast Asia.

For more than three years, the Kampuchean revolution has achieved many successes in all fields, fortified by the indestructible strategic alliance between Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos and the multifaceted cooperation with the Soviet Union, other socialist countries and progressive forces in the world. It is making steady progress. Friendly countries on the five continents are providing aid and support its cause. The prestige of the People's Republic of Kampuchea in the international arena is being raised higher with every passing day.

KAMPUCHEA HAILS HCM CITY INDOCHINESE CONFERENCE

[KAMPUCHEA editorial: "Warmly Welcome and Fully Support the Declaration of the Sixth Conference of the Foreign Ministers of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos"]

[Text] A striking event which took place during the past more than 3 years and which was acclaimed enthusiastically by progressive and peace and justice-loving mankind throughout the world was the brilliant success of the Kampuchean revolution which permanently overthrew the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime -- most subservient lackey of the Beijing hegemonists and expansionists -- put an end to the dark era and opened a new stage in the history of the Kampuchean revolution -- an era of genuine independence and freedom during which the people have become the masters of their own territory and future.

Following the liberation, our lofty aspiration has always been to live in peace so as to concentrate our efforts on healing the wounds of the war of aggression, eradicating the serious consequences left behind by the diabolical regime and accelerating the defense and reconstruction of our country. Under the correct leadership of the KPRP and the PRK Government and with the strong support of Vietnam, Laos and the Soviet Union, as well as other socialist countries and the progressive people who cherish peace and justice throughout the world, Kampuchea has experienced a rapid rebirth. The Kampuchean revolution has surmounted numerous obstacles, advanced steadily and scored tremendous achievements in all fields -- military, political, economic, cultural, social and diplomatic. In its foreign policy, the Kampuchean revolution has unswervingly pursued a policy of peaceful coexistence, particularly with the countries of Southeast Asia. The PRK has always displayed its good will to maintain good relations with Thailand -- a neighboring country -- as has been clearly proved in the joint declarations of the five conferences of the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao foreign ministers. But, the Bangkok ruling circles who lack realism and blindly pursue a policy of following in the footsteps of Beijing and Washington, have let all the best opportunities pass by rejecting all the reasonable solutions proposed by the PRK.

The sixth conference of the foreign ministers of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos, which ended successfully in Ho Chi Minh City on 7 July 1982, has won the overwhelming support of world public opinion. The conference issued a declaration which clearly reflects the genuine stand and the correct and good-will attitude of the three Indochinese countries. All the proposals put forth in this declaration, particularly the proposal concerning Kampuchea, are reasonable proposals which reflect the genuine good will and will not affect the interests of any side, that is, the establishment of a safety zone on both sides of the Kampuchean-Thai border. If the Thai authorities disarmed all the remnants of the Pol Pot army and other reactionary Khmer forces and if they moved these forces and the refugee camps away from this safety zone, Vietnamese troops on their internationalist duty in Kampuchea would not be stationed in this zone either. Thus, only the armed forces of the Kingdom of Thailand will be in the safety zone in Thai territory and only the forces of the PRK will be in the safety zone in Kampuchean territory.

To demonstrate their good will, Kampuchea and Vietnam have agreed to make the first step by deciding to partially withdraw Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea in July 1982. If the Thai authorities give a positive response and if the security at the Kampuchean-Thai border is guaranteed, we will consider another partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea through a compromise between Kampuchea and Vietnam.

Men of good conscience in the world clearly see that Kampuchea has already fulfilled and set forward all the possibilities for a solution. The remaining question is: Whether or not the Bangkok powerholders will be willing to step forward to seek a peaceful solution.

History has recorded the traditions of friendship and heroic militant solidarity of the three nations -- Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos -- particularly between Kampuchea and Vietnam, which have stood shoulder to shoulder in the struggle against their common enemy. Twice in the past, the fraternal, heroic Vietnamese army and people came to save the Kampuchean people from subjugation by French colonialism and U.S. imperialism. Recently, when the Kampuchean society was plunged into the danger of genocide and of losing its territory, in response to the sacred request of the Kampuchean people, the fraternal, heroic Vietnamese army and people have come for the third time and, jointly with our revolutionary armed forces and people, fought to save the Kampuchean people from the hell on earth created by the bloodthirsty Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique.

The Kampuchea-Vietnam treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation signed on 18 February 1979 clearly reflects the lofty aspirations of our two nations who desire to strengthen their friendship and the strategic Kampuchea-Vietnam revolutionary alliance and secure the peaceful existence and progress of the two nations.

Following the great historic victory of 7 January 1979, the heroic Vietnamese army and people have provided tremendous support and assistance to the Kampuchean people, enabling them to surmount all the difficulties in their first step forward, cope with the raging storm and accelerate the cause of defending and building Kampuchea, thus permitting it to advance steadily.

Our country has just celebrated the day of solidarity between the army and the people and the 31st founding anniversary of the glorious KPRP, taking advantage of these occasions to sum up the brilliant revolutionary achievements scored by the Kampuchean people, in particular the rapid growth of our revolutionary forces and our brilliant victories scored in the military field in the 1981-82 dry season.

These achievements and feats cannot be separated from the valuable support and assistance given us by the fraternal Vietnamese army and people. Throughout the PRK, one can see brilliant examples of the heroism of the Vietnamese combatants and the selflessness of the Vietnamese people in supporting and assisting our people in their daily life and production, thus contributing to the rehabilitation and reconstruction of Kampuchea. Everywhere, we can hear voices of praise full of love and respect, moving stories, poems and beautiful songs and see lively pictures reflecting the great sacrifices made by the Vietnamese army, which is fighting for the victory of our people's just cause. All Kampucheans are filled with profound feelings toward the lofty and valuable spirit of proletarian internationalism manifested by their Vietnamese comrades-in-arms.

Now that Kampuchea has been restored and gradually strengthened, our armed forces have grown firmer and stronger, our army and people have gained greater control of combat and combat readiness for the defense of their fatherland and our Kampuchean revolution is in a firm and victorious state and will gradually be in full control, pursuant to the principles of the Kampuchea-Vietnam treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation. A number of Vietnamese troops will be withdrawn from Kampuchea this month, July.

This noble gesture has once again emphasized Vietnam's sincerity toward Kampuchea. Vietnam has never feared difficulties but has always been willing to sacrifice everything and to fulfill its international duty with the sole aim of helping the fraternal Kampuchean people build their forces for the defense and reconstruction of their fatherland by themselves. This is the brilliant symbol of their unswerving, most sincere militant solidarity which conforms to the theory of pure proletarian internationalism. No reactionary force can tarnish this.

The Bangkok ruling circles should immediately put an end to their policy which betrays the interests of the Thai people and which is leading them deeper into the hands of the Beijing expansionists and U.S. imperialists by advocating a hostile position against Kampuchea and protecting the so-called coalition government which is only a fake label to cover up the barbarous, genocidal Democratic Kampuchean regime, which is despised by all mankind.

The best way for the Thai authorities to avoid being punished by history is to give a positive response to the constructive proposals of the PRK. For the sake of the genuine interests of the Thai and Kampuchean peoples, they should take positive steps to enable Southeast Asia to become a zone of stability, peace and cooperation. All the points set forth in the declaration of the sixth conference of the foreign ministers of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos clearly constitute reasonable proposals aimed at serving the genuine interests of all the people in this region.

This reflects the good will of Kampuchea and Vietnam. But if this good will is used by the Chinese ruling circles and their lackeys as well as other reactionary forces as an opportunity to stimulate hostile activities against Kampuchea. Kampuchea and Vietnam will consider implementing the provisions of the Kampuchea-Vietnam treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation in order to take appropriate counter measures.

All Kampuchean people welcome, support and fully agree with the reasonable proposals and good-will gestures of the PRK Government and the fraternal Vietnamese and Lao Governments.

The sincere position of the three Indochinese countries has always been welcomed and supported by progressive and peace and justice-loving mankind throughout the world. All the perfidious maneuvers of the reactionary forces to fool world public opinion and oppose the just cause of the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao peoples will certainly be crushed.

Our entire party, people and army pledge to strengthen our unity and solidarity ever more firmly under the leadership of the KPRP, hold aloft the banner of genuine partriotism and proletarian internationalist solidarity and, especially, to take good care of and further strengthen the strategic alliance among Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos, and to fight and be ready to fight and crush all the maneuvers of the enemy during this rainy season while striving to score greater successes in the field of production and carrying out the tasks of building and strengthening the Kampuchean revolutionary forces.

VODK CALLS HCM CITY CONFERENCE 'TRICK'

BK111111 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 10 Jul 82

[Station commentary: "The International Conference Staged in Ho Chi Minh City by the Vietnamese Le Duan Enemy Aggressors Is Just a Trick Similar to Their Former Threadbare Maneuver on Staging a Regional Conference"]

[Text] At the beginning of 1981, the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors staged a gathering with their puppets and running dogs in Ho Chi Minh City and performed their trick on staging the regional conference. But this regional conference's trick has already been denounced and tossed in the garbage by the ASEAN countries and all the peace and justice-loving countries in the world, as well as the United Nations. Now, with the current scene in Ho Chi Minh City, the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors have staged a maneuver with regard to their international conference on Southeast Asia.

Are there any differences between what the Vietnamese have called their international conference on Southeast Asia and their former trick regarding the regional conference which was just a threadbare maneuver? There is no new significance between these two tricks. This is an old maneuver just wrapped in a new parcel and with a changed name. Their significance and goal are the same:

1. To hide their aggression in Kampuchea and to shift the Kampuchean problem -- which was caused by the barbarous aggression of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy -- from the issue of the Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea to a regional issue.

2. To bury the resolutions of the 34th, 35th and 36th UN General Assemblies and the declaration of the UN-sponsored International Conference on Kampuchea convened in July 1981 which called on the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors to unconditionally withdraw all of their troops from Kampuchea and to allow the Kampuchean people to solve their own problems by themselves through a UN-supervised free election.

What are the Vietnamese aims on this issue? The Vietnamese -- the aggressors in Kampuchea, whose hands are soiled with the blood of the Kampuchean, Lao and Thai peoples and who have been denounced, condemned and pressured throughout the world and by all of mankind during the past almost four years calling for their withdrawal from Kampuchea -- intend to clear themselves from their crimes and to swallow Kampuchea. If the Vietnamese succeed in their attempts, there will be many more countries in the Southeast Asian region which will be swallowed by the Vietnamese in the same way that they absorb Kampuchea.

The Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas firmly oppose the international conference trick of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy and other tricky maneuvers which are being staged in an attempt to shift the solution of the Kampuchean problem from the framework of the resolutions of the 34th, 35th and 36th UN General Assemblies. If the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors really want to solve the Kampuchean problem, abolish the tension in Southeast Asia and restore peace and stability in this region, they do not need to stage their tricks regarding the international conference on Southeast Asia, their partial troop withdrawal or other maneuvers. The 34th, 35th and 36th UN General Assemblies convened in 1979, 1980 and 1981, successively, and the UN-sponsored International Conference on Kampuchea, which was held in July 1981 and attended by more than 90 countries representing more than 80 percent of the entire world population, raised correct and reasonable principles and complete procedures for solving the Kampuchean problem and guaranteeing security, peace and stability in Southeast Asia. If the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors respect and implement the principles inscribed in the resolutions of the UN General Assemblies and the declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchean, in particular by completely and unconditionally withdrawing their aggressor troops from Kampuchea, the problem would be resolved. This will automatically ease the tension in Southeast Asia and peace and stability will be immediately restored.

The Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors have not agreed to implement these resolutions as called for by the international community. Instead of doing so, they have trampled underfoot international opinion and are making efforts to find tricks to dupe the international community in order to make it accept their aggression in Kampuchea as a fait accompli. Therefore, the international community realizes more clearly the Vietnamese opposition to world opinion and their stubborness, arrogance and brutality. It also understands more clearly the real aims of the Vietnamese expansionsits, who have tried to find every way to swallow Kampuchea, so as to achieve their Indochina federation scheme to be used with the Soviets as their strong base from which to advance their expansion and accomplish their expansionist and aggressive strategy in Southeast Asia and the entire Asia-Pacific region.

Thus, Southeast Asian countries and all peace and justice-loving countries in the world are not so naive and stupid as to be fooled by the dirty and tricky manuevers of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors. On the contrary, they fully realize the need to continue to bring pressure to bear on the Vietnamese in all fields until they respect and implement the resolutions of the UN General Assemblies and the declaration of the July 1981 international conference on Kampuchea, which called on the Vietnamese to completely and unconditionally withdraw their troops from Kampuchea and to allow the Kampuchean people to hold a free UN-supervised election. The Kampuchean problem cannot be solved and long-term security and stability in Southeast Asia cannot be guaranteed unless the resolutions of the 34th, 35th and 36th UN General Assemblies are implemented by a complete and unconditional withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea.

HENG SAMRIN, CHAN SI GREET MPR LEADERS

[Text] Phnom Penh, 11 Jul (SPK) -- On the occasion of the 61st anniversary of the Mongolian people's revolution, Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State, and Chan Si, chairman of the Council of Ministers, sent their "warmest" congratulations to Yumjaagiyn Tsedenbal general secretary of the MPRP and chairman of the People's Great Hural Presidium, and to Jambyn Batmonh, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the MPR.

In their message, Heng Samrin and Chan Si said: Under the perspicacious leadership of the MPSP, the fraternal Mongolian people have obtained brilliant achievements in all fields of socialist construction. These good results are a very important factor in contributing to the defense of peace and stability in Asia and the world.

The Kampuchean leaders sincerely thanked the party, government and people of Mongolia for their support and moral and material assistance to the Kampuchean people in their just struggle against the perfidious maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists, Beijing expansionist-hegemonists and other reactionary forces to safeguard national independence and sovereignty and rebuild Kampuchea toward socialism.

Animated by the spirit of proletarian internationalism, we are certain that our party, government and people will coordinate their actions to contribute to strengthening peace and the socialist community in the world.

On that occasion, Hun Sen, minister of foreign affairs, sent a congratulatory message to his Mongolian counterpart Mangalyn Dugersuren.

SPK HAILS PRK-SRV HISTORICAL WATERS AGREEMENT

BK121429 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1507 GMT 11 Jul 82

["New Evidence of Fraternity and Militant Solidarity Between Kampuchea and Vietnam" -- SPK headline]

[Text] The fraternal friendship and militant solidarity between Kampuchea and Vietnam was illustrated once more in a brilliant way with the signing on 7 July 1982 in Ho Chi Minh City of an accord on limitation of historical waters of the People's Republic of Kampuchea and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam by Foreign Minister Hun Sen and Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach in the names of their respective governments.

This accord confirmed the will of the two countries to further consolidate and develop the special relations which unite them in the spirit of the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation between the SRV and the PRK signed on 18 February 1979, to continue the fraternal traditions established a long time ago, flourishing during the common struggle against the colonialists and the U.S. imperialists for national independence and which were betrayed by regimes under allegiance to foreigners, especially by the Maoist regime of Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan.

The accord on historical waters constitutes the basis for the forthcoming negotiations for the delimitation of the maritime frontier between our countries in the waters between the coast of Kampot Province and the Pould Wai Islands group of the PRK on the one hand and the coast of Kien Giang Province, Phu Quoc Island and the Tho Chu Archipelago of the SRV on the other hand.

The signing of this accord puts an end to an equivocal situation left unresolved by the puppet regimes in Kampuchea and in South Vietnam in the past.

Such a situation has been exploited by the Chinese and Thai reactionaries to supply the remnants of the Pol Pot army and other reactionaries as well as by Thai fishermen to penetrate the area causing almost daily disputes.

Before the signing of the accord, the PRK and the SRV have always mutually respected the territorial integrity and sovereignty of each other. The accord is thus the materialization of this mutual respect and conforms with the norms of international law. It contributes to the consolidation of the basis for close and durable cooperation between the two countries. The accord is an example of good will from both sides in the spirit of equality, friendship, mutual respect of independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity and legitimate interests of each side which is the basis for solving all border problems.

VODK SCORES VIETNAM'S SAFETY ZONE PROPOSAL

[Station commentary: "Why the Vietnamese Aggressors Are Asking for a Safety Zone To Be Set Up Along the Thai-Kampuchean Border"]

[Text] In addition to their tricks of a partial troop withdrawal from Kampuchea and an international conference on Southeast Asia, the Vietnamese aggressors have also brought forth another cheap and perfidious trick -- the setting up of a safety zone along the Thai-Kampuchean border. Why do the Vietnamese-Le Duan aggressors badly want to have this so-called safety zone set up?

It is well known that the western part of Kampuchea has been a very intense battlefield -- during the rainy season as well as in the dry season -- compared to other battlefields in Kampuchea. And it is here that the Vietnamese have become bogged down and are in serious trouble. For almost 4 years now, in the western part of Kampuchea, the Democratic Kampuchean army and guerrillas have inflicted heavy losses on the Vietnamese aggressors. Vietnamese soldiers are wary of this part of Kampuchea.

This is why the Vietnamese aggressors are trying hard to extricate themselves from this difficult and deteriorating situation through other means. They have made great military efforts for almost 4 years now to crush the Democratic Kampuchean army and guerrillas, but all in vain. Instead, they have become bogged down even more deeply.

In 1980, following the complete failure of their 1979-80 dry-season offensive against the Democratic Kampuchean forces, the Vietnamese aggressors proposed and tried to peddle the idea of a demilitarized zone along the Thai-Kampuchean border. This idea, however, was categorically denounced and rejected by Thailand, the ASEAN countries and other peace-loving countries. Now the Le Duan authorities have merely given a new name to this old trick. So, there is really nothing new in this so-called safety zone.

The true objectives of the Le Duan aggressors in calling for this safety zone are as follows: First, to transform the Vietnamese aggression -- which violates the UN Charter and international laws -- into a problem between Thailand and Kampuchea; second, to legitimize the administration of the Vietnamese and their puppet Heng Samrin in Phnom Penh; and third, whether the Vietnamese withdraw their troops from this so-called safety zone or not, the situation there will still depend on them because Heng Samrin has no army. The Khmer conscripts in Kampuchea are all under Vietnamese control and they serve only to cover up the presence of the Vietnamese aggressor forces. So, the Vietnamese army will continue to put pressure on the Thai border and will always be a threat to Thailand.

Therefore, if the Le Duan aggressors succeed in setting up this so-called safety zone along the Thai-Kampuchean border, they will also succeed in their plan to swallow and continually occupy Kampuchea. Likewise, they will continue to be a threat to Thailand and Southeast Asia and belligerently carry on their and their Soviet masters' strategy of aggression.

However, Thailand and the other ASEAN countries, as well as other justice and peace-loving countries the world over, will not be taken in by this Vietnamese trick to legitimize their aggression in Kampuchea -- an aggression against which we have all fought for nearly 4 years in defense of justice, peace, stability and security in the region as well as peace in the world. The international community will continue to demand and persistently put pressure on the Vietnamese until the Le Duan aggressors withdraw all their troops from Kampuchea according to the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and let the Kampuchean people decide their own destiny without outside interference through a free election under UN supervision.

Only after the Vietnamese have withdrawn all their troops from Kampuchea -- which is a sovereign and independent state -- can the Kampuchean problem be solved and the security of Thailand and other Southeast Asian countries be guaranteed.

KPRAF ACTIVITIES FOR 25 JUNE-1 JULY REPORTED

[Weekly roundup of KPRAF activities]

[Excerpts] On 25 June, the armed forces of Lomphat District, Ratanakiri Province, killed three bandits, captured four others and seized three AK's. On the same day, seven Pol Pot remnants crossed the border to spy in the area south of Phnum Malai. They were intercepted by our border defence forces, who killed two of them and seized two AK's, the rest fleeing back to the other side of the border.

Between 25 and 27 June, in the area west of Smat Deng, Pursat Province, four groups of enemy elements launched repeated sneak attacks against us. Our border defence forces valiantly fought back and killed 14 intruders on the spot. We destroyed a 12.7-mm machine gun.

On 26 June, our revolutionary forces launched mopping-up operations in Moung District, Battambang Province, and Banteay Srei District, Siem Reap Province, killing eight enemy soldiers who had wormed their way among our masses. In Moung District, we killed four Sereika elements as they were issuing misleading propaganda to the people.

In Ampil, Siem Reap Province, three families persuaded three of their relatives to surrender to the revolutionary forces. In Puok District, four families also persuaded their children and brothers to return to the fold. In Sandan District, Kompong Thom Province, the people led our forces to two enemy arms caches where a total of 34 assorted weapons were seized. In Stung Trang District, Kompong Cham Province, the local forces also recovered nine enemy weapons.

The local forces in (Paktraoy) commune, Lomphat District, Ratanakiri Province, killed two enemies and seized an AK. In Samraong, Sot Nikom District, Siem Reap Province, the local forces killed a disguised enemy element and captured three.

According to still incomplete figures, from 25 June to 1 July, our armed forces, militia and people put 54 enemy soldiers out of action, including 33 killed, 14 captured and 7 defectors, and seized an assortment of 52 weapons.

SIANG PASASON WELCOMES INDOCHINESE CONFERENCE

BK091209 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 9 Jul 82

[SIANG PASASON 9 July article: "We Always Sacrifice Ourselves for Peace and Stability in Southeast Asia"]

[Text] The sixth regular conference of the three Indochinese foreign ministers of Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam, which was held in Ho Chi Minh City on 6 and 7 July, concluded with glorious success. The conference unanimously adopted a communique showing the consistent attitude and the concrete stand of the three Indochinese countries in solving the remaining differences between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries in order to positively contribute to turning Southeast Asia into a region of genuine peace, stability and cooperation for the benefit of mutual interests.

Over the past 3 years, our Lao people, along with the fraternal peoples of Vietnam and Kampuchea, have successfully overcome various obstacles and have defeated all the sabotage schemes of the enemies. As a result, the revolutionary cause of each country has firmly marched forward while independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity have been securely maintained. But, the past 3 years were a period of serious challenge, the period during which the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, ceaselessly made every effort to push the ASEAN countries into becoming the enemy of the Indochinese countries. As a result of Beijing's acts, the situation in this region has continued to remain tense.

Of late, the reactionaries in the Beijing ruling clique, backed by the U.S. imperialists, have incited certain ASEAN leaders into staging a play to form the so-called colalition government of the exiled Khmer reactionaries who are all brutal devils betraying the interests of the Kampuchean nation and people. This is one of their subtle schemes, the final purpose of which is to overthrow the governments of the three Indochinese countries.

The PRK, the LPDR and the SRV solemnly condemn the efforts to revive the devils, and regard them as a pretext for the criminal Pol Pot clique -- lackeys of the Beijing reactionaries -- to continue carrying put its vicious schemes to interfere in the internal affairs of the PRK and to oppose other nations in Indochina.

Current problems are not between the Indochinese countries and ASEAN, but between the three Indochinese countries and the Beijing reactionary ruling clique. To settle the present tense problem, which could lead to a war of confrontation at any time -- a war which will also endanger the ASEAN countries -- the conference of the three Indochinese foreign ministers again has proposed that the PRC favorably respond to the offer to sign bilateral or multilateral aggreements on peaceful coexistence with Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam. This would be in the interests of the Chinese people themselves as well as of the three Indochinese poeples who have maintained time-honored fine relations with each other.

The Indochinese countries have also always been prepared to meet with the ASEAN group, and would like to see an international conference on Southeast Asia held to discuss a solution to the regional problems on the basis of equality, mutual respect and noninterference in one another's internal affairs. This means that all problems in this region must be solved by the Southeast Asian countries themselves.

Adhering to their consistent stand on neighborly coexistence, the LPDR, the PRK and the SRV stand ready to hold talks with Thailand with a view to putting forth necessary measures to guarantee the security, independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of each country. To show their goodwill, in the initial stage, the PRK and the SRV have agreed to withdraw a number of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea in July 1982 if security and stability prevail along the Kampuchean-Thai border.

Furthermore, if the Thai side acts in response to the initiative of Kampuchea and Vietnam as stipulated in the communique of the conference, the two countries will agree to withdraw more Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea in the near future.

The LPDR fully supports the new initiative of the PRK and the SRV, and considers it a significant step toward settlement of the tense situation on the Kampuchean-Thai border. The voice of the three Indochinese countries in their conference in Ho Chi Minh City, as at past conferences, proves their creative and sincere line.

It is a good, equitable and very reasonable way to settle the problem through reconciliation and peaceful coexistence among the nations in this part of the world. It is certain that those with common sense will support and hail this initiative which aims to guarantee durable peace, stability and cooperation in the region.

Everyone knows to whom these suggestions are directed. Their reply will show whether or not they act in conformity with the interests of the various nations of Southeast Asia.

PAPER SUPPORTS INDOCHINESE PROPOSAL ON SAFETY ZONE

[SIANG PASASON 10 July commentary: "Why Is It Necessary To Set Up a Safety Zone Along the Kampuchean-Thai Border?"]

[Text] In the communique of the recent sixth conference of the three Indochinese foreign ministers in Ho Chi Minh City, the PRK reasserted its proposal of 18 July 1980 on the setting up of a demilitarized zone along the border between Kampuchea and Thailand. In case Thailand is not yet prepared to adhere to that proposal, the PRK side proposes the setting up of a safety zone along the border between the two countries. This is an urgent, necessary measure for an initial settlement of the situation which is aimed at achieving peace and stability in the Kampuchean-Thai border areas. It is a step which will lead to the guaranteeing of independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of each country.

Everyone is aware that in the recent past, the reactionaries in the Beijing ruling clique, acting in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, have made use of Thai territory as a bridge to assist and foster the Khmer reactionaries. They have transported through Thai territory their weapons and other war equipment as well as foodstuffs to those reactionaries to oppose the Kampuchean people. At the same time, the Thai authorities have ceaselessly conducted military provocations against the PRK. For example, they have sent reconnaissance aircraft to violate the airspace while mobilizing their armed ships to encroach upon the sovereignty over territorial waters of the PRK. In addition, they have ordered their military forces to launch shellings into Kampuchean territory in support of the shattered Pol Pot forces to create disturbances obstructing the building of a new life of the Kampuchean people.

The PRK has announced on several occasions that the presence of the Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea has in no way threatened Thailand's security. It is a joint obligation that the two countries have fulfilled in accordance with the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation signed on 18 February 1979. When there is no more threat coming from Thailand, all Vietnamese troops will withdraw from Kampuchea.

To create mutual trust so as to achieve progress in settling the problem in an initial step, the PRK has further proposed that only the armed forces of the PRK will be present in the part of the safety zone situation in Kampuchean territory. As for the Vietnamese troops which are assuming their international obligation in Kampuchea, they will not be stationed in that area. Only the armed forces of the Kingdom of Thailand will be allowed to be present in the part of the safety zone situated in Thai territory.

The Pol Pot remnant forces and other Khmer reactionary forces must be expelled from and the refugee camps be moved from the safety zone. To ensure the full implementation of the agreements on peace and security in the border of the two countries, the two sides will agree on an international supervision. In case the United Nations gives up the recognition of the representation of the Pol Pot clique or disguised Pol Pot clique, the PRK may consider the question of the United Nations control.

All these are another proposal full of good will which is forwarded in the spirit of peace of the PRK and on the principles of security for both sides which aim to restore the good neighborly relations with the Kingdom of Thailand.

The LPDR and the SRV wholeheartedly support the initiative proposal of the PRK which meets the interests of the Thai people themselves as well as of all other peoples in this region, whose aspiration is to live in peace. Thailand should positively respond to this proposal.

SOVIET SCIENTIFIC DELEGATION LEAVES FOR HOME

[Text] Vientiane, July 9 (OANA-KPL) -- Lao delegation of the National Mekong Committee led by its president Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, on July 3, returned home from Kampuchea. The delegation had taken part in the fourth ordinary session of the Indochinese National Mekong Committees held in Phnom Penh.

The conference reviewed the past activities of the national committees in Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam. The activities included the prospecting and exploitation of natural resources in the lower basin of the Mekong River. The conference also agreed that the three nations will hold a conference on meteorology and floods.

The conference also studied the pending question which has impeded all major projects of the committee -- that is the fact that the People's Republic of Kampuchea has not yet been accepted as member of the International Mekong Committee.

SITTHI COMMENTS ON CGDK, HUN SEN REMARKS

[Text] Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila last night welcomed the proclamation of the formation of a Coalition Government for Democratic Kampuchea [CGDK] as "a positive step towards a comprehensive political settlement" of the Kampuchea conflict.

He said that he was glad that the three Khmer resistance factions could get together by themselves and forge a coalition to "exercise the right and duty of the Khmer people to regain their independence." He expressed belief that Prince Sihanouk as leader of the coalition would be able to rally the support of the people of Kampuchea. He said he doubted that the Vietnamese-installed Heng Samrin regime in Phnom Penh had any real popular support.

Air Chief Marshal Sitthi ridiculed a statement by Hun Sen, foreign minister of the Heng Samrin regime broadcast by the SPK news agency yesterday, that the situation along the Thai-Kampuchean border was "nearing a state of war." He denied a charge by Hun Sen that Thailand was providing bases for the Khmer Rouge and other resistance forces. He said Hun Sen's threat of "appropriate measures" against Thailand caused him to doubt the sincerity of the Hanoi offer of "partial withdrawal" of Vietnamese forces from Kampuchea declared at the Ho Chi Minh City meeting of the three Indochina foreign ministers last week. He noted that most of the forces of the Heng Samrin regime were Vietnamese, not Kampuchea. He believed that the Hun Sen statements could have been prompted by the success in the formation of the Democratic Kampuchea Coalition Government whose forces are Kampuchean.

BANGKOK POST Views Coalition

[Editorial: "Coalition's Most Important Task"]

[Text] An impossible thing has happened. Divergent Khmer factions have been able to form a coalition. Oil has somehow mixed with water. Stranger still, despite ideological and moral differences, the communist Khmer Rouge, the anti-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front and the noncommunist FUNCINPEC [National United Front for an Independent, Neutral, Peaceful and Cooperative Cambodia] of the mercurial Prince Norodom Sihanouk were able to forge a coalition much faster than Thai political parties with supposedly similar basic ideals. It must be said to the credit of the prince, KPNLF's Sonn Sann and the Khmer Rouge's Shieu Samphan that they realised the necessity of unity if they were to be able to regain their independence from Vietnam in some way or other.

It would seem from the Cabinet list that the Khmer Rouge got the best out of the deal. It is true that they kept the most hated person, Pol Pot, said to be mainly responsible for the extremist policies leading to the violent deaths of numerous of his countrymen, out of the Cabinet but it is likely that he will remain in command of the 30,000-strong Khmer Rouge Armed Forces the biggest army the Khmer resistance has. Perhaps, his running of the troops in fighting the Vietnamese and Heng Samrin forces is needed, but the coalition government must remember that this man's record of inhumanity will be a major disadvantage.

The continuation in power of two other most highly detested characters of the Khmer Rouge -- Ieng Sary and Son Sen -- is going to be a great handicap when the prince tries to improve the international image of the coalition. If the Khmer Rouge had been wise, they would have kept these two in the background and named less controversial characters.

With the presence of these two in the cabinet, countries like Australia which have been considering reviewing their position of "nonrecognition" of Democratic Kampuchea may find it difficult to "swallow" the argument that DK has really and truly changed. The question of whether those countries which are considering the "empty seat" option for Kampuchea in the United Nations will change their minds cannot be answered until the prince has spoken to their prime ministers or foreign ministers. But with these two Khmer Rouge leaders in the Cabinet the prince will find it hard to do the explaining.

However, there are certain positive factors in the coalition, as president the prince and as Prime Minister Son Sann theoretically hold the real power. It all depends on how capable they are of wielding that power. If they are strong and if they work together they need not become simply a "presentable mask" for the Khmer Rouge, they can actually exercise control. They can expect support from ASEAN and its friends in this respect.

The most important test for the coalition will not be whether its forces can withstand the attacks of the Vietnamese forces. It will be whether it can mobilise the support of the people. If Prince Sihanouk still possesses the ability to arouse his people, he should speak over radio to all of them and tell them what they must do to help them regain their independence.

The prince has said that no invader could remain in a country without the support of the people, adding that the Kampuchean people do not support the Vietnamese and their henchman at Phnom Penh, Heng Samrin. Now he faces the vital duty of winning the people over to the coalition. With knowledge that there is now a nationalist coalition government, the Kampuchean people may make it more and more difficult for the Vietnamese to stay in Kampuchea. And this could lead to the much hoped-for political settlement based on the United Nations general assembly resolution on Kampuchea.

CHINA SAID TO SUPPLY ARMS TO MOULINAKA

[Text] Prince Norodom Sihanouk's Moulinaka faction has received a big shipment of arms from China as it continued to beef up its positions opposite Aranyaprathet in anticipation of a possible offensive dirve by Vietnamese forces in western Kampuchea.

A high-ranking Moulinaka officer told the NATION in Khao I-dang on Wednesday that the arms shipment came two months ago; it included AK-47 assault rifles, ammunition, 60 mm and 82 mm mortars. Moulinaka military leaders, including Dol Nhem Sophon who commands about 1,660 men, came from their field bases at the opposite of Nong Chan to meet Prince Sihanouk at Khao I-dang on Wednesday.

Some skirmishes between Khmer Rouge guerrillas and Vietnamese troops took place in Phnom Chat early this week. The NATION met one Khmer Rouge officer, 26-year-old Buern, who was being taken for an x-ray at one ICRC field hospital in Aranyaprathet. Buern who has been in military service with the Khmer Rouge for 12 years was wounded in his left eye by a ricochet of B-40 grenade during a brief battle with the Vietnamese on Tuesday. He said he and his men had been told about the tripartite coalition and had also been instructed to keep strict discipline. "We are specifically instructed to avoid unnecessary killings," he said.

SRV ENVOY SAYS TROOP PULLOUT WILL TAKE PLACE

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, July 12 (AFP) -- The partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia will take place positively as promised in the communique issued by the Indochinese foreign ministers last week, Vietnamese Charge d'Affaires Nguyen Van Thang, said here today.

Answering questions at a news conference, he ruled out the need for any international supervision to verify the withdrawal. He emphasised that the Vietnamese troops were stationed in Kampuchea under the provisions of a friendship treaty between the two countries and any withdrawal of the troops was within their "sovereign rights". The Chinese threat which necessitated their stationing in Cambodia continued to exist, he said.

Mr Thang was explaining the Vietnamese offer to withdraw some of its troops contained in the joint communique issued at Ho Chi Minh City on July 7 after the two-day meeting of the foreign ministers of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. Asked whether Hanoi would be prepared to allow a United Nations team supervise the withdrawal, Mr Thang said the United Nations "can play a role only if it expels the Pol Pot clique from the world body." Otherwise, any action by the United Nations would be tantamount to intervention in the internal affairs of the country.

TRUONG CHINH SUPPORTS LEBANON, HITS U.S. ACTIONS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 12 -- "Vietnam strongly supports the heroic and certainly victorious struggle of the peoples of Palestine, Lebanon and other Arab nations against the U.S. imperialists and the Israeli Zionist aggressors and for their survival and inviolable national rights", says President Truong Chinh today.

Replying to Fidel Castro, president of the Non-Aligned Movement, in connection with the current situation in Lebanon, the Vietnamese leader strongly condemns the U.S.-abetted Israeli aggressors who are "openly trampling on the most fundamental principles of international law and challenging the conscience of mankind".

After condemning the United States for sending more warships and Marines to the Lebanese waters, President Truong Chinh says: "The Socialist Republic of Vietnam, sparing no efforts, will cooperate with other non-aligned countries in opposing the U.S. imperialists intervention, in stopping the aggression by the Israeli Zionists and forcing them to withdraw unconditionally from Lebanon". "We are confident that with their indomitable courage and with sympathy and support of the whole progressive mankind, the peoples of Palestine, Lebanon and other Arab countries will be victorious in their just cause despite all trials and hardships," President Truong Chinh says.

In their joint message, the Vietnamese leaders wished President Souphanouvong, a "great friend of the Vietnamese people, the best of health and many happy returns of the day, so that together with the entire party, the government and the People's Supreme Assembly of Laos, he will lead the heroic Lao people to obtain great achievements in carrying out the historic resolutions of the Third Lao Party Congress to defend their beautiful country and take it to socialism for the sake of their prosperity and happiness, of the solidarity among the peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea, and of peace and cooperation in Southeast Asia and elsewhere in the world".

The message also expressed the wish for a "constant consolidation and development of the special unshakable militant solidarity and all-sided cooperation between the two parties and people".

NHAN DAN RAPS PRC FOR REJECTING PROPOSALS

OW100831 Hanoi VNA in English 0818 GMT 10 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 10 -- "Beijing's rejection of the three Indochinese countries' constructive and practical proposals proves that Chinese expansionism does not want peace and stability in Southeast Asia," comments NHAN DAN today.

The paper recalls that at the recent ministerial conference in Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea demanded that China sign with them bilateral or multilateral treaties of peaceful co-existence. Vietnam urged the resumption of the Sino-Vietnamese talks and together with Kampuchea, decided to withdraw a number of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea in July. Vietnam and Kampuchea also said they might consider a further withdrawal of Vietnamese troops in the near future. Moreover Kampuchea proposed to set up a security zone along the Thai-Kampuchean border if Thailand is not yet prepared to meet its previous demand for a demilitarized zone. Another proposal made by the three Indochinese foreign ministers was the convention of an international conference on Southeast Asia and the vacancy of Kampuchea's seat at the United Nations for some time on condition that the Pol Pot criminals be expelled from this organization.

"The reactionaries in the Beijing ruling circles", the paper continues, "not only refuse further negotiations on problems concerning relations with Vietnam, but also spare no effort to prevent dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries. Clinging to the defunct 'Democratic Kampuchea', they try to make it an instrument to oppose the three Indochinese countries and force the ASEAN countries to follow suit".

"Stubbornly opposed to peace, reconciliation and co-operation, the Chinese expansionists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, are doing great harm to the interests and honour of the Chinese people and increasing their own isolation in the international arena," the paper points out.

VNA REPORTS JUNE-JULY PRC ARMED INCURSIONS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 9 -- In late June and early this month, Chinese troops repeatedly conducted armed provocations and intrusions into Northern Vietnam border provinces.

On June 26, dozens of Chinese troops intruded 300 metres deep into marker post 127 area in Bao Lac District (Cao Bang) killing a civilian at work in the field.

On June 28, many groups of Chinese troops intruded into Chi Ca area in Xin Man District (Ha Tuyen) and opened fire on several villages, killing two civilians and destroying several houses. After being forced to withdraw across the border, the aggressors fired over 50 mortar and artillery rounds on this area.

On July 2, two groups of Chinese troops crossed marker posts 14 and 28 and intruded 200 metres deep into Binh Lieu (Quang Ninh) and laid mines on several footpaths leading to surrounding villages.

During this period, China sent many teams of scouts and commandos into Mau Son (Lang Son), Po Hen (Quang Ninh) Quang Hoa, Trung Khanh (Cao Bang), Muong Khuong, Lao Cai (Hoang Lienson), and especially Dong Van, Meo Vac (Ha Tuyen). They conducted sabotage and propaganda activities and took away a number of Vietnamese civilians.

These armed provocations and intrusions are part of the scheme of the reactionaries in the Chinese ruling circles in pursuing a hostile policy towards Vietnam and in creating tension on the common border of the two countries. The local people and their armed forces with high vigilance have promptly punished the Chinese intruders.

NHAN DAN REJECTS NEW KHMER COALITION GOVERNMENT

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 13 -- "The formation of the so-called 'coalition government' of the Khmer reactionaries is nothing but an effort to put a new cloak on a corpse," says NHAN DAN in a commentary today.

"However," the paper says, "cosmetics cannot dispel the small of corpses and crime. This is a 'coalition' of the genocidal clique already overthrown by the Kampuchean people and universally condemned with exiled Khmers who have lost all qualifications to represent the Kampuchean people. With power almost entirely in the hand of the Pol Pot clique, in the military, diplomatic, financial as well as economic fields, the so-called 'coalition government' has revealed its true worth as nothing but a corpse of the disguised genocidal regime."

NHAN DAN goes on: "No one has any doubt about the intention of Beijing and Washington which have staged this clumsy farce. They have sought by all means to keep the Khmer Rouge's illegal seat at the United Nations, continue opposing the revival of the Kampuchean people, restore the genocidal regime in this country, oppose the peoples of Vietnam and Laos, thus causing tension and instability and Southeast Asia with a view to realizing their expansionist scheme." The paper says that the public cannot help questioning the role played by the Thai authorities in this farce. They are tailing after the Chinese rulers by continuing their hostile policy toward the three Indochinese countries. NHAN DAN goes on:

"The Chinese reactionaries, the U.S. imperialists and their followers are working under the illusion of reserving [as received] the situation in Kampuchea. But this is just a pipe dream. The decision just made by the People's Republic of Kampuchea and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam to withdraw part of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea this month and the PRK proposal to establish a security zone along the Thai-Kampuchean border are eloquent demonstrations of the firm position of the Kampuchean revolution as well as the good will of the three Indochinese countries", NHAN DAN concludes.

DKP'S MIES, BULGARIA'S IOTOV ON NEW PEACE EFFORT

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jul 12 -- "The new proposals and initiatives put forth by Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea at their recent foreign ministerial conference in Ho Chi Minh City are clearsighted, well-intentioned, and consistent with the trend of our time" said Herbert Mies, chairman of the German Communist Party (DKP) Central Committee, at his reception of Vietnamese ambassador to the FRG Nguyen Tuan Lieu in Bonn on July 8.

Herbert Mies called on the ASEAN countries and China to make positive response to these fair and logical proposals, and demanded that the government of the Federal Republic of Germany immediately stop recognizing Pol Pot's representation at the United Nations and cease all its aid to the genocidal clique.

Over recent days, the FRG mass media have highly valued the decision of Vietnam and Kampuchea to withdraw part of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea as well as their new proposals for the establishment of a safety zone along the Kampuchean-Thai border.

At his reception of Vietnamese Charge d'Affaires A.I. Le Dinh Giai in Sofia on July 8, Bulgarian Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs Marin Iotov said that the new peace initiatives of the Indochinese countries reflect their earnest desire to solve the existing problems in Southeast Asia in the interests of peace, detente and stability.

Bulgarian dailies on July 7-8 commented that dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries is the only way to ease tension and turn Southeast Asia into a region of peace and stability. On July 10, the Czechoslovak newspaper RUDE PRAVO said that the Indochinese countries have reiterated their determination to do their utmost for a healthy international atmosphere in Southeast Asia. The Mongolian news agency MONTSAME recently remarked that the three Indochinese countries have taken a further step in building Southeast Asia into a region of peace and removing existing difficulties in their relations with the ASEAN countries.

FRASER ANNOUNCES U.S. DESTROYER TO VISIT

[Text] The prime minister, Mr Fraser, has made a challenge to the Labor premiers of New South Wales and Victoria over the issue of visits by United States warships that are nuclear-powered or nuclear-armed. Mr Fraser announced in Perth that the American guided-missile destroyer Goldsborough will call at Sydney and Melbourne during a visit to Australia late this month and early in August.

The issue of visits to Australian ports by nuclear warships has recently caused controvery in the Labor Party, sections of which are opposed to such visits. Until the Victorian premier, Mr Cain, and the Federal Labor leader, Mr Hayden, raised the subject last month. the government and the opposition had maintained a bipartisan policy on visiting nuclear warships. Mr Fraser has since taken every opportunity to reaffirm the government's stand that it welcomes such visits and that they are an integral part of Australia's defense alliance with the United States. The Goldsborough is conventionally powered but Mr Fraser would not say if it was nuclear armed. He said that friendly navies could not be expected to give information that would be of use to possible enemy.

Reaction to Warship Visit

[Text] The Victorian premier, Mr Cain, says his Labor Government will take no action to prevent the federal government exercising its constitutional power to allow foreign nuclear warships to visit Australian ports. Mr Cain was commenting on the announcement yesterday by the prime minister, Mr Fraser, that the American guided-missile destroyer, Goldsborough, is to visit Sydney and Melbourne later this month. The issue of nuclear-powered or nuclear-armed warships visiting Australia has recently been raised in the Labor Party with some sections calling for a ban on such visits. Mr Cain said that Mr Fraser was being politically provocative in his comments on the Goldsborough visit. The Goldsborough is conventionally powered but Mr Fraser has refused to say if it is carrying nuclear weapons. He said such information would only benefit possible enemies.

Meanwhile, the Waterside Workers Federation and the seamen's union branches in Melbourne have said they will oppose the visit by the Goldsborough. The unions will discuss the issue once the visit has been confirmed. There has been no comment yet from the Labor government in New South Wales. The premier, Mr Wran, has not openly opposed visits to Sydney by nuclear warships but has quietly taken action to avert them.

FOREIGN MINISTER: U.S. LOS DECISION 'SETBACK'

[Text] Canberra, July 12 (AFP) -- Australia is disappointed at the failure of the United States to sign the convention on the Law of the Sea, Foreign Minister Tony Street said today.

Australia is one of the 130 countries who have already signed the convention, and the issue provoked considerable discussion at the ANZUS meeting here last month. Mr Strett expressed his government's disappointment at the U.S. decision not to sign, which he said could weaken the convention's effectiveness. Mrs. Street continued: "We believe that it will offer substantial benefits to us, particularly in ensuring freedom of navigation and access to the resources of the sea. If it is widely accepted, the convention will also provide a secure and agreed framework for all aspects of the uses of the sea." He described the U.S. decision as "a setback to those many countries that have worked so hard to try to ensure that the new Law of the Sea was supported by global consensus."

ANTARA DETAILS ECONOMIC TALKS HELD WITH ROMANIA

[Text] Jakarta, July 2 (ANTARA) -- Indonesia and Romania signed a memorandum of understanding for the stepping up of cooperation in the trade and economic sectors between the two countries here Thursday [1 July].

The minister of EKUIN (economic, financial and industrial affairs), Widjojo Nitisastro, and the visiting Romanian vice prime minister, Gheorghe Petrescu, respectively represented the Indonesian and Romanian Governments in the signing of the memorandum of understanding.

The Romanian Vice Prime Minister visited Indonesia from June 27 to July 1, 1982, to head the Romanian delegation. While here, the Romanian delegation held meetings with the Indonesian delegation, which was headed by Minister Widjojo Nitisastro.

The two sides at the meetings agreed to stimulate and facilitate more active trade relations for the export and import of goods. The Romanian side requested to import from Indonesia 2 million tons of crude oil in 1982 and 5 million tons yearly beginning in 1983. The Indonesian side will examine the request.

In this connection, Widjojo told newsmen here Thursday that Indonesia basically agreed to supply crude oil to Romania, but study had to be made to find out whether Indonesia had sufficient crude of the kind demanded by Romania.

Romania, according to the EKUIN minister, prefers to import Indonesia crude based on the counter trade system, for the import of crude Romania wants to pay with oil products. But Indonesia prefers to use the procedure applied in the exports of crude to Thailand, Japan, the Philippines and South Korea in which the buyers pay cash Widjojo explained.

On the offer of the Romanian side to use the facilities of the free zone in Sulina port and Constanta port, the Indonesian side stated that under the new 1982 export regulations, there would be a possibility for Indonesian exporters to make use of the free zone facilities. Both sides also agreed that participating in exhibitions, or holding special exhibitions, including the exchange of trade missions, would enhance the possibilities of increased export between the two countries.

The Romanian delegation also informed the Indonesian delegation about the offer submitted in the framework of the tender organised by the Indonesian state railway (PJKA) for 1,384 freight wagons. The Indonesian side took note of the offer and would follow up the matter.

Taking into consideration the economic possibilities of the two countries, both sides considered that the bilateral economic cooperation could be strengthened through the implementation of mutually advantageous projects. In this respect, the Romanian side agreed to participate in the implementation of projects in Indonesia jointly with Indonesian enterprises.

The Indonesian delegation informed the Romanian side of the development projects of high priorities which would be implemented in the coming years, as well as the procedures in force in Indonesia to be followed by all parties participating in the implementation of development projects. The projects especially cover the power sector, metallurgical industry, cement industry, railway and ship repair industry, geological surveys and oil drilling works, mining industry, oil and petrochemical industry, machine building industry and the assembling industry dealing with the manufacture of tractors and kilowatt-hour meters.

To speed up cooperation in the implementation of projects, both sides agreed that in the period of August-September 1982 the two countries would exchange delegations of experts to improve mutual knowledge of the technical potentials and capabilities of both countries. Not later than September 30, 1982, the Romanian side will propose to the Indonesian side the technical assistance projects selection for their participation.

The Romanian side will study the list of technical and petrochemical projects as well as of the number of ships required by Indonesia from August to September 1982 and will propose to the Indonesian side projects in which Romanians can participate.

The two sides agreed to discuss long-term economic, technical and scientific cooperation agreement, including the establishment of a joint commission, and agreement for the mutual guarantee of investments. Both sides agreed to exchange drafts of the cooperation agreement towards the end of August 1982, and the negotiation for finalisation is scheduled to take place at the end of 1982 at the latest.

ANTARA REPORTS MOKHTAR'S DEPARTURE FROM ROMANIA

Accompanied by Indonesian Ambassador to Romania Mh. Isnaeni and Director for Europe of the Foreign Ministry Sularto Sutowardoyo, Mokhtar during the visit was received by President Nicolae Ceausescu and held two meetings with Stefan Andrei.

The discussions between the two foreign ministers ranged over bilateral relations and various international issues, as well as over the scheduled visit by President Ceausescu to Indonesia next November at the invitation of President Suharto. Mokhtar at the meeting also gave a detailed explanation about East Timor, the former Portuguese colony which has been integrated into the Indonesian republic, and the Kampuchean problem while his host gave his government's views on various East-West problems, disarmament, the situation in Europe and in the Balkans. Various aspects of the North-South dialogue and the latest developments in the Middle East were also touched upon.

While in Bucharest, Mokhtar also met with members of the international law and international relations association, and attended a social get-together with the Indonesian community now numbering some 50 members in Romania.

[Text] Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja this afternoon returned home after visits to Austria and Romania. In Austria the minister attended the West Europe-ASEAN dialogue while his visit to Romania was at the invitation of Foreign Minister Stefan Andrei.

On arrival at the Jakarta Halim Perdanakusuma Airport, Minister Mokhtar told newsmen that his talks with Austrian leaders dealt with national and regional problems and international questions related to disarmament. At his talks with the Romanian leaders, President Ceausescu suggested the holding of a summit meeting of developing countries to launch economic development. In response to questions by newsmen on the Vietnamese plan to partly withdraw its forces from Kampuchea, Minister Mokhtar said the decision was an encouraging development.

NEW STRAITS TIMES RAPS U.S. STANCE ON LOS TREATY

BK130937 Kuala Lumpur NEW STRAITS TIMES in English 12 Jul 82 p 20

[Editorial: "Spoilsport"]

[Text] The United States is behaving like a spoilt child who, unable to get his own way, refuses to take part and thereby disrupts further play. Its decision not to sign the United Nations Law of the Sea Treaty can only be seen as a petulant act designed to twist the arms of the Third World countries which have already given substantial concessions to industrialised nations. No doubt the U.S. hopes that an overriding concern that the treaty should be concluded this year will lead to Third World countries softening their stand on the 230 changes to the original draft proposed by the Reagan administration. The refusal to sign is probably backed by a belief that the treaty will have little effect without U.S. support.

This time, the Reagan administration has gone too far in its delaying tactics and bullying stance. Third World countries are unlikely to shift from their stand with regard to the provisions governing seabed mining. They are in fact likely to maintain the decision made earlier to go ahead despite American uncooperativeness. A warning too has been sounded that Western firms attempting to operate outside the terms of the treaty would face action via the World Court. This, with reference to the possibility of Western countries signing a 'mini treaty' of their own, under which they recognise one another's right to mine the seabed.

Self-seeking ventures such as these, the U.S. and its allies must realise, can do nothing but damage their credibility on the international front. The United States, for one, may allege that the draft imposes limits on production and makes mandatory the transfer of knowledge and mineral riches to other countries. But a 'mini treaty' runs counter to the very concept endorsed by the U.S. -- that the riches of the deep seabed are the common heritage of mankind. To date the U.S. has been mainly responsible for the fractious state of negotiations. It is time this 'spoilt child' grew up and learnt that the key in negotiations is not threats but compromises.

GHAZALI WELCOMES FORMATION OF CGDK

[Text] Malaysia regards the formation of the coalition government of Kampuchea as a significant milestone for a comprehensive settlement of the Kampuchean issue. It will help restore the independence, sovereignty and the honor of the Kampuchean people in accordance with international law and the UN Charter.

The minister of foreign affairs, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, in welcoming the formation of the coalition government, says it reflects the will and efforts of the Kampucheans to liberate their country from continued military occupation by foreign forces. It will also help in the implementation of the declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchea and the relevant UN resolutions. In a statement, the minister says responsibilities and tasks of the three leaders of the coalition are heavy and will continue to be so. He hoped the world governments will extend their support and cooperation to the coalition. This will enhance their efforts toward achieving its objectives which will lead to regional peace and stability.

TRIAL OF CULTURE MINISTER TO BEGIN 11 OCT

[Text] The trial of the minister of culture, youth and sports, Datuk Mokhtar Hashim, and four others on a murder charge will begin in the Kuala Lumpur High Court on 11 October. The date was fixed when the case was mentioned in a High Court this morning. The case will be heard from the 11th to the end of October.

Datuk Mokhtar and four others are charged with murdering a former speaker of the Negri Sembilan state legislative assembly, Datuk Mohamad Taha. They are alleged to have committed the offense on 14 April.

SPOKESMAN COMMENTS ON VIETNAM'S WITHDRAWAL OFFER

BK091358 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1300 GMT 9 Jul 82

[Text] Several countries have expressed doubt about Vietnam's offer to withdraw a significant number of its troops from Kampuchea. They said only a total pullout could bring about the solution to the Kampuchean problem. A spokesman of the Singapore Foreign Ministry noted that the offer did not refer to the number of troops to be withdrawn and how the withdrawal was to be made, especially on how it was to be verified and supervised. He said there is supposed to be a commitment to total withdrawal. Actual withdrawal could take place over a period of time which could be verified and supervised by an international body such as the United Nations. On the proposal to convene an international conference, the spokesman said Singapore considered that the International Conference on Kampuchea had already provided a suitable forum to discuss the Kampuchean issue and Vietnam had been invited to participate in this conference.

STRAITS TIMES Comment

BK100857 Singapore THE STRAITS TIMES in English 9 Jul 82 p 16

[Editorial: "A Loud and Cynical No"]

[Text] Should cynicism yield to blind hope and open-mindedness in response to the Vietnamese-inspired proposal to withdraw Vietnamese troops from Cambodia, partially and unilaterally, this month? As has been the case for the last four years or so, cynicism is by far the most sensible and logical reaction until time and Vietnamese sincerity prove this otherwise.

Hanoi, through the foreign ministers of Vietnam and Laos and the so-called foreign minister of the Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin regime, on Wednesday announced, among other sundry things, that it would be pulling out some troops from Cambodia. For the unwary and the unitiated, this dramatic declaration must sound like the break-through which all who are interested in the Cambodian problem have been fighting and waiting anxiously for. Better, or worse, still, for the hopeful and the open-minded, the Ho Chi Minh City "communique" could even appear to be some kind of signal that Hanoi is at last softening its stand on Cambodia. Whether that is so remains to be seen. But, meanwhile, the propaganda exercise which Hanoi is mounting, partly as an obvious leadup to the September non-aligned summit conference in Baghdad, Iraq, and the annual United Nations General Assembly meeting in October and partly to coincide with Prince Norodom Sihanouk's morale-boosting journey to his homeland, should not be left unanswered.

The last Vietnamese "proposal" to pull out its troops, made two years ago, was couched in a Catch-22 package, which was not even relevant to ASEAN's arguments vis-a-vis Cambodia. Hanoi said it would withdraw troops if China stopped being a threat to the peace and security of Vietnam and Cambodia and provided the Heng Samrin regime, which is, of course, answerable to Hanoi, requested the withdrawal. At another time, the disarming of Khmer Rouge troops was made a condition. Suddenly, out of the blue, we have this seemingly new and highly reasonable-sounding no-condition proposal of partial withdrawal. What is not out of the blue and never changes its hue, before or now, is Vietnamese intransigence over the presence of its troops in Cambodian soil. Hanoi is not even proposing partial troop withdrawal within the framework of a total withdrawal, which is the only acceptable ultimate solution. It is merely turning a core issue into a negotiable commodity and a necessity (since troop retreat-renewal can be part of military strategy) into a magnificent propaganda gesture. Hanoi knows full well, anyway, that it is well-nigh impractical to supervise such an ambiguous withdrawal and that the best possible reply to the proposal is a cynical, loud and unambiguous no.

SAKURAUCHI: NO SUPPORT FOR SOVIET NUCLEAR PROPOSAL

[Text] Tokyo, July 15, KYODO -- Japan will not support a Soviet proposal calling for the renunciation of the use of nuclear weapons, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Thursday.

Sakurauchi spelled out the government position in a speech delivered in Tokyo, adding that the Soviet proposal has little meaning unless Moscow also declares its willingness to refrain from using its overwhelming conventional forces. "We must be aware of the reality that the Soviet Union has deployed SS-20 missiles in the Far East and that the security of Japan comes under the protection of the U.S. nuclear umbrella," Sakurauchi told the audience.

The Soviet Union issued a pledge not to be the first to mount a nuclear strike at the just-ended U.N. disarmament conference, and urged all nuclear powers to renounce their right to launch a nuclear attack in any armed conflict.

Japan has joined the United States and other Western allies in discounting the Soviet proposal, apparently because of the overwhelming Soviet superiority in conventional forces. "Unless the Soviet Union also declares its willingness to refrain from using its conventional forces, there is little meaning in the Soviet proposal not to use nuclear weapons," Sakurauchi said.

Sakurauchi's remarks were seen as an indication Japan would not support a "no nuclear strike" resolution expected to be tabled at the U.N. General Assembly this fall.

Sakurauchi also noted that NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organization) forces in Western Europe rely on the nuclear option as a deterrent against superior Soviet conventional forces deployed on the European front. As for the Far East, Sakurauchi said, "We must also bear in mind the nuclear deterrence provided by the Japan-U.S. security pact in view of the Soviet deployment of SS-20's and Backfire bombers." Backfires are long-range strategic bombers that have an operational range which includes the whole of Japan from staging bases in the Soviet Far East.

Sakurauchi rapped the Soviet Union for launching a massive arms buildup under the cover of detente and for bringing pressure to bear in Afghanistan and Poland through its overwhelming superiority in conventional forces.

NTT DEVELOPS SATELLITE COMMUNICATIONS TECHNOLOGY

OW090502 Tokyo KYODO in English 0436 GMT 9 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 9, KYODO -- Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Public Corp. [NTT] has developed the technology to use a communications satellite for four-beam communications networks over the Japanese archipelago, officials said Friday.

The four-beam satellite communications system has been developed in preparation for launching a one-ton satellite in the future. The achievement reflects the high level of Japan's technology in multibeam satellite communications systems, they said.

The latest system emitting several beams from a single satellite has more advantages than the current single-beam system; radio stations on the ground will be able to receive more electric waves, the volume of electric transmission will be increased, the ground radio stations will be made smaller, and the system can make use of the static satellite orbit effectively.

In accordance with its information network system (INS), the public corporation is planning to launch a one-ton satellite called INS Satellite No. 1 having 25,000 telephone circuits in 1988 and another one of 3- to 4-ton class, INS Satellite No. 2 with 100,000 telephone circuits, some time between 1992 and 1995.

A number of organizations in other countries also have plans to launch similar satellites. Western Union of the United States is reportedly going to launch a seven-beam communications satellite next year, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) is planning to have its own satellite. The International Telecommunication Satellite Consortium (INTELSAT), and the telecommunications ministries of Italy and West Germany are also promoting similar schemes.

The Japanese public corporation has shifted its attention to the development of various equipment to be used for a gigantic multibeam satellite communications system -- 30-beam satellite communications system -- over Japan, officials said.

YEN CREDIT TO BURMA -- Tokyo, 6 Jul, KYODO -- Japan said yen 40,254 million in yen credit would be granted to Burma for fiscal 1982, ending 31 March 1983. The figure was cited by a representative of the Japanese Government at a conference on aid for the Southeast Asian country held at the Foreign Ministry in Tokyo. The conference was attended by 12 aid-giving countries and Burma. At the meeting, Burma's economy, its economic plan, an evaluation of aid given so far, and the need for new aid were discussed. The yen credit is intended to help finance Burma's overall LPG (liquefied petroleum gas) project, national railways modernization and other undertakings. The credit is also aimed at helping finance Burma's procurement of farm machinery parts and materials necessary for agricultural development. [Text] [Tokyo KYODO in English 1228 GMT 6 Jul 82 OW]

AID TO NEPAL -- Tokyo, 7 Jul, KYODO -- Japan will give yen 1,850 million (about dollar 7 million) in aid to Nepal for expansion of Tribhuban University Teaching Hospital, the Foreign Ministry said Wednesday. It said diplomatic notes on the grant were exchanged in Katmandu between officials of the two governments. The Nepalese Government wants to expand the hospital to train medical personnel, upgrade medical techniques and offer better medical services to the people. Japan in fiscal 1981 extended yen 1,250 million for the outpatient clinic, administration building and other facilities at the hospital. The new aid is intended for a surgical ward, a general ward and other facilities. [Text] [Tokyo KYODO in English 0556 GMT 7 Jul 82 OW]

AID TO GUINEA -- Tokyo, Jun 30, KYODO -- Japan will extend a yen 6.15 billion loan to Guinea to help the West African country expand its facilities for marine transport of bauxite, the Foreign Ministry announced Wednesday. The two countries exchanged diplomatic notes on the aid in Tokyo Wednesday. The yen credit will be used to enable Guinea to purchase vessels for transporting bauxite, largest Guinean export commodity, officials said. The loan will be repayable over 20 years including a five-year grace period and with annual interest rate of 2.5 percent. This is the first Japanese yen loan extended to the People's Revolutionary Republic of Guinea, they said. [Text] [Tokyo KYODO in English 0725 GMT 30 Jun 82 OW]

AID TO PARAGUAY -- Tokyo, Jun 30, KYODO -- Japan has pledged to extend yen 9,251 million (about dollar 40 million) in yen loans to Paraguay for its national telecommunications expansion project, the Foreign Ministry said Wednesday. It said the project, consisting of an international subscriber dialing system, a digital telephone switching system and a rural telephone system in the city of Asuncion, is designed to improve the overall telecommunications network of that country. Notes concerning the yen loan will be exchanged after consultations with Paraguay, the ministry added. [Text] [Tokyo KYODO in English 1108 GMT 30 Jun 82 OW]

BURMESE OFFICIAL'S MESSAGE THANKS KIM IL-SONG

PYONGYANG MEETING OPENS CUBAN SOLIDARITY MONTH

SK110948 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0903 GMT 11 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 11 (KCNA) -- A "month of solidarity with the Cuban people" was opened at a meeting held Saturday at the Chollima House of Culture on the occasion of the 29th anniversary of the armed uprising of the Cuban people. Speaking at the meeting, Chong Song-nam, chairman of the Korea-Cuba Solidarity Committee and minister of external economic affairs, said:

On July 26, 29 years ago, the Cuban revolutionaries under the guidance of Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz, the supreme leader of the Cuban revolution, launched a daring operation of attack on the Moncada Barracks, a military fortress of the Batista dictatorial regime, to rouse the Cuban people to a sacred war for destroying the bulwark of dictatorship and finally won victory in the revolution in 1959.

He recalled that after the victory of the revolution the cuban people have dynamically hastened the revolution and construction and honorably defended the sovereignty and dignity of the country, frustrating the U.S. imperialists aggression and subversive activities and sabotage.

The Korean people will as in the past continue to strive for further development of the friendly and cooperative relations established between the two peoples and extend invariable support and encouragement to the just struggle of the Cuban people, he declared.

Cuban Ambassador to Korea Wilfredo Rodriguez Cardenas, who was the next speaker, said: Cuba and Korea are two fortresses standing firmly on both hemispheres of the globe for socialism and for peace and progress of the world people. Though the peoples of the two countries live far away from each other, they are closely united. Our people, he said, will always stand by the Korean people who are waging a staunch struggle to smash the criminal manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys the Chon Tu-hwan clique and defend the revolution and will fully support the just struggle of the Korean people for reunifying the divided country.

As our supreme commander said, our people know well that Comrade Kim Il-song is the symbol of the Korean people's struggle for national reunification, he said, and stressed: The party, government and people of Cuba denounce the U.S. imperialist aggression forces presence in South Korea and call for their immediate withdrawal.

NODONG SINMUN ON KWANGJU, PUSAN ARSON TRIALS

[NODONG SINMUN 10 July commentary: "Sordid Treachery by Flunkeyist, Nation-selling Clique"]

[Text] By staging the farce of a court trial in Seoul on 5 July to deal with the arson at the U.S. cultural center in Kwangju, the South Korean military fascist clique sentenced Chong Sun-chol to a jail term of 5 years and 6 months. In Pusan on the same day, the clique held a court trial to handle the arson case at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan and tried 16 persons including Choe Ki-sik.

The trials of those involved in the arsons at the U.S. cultural centers in Kwangju and Pusan are another intolerable challenge to patriotic forces and traitorous acts aimed at blocking the spirit against the United States and for independence rising in South Korea with each passing day and at maintaining colonial rule.

The accused, whom the South Korean puppets have taken into the courtrooms, are patriots who waged a righteous struggle to restore national dignity and sovereignty. The truculent colonial terrorist rule which the U.S. imperialists exercise in South Korea is inflicting many pains and misfortunes on the people. The U.S. imperialists, who sneaked into South Korea as uninvited guests, are trampling underfoot national sovereignty and suppressing and exploiting the South Korean people. They are turning South Korea into a colony and military base while playing master. They are blocking our country's reunification, scheming to perpetuate division and, instigating the puppets to anticommunist confrontation. The only thing that the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule has brought to the South Korean people is political subordination, economic ruin, poverty, lack of rights, national division and the threat of war.

Through the realities of life, the South Korean people clearly know that the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their policy of aggression can never be compatible with national interests and that if the U.S. imperialist aggressors are allowed to remain in the country, the people cannot hope for freedom, national dignity, democratization of society and the country's reunification. In particular, the South Korean people do not forget that the U.S. imperialists are the string-pullers who supplied the puppets with military power and let them brutally murder the Kwangju uprisers and submerge Kwangju in a sea of blood.

To account for that, the South Korean people set fire to the U.S. cultural centers in Kwangju and Pusan and rose up in a resolute struggle demanding, while shouting anti-U.S. slogans, that the U.S. imperialist aggressors withdraw from South Korea. This act should be commended for reflecting the unanimous national aspirations for national dignity and sovereignty and never be persecuted.

This notwithstanding, the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique imprisoned, persecuted and tortured patriotic people by making a wholesale roundup while spreading a huge police dragnet across South Korea and even offering rewards. At last, the clique has gone so far as to hold murderous court trials and pass a heavy sentence on the people. Suppressing with guns and bayonets the righteous struggle to oppose the outside forces' aggression and restore the lost national dignity and sovereignty and bringing the patriots to trial and persecuting them with a heavy penalty are flunkeyist, nation-selling acts to block the people's righteous advance and maintain South Korea under the colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists. These are treacherous acts which only pro-U.S. stooges -- who ignore the national interest but are maintaining their life under the aegis of an outside force -- could dare commit.

No matter how it threatens people with court trials by wielding guns and bayonets, the Chon Tu-hwan ring can never block the struggle against the United States and for national salvation that is burning and spreading among the people. This is clearly established by the fact that since the arson at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan, the anti-U.S. struggle has continued in Seoul, Chungchon and various places in South Korea. The U.S. flag was even burned.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique should not run amok without reason. It should act with discretion. The more the puppets run wild, the more fuel it will add to the fire. The Chon Tu-hwan ring should stop suppressing the people and step down from power. The murderous court trials against the patriotic people in Kwangju and Pusan should be suspended immediately and they should be unconditionally released.

The ones who should be judged and punished by the people are the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique, a flunkeyist, nation-selling group which is selling the national sovereignty to the U.S. imperialist aggressors. The South Korean people will by all means punish the nation-sellers.

CATHOLICS PROTEST PUSAN ARSONISTS' TRIAL

[Text] Pyongyang, July 12 (KCNA) -- 200 South Korean Catholics assembled in front of the puppet Pusan District Court on July 10 and protested against the fascist trial of those involved in the arson at the "American Cultural Centre" in the city, according to a foreign press report. In their signing and collective prayers, they expressed indignation at the fascist outrages of the puppet clique.

The defendants include priest Choe Ki-sik arrested by the fascist clique for having given shelter to the patriotic youths who set fire to the "American Cultural Centre."

The report points out that his arrest and subsequent police operations against a number of others by the fascist clique was the signal for the South Korean Catholics openly to make common cause with other believers of conscience in the anti-"government" action. According to it, Father Ham Se-ung, a member of the South Korean "Bishops Justice and Peace Committee," defends the arson at the "American Cultural Centre" by patriotic youths, calling it a "symbolic act against an unjust and inhuman society."

Cardinal Kim Su-hwan of South Korea said: "The more the government represses students for criticising it, the more violent they tend to be. The feeling of deprivation felt by workers, more and more students being radicalised under official repression -- all this creates more unrest."

The Catholics, the report says, "are demanding a general amnesty for all political detainees, including opposition politician Kim Tae-chung."

CPRF OPPOSES NEW SOUTH KOREAN POLICE MEASURES

SK121123 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1034 GMT 12 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 12 (KCNA) -- The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique announced that it would inaugurate "crime prevention walking patrol corps" consisting of 174 men each -- 5 policemen and 169 combat police corps men -- from July 10 at 49 police stations in 10 cities including Seoul, Pusan and Kwangju, according to a report.

In the meantime, the puppet police headquarters announced its decision to change the two-shift service system into a three-shift service system this year and next year at police boxes in such large cities as Seoul, Pusan, Taegu and Kwangju and post 5 more policemen at each police box.

The Secretariat of the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF] in its Information No. 225 on July 10 branded the South Korean puppets scheme to largely increase the puppet police force as an unpardonable criminal act to stamp out the sentiments of struggle against U.S. imperialism and for independence rapidly growing among the South Korean people.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan should be clearly mindful that if he expanded the repressive machine and repressive force and persisted in the treacherous act of suppressing the people in an effort to prolong his remaining days as a despicable colonial puppet of the U.S. imperialists, depending upon outside forces, he would precipitate his own doom more miserable than that of the preceding dictator, declares the information.

KCNA REPORTS FIRST HALF ECONOMIC SUCCESS

[Text] Pyongyang, July 9 (KCNA) -- The gross industrial output value plan for the first half of this year was carried out at 105 per cent in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. In this period the industrial production increased 17 per cent as against the same period of last year.

The workers and three-revolution team members in the industrial domain effected collective innovations at all units to adorn with feats of labour this year which greeted the 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. As a result, a substantial increase was achieved in the production of electricity, coal, minerals, steel, rolled steel, machinery, chemical fertilizers, chemical fibres, cement, fabrics, shoes and other major industrial goods.

The Tower of Chuche Idea and the Arch of Triumph were built to be immortal monumental edifices. Also completed in this period was the construction of such monumental buildings and establishments of the era of the Workers Party as the Kim Il-song stadium, the Grand People's Study House, the Pyongyang Department Store No. 1, the Mangyongdae Fun-Fair, ice rink and the Chongnyu Restaurant.

Besides, the first stage project of the August 2 cement factory was completed, the Sodusu Power Station No. 3, the Pyongyang Aeguk Medicine Packing Material Factory, the Aeguk Paper-Making Mill and many other factories and workshops were built and put into operation.

This period witnessed the completion of railway electrification in the Haeju-Sariwon and the Hoeryong-Komusan sections, the launching of 14,000-ton cargo ship "Yonggunbong" and the manufacture of many new type modern machines and equipment including "Chaju-82" lorries and 70 metre gantry planer.

Four major nature-remaking projects including tideland reclamation and the Nampo Lock Gate progressed successfully and the building of the Chongnyong and Moksong Reservoirs was completed.

Housing construction was pushed ahead vigorously in different parts of the country. In particular, modern multi-storeyed flats for thousands of families were built along the Munsu Street and provided to working people.

These proud successes show a high degree of revolutionary enthusiasm of our working people who are accelerating the socialist construction under the wise guidance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il and the correctness of the economic policy of our party and demonstrate the might of our independent national economy and the advantages of the new system of industrial guidance.

ROK REACTS TO SEIZURE OF FISHING BOAT

Return to Port Ordered

SK141231 Seoul YONHAP in English 1226 GMT 14 Jul 82

[Text] Sokcho, Korea, July 14 (YONHAP) -- South Korea's fisheries office Wednesday ordered cuttle fishing boats that had finished operations at Taewatoe fishing ground on the high seas off the east coast to return to their registry ports and those still in operation to enter a port at Ullung-do Island, 220 km southeast of here.

A total of 310 fishing boats were affected by the order, issued in the wake of Tuesday's abduction of a South Korean vessel by the North Korean navy in international waters 170 miles northeast of Ullung-do.

The fisheries office said that the ships anchoring in Ullung-do will receive safety instructions from fisheries office personnel. As of 5:00 P.M. Wednesday, 114 fishing boats had docked in Ullung-do while the reminaing vessels are being contacted by radio, an official said.

Countermeasures Sought

[Text] The government has been considering taking "several measures" in connection with the recent abduction of a South Korea fishing boat (Masan-Ho No.5) with 35 fishermen aboard by North Korean naval patrol boats on the high seas near Ullung-do Island, it was learned at the Foreign Ministry yesterday.

Ministry sources revealed that there had been no official reaction from Pyongyang regarding the incident and the government would take appropriate steps in case there was an official reaction from North Korea.

Seizure Deplored

[Editorial: "Aggravating Provocations Against the South -- Sinister Plot Involved in the Abduction of the Fishing Vessel and Successive Firing Incidents"]

[Excerpts] The puppet North Korea has perpetrated again the bestial act of pirating our fishing boat on the high seas. The puppet North committed this bestial act in the same place it attempted to kidnap the Songjin No. 5 on 5 July, indiscriminately firing on it as it engaged in fishing operations on the high seas some 200 miles northeast of Ullung-Do Islands.

We cannot repress our indignation against such an illegal outrage by the puppet North. The puppet North must repatriate the fishing boat without delay. The abduction of the fishing boat was a piratic act, a clear violation of the armistice agreement. This military provocation by the puppet North draws our attention in particular as it is timed to coincide with the puppet North's conducting of a large-scale propaganda effort in connection with the 10th anniversary of the publication of the 4 July joint communique. Its aim is to impute responsibility for the rupture of the intra-Korean dialogue to the ROK and the United States. In other words, the puppet North has answered our efforts to resume the dialogue between the North and South Korea with the kidnapping of the fishing vessel and shooting provocations.

Specialist analysis commonly shows that the puppet North Korea, in an effort to resolve its inner conflict and agony, may run the risk of war. In addition, TONGIL ILBO has recently reported that the puppet North has created a so-called five-man council led by Kim Chong-il, which has drastically reorganized its special unit for infiltration into South Korea and has readjusted its operation network.

What is more surprising is that, to cause turmoil in South Korea this September through October, the puppet North has already infiltrated agents to begin subversive operations in South Korea and established 5 or 6 centers in Japan for subversive operations. The puppet North has committed such maneuvers because of its bellicose nature.

It goes without saying that we should consolidate our defense posture to cope with the puppet North's strategies against us. We firmly believe that measures to secure fishing operations -- in particular, a watertight naval defense posture -- will allow us to smash the puppet North's frequent sea provocations on the spot.

We have repeatedly urged that the puppet North stop its maneuvers to abduct our fishing vessels and repatriate the 450 fishermen, and needless to say, of the crew of the Masan-ho No. 5.

TIMES WARNS OF INCREASED NORTHERN PROVOCATION

[Editorial: "Alert Against North"]

[Text] Indications are that the North Korean regime is seeking a drastic change in its policy toward the republic in the South by stepping up its subversive and provocative acts, probably to an unprecedented degree.

We immediately construe such a conspicuous symptom as shown in the recent series of armed provocations along the truce line, for example, may have been atributable to the tension-ridden domestic situation within North Korean society, particularly in connection with so-called "Kim dynasty system" through which the North Korean chieftain, Kim Il-song, is going to turn over power to his son, Chong-il, in the future.

Nevertheless, this aspect is seemingly not sufficient to explain fully the current developments on the Korean Peninsula, where the communists in the North are bent upon outright provocations and armed challenges against the South in a most ominous manner.

Backing up this belief are remarks made by President Chon Tu-hwan that North Korea appears to have recently made a shift in its polity to a tough attitude against the South with a large-scale change of both organizations and personnel. Chairing a regular cabinet session at Chongwadae, the presidential office, the chief executive further warned against the danger of North Korean maneuvers for irregular warfare during the summer season. The president at the same time called upon the nation to take steps for the cause of security on the assumption that some North Korean espionage agents might already have infiltrated the South at this time and are engaged in operations.

Coincident with the presidential warning against Pyongyang, we are once again shocked by another maritime provocation by the North on the high seas off the east coast, forcibly taking our fishermen and their boat to the North. According to an announcement by the fisheries office, 35 fishermen aboard a 114.5-ton fishing boat were abducted by North Korean naval vessels to the North Tuesday while they were engaged in peaceful fishing operations on international waters some 272 kilometers or 170 miles northeast of Ullung-do Island. The announcement revealed that four North Korean soldiers armed with rifles boarded the South Korean fishing vessel and took the fishermen and the boat to the North at the time of the incident.

We take note that the abduction of the Masan No. 5 took place no more than a week after North Korean naval vessels attempted to seize the 145-ton Songjin No. 5, which was also engaged in fishing operations on the high seas, not far from the waters where the latest incident occurred. As we anticipated, the successive maritime incidents of this nature are considered part of a well-calculated North Korean plot to intensify its armed provocations against us by all means.

We recall that North Korean armed guards assigned to the armistice line have perpetrated firing incidents on the South Korean guardposts across the Demilitarized Zone on a total of four occasions this year at short intervals. Our keen attention has also been drawn to the fact that the Pyongyang clique is engaged in overt violations of the armistice accord these days to a marked extent.

All this calls for the immediate molding of a water-tight security posture in the south, so that the North Korean infiltrators will find no room to undermine the South Korean community. Citizens in the rear areas are particularly placed on alert against sneaking armed guerrillas and espionage agents at this juncture, while guarding by themselves all key government and industrial establishments against them tightly and effectively.

HANGUK ILBO: SHOOTINGS COVER FOR INFILTRATION

[Editorial: "The North's Provocations Have Been Focused on the Eastern Coastal Area -- We Watch the New Aspect of Gunfire in the Demilitarized Zone"]

[Excerpts] The North Korean puppets have once again committed shooting provocations in the eastern frontline sector. According to the Ministry of National Defense, the North Korean puppet army on 9 July fired at the outpost of our side from a spot 9 km north of Chojin, Hyonnae-myon, Kosong County, Kwangwon Province in the eastern coastal area. The gunfire continued for a few minutes, and our troops fired back in self-defense. Our side sustained no damage.

What is the North Korean puppets' hidden intention in repeatedly committing shooting provocations? Are they trying to profit by playing with fire around a powderkeg? No one knows their dark intention. Many specialists in international affairs unanimously say that they are unpredictable. What is obvious is that they do not hesitate to commit any action whatsoever to achieve their ends. They are a group which seeks an opportunity to engage in war adventure and does not hesitate to build a communist dynasty.

Presumably, the motives of the shooting provocations are to establish a monarchical system, to divert the attention of the people from internal strife and discontent caused by economic depression, to maintain tension on the Military Demarcation Line to maintain their ruling system, make war preparations and to bring into relief tension on the Korean Peninsula when a decision has been made on Seoul's hosting the 1988 Olympics and the 1986 Asian games.

Shooting incidents have occurred every month since April this year. Noteworthy is the fact that these incidents have been focused in the eastern frontline sector. The recent firing incident occurred at the spot where there was firing on 7 June. Four days prior to this incident, an attempt was made to kidnap our fishing boat on the sea off the spot where this firing occurred. On 15 May, an armed North Korean puppet agent was shot to death by our troops on this spot while trying to infiltrate into South Korea. For the first time, the North Korean puppets accepted the body of this agent at Panmunjom.

It appears that the convergence of provocations on a spot has some cause. We can presume that their shootings are a feint operation designed to conceal their wicked scheme. Reviewing the aspect of the recent shooting incident, we come upon the idea that they are trying to conceal their agent infiltration operations against South Korea during the verdant season. The mountain ranges and coasts in this area are their favorite infiltration route. In the summer of the year before the Korean war broke out, there were infiltrations into the Taebaek and Sobaek Mountain region of a large number of armed North Korean agents through this route.

It is a summer vacation season. We appreciate the efforts of young soldiers on the frontline, who are defending the country, hearing gunfire and trying to forget summer vacation season.

HERALD REPORTS ON NORTH'S NATIONWIDE DROUGHT

[Text] The current drought has also hit all over North Korea, according to the NAEWOE PRESS yesterday.

It quoted North Korean radio reports as saying that farmers, workers, public servants and students are being mobilized day and night to supply paddy fields with water.

This is contradictory to their usual propaganda that rice paddies in North Korea are "immune" to any drought thanks to the "self-reliant way of farming" taught by Kim Il-song.

The drought is not regional, but rages across the entire country involving such big cities as Hamhung, Shinuiju, Haeju, Wonsan and Kaesong, NAEWOE said.

HERALD VIEWS JAPANESE DEBATE ON MILITARY

[Editorial: "Japan's No-War Constitution"]

[Text] An active debate taking place in Japan's ruling Liberal Democratic Party over the so-called no-war clause of the Japanese Constitution strikes us that times have changed. Any talk about changing the "peace constitution" had long been a strict taboo in postwar Japan. Probably the Japanese dragged their feet too long.

The nature, status and size of Japan's military might are highly political and emotional issues for both the Japanese themselves and their neighbors and one-time adversaries near and far. Many of them have good reason to have misgivings about Japan rearming itself to formidable proportions with constitutional blessings for they had suffered much from the old war machine of imperial Japan.

However, things have changed with time. The basic law of Japan authored by the American military government may have overlived itself after having undone many of the wrongs committed under its preceding imperial constitution. This is particularly so as far as the provision on war is concerned.

A subcommittee of Japan's ruling party has drafted an amendment to Article 9 of the Japanese Constitution which renounces war and possession of military power as a right of the nation and means of settling international disputes. The draft does not attempt a change in the basic pacifist orientation of Japan spelled out in the first clause of the no-war provision.

To be affected is the second clause that negates the right of belligerency of the state and prohibits the maintenance of armed forces. The draft revision explicitly entitles Japan to have self-defense forces to preserve the peace, independence and security of Japan, giving the supreme command of the military to the prime minister who could mobilize troops.

The move of the conservative yet practically minded wing of the Liberal Democratic Party to amend the no-war clause is reflective of the recent trend of Japanese opinion toward the integrity and security of their country. Developments in today's world have not been favorable for wishful thinking that no war will be there no matter what.

The fact of the matter is that Japan has kept a sizeable standing army in the name of the self-defense corps. It became necessary to legitimize and clarify the role of the military establishment. It is natural for a sovereign nation to maintain an army of its own for nothing other than its defense and survival. Demands are rising that Japan should shoulder a greater defense burden as an economic giant in the cause of regional stability and peace.

Many believe the time has come for Japan to match its Constitution and armed forces to the realities of the day. Legitimate armed potential of a nation is not to blame in itself.

What matters is how and for what that potential is harnessed and allowed to run amuck. The past misdeeds of aggression and expansion by Japan before 1945 are the last thing to be repeated. In rewriting its Constitution, Tokyo may do well to make former victims of its war days rest assured of its tame and defensive character.

Armed conflicts come not out of legal rhetoric but out of the minds of men -- their miscalculations and caprices. Lack of military preparedness may also result in war. Adequate and well-regulated soldiers and arsenals are necessary everywhere.

TONG-A ILBO Comment

[Editorial: "Japan's Move To Revise Its Peace Constitution"]

[Excerpts] On 6 July a subcommittee of the joint committee of the constitution review body of the Japanese ruling party, the Liberal Democratic Party [LDP], in its move to revise the Japanese Constitution, submitted to the joint committee a draft of a revision to amend the constitution by deleting Item 2, Article 9 of the present Constitution. This section does not recognize the right of belligerency against other countries. An amendment is also sought for legitimizing the maintenance of the Self-Defense Forces as a regular army, strengthening the prime minister's right to command and supervise the Self-Defense Forces and enacting regulations on the Self-Defense Forces' defense commitment.

Controversy has continued in Japan over the interpretation of Article 9 of the Japanese Constitution -- that is, over the propriety of the maintenance of Japan's self-defense capability -- along with lawsuits over the constitutionality of the Self-Defense Forces. We interpret this move as an effort to eliminate ambiguity. However, deletion of Article 9 of the Constitution will lead to recognizing the right of belligerency, running counter to the spirit of the present Constitution and paving the way toward army, navy and air force contingents.

The movement for constitutional revision initiated by right-wing forces in the party will not be received well by circles supporting the party, who have been encouraged by the rapid growth of the Japanese economy in the postwar period. They could become estranged from the party, disgusted by a tilt toward a right-wing course. We believe that Japan should understand that this move will cause Southeast Asian countries, as well as the ROK, which still have bitter memories of the rule of Japanese imperialism, some misunderstanding and anxiety.

To achieve independence externally, a nation needs to maintain a sound defense. The constitutionality of the Self-Defense Forces can be guaranteed in the framework of the present Constitution by not interpreting the constitution too strictly. We believe there is no need for Japan to cause trouble and disputes at home and abroad by revising the constitution.

NATION REVIEW Report

BK130410 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 13 Jul 82 pp 1, 2

[Text] Democratic Kampuchean President Norodom Sihanouk yesterday promised that his coalition government will do its best to strengthen relations with the Thai Government and avoid causing any difficulties to Thailand.

"I am a president without dictatorial power...it is not in my power to decide in one way or another," Prince Sihanouk said. Throughout the one-hour long press conference, Prince Sihanouk emphasized that his role in the coalition government is just a "figurehead president."

But he said he could definitely speak for all the three factions in his coalition that they all sincerely want to strengthen ties with the Thai Government. "I know their feelings...they are all very grateful to Thailand...and that they will not cause difficulty to Thailand," Prince Sihanouk said.

Citing a Kampuchean proverb about genuine friends could be distinguished from false ones in time of hardships, Prince Sihanouk added that "Thailand has turned out to be a friend in deed." Thailand, he noted, has sheltered a large number of displaced Kampucheans.

"We have found a second home in Thailand," said the Prince who arrived in Bangkok on July 3 with an entourage which included his wife Princess Monique.

Turning on Vietnam, Prince Sihanouk first lashed out at Vietnamese leaders, calling them "Hitlers," but later urged them "in a friendly fashion" to join the International Conference on Kampuchea (ICK) to find peaceful solutions to the Kampuchean problem.

Prince Sihanouk recalled how he was rebuffed by Vietnamese leaders when he tried to contact them during 1979-1981. "They refused to deal with me... now it is too late (he has joined the coalition)," Prince Sihanouk said. On the one hand, Prince Sihanouk charged that the "Vietnamization of Kampuchea" is an attempt by "Hitlers in Hanoi" to wipe out Kampuchea from the world map and universal history. The Vietnamese proposal on a partial withdrawal from Kampuchea, Prince Sihanouk said, is like the Hitler's ploy used in luring the world into appeasement prior to the outbreak of World War II. "Hitler is alive in Hanoi," Prince Sihanouk added.

On the other hand, the prince did not completely rule out a non-military solution to the Kampuchean question. If Hanoi comes up with new and concrete proposals, his coalition government will certainly examine them, he said.

He also urged Vietnam to take part in the ICK. "I invited Vietnam in a friendly fashion, without hatred, to the new ICK in New York as soon as possible," he said, adding that the Soviet Union is also welcome at the conference which has earlier endorsed the UN resolutions calling for a complete withdrawal of foreign forces from Kampuchea and a UN-supervised general election.

Several questions centered on the viability of his alliance with his former arch enemy, the Khmer Rouge. To these questions, Prince Sihanouk repeated a familiar line of reasoning that the necessity of defeating the Vietnamese aggressors takes precedent over all other interfaction feuds and personal animosity.

He admitted he had to persuade KPNLF leader Son Sann who had strong grudge against the Khmer Rouge to join the tripartite coalition.

Asked why he didn't deal with the Vietnam-backed Heng Samrin regime in Phnom Penh which has become an arch enemy of the Khmer Rouge, Prince Sihanouk replied that Heng Samrin had rejected him first. "Heng Samrin rejected me and Son Sann.... How can we cooperate with him?" he asked. Asked whether Heng Samrin will be invited to the new ICK, Prince Sihanouk said he has to consult his coalition before answering this question.

Prince Sihanouk also said he is a "realist" in the sense that he knows his mission of liberating Kampuchea is an arduous task. "It will take a long way to go to Phnom Penh," he admitted. He added that he is not an "astrologer," therefore, he cannot tell how long it will take his coalition to accomplish the mission.

Prince Sihanouk will leave for China on Friday. He also plans to visit North Korea, Western Europe, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, and the United States. He said he has not received any official invitation from most of these countries but he hopes to go there on private visits.

Prince Sihanouk said he hopes to meet with President Ronald Reagan if possible. If not, he would still be happy to meet with the U.S. Secreatary of State-designate George Shultz while he is in New York attending the UN General Assembly in September.

The United States has announced that it will not give any aid to the Khmer Rouge even though it has expressed support for the coalition. To this, Prince Sihanouk said, "The donors' will has to be respected." He explained that in his capacity as the coalition president, he can only ask for aid for the whole coalition. He will leave it to the donors' discretion when it comes to the nature and conditions of the aid.

The Khmer Rouge has only one voice in the coalition; it is very strong militarily but very weak politically and diplomatically, Prince Sihanouk evaluated. His Moulinaka faction and Son Sann's group constitute "two voices of the nationalist" in the coalition, Prince Sihanouk added.

He pointed out that the nationalist forces need a lot more military aid in order that "we may have a good balance of force vis-a-vis the party (the Khmer Rouge)." "I am for peace not war. I want to be the messenger of peace," he declared at the end of the press conference. "Peace, yes; but not Pax Vietnamica," he concluded.

Radio Report

BK150642 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 15 Jul 82

[Text] His Royal Highness Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the president of the newly formed tripartite coalition government of Kampuchea, gave a press conference after the declaration of the formation in Kampuchea. The press conference here in Bangkok started with the prince expressing his gratitude to the Royal Thai Government and the Thai people.

[Begin Sihanouk recording] (?I wish to thank) the Royal Government of Thailand. Now, today, I have the opportunity to express my sincere gratitude and the gratitude of the government of Democratic Kampuchea for the support, the fraternal support given to the just cause of the Kampuchean people and to our patriotic struggle -- support given so lovely by the Thai press and by the press of all peace-loving, justice-loving, freedom-loving nations. [end recording]

To the question of the public sentiment in Thailand expressed very openly in the press about the Khao Phra Vihan issue, His Royal Highness Prince Norodom answered this way:

[Begin recording] The Royal Government of Thailand, you know, and our government, we both want to have from now on very good relations, fraternal relations. We respect mutually the territorial integrity of each country.

We are two brotherly countries and it seems that the Preah Vihear -- you call Khao Phra Vihan -- case belongs to the past. Let bygones be bygones.

[Question by unidentified journalist] In the event of a free and neutral Cambodia will be able to establish, [as heard] then how would you project, firstly, your relations -- the so-called independent, free and neutral Cambodia's relations -- with Thailand? And, secondly, in following up that Preah Vihear or Khao Phra Vihan question, I would like to ask Your Royal Highness to be more elaborate on this point because it strikes the hearts of a lot of Thai people which still feel that the question of Preah Vihear has been unfairly settled by the International Court of Justice. So that is my question. Thank you very much.

[Answer] As you know, according to the international law we must abide by the decision of the International Court of The Hague. Both Thailand and Cambodia presented the case and we presented to the International Court of The Hague our points of view. We had to let the International Court of The Hague decide and I think that many years already have passed so it seems that now we should not reexamine the question. But if the Government of Democratic Kampuchea and the Royal Government of Thailand agree to reexamine it -- but I am not, I am just a, you know, a president without dictatorial power [laughter]. I was when I presided over the destiny of Cambodia in the years of the 60's. My political party won the general elections. We occupied all the seats in the Parliament so we could take decisions without the concerns of the opposition since the opposition did not get any seats in the Parliament.

But now we are a tripartite coalition government and we also have been promising a general election in Cambodia. Once the Vietnamese withdraw their troops from Cambodia there will be a general election under the supervision of the United Nations Organization and there will be a new government representing the whole Khmer, the whole Kampuchean nation and people. There will be a parliament. We will have a parliamentary system like the one you have here or in Japan, or in France, or in the United Kingdom and other genuine democracies.

So we shall have a new government appointed by the Government of Kampuchea and it is up to the new government, to the future parliament of Kampuchea, to examine the case with your Royal Government of Thailand if both governments, both countries, agree to reexamine the question. It is not in my power now to decide in one way or another. I request your comprehension about this. I have no power; I am just a figurehead. I cannot say this or that about such a very delicate case and we cannot anticipate about the behavior of the future parliament and Government of Kampuchea.

[Question] The Thai Government has been playing apparently a very great role in bringing about the coalition government in its own way, but at the same time the Thai Government is now facing criticism back home from a certain section of the public. No matter how small that section of the public may be, we, I mean, that section of the public will criticize that the Thai Government should not support or even should not come out openly in supporting the coalition government because that will bring in the problem of security at the border against the Vietnamese. And then a certain section of the Thai society feels that we should not at all trust, if you please excuse me, we should not at all trust the good relations that may appear between us and Kampuchea because history has told us that we have ups and downs -- more downs than ups. So, would you give us some kind of a soothing word for the future in case or when the Government of Democratic Kampuchea succeeds in winning its own independence? Or what is the future relations between the Thai Government and the Kampuchean Government, in other words, will there be more downs than ups or the other way around?

[Answer] More ups than downs there will be. More ups and downs I can promise you very solemnly, very solemnly, as the president of the coalition of Kampuchea and without having to consult my colleagues this time because I know their feelings, all of their feelings. I can speak on their behalf and on my behalf that we will remain very grateful to Thailand. We will never try to create difficulties to Thailand because Thailand, in this period of great misery for the Cambodian people, you know, Thailand has done so much for us, for our refugees for instance. Your burden is very, very heavy. We cannot forget that. Before, there were, yes, more downs than ups because there was a misunderstanding and Thailand not yet had the opportunity to show her genuine friendship for us. We tried to normalize relations but at that time we did not succeed since the frontier line could not be recognized, et cetera, et cetera. But let bygones be bygones, please.

But now, looking at the future and even at the present, and as a proverb in Cambodia says: It is in time of misery or hardship that we can make a distinction between genuine friends and false friends. So it appears that Thailand is a very, very genuine friend of the Cambodian people. [end recording]

CEREMONY TO MARK USSR CONSTITUTION HELD

[Text] Phnom Penh, 12 Jul (SPK) -- The USSR Embassy in Kampuchea and the Kampuchea-USSR Friendship Association jointly organized a ceremony in Phnom Penh on Saturday, 10 July, to commemorate the 64th anniversary of the proclamation of the first Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic Constitution (1918). R.D. Dolgopiatov, counselor of the USSR Embassy, briefly recalled the first Russian Constitution and stressed that it bore an important significance following the Great October Revolution.

On that occasion, Dolgopiatov warmly greeted the success of the sixth conference of the Indochinese countries foreign ministers. Min Khin, deputy secretary of the KUFNCD National Council, expressed his high appreciation for the first Russian Constitution which, by its democratic character, responded to the aspirations of the Soviet workers. It corresponded with the situation in Russia and was totally different from that of the capitalists. Min Khin thanked the people of the USSR for their support in the reconstruction and defence of Kampuchea. Phlek Phirun, secretary general of the National Assembly, also attended the ceremony.

On the latter occasion, Souphanouvong thanked the well wishers and conveyed his best wishes of good health to leaders of the three mentioned countries.

MEETING WITH THAILAND REVIEWS FERRY SERVICE

[Text] On the morning of 2 July, a meeting was held [place unspecified] to review the improvement of the Naleng-Nong Khai ferry service, including the dredging of sand from the Mekong River bottom to deepen the ferry crossing path between the two landings. The sand dredging project has been underway since 1981 in accordance with a project to develop the Mekong lower basin. The meeting was attended by, on the Lao side, the acting secretary general of the Lao National Mekong Committee, representatives of the Foreign Affairs Ministry, the Interior Ministry and the Ministry of Communications. Public Works and Transportation, members of the committee in charge of sand dredging, and the chairman of the Vientiane Municipal Administrative Committee, and, on the Thai side, representatives of the Thai National Mekong Committee, the secretariat of the National Mekong Committee and the National Energy Council, and the chief of the Nong Khai hydrographic center. Several local authorities of the Lao and Thai sides were also at the meeting.

Presenting a report on the sand dredging carried out in 1981 and 1982, Khamsing Louanglat, head of the committee in charge of sand dredging, said: During the 1981-82 dry season, with the assistance and coordination of the Secretariat of the Mekong Development Committee, we held a meeting between Lao and Thai engineers to map out a detailed plan with regard to the acquisition of survey instruments and vehicles and sand dredging specialists. The survey plan was conducted and completed within a period of 15 days to cover a 2-km stretch of ferry path.

The sand dredging began on 23 January 1982. By 10 February 1982, ferry barges were able to use this path. The dredging was completed on 13 April. A total of 80 workdays were spent to complete this project. A total amount of 12,200 cubic meters of sand was dredged. At present, normal ferry service between the two landings has been fully resumed. The completion of the project was attributed to the excellent cooperation of the Mekong Development Committees as well as the dedication of the local authorities of both sides. In addition, Lao and Thai specialists also understood each other very well, and strove to overcome all difficulties to fulfill their assignments.

SRV SPY CHARGES CALLED 'GROUNDLESS,' 'FALSE'

BK141441 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 14 Jul 82

[Text] Today's BANGKOK POST, citing AP, reported that Vietnam yesterday accused Thailand, the United States and China of trying to undermine communist governments in Indochina by sending infiltrators from a Vietnamese refugee organization. The Supreme Command Information Office wishes to announce that the accusation by Vietnam is groundless and to confirm that this is only a false story made up by Vietnam itself.

Everyone knows that Vietnam is now harboring big ambitions to annex the countries in Indochina and put them under its control. Initially, Vietnam is trying to act as a big brother who can influence the authorities of these countries, but this has failed. On the contrary, the people in the countries under Vietnamese domination have shown their indignation and discontent by fleeing in large numbers. Some of them, including Vietnamese who risked their lives to flee their country, have mounted activities against Vietnam in various countries. The attempt to undermine the present government or administration of Vietnam either by the Lao, Kampucheans or the Vietnamese themselves is nothing new or strange to the Vietnamese side. But what is happening to the Vietnamese ruling circle is that it is now being scared by its own shadow which has become uglier every day.

Vietnam's senseless bid to clamor about the attempt to undermine communist governments in Indochina clearly indicates its efforts to drag Laos and Kampuchea into being coplaintiffs in this case and to prove that the problems in each country emanate from the same source. This is a political trick by Vietnam as it tried to induce Thailand to get directly involved in the Kampuchean problem by offering a condition to deceive the world people in connection with the withdrawal of its troops from Kampuchea.

'Stalinist Tactics' Denounced

[Editorial: "Shades of Stalin in Hanoi"]

[Text] When Joseph Stalin was alive and conducted them, they were called "show trials," gaudy, obscene kangaroo courts where hapless defendants were made to "confess" real or alleged crimes against the state before cameras. It didn't take long for most of the world to see them for what they were. All that most of them proved is that after months of detention and interrogation and probably torture by unrestricted state police, almost anyone who survives will confess to anything. Today, a more cynical public more often calls them "dog and pony shows." But they remain the same thing to the Stalinists. They "prove" that plots are brewing against the governments involved, thus enabling these governments to take harsher and harsher actions against their citizens and others to ensure their survival in power.

So it was last Tuesday in Hanoi. Under the pretext of presenting "a big, important story," the Vietnamese authorities coerced foreign correspondents to their capital to lend legitimacy to the show of a Vietnamese man who, eight months after his capture, is still undergoing interrogation. The pitiful spectacle of a lone defendant, unrepresented by any type of counsel, "confessing" his alleged plots against the communists to the world, brought more sympathy to him than to the allegedly beleaguered Hanoi authorities.

We cannot begin to know whether Vo Dai Ton is a plotter against the Vietnamese Government. The bare bones of his story, given before he refused to continue his testimony, is believable enough. He said he is opposed to the government of his country and chose to return there from his refugee home in Australia to turn his beliefs into action. A very few Vietnamese have done this in past years.

But now we come to the crux of the matter. The purpose of the Hanoi press conference was to discredit Thailand, with the claim that our government was behind the infiltration of this man and a friend or two into Vietnam. The CIA, naturally, is mentioned as well among the villains.

Now, hold on just a moment. Let common sense prevail, rather than the statements of a man under arrest by Vietnamese secret police, and the statements of those Vietnamese secret police. Thailand shares no border with Vietnam. The man himself said his guides were Laotian resistance members loyal to Gen Vang Pao. He was arrested -- if we are to believe any of this at all -- "on the Lao-Vietnamese border." Where does Thailand fit into this cock-and-bull story?

No responsible official in our country seeks the overthrow of the Hanoi regime. Anyone else who does knows that more than two or three Vietnamese refugees from Australia will be needed to do the job. Who is trying to fool whom here?

These Stalinist attempts at smear by staged confessions are old hat, and Hanoi should know that. Newsmen will know better the next time they are invited to witness a "big story" that must be kept secret. And Vietnam, surely, will learn now that these Stalinist tactics should have been left where they belong: Far, far in the past.

THAI VIOLATIONS OF KHAMPUCHEAN TERRITORY DENIED

REPORTAGE ON REFUGEE ASSISTANCE, PROBLEMS

Annual Conference

BK150300 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 15 Jul 82 pp 1, 2

[Excerpt] Senior Thai officials are expected to lash out strongly at Vietnam for having failed to improve on its "orderly departure programme" for refugees while third countries' recent cutback on the number of refugees for resettlement will come under attack from Thai authorities in the annual conference on Indochinese displaced persons beginning in Bangkok today. Increasingly complicated regulations imposed by third countries taking refugees from Thailand for resettlement will also be criticized by Thai officials. "We will point out that the estimated 185,000-odd Khmer and Laotian displaced persons left over in Thailand at the moment are mostly farmers without education or skills or relatives or contacts with the third countries. This is because the third countries have only selected the best among the refugees, leaving behind those who have nowhere to go," said a senior official.

Informed sources said that Vietnam's inefficient orderly departure programme (ODP) from Ho Chi Minh City will come under attack by Thai officials, particularly the Supreme Command's officers in charge of the refugee problem. "The fact that Vietnamese are still fleeing on land from Vietnam through Kampuchea to the Thai border despite the risks and hardship as well as the continuing outflow of the boat people show that the orderly departure programme undertaken by Vietnamese authorities with approval of the United Nations has been far from efficient," said the official.

Sources at the Supreme Command headquarters reported yesterday that the number of Indochinese refugees taken for resettlement in third countries during the first half of this year had gone down significantly compared to the corresponding period the previous year -- from around 48,000 to fewer than 20,000. "If we Thai's begin to feel that the world is beginning to forget about Thailand's burden, we would not take it sitting down. Surely, Thailand can't be expected to bear the burden alone if third countries and international organizations did not live up to their commitments. We may have to do something about that -- if such an eventuality should occur," said the sources. This line of statements is expected to be reflected in today's meeting, the sources said. Today's meeting is the fifth annual event of its kind. Senior Thai officials attending the meeting are expected to also stress the point that although the number of displaced Indochinese in Thailand and those in the border encampments might have gone down, the continuing armed conflicts and possible flare-up in fighting in western Kampuchea could suddenly spark off a massive flow of Khmers into Thailand once again. "Of course, we continue to uphold our humanitarian policy, but the Thai Government also wants to resolve the problem of displaced persons once and for all as soon as possible," another senior Thai official said. The official said that the question of Vietnamese troops stationed in Kampuchea diverting international aid from the Kampucheans to support the military presence might also be raised during the conference. Vietnam will be called upon to join hands with the UN and third countries accepting Vietnamese for resettlement to speed up and improve the operations of the ODP, the sources said.

Current Issues Discussed

[Statement by Lt Col Kamon Prachuapmo, Interior Ministry intelligence chief -- recorded; date not given]

[Text] We have been trying to persuade third countries to take more refugees from us. If they cannot take refugees, they should not carry on about humanitarianism or complain about how we handle the problem. They talk about humanitarianism but they want Thailand to carry the burden. We have no policy to allow aliens to stay in the country permanently.

You must recall that we have warned the people in those countries not to come to Thailand. If they want to go to a third country, they should not come to Thailand first. They can leave Vietnam, Laos or Kampuchea and go directly to a third country, so if they arrive here we detain them and refuse to let them go to third countries. As a result of this, the number of refugees has dropped because they do not want to waste time.

As I told you earlier, we are now detaining over 7,000 Vietnamese and 12,000 Lao refugees. The Kampuchean refugees are kept at the border. We will have to decide whether to let them go to third countries or not. Some of them have been under detention for more than a year already. The other problem is Kampucheans of Thai origin from Koh Kong. The cabinet has ruled that steps must be taken to prove their origin before giving them Thai citizenship. They speak Thai fluently, and refuse to return to Kampuchea. If they can prove that they were born in Thailand or that their fathers and mothers were Thai citizens, we will give them Thai citizenship. However, they number only about 6,000 to 7,000. In the past, the number was much bigger. As the situation in Kampuchea has improved, many have returned as they find it is easier to earn a living in Koh Kong. Koh Kong is not only a island of Kampuchea, but is a province embracing part of the mainland. Many Thai people own plantations and are engaged in fishing in the province.

'Land People' To Leave

[Text] Some of the 1,772 Vietnamese "land people" at Camp NW-82 in Nong Samet will be resettled abroad soon along the principle of "orderly depature programme" (CDP) after a brief transit stay at Phanat Nikhom, according to a senior officer of the Supreme Command's Joint Operations Centre.

Col Sanan Kachonklam told the NATION yesterday that third countries had agreed to resettle a large number of these Vietnamese displaced persons who had crossed over on land from Vietnam through Kampuchea to the Thai border. "But this new step doesn't mean that we will change our basic principle that no Vietnamese illegal immigrants will be given a chance for resettlement in third countries. We must maintain this basic policy as a deterrent so that they wouldn't be attracted to flee to our border again. The orderly departure scheme for this present group would be a one-shot affair only, the colonel said. The said these Vietnamese "land people" would be allowed through the transit camp at Phanat Nikom "for about 10 to 12 days" before being flown to the countries of resettlement.

The International Committee of Red Cross (ICRC) has been engaged in negotiations with the Thai military authorities for over a year trying to move the Vietnamese land people out of the border area.

Col Sanan also said that by the end of this year, only four camps will remain open: Khao-i-dang for Khmers, Ban Winai for the Mongs; Nakhon Phanom camp for Laotians and Phanat Nikhom transit centre. He also said that during the two-day conference on Indochinese displaced persons beginning today, he will stress, among other points, the need to revive the UNHCR-approved voluntary repatriation of Khmer refugees. "If that could not be carried out, we would have to adopt the voluntary relocation policy for those refugees who willingly want to return home," he said.

A large number of Khmers have returned to Kampuchea through the second method, he said. "After the formation of the Khmer resistance coalition government under Prince Norodom Sihanouk, many Khmers have also applied to return to western Kampuchea to stay under the coalition government-controlled areas," a senior military officer said.

SU ANAKHOT: DOUBTS RAISED OVER CPT CONGRESS

BK071459 Bangkok SU ANAKHOT in Thai 4 Jul 82 p 17

[Article: "CPT's Psychological Warfare"]

[Text] Reports on the Fourth Congress of the Communist Party of Thailand [CPT] remain unsubstantiated rumors. The report in our last issue which said that the congress was over after 45 days of work was based on a single piece of evidence -- the 15 May issue, edition 3, of LAET PLIAN, journal of the CPT urban front. The journal carried an editorial entitled: The Fourth CPT Congress Has Been Completed.

"Wholeheartedly and joyously welcome the Fourth party congress" adorns the beginning of the journal, which mainly contains CPT formulas rapping "the ruling class" and noting its failure to prevent the holding of the congress. However, the journal does not give details of the substance or decisions adopted at the congress. It only reports greetings from "cadres, combatants and revolutionary masses" and says that it will give more details on the congress at an appropriate time.

It is strange, however, that there have been no reports on the congress in other CPT propaganda organs. Even in messages on the SSPT News Agency, which replaced the Voice of the People of Thailand Radio when the latter closed down, there has been no mention on the congress -- even in the most recent messages. From the morse code messages between organizational units in the urban and the jungle areas, there was only a short word saying "an enlarged regional meeting is under way" when the question of the Fourth CPT Congress arose.

Government intelligence officials therefore assume that the report about the Fourth CPT Congress carried by the journal of the CPT urban front was a psychological operation of the CPT leadership for the urgan cadres of the party. In short, it was aimed at improving the image of the CPT following the mass defections by intellectuals and also at improving the morale of the remaining cadres who wonder when the fourth congress will be held and how the party's lines will be restructured.

Meanwhile it has been reported that rumors are circulating within the urban front on the CPT adopting a new strategy of opening its arms to welcome support from all camps -- and not only from China -- coupled with putting an end to accusing one another in the party of being either pro-China or pro-Soviet and promoting the younger generation to take over more Central Committee posts in place of the older geneation.

A source which closely follows the CPT movements noted: "If this is a rumor, then it must have originated with the group around Thong Chaemsi, which is based inside the country, and is aimed at weakening the position of the pro-China group of Wirat Angkhathawon outside the country."

The most recent report we have concerns the results of the enlarged meeting of the CPT in the lower northeast. The meeting analysed Thai society as "A semi-colonial capitalist society with a prevailing feudalist influence." It adheres to the theory of using armed struggle to seize political power as a means of achieving victory for the revolution. It also adopts the tactic of coordinating two lines of operations -- political operations and military operations -- and three areas of operations -- the jungle areas, the lowlands and the urban areas.

The meeting also suggested that for greater flexibility in carrying out armed operations, Thai People's Liberation Armed Forces units will shift more to guerrilla tactics. Urban operations will emphasize political struggle, activities to create disturbances among official circles and economic work to raise funds for the party.

Many people believe that it will be difficult for the CPT to organize its fourth congress in the near future. The meetings at regional level are still inconclusive. The problems and recommendations presented by each region are different and this means that a certain amount of time will be needed before all of them can be studied and summed up for the congress. Besides, the desire of a group within the party to shift from the pro-China line will not easily obtain the approval of the CPT's leading members.

The fourth CPT congress is therefore being delayed by these major obstacles -- differences over party lines and conflicts among interest groups within the party. Rumors about the congress having already been held are aimed at boosting the morale of party members.

BRIEFS

SUBSIDY FOR SUGARCANE PLANTERS -- The government has decided to pay 15 baht per ton of subsidy to sugarcane planters for the 1981-82 season, down 100 percent from 30 baht planned earlier. The reduction will enable the government to share 780 million baht subsidy among all cane planters, particularly for those who were not able to receive less than 510 baht per ton for sugarcane, Deputy Industry Minister Dr Chirayu Israngkun Na Ayuthaya said yesterday. The government during the 1981-82 season fixed the guaranteed selling price of sugarcane at 500 baht per ton with 30 baht subsidy to be paid from 700 million baht fund borrowed from the farmer's welfare fund. But due to huge surplus of sugarcane, planters received only 440 baht per ton when they harvested near the end of the season. A total of 23 million tons were paid less than 420 baht per ton, the deputy minister said. This means that planters who received 510 baht per ton will have a total of 455 baht, he said. This subsidy, now preferably called "compensation" will be paid to planters through sugar mills, he said. [Excerpt] [Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 2 Jul 82 p 13 BK]

SIHANOUK DISCREDITED AS PAWN OF BEIJING

[Station commentary: "Beijing's Monstrosity"]

[Text] Having staged the farce of forming the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea under the direction of Beijing and Washington, the principal actors of this comedy called "Pol Pot in disguise" raised their voices in Bangkok, Thailand's capital, against Vietnam and the Kampuchean people.

To please his masters, Sihanouk, who was recently put on the chair of president of the Pol Pot coalition government in disguise by the reactionaries in Beijing's ruling circles, dished out statements prepared by Beijing likening Vietnam's presence in Kampuchea to a Hitlerite occupation.

Such a contention is laughable indeed if one recalls that on 7 January 1979, after Phnom Penh was liberated, Sihanouk said that Vietnam had freed Kampuchea from Pol Pot's imprisonment. On 22 February 1980, in an interview with the French paper LE MONDE, Sihanouk himself confided: I am grateful to Vietnam for delivering our country, that is, the Kampuchean people, from the claws of the Khmer Rouge, an instrument used by Great Han expansionism to commit genocide against the Kampuchean people.

After thanking Vietnam for liberating him and saving the Kampuchean people from genocide, Sihanouk himself denounced the Khmer Rouge as butchers and the neofascists of our time hatched by Beijing in Kampuchea.

On 5 April 1980, in an interview with the French magazine PARIS MATCH, Sihanouk once again called Pol Pot a murderer and all his acolytes Hitlerite S.S. storm troopers. Appearing on French television on 14 May 1981, it was none other than Sihanouk who likened Pol Pot to an outsized Dracula. When asked by a French television reporter about the possibility of a Sihanouk-Khmer Rouge alliance, Sihanouk replied, his whole body shaking and his eyes rolling back: Ally with the Khmer Rouge? I might as well join up with the devil.

The Kampuchean people and progressive mankind did not have to hear such denunciations by Sihanouk to realize the heinous crimes of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique. The verdict delivered by the Phnom Penh international court in 1980 against these criminals and their Beijing masters already pointed out who are the friends and who are the sworn enemies of the Kampuchean people. However, it is worth recalling some of these admissions by Sihanouk to shed more light on this fact: Sihanouk, who is living a miserable life in exile with the financial support of the reactionaries among the Beijing leadership, U.S. imperialism and other international reactionary forces, no longer qualifies in the least to represent the Kampuchean people.

Together with Son Sann and the genocidal Khmer Rouge, Sihanouk has been cast into the dustbin of history by the Kampuchean people. Failing in their opposition to the Kampuchean people and the other Indochinese peoples, Sihanouk and his companions have sold themselves to Great Han expansionism and have become the principal actors in the farce of forming the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea -- a Pol Pot monstrosity in disguise. In so doing, they are trying to fulfill the dream of the reactionaries among the Beijing ruling circles of reversing the situation in Kampuchea and returning their lackeys to Phnom Penh.

Despite the facelift given them by the reactionaries in the Beijing leadership, U.S. imperialism and other international reactionary forces, these people, in the eyes of the Kampuchean people and progressive mankind, are none other than Pol Pot disguised as the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, a baleful and cheap tool of Great Han expansionism.

In an effort to regroup following a long series of failures, the monstrosity which is the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea recently hatched by the reactionaries among the Beijing leadership can deceive no one. Nor does it have the strength its masters expected. For this reason, it was ironical indeed that Sihanouk recently parroted in Bangkok a statement by the Beijing reactionaries that victory will be achieved in Kampuchea.

Public opinion still recalls that Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan themselves used to declare noisily that they would retake Phnom Penh within 3 years of 7 January 1979. On his part, Son Sann, prime minister of the Khmer Rouge's disguised Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, also boasted then that he would liberate Kampuchea -- meaning retake it -- within 4 years. Now it is Sihanouk's turn to brag. This is no surprise. Sihanouk himself, who is currently playing the role of president in the farce Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea under the direction of Beijing and Washington, once admitted to the FRG magazine DER SPIEGEL, issue No. 28 published in 1981: I am like a parrot which keeps repeating after other people that we shall achieve victory, we shall achieve victory.

Victory does not belong to the Kampuchean reactionary forces, the henchmen of Great Han expansionism. It belongs to the Kampuchean people and to their just cause as well as the solidarity of the three Indochinese peoples. Under the leadership of the KPRP headed by Comrade Heng Samrin, the Kampuchean people, with the wholehearted assistance of the Indochinese people, the socialist countries and progressive mankind, have overcome all trials and are advancing ever more steadily and vigorously on the road of revival.

All the frenzied schemes and acts of opposition and sabotage perpetrated by Great Han expansionism against the Kampuchean people's just cause over the past 4 years have only prompted the Kampuchean people to further strengthen their unity with the Indochinese peoples and to heighten their vigilance. They are ready to smash all the sinister schemes and new acts of opposition and sabotage of the reactionary forces hiding behind the cover of the monstrous Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea rigged up by Beijing and Washington.

The strength of the Kampuchean people and the solidarity among the Indochinese peoples will surely frustrate and break up the Khmer Rouge's disguised Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea and all the other insidious schemes of Great Han expansionism and various other international reactionary forces.

PHAM HUNG ADDRESSES PUBLIC SECURITY MEETING

OW101356 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 10 Jul 82

[From the 10 July press review]

[Text] On 30 June, Comrade Pham Hung, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and concurrently minister of interior, attended and addressed a meeting of representatives of advanced units and individuals in Ho Chi Minh City's movement to preserve national security.

Speaking at the meeting, Comrade Pham Hung said: We must work in such a way as to make our public security force a true people's public security force. To this end, we must strictly adhere to Uncle Ho's six teachings, place ourselves under the absolute leadership of party committee echelons, and mix with the city's mass organizations and people. In punishing the enemy, we must know how to use the combined strength of the juridicial building up our forces and whipping up the mass movement to preserve national security. They include the new statute providing comprehensive and thorough guidance on organizing the city wards, villages, agencies and enterprises. I suggest, he said, that all party committee echelons and administrative echelons control the movement strictly, promote it unceasingly so as to expand it extensively, provide proper leadership over agencies and enterprises so that they will have the proper plans to protect the production they have achieved in fulfilling plan norms and further increase the advanced models in the movement to preserve national security.

NHAN DAN ON YOUTH ROLE IN NATIONAL SECURITY

[NHAN DAN 12 July editorial: "Assault Youth Movement To Maintain National Security"]

[Text] Together with the people throughout the country, our youths are accelerating production and socialist construction while coping with a multifaceted war of sabotage waged by the big-power Chinese expansionist hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces.

The Fifth VCP Congress has pointed out: To ensure political security, public order and social safety is a task of parmamount importance in defeating the enemy's multifaceted war of sabotage. We must resolutely suppress the counterrevolutionaries, timely foil the schemes of the reactionaries of all kinds to raise their heads, check the enemy's sabotage activities in all fields, enforce law and discipline more vigorously and preserve the order of society and the safety of the people.

Maintaining national security is the responsibility of our entire party and all our people and soldiers, with the people's security forces playing a key role. Experience drawn from the past shows that the strength and results of maintaining security depend to a certain extent on the degree to which the broad masses of people, especially youths, participate in this task. Even the building of clean and strong public security forces requires that the people, and especially our youths, participate. In the public security forces there must be firm and strong youth union organizations as a nucleus, and these organizations are responsible for bringing advanced members into the public security forces.

The all-people movement to maintain national security hasmade much progress. The close solidarity and coordination between the people's security forces and people's armed forces in joint plans to oppose the enemy's sabotage activities and maintain order and security in strategic areas has yielded many satisfactory results.

In Quang Ninh Province, the Youth Union has adopted a good practice of achieving solidarity and unity of actions between the three forces -- local youths, public security youths and army youths -- in a joint plan to hunt for and capture enemy commandos and reconnaissance agents, track down and arrest smugglers and speculators of goods and ensure public security and order. In major cities such as Haiphong, Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City and in Quang Nam-Danang Province, Youth Union organizations have also developed many initiatives in organizing assault security youths to coordinate actions with the public security forces in order to carry out satisfactorily the tasks of maintaining security, protecting socialist property and the people's lives and property and ensuring their safety.

Maintaining security and order and preventing degenerate acts and violations of law by youths call for the adoption of many measures ranging from suppressive and administrative measures to creating jobs for unemployed youths; opening classes for teenagers who cannot go to school; creating conditions for youths and teenagers to enjoy healthy recreation and entertainment activities; and developing among youths a new, civilized way of life that is endowed with noble ideals.

From the assault youth movement to maintain national security, many advanced collectives and individuals, many diversified forms of activities and many examples of heroism set by youths who have sacrificed their lives for the country and people have emerged. Many Youth Union members -- such as (Le Dinh Trinh), Dinh Trong Lich, (Le Thi Bui), (Nguyen Tai Hai), Nguyen Thai Minh, (Bui Thi Mai), (Pham Van Son) and others -- have bequeathed to the younger generation bright examples of heroism and resourcefulness and the spirit of sacrificing one's life for the fatherland and people. These examples, which have attracted millions of youths to the noble cause of defending national security, will be instrumental in educating youths to develop revolutionary vigilance, a sense of collective mastery and a sense of responsibility to society and the fatherland.

The program for coordinated action between the Youth Union and the Ministry of Interior on a national scale is an important initiative. It involves accelerating solidarity and coordination of action between the three forces, public security forces, armed forces and local youths; stepping up the youth movement to be masters of city wards and streets, villages, enterprises, organs and schools; ensuring transportation and traffic safety; and pushing forward the emulation movement to maintain national security satisfactorily.

With this program, the Youth Union and the public security sector are in a position to rally millions of youths of both sexes to the cause of maintaining national security, frustrating all enemy schemes of sabotage, eliminating negativism and ensuring social security and order.

This difficult and complex struggle will provide an opportunity for youths to progress and mature quickly and Youth Union organizations in and outside the public security forces to strengthen themselves.

Our youth forces play an increasingly important assault role in the mass movement to maintain national security, thereby contributing to the fulfillment of the two strategic tasks -- building and defending the socialist fatherland.

NHAN DAN ON PUNISHING ILLEGAL BUSINESSMEN

[NHAN DAN 13 July editorial: "Resolutely Punish Illegal Businessmen"]

[Text] During the transitional stage toward socialism, there is always an acute struggle between the socialist and capitalist market management systems. Foreign reactionaries have colluded with domestic reactionaries to take advantage of our low production of goods, our multifaceted economic structure and the comprehensive free market system to sabotage us economically, politically, culturally and socially. Moreover, illegal businessmen, who earn their living through smuggling and speculation, have attempted to raise commodity prices and disrupt the socialist market system, thereby creating more difficulties in production and the people's daily life.

Opposing illegal businessmen and hailing all activities aimed at disrupting the market are urgent requirements in the economic management task. They have a direct effect on accelerating production, stabilizing commodity prices and improving the people's daily life.

The recently promulgated regulation on punishing persons engaged in speculation and smuggling of goods, in producing fake goods and in illegal business has met the aspirations of all honest traders.

Speculators, smugglers, producers of fake goods and illegal businessmen are those who reject an honest life and still seek a sinecure. They intend to take advantage of economic difficulties or try to create these difficulties in order to fish in troubled waters. They have bought everything -- goods, materials, stamps, coupons and other documents -- needed for distributing goods and speculated in many kinds of goods and materials controlled by the state. They have organized smuggling rings and stored prohibited goods such as gold, precious metals and stones, foreign currencies, technical materials and other prohibited goods.

They have smuggled goods across borders; produced and traded in fake goods, many of which contain poisonous or other substances dangerous to the health and lives of consumers. All these persons must be brought before the law and scrupulously punished in order to protect the interests of the state and the working people. This will help eliminate an unjust and irrational phenomenon in which those who work illegally and refuse to carry out the party and state's policy earn a higher income than the various strata of workers, peasants, the armed forces, intellectual labor and honest people who work selflessly to produce goods and material for socialist construction and national defense and who face numerous difficulties in their daily lives.

The state of the dictatorship of the prolateriat is resolved to punish those who sabotage the socialist economy according to the severity of their crime. Severe punishment must be meted out to leaders who systematically plot to disrupt the market and commit crimes. All offenses and criminals, however, must be tried under the law. Those who use their position and authority to obstruct the discovery, investigation and punishment of criminals, to suppress and take revenge on those who discover and denounce the criminals and those who, for their illegitimate, gainful purposes, protect the criminals are considered accomplices of the criminals. They must be punished according to their crimes and the provisions of the regulations.

Speculators, smugglers, producers of fake goods and illegal businessmen have resorted to the most perifidious tactics to violate the law. Various state organs, social organizations and all citizens must firmly grasp the contents of the regulation. They are dutybound to discover and report all acts of speculating, smuggling, producing fake goods and transacting illegal business to the competent state organs and officials for prompt action. Measures must be taken to enhance revolutionary ethics and strengthen the contingent of cadres and officials of various sectors directly responsible for implementing this regulation such as the control organs, the public security forces, the courts and taxation and customs agencies in order to enable them to lead the struggle against criminals. Appropriate commendations should be awarded to units and individuals who have rendered meritorous service in opposing speculating, smuggling, producing fake goods and transacting illegal business in order to create a mass movement against illegal traders.

Various echelons of party committees and administrative organs must attend to guiding and supervising the process of implementing this regulation. They must combine this with the the scrupulous implementation of various policies which are aimed at developing production and strengthening circulation and distribution, improving the managerial system and organization and overcoming loopholes which might be used by illegal businessmen.

Implementing this important regulation of the state scrupulously will help contribute effectively to opposing negative phenomena in the society.

MOKHTAR DISAPPOINTED ON U.S. STANCE ON LOS

BK141545 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1500 GMT 14 Jul 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja has expressed profound disappointment over U.S. President Ronald Reagan's statement refusing to sign the sea law convention. The minister expressed his disappointment because it would mean that one of the major powers -- the United States -- is not bound by the provisions of the sea law convention. He said this at the Jakarta Halim Perdanakusuma Airport this evening before leaving for Nicosia to attend a conference of the Nonaligned Movement.

The foreign minister said it was difficult to understand the U.S. reason for refusing to sign the convention because the convention contains many provisions which are beneficial to the United States.

KOMPAS: INDOCHINA COMMUNIQUE STILL SHORT ON CREDIBILITY

BK141514 Jakarta KOMPAS in Indonesian 9 Jul 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Indochina Communique"]

[Text] The joint communique of the three Indochinese foreign ministers, which was announced on Wednesday in Ho Chi Minh City (Saigon), raises several points:

First, it says that part of the Vietnamese forces will be withdrawn from Kampuchea this month. Second, it calls for the creation of a demilitarized zone along the Kampuchean-Thai border. Third, it calls for the convening of an international conference on Southeast Asia with the participation of the three Indochinese countries, the five ASEAN countries, the five permanent members of the UN Security Council (the Soviet Union, the United States, France, the PRC and Britain), India and Burma.

The communique also clearly says that the three Indochinese countries cannot accept the existence of the Khmer Rouge and the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea which was established 2 weeks ago.

The conference of the three Indochinese foreign ministers, which issued this communique, also called for peaceful coexistence with ASEAN, which, according to Vietnam's Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, is the only correct way to create peace and stability in the Southeast Asian region.

This appeal had actually been made earlier by the ASEAN countries in the joint statement of their foreign ministers meeting in Kuala Lumpur not only after all Vietnam fell to "North Vietnam." Thus, in principle, ASEAN and Kampuchea [as published] meet in this respect.

Likewise with regard to the suggestion for convening an international conference on Southeast Asia, ASEAN certainly has no objection as long as Kampuchea is not represented by the Heng Samrin regime which is not recognized by ASEAN.

The Indochinese countries' direct proposal for holding an international conference can, however, be regarded as progress because earlier Vietnam always held that the Southeast Asian problem, particularly as it involved Kampuchea, was not an international issue. On the other hand, ASEAN is of the view that the Kampuchean question is an international issue. At most, Vietnam wanted the issue to be discussed merely between Indochina and ASEAN.

Regarding the partial withdrawal of the Vietnamese forces, ASEAN would also enthusiastically welcome it if it constitutes a decisive stage within the framework of a total withdrawal of the Vietnamese forces from Kampuchea. The quicker it is executed the better.

The creation of a demilitarized zone along the Kampuchea-Thai border is also not a simple problem because it would create the impression that the Kampuchean problem is an issue between the two countries and this is unacceptable to Thailand.

Thus, the communique of the three Indochinese countries still contains a number of intricate aspects and shows several principled differences. But taken as a whole, it should be acknowledged that there has been progress in their attitude although only in their words and therefore still short on credibility. The joint communique's credibility will only be felt when Vietnam truly withdraws part of its forces from Kampuchea this month. Moreover the troops should be withdrawn not just from stable areas under the protection of Vietnam, such as areas directly bordering on Vietnam. Nevertheless, the progress in their attitude as shown in the joint communique is expected to provide greater opportunities to reconcile further the positions of the Indochinese countries, particularly Vietnam, with those of the ASEAN countries. It is hoped that the visit of Vietnam's Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach to the ASEAN countries, which is scheduled for the end of this month (to Thailand, Singapore and Malaysia), for September (to Indonesia) and by the end of this year (to the Philippines), will further narrow their differences.

MOKHTAR LEAVES FOR NICOSIA, TUNIS 14 JULY

[Text] Jakarta, Jul 14 (ANTARA) -- Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja, Wednesday left for Nicosia, Cyprus to attend a ministerial conference of nonaligned countries July 15-17. From Nicosia the foreign minister is to go to Tunisia to participate in a special meeting of foreign ministers of the Islamic Conference Organization, July 17-18.

Both the Nicosia and the Tunis conferences are to discuss the Israeli invasion of Lebanon. Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) leader Yasir 'Arafat is expected to be able to attend the two meetings. The Israeli invasion of Lebanon has not only aroused the ire of nonaligned nations but also politicians in the advanced countries. According to PLO sources, no less than 40,000 Lebanese and Palestinians were killed or injured in the Israeli military action.

MP VIEWS U.S. STANCE ON LOS, OTHER ISSUES

[Text] Jakarta, Jul 14 (ANTARA) -- The nonparticipation of the United States in the sea law convention approved by 130 countries should be no cause for worry or concern, a member of the parliamentary first (defence and foreign affairs) commission, Amin Iskandar has said. In a talk with newsmen here Tuesday, Amin Iskandar noted that the United States had of late been inclined to show off its power to the world, to create the impression that it had the power to shape the fate of the world (?and to) disregard world public opinion.

Giving examples, Amin Iskandar, who belongs to the Islamic United Development Party (PPP), cited the Malvinas conflict between the United States and Argentina, in which the United States sided with Britain sacrificing its friendly ties with Latin American countries. In the Middle East, the parliamentarian continued, the United States put itself if squarely behind Israel in defiance of world public opinion which generally has condemned the Israeli invasion of Lebanon. In the case of tin the United States has also ignored protests from tin-producing countries against the release of tin from the U.S. strategic stockpile into the world tin market.

Turning to the convention on the Law of the Sea, Amin Iskandar said the convention was born out of a United Nations conference held since 1973. Though approved by 130 countries, the United States nonetheless refused to sign it on the ground it rejected control by an international agency over material and financial management of deep seabed mining projects. The United States refusal was recently announced by President Ronald Reagan in person, he noted. The Reagan administration is truly a tough one, he said. He noted that acceptance by the world of the sea law convention has expanded Indonesian territorial waters by more than 3 million square kilometres.

DPRK RED CROSS REPORTS JAPAN FISHERMEN QUESTIONED

[Text] Tokyo, July 18, KYODO -- Three Japanese fishing boats have been questioned by North Korean authorities for alleged violations of North Korea's 200 mile economic zone in the Sea of Japan, the country's Red Cross society said Sunday in a cable to the Japanese Red Cross society.

Contact with the vessels with 19 men aboard has been lost since last Tuesday when they were taken by North Korean patrol boats while fishing squids.

Japanese fishermen have been warned to stay out of the North Korean waters since a private bilateral fishery agreement expired at the end of last month. Japan has no diplomatic relations with North Korea.

DPRK Cable: Fishermen Safe

OW190915 Tokyo KYODO in English 0855 GMT 19 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 19, KYODO -- All 19 Japanese fishermen seized by North Korea in the Sea of Japan last week are safe, according to a North Korean cable. The cable reached a suprapartisan Dietmen's group headed by Liberal-Democrat Chuji Kuno last weekend, a group spokesman said Monday.

North Korea explained three Japanese fishing boats were seized because they entered North Korea's 200-mile economic zone, he said. But it will give consideration to a Japanese request for their release, the cable was quoted as saying.

The three ships were the first Japanese boats detained by the North Korea since a private fishery agreement between the two nations expired at the end of June.

SUZUKI MEETS PERUVIAN PARLIAMENTARIAN

OW190429 Tokyo KYODO in English 0419 GMT 19 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 19, KYODO -- Luis Percovich Roca, president of the Peruvian Chamber of Deputies (lower house), Monday met Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and discussed bilateral relations, Japanese officials said. Suzuki expressed gratitude for his reception on a visit to Peru last month, and Percovich told Suzuki the visit was effective in elevating cooperative Japan-Peru relations.

The Peruvian official also said President Fernando Belaunde Terry has a strong wish to visit Japan in the near future. Percovich also called on his Japanese counterpart Hajime Fukura at the Diet building earlier Monday morning and officially invited him to visit Peru, officials said.

WATANABE AGAINST PUBLIC WORKS EXPANSION PROGRAM

OW190615 Tokyo KYODO in English 0545 GMT 19 Jul 82

[Text] Osaka, July 19, KYODO -- Finance Minister Michio Watanabe said Monday it would be difficult to stimulate the economy by expanding public works projects as proposed by some business leaders.

"Increasing public works will need additional issuance of national bonds," Watanabe said, adding "but that may usher in the period of high interest rates."

Meeting business leaders of the Kansai area, the finance minister said a voluminous issuance of national bonds will certainly push up long-term interest rates, thus suggesting difficulties in expansion of public works through this financing method.

CAPTURE OF JAPANESE FISHING BOATS REPORTED

PRC, USSR CREWMEN IN CHONGJIN DENOUNCE U.S.

SK170418 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0355 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 17 (KCNA) -- Crewmen of foreign ships held a meeting at Chongjin port on July 15 to denounce the U.S. imperialist's occupation of South Korea on the occasion of the month of anti-U.S. joint struggle.

Present at the meeting were the crewmen of the Chinese ship "Feuting," the Soviet ship "Krym Voroshilov" and the Japanese ships "Hakuyo-Maru," "Katori-Maru No. 11" and "Koryu No. 3."

Speaking first at the meeting, Kunio Shiwa, master of the Japanese ship "Hakuyo-Maru," said that the U.S. imperialist's occupation of South Korea was the chief obstacle to the reunification of Korea and the root cause of all misfortunes and sufferings of the South Korean people.

Korea must be reunified in accordance with the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo put forward by His Excellency President Kim Il-song, the great leader, he stressed.

Speaking next, Sun Houfeng, political commissar of the Chinese ship "Feuting," said that the U.S. imperialists were desperately obstructing the reunification of Korea. Such criminal acts of theirs will never be pardoned by the Korean people or by the Chinese people and the world peaceloving people, he declared.

B.T. Belanov, deputy master in charge of political affairs of the Soviet ship "Krym Voroshilov," said in his speech that the United States must withdraw its troops from South Korea.

A letter to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song was adopted at the meeting. A statement denouncing the U.S. imperialists occupation of South Korea was also adopted there. After the meeting, the attendants burnt U.S. imperialism and Chon Tu-hwan, its stooge, in effigy.

ROMANIA'S CEAUSESCU RECEIVES KIM YONG-NAM

[Text] Pyongyang, July 18 (KCNA) -- Comrade Nicolae Ceausescu, general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party and president of Romania, met Comrade Kim Yong-nam, member of the Political Bureau, and secretary, of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, on a visit to Romania on July 16 at the Neptun, according to a report.

Comrade Kim Yong-nam conveyed a personal letter and cordial regards of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to President Nicolae Ceausescu. The president expressed deep thanks and asked Comrade Kim Yong-nam to convey his heartfelt warm greetings and best wishes to the great leader. He wished the friendly Korean people greater successes in the building of socialism and the realisation of the country's peaceful reunification. The talk took place in a cordial and friendly atmosphere.

KIM IL-SONG GREETS NICARAGUA'S GOVERNMENT

[Text] Pyongyang, July 19 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, sent a message of greetings on July 17 to Daniel Ortega Saavedra, coordinator, and Sergio Ramirez Mercado and Rafael Cordova Rivas, members, of the Council of the Government of National Reconstruction of the Republic of Nicaragua, on the occasion of the third anniversary of the victory of the revolution in Nicaragua.

The message reads: On the occasion of the third anniversary of the victory of the revolution in Nicaragua, I extend warm congratulations to you, the Council of the Government of National Reconstruction of the Republic of Nicaragua and the Nicaraguan people on behalf of the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Korean people and on my own.

Since the victory of the revolution, the Nicaraguan people, rallied close around the Sandinist National Liberation Front, have been successfully building a new Nicaragua, independent and prosperous, valiantly frustrating the armed interventionist manoeuvres of the imperialists and their lackeys.

The Korean people are sincerely rejoiced over the successes achieved by the Nicaraguan people on the road of the sacred struggle for defending the gains of the revolution and building a new life and always express firm solidarity with your revolutionary cause.

Convinced that the relations of friendship and cooperation between our two countries will grow stronger and develop in the common struggle against imperialism and for independence, I take this opportunity to heartily wish you and your people greater success in the future work for accelerating the building of a new society and defending the country.

IRANIAN AMBASSADOR HOSTS JERUSALEM DAY RECEPTION

[Text] Pyongyang, July 17 (KCNA) -- Iranian Ambassador to Korea A. Nahavandian hosted a reception on July 16 on the occasion of day of Jerusalem.

Speaking first at the reception, Ambassador A. Nahavandian denounced the criminal atrocities of the Israeli Zionists in murdering people and destroying and burning their houses and villages every day in Lebanon.

With the prosperity of the glorious Islamic revolution, he said, Iran has joined the united ranks of the anti-imperialist states and made every effort possible for the liberation of Jerusalem, and is making an active contribution to the struggle against the Israeli aggressors by dispatching volunteers to the Lebanese front.

The decisions of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and other countries to render all forms of assistance including the dispatch of volunteers to the Lebanese front against the Israeli Zionists in support of the cause of the Palestinian people are a definite precondition for the oppressed people to defeat the oppressors, he stressed.

Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Cho Kyu-il spoke next, noting that the Government of the Islamic Republic of Iran is expressing positive support and solidarity for the Arab peoples cause of struggle in the form of the dispatch of volunteers to help them in the struggle to frustrate the armed invasion of Lebanon by the Israeli aggressors backed by the U.S. imperialists and regain the national sovereignty of the Palestinian people, he said: We highly estimate this.

Since the victory of the Islamic revolution, he said, the Iranian people have been struggling staunchly against aggression and intervention of the U.S.-led imperialists and the Israeli expansionists and vigorously advancing along the road of independence for the building of a new Iran, repulsing the subversive activities and sabotage of the home reactionaries.

We will as ever make all efforts to further develop and strengthen friendly and cooperative relations between the two countries in various fields and fight side by side with the Palistinian people, fully suuporting their struggle.

Invited to the reception were diplomatic envoys of various countries in Pyongyang.

VRPR DEONOUNCES SHULTZ COMMENT ON S. KOREA

SK170541 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 16 Jul 82

[Station commentary]

[Text] As soon as the motion on his appointment was passed at a hearing of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the U.S. Senate, Shultz, U.S. secretary of state, reconfirmed his stand opposing the withdrawal of the U.S. troops from South Korea.

At a time when the pullout of U.S. troops from South Korea is strongly and unanimously demanded by all people at home and abroad, U.S. Secretary of State Shultz reaffirmed his stand opposing the pullout of the U.S. troops from South Korea. This reveals his warlike inclination and the U.S. aggressors' inner thoughts to hand on to this land forever as their colony and military base.

To withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea in order to maintain and consolidate peace on the Korean Peninsula and to achieve the fatherland's independent reunification is the unanimous demand of our masses and the world's peace-loving peoples. Rejecting foreign forces and realizing independence and sovereignty are becoming the trend of the times which cannot be blocked.

U.S. troops in South Korea have no reason, excuse, or pretext to remain in this land. As unanimously demanded by the masses at home and abroad, they should immediately withdraw from this land. As you know well, U.S. troops in South Korea are the basic obstacle to the peace and peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula, a constant source of war, and the military presence which backs up the colonial fascist rule with force of arms. This fact is clearly established by the 37-year-long history of the U.S. troops' occupation of South Korea. Since they illegally occupied this land, the U.S. imperialists have made a habit of aggression and plunder under the guise of protectors and aid-givers and have backed up the fascist colonial military rule with the military power. In accord with an aggressive strategy toward the Korean Peninsula, they have blocked the country's reunification with a scheme of fabricating two Koreas. With the wicked ambition of dominating over the whole of the Korean Peninsula, they have run wild to prepare for a new war, have aggravated the situation on the Korean Peninsula and have indiscrimately murdered our masses which aspire for democracy and reunification.

The U.S. aggressors are conducting propaganda which claims that U.S. troops in South Korea are necessary to protect the South Korean people and maintain peace in this land. However, this is a downright lie. The U.S. troops in South Korea are a military entity for preserving U.S. colonial fascist rule. They are a military entity occupying this land to consolidate with military power the country's eternal division and dominate the whole of the Korean Peninsula.

The U.S. aggressors positively supported the brutal crushing of the struggle of the Kwangju citizens who cried out for democracy and reunification. Such a detestable act alone clearly shows the purpose for which the U.S. troops are militarily occupying this land.

The U.S. aggressors, who occupy this land, are the ones who strangle national sovereignty, democracy and civil rights and who accelerate the preparations for a northward war while blocking the peace and peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula. Therefore, crying out "Yankees, return to your den!" "U.S. troops, leave!", our masses have been strenuously waging the anti-U.S., national salvation struggle. The fair world opinion also strongly demands the pullout of U.S. troops from South Korea to achieve peace and peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula. This notwithstanding, Shultz, U.S. secretary of state, reaffirmed his stance opposing the pullout of the U.S. troops from South Korea in defiance of public opinion at home and abroad. This openly reveals the U.S. aggressors' scheme to occupy South Korea forever. This is also an open challenge to the masses at home and abroad, who demand the pullout of U.S. troops from South Korea. This clearly shows that the U.S. aggressors are the ringleaders blocking peace and the peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula and that they are the constant source of war on the Korean Peninsula.

The U.S. aggressors should abandon the silly, wild fancies of eternally occuping this land and pursuing their policy of aggression and war. With no pretext can the U.S. aggressors justify their aggressive policy. Our masses will never tolerate the U.S. aggressors' schemes for aggression and war.

The U.S. imperialists should, without delay and in confirmity with the unanimous demand at home and abroad, remove from South Korea the U.S. troops and various kinds of military equipment, including nuclear arms, which they have introduced into this land. Our masses will more vigorously wage the anti-U.S., nation-saving struggle to retrieve national dignity and sovereignty and to achieve peace and the peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula under the anti-U.S., pro-independence banner and will drive the U.S. troops out of this land.

VRPR: U.S. FOOD AID CRIPPLES SOUTH'S AGRICULTURE

SK190914 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Roundtable talk from the program "Today's Feature"]

[Text] [First speaker]: In this hour, we discuss the results of U.S. food aid to South Korea. We can say that the U.S. food strategy has worked best in South Korea. Would you talk about the influence of the U.S. food strategy on South Korea?

[Second speaker]: To clearly understand this, we, first of all, should review the nature of U.S. aid to South Korea. As you well know, until the first half of the 1960's, the main item of U.S. aid to South Korea was its surplus agricultural products. The equipment and resources for industrial use were trifling. The U.S. surplus agricultural products introduced into South Korea were sold for domestic currency and reserved as a counterpart fund. In the 1950's, the amount of the counterpart fund accounting for 30-40 percent of the budget, was spent for military expenditures. By dealing in U.S. surplus agricultural products and using them as industrial resources, South Korean comparador capitalists accumulated capital and expanded their business firms.

According to its policy of making a consuming country produce manufactured goods with its surplus agricultural products, the United States built flour mills, spinning mills and textile, and sugar plants to have the three whites -- wheat, cotton and raw sugar -- made into manufactured goods in South Korea. It allowed a few comparador capitalist to monopolize the concessions of these plants.

[Third speaker]: In short, U.S. food aid to South Korea was aimed at fostering comparador capitalists who would support the Korea policy -- a neocolonial policy -- of the United States in South Korea. It was also aimed at making South Korean agriculture and even industry dependent upon the United States.

[Second speaker] That is true. The United States fostered comparador capitalists through its aid for surplus agricultural products and carried out its food strategy through the capitalists.

The influence of the U.S. food strategy over South Korea is very grave. This is confirmed by the fact that there are no cotton fields in South Korea, whose demand for cotton has been met by imports, and that the rich granary has reduced to a land of famine dependent upon food imports.

As you well know, the rate of food self-sufficiency in South Korea, which was 80 percent in 1960, dropped to 73 percent in 1975, 60 percent in 1979, 50 percent in 1980 and 42 percent in 1981. South Korea spent $1.1 billion to import foreign grain in 1980 and $2.2 billion last year.

[First speaker] I think this is because the crafty United States, which made the South Korean economy dependent upon U.S. surplus agricultural products, has converted its grant-type aid to South Korea into credit assistance.

[Second speaker] I agree. Through food aid, the United States devastated South Korean agriculture and rural villages while reducing the South Korean economy to a colonial, subordinate economy dependent upon the United States. This clearly shows that a so-called agreement about which the U.S. imperialists have babbled has a plunderous nature and their aid is as fatal as a poison. For this reason, our masses, believing that they are suffering from poverty due to the United States, are fanning the flames of the anti-U.S. struggle.

NODONG SINMUN ON 'WAR FEVER' IN S. KOREA

[NODONG SINMUN 18 July commentary: "War Racket Fanning Ruin"]

[Text] According to news reports, at the orders of the U.S. imperialists, the South Korean puppets have recently staged a military exercise named "demonstration of pontoon bridge construction" whose purpose is to run tanks across destroyed bridges.

Inspecting this military exercise, an American aggressor wearing the nameplate of commander of the South Korea-U.S. Combined Forces once again raved about the threat of a southward invasion, instigating the puppets to war rackets.

The news reports also said that, on the assumption of an air attack from the North, a blackout drill will take place in Seoul and other areas throughout South Korea at the end of this month.

This war exercise coincides with a recent tour of front line areas by the traitor Chon Tu-hwan, who, at the orders of the U.S. imperialists, fanned war fever. It also coincides with the puppet army's firing at our side with large-caliber machineguns and automatic weapons in Demilitarized Zones of the military demarcation lines and with war plotting in the United States with the puppet army chief of staff, who was summoned by his U.S. master.

Today, the people of the world demand that the U.S. imperialists stop their war rackets and leave South Korea to achieve peace in Korea and a peaceful solution of the Korean question. Voices demanding this are increasingly being heard from within and outside the nation in the month of anti-U.S. joint struggle.

At this time, the U.S. imperialists are increasing their war rackets and staging acts of hostility by controlling the Chon Tu-hwan ring. This is a challenge to the peace-loving people of the world who hope for peace in Korea and the peaceful reunification of Korea, and an intolerable criminal act straining the situation.

This also clearly shows that the Chon Tu-hwan ring is a traitorous, bellicose element which actively follows the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule and war schemes, playing into the hands of the U.S. imperialists.

The reason the U.S. imperialists are instigating the puppets to fan a war fever is linked to their vicious objective of disturbing peace, perpetuating division and maintaining their colonial terrorist rule in South Korea. Owing to the daily-growing anti-U.S. independence and antidictatorial democratization struggle in South Korea, U.S. military and colonial terrorist rule faces a serious crisis. This being the case, the U.S. imperialists are trying to thwart growing anti-U.S. independence aspirations through diversion of public attention by instigating the puppets to war and confrontation rackets to create a terror atmosphere and maintain their military, colonial fascist dictatorship in South Korea by threatening the people militarily. Such maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists, however, only further reveal their aggressive nature.

The South Korean people, who value national dignity, independence and democracy, are not going to tolerate the U.S. colonial domination and the Chon Tu-hwan ring's repressive rule. Even in a grave situation in which military terrorism prevails, the anti-U.S. and anti-Chon Tu-hwan struggle staged by masses of all strata in South Korea is deepening and developing. This is a good evidence.

The U.S. imperialists should abandon their foolish dream of indefinitely maintaining colonial domination by supporting the Chon Tu-hwan clique which is the object of the people's unanimous denunciation and curse, and should leave South Korea. The Chon Tu-hwan ring should clearly realize that the more last-ditch efforts to prolong its dirty life it makes in the hands of the outside forces, the greater are its crimes against the nation and people, and it therefore should act judiciously. If it continues to cling to the reckless war and confrontation rackets, ignoring the demand of the times, the ring will be denounced and rejected even more greatly by our people and the world's people. It will never be able to avoid an ignominious end.

ROK ARMY CHIEF OF STAFF'S U.S. VISIT SCORED

[Text] Military sources said that on 16 July Hwang Yong-si, army chief of staff, who is visiting the United States at the invitation of Pentagon officials, will hold talks with U.S. war maniacs such as U.S. Secretary of Defense Weinberger and the U.S. chairman of Joint Chiefs of Staff to discuss bilateral military matters.

The purpose of the Pentagon officials' invitation to Hwang Yong-si is to hand over to him a new directive for the Chon Tu-hwan ring on provoking a new war on the Korean Peninsula. In particular, the Pentagon war maniacs are trying to accelerate the invasion of South Korea by the Japanese militarists by discussing in detail with Hwang, while he is staying in the United States, matters concerning the completion of the military integration among South Korea, the United States and Japan. This is clearly seen in the fact that Hwang is scheduled to stop in Japan on his way back home to meet with high-ranking Japanese military authorities for a discussion.

This shows that the U.S. imperialists are even more nakedly maneuvering to perpetuate the division on the Korean Peninsula and to provoke a new war, while challenging the will and aspiration of the South Korean people and the world's progressive people for peace and peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula. The U.S. imperialists should stop instigating the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan ring to war and division, should withdraw U.S. troops stationed in South Korea without delay and take its hands off this land completely.

NODONG SINMUN EQUATES CHUCHE, PARTY LINE

[Text] Pyongyang, July 17 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN on July 16 carries an article headlined "To Arm Ourselves With Party's Line and Policy Is Fundamental Demand for Establishment of Chuche in Ideology."

Our party expounded that we should arm ourselves with the party's line and policy for establishing chuche in ideology, it says, and goes on: This idea is a programmatic guideline in firmly preparing the party members and working people as true communist revolutionaries of chuche type and powerfully pushing ahead with our revolution and construction along the road indicated by the party.

The author of the article further says: It is the ideological consciousness of the people that controls all their activities. Therefore, we should, first of all, have a correct ideological point of view and attitude, if we are to successfully carry out the revolution and construction by thoroughly establishing chuche. Only when we establish chuche in ideology can we thoroughly establish chuche in all fields of politics, economy, national defence, etc.

To establish chuche in ideology means having the consciousness of being the master of the revolution and construction and having the viewpoint and attitude of placing the revolution of one's country in the centre of all thinking and practice and solving all problems with his own wisdom and efforts. The main point in establishing chuche in ideology is to arm ourselves with our party's line and policy. For the party members and working people to arm themselves with our party's line and policy is, above all, the prerequisite to living and struggling as required by the chuche idea.

In order to live and struggle as required by the chuche idea, they should arm themselves with our party's line and policy shaped by fully embodying the chuche idea in the practice of our revolution. For them to firmly arm themselves with the party's line and policy is an important requisite to carrying out the revolution and construction in conformity with the demand of our people and the specific conditions of our country.

What our party intends is itself the desire of our people and the demand of the Korean revolution. Only when the party members and working people arm themselves with the party's policy can they have a good knowledge of the strategy and tactics of our revolution and accelerate the revolution and construction to suit it. It is also a firm guarantee for them to discharge their obligations as the masters of revolution.

The party's line and policy is a precious ideological and mental pabulum and daily acting rules guiding our party members and working people to carry out the revolution and construction from the stand of the master. With the indication of the policy of arming the party members and working people with the party's line and policy for the establishment of chuche in ideology, a firm guarantee has been provided for more actively pressing ahead with the work of establishing chuche more thoroughly in the revolution and construction and rearing all the party members and working people into communist revolutionaries of chuche type boundlessly faithful to the Korean revolution.

NORTH CONFIRMS CAPTURE OF ROK FISHING VESSEL

[Text] At 1200 today, 6 days after it kidnapped at 1205 on 13 July the Masan-Ho No. 5 belonging to the Sokcho Fishery Corporation and its 36-man crew fishing in international waters 170 miles northeast of Ullung County, North Kyongsang Province, North Korea reported through Pyongyang Radio that -- viewing the fishing boat as an armed patrol vessel -- it checked an unidentified boat and is now investigating it. Thus, it confirmed the kidnapping of the Masan-Ho No. 5.

According to a report from NAEWOE NEWS AGENCY today, North Korea's Pyongyang Radio revealed its kidnapping of the boat when the radio said that this boat illegally intruded into North Korea's sea boundary zone in the Eastern Sea at 1240 on 13 July. It gave no other details.

TONG-IL ILBO TARGET OF CHONGNYON HARASSMENT

[Report from Tokyo correspondent Pak Hwa-chin]

[Text] A reliable Japanese diplomatic source said on 17 July: Disturbed by TONG-IL ILBO, a newspaper published by Japan-residing Korean compatriots, which has carried reports exposing the realities of puppet North Korea, the puppet North has directed Chongnyon to thwart the activities of the TONG-IL ILBO by all means.

Quoting Chongnyon sources, the TONG-IL ILBO has featured various stories on the puppet North, including the power struggle over the succession issue involving Kim Chong-il, the mystery behind Choe Hyon's death and rebellions staged in various places.

According to the source, the puppet North directed Chongnyon to prevent the TONG-IL ILBO from exposing the realities of the puppet North Korea by all means, including ferretting out those who have supplied information and eliminating them, causing an automobile accident involving cadres of the TONG-IL ILBO and buying off its members with money or by using violence.

The source added: Chongnyon is believed to have begun to implement such a scheme. The puppet North also directed Chongnyon to make "STUDY OF KOREA," a Japanese monthly on business management which has shown a critical attitude toward the puppet North, adopt a pro-North line by buying off its cadres.

TONG-IL ILBO REPORTS O CHIN-U PROMOTED

[Report from correspondent Pak Hwa-chin in Tokyo]

[Text] TONG-IL ILBO reported on 17 July: It is evident that O Chin-u, puppet North Korea's minister of armed forces, who has played a chief role in pushing ahead with the work of having Kim Chong-il inherit power in the puppet north, was promoted to vice president and has already been installed.

YI'S ASSEMBLY TESTIMONY ON JAPAN, U.S., FRANCE

SK161300 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 1000 GMT 16 Jul 82

[Text] Answering questions from national assemblymen at a meeting of the National Assembly Foreign Affairs Committee, Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok said that he planned to settle the scale of ROK-Japan economic cooperation at the level of $4 billion, because settling this issue at a proper level will contribute to developing both countries. He added that if Japan's proposal to be made at the end of July is not satisfactory, he will continue negotiations with Japan. He said that there is a limit to our willingness to make unilateral concessions, and he will cope with such a situation should it develop. He said that if economic cooperation is settled at the level of $4 billion, he will launch negotiations to obtain private loans.

Minister Yi said that, although a visit to the ROK by U.S. President Reagan does not look feasible before the end of the year, President Reagan will visit our country in the near future because he wants to see it. He said that, through his recent visit to the United States and Japan, he confirmed that the international society, contrary to the view at home, does not think the curb loan scandal had any influence on our economy.

He said that the North Korean puppets' abduction of the fishing boat, Masan-Ho No. 5, was stereotyped, and that their simultaneous abduction of Japanese fishing boats was designed to influence the negotiations on ROK-Japan economic cooperation.

Testifying today at a meeting on the National Assembly Foreign Affairs Committee, Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok said that Cheysson, French minister of external affairs, asked to visit the ROK in the beginning of August and that the government has granted his request. He added that the two countries are now discussing the time of the official announcement of his visit to the ROK. He added that, when the French minister of external affairs visits the ROK, the two countries will discuss matters concerning the exchange of mutual visits by high-ranking persons to develop the existing friendship between the two countries, the development of economic cooperation, our unification policy of placing priority on the situation in the area surrounding the Korean Peninsula and the French Government's policy on the North Korean puppets.

Foreign Minister Yi said that the governments of the two countries have not officially discussed French President Mitterrand's visit to the ROK and that, although his visit to the ROK is the matter of welcome, what will be gained at summit talks by the two countries should be carefully reviewed beforehand. Foreign Minister Yi said that, apart from its policy of developing friendship and cooperation between the ROK and France, the ruling French Socialist Party is reviewing the matter of recognizing North Korea. Predicting that the French Government will not normalize it relations with North Korea in the near future,he said that France will not hastily recognize the North Korean puppets, because it is aware of our country's value and importance to it in the field of economic cooperation, as represented by the joint project for building atomic power stations -- which has developed recently -- and because it will not substantially profit by recognizing the puppets.

CHON RENEWS PLEDGE TO SERVE ONLY ONE TERM

[Text] Seoul, July 17 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan Saturday renewed his pledge to relinquish the presidency after his seven-year term of office ends in March 1988.

Chon said he was aware of his responsibility to protect the constitution under all circustances and to continue democracy in Korea by leaving office after one term. "I have not forgotten for a moment that it is my obligation to transfer the presidency in a peaceful and constitutional manner to a successor after fulfilling my duties as provided by the constitution," he said. Article 45 of the Korean Constitution amended in October 1980 provides a seven-year term of office for the president and prohibits the reelection of the president.

Chon's remarks were read by Prime Minister Kim Sang-hyop on Korea's 34th Constitution Day. Saying that the seeds of national discordand political conflicts have been eliminated since the inauguration of the Fifth Republic in October 1980, Chon stressed that we have no room to waste national power to such trifle and nonproductive things as was done in the past. "All we have to do now is concentrate our whole power and sincerity so that democracy may flourish in Korea," he said. "An open and free society can be realized only when individual members of society are aware of their responsibility and abide by the law," he said.

The chief executive also said a mature democratic citizen must not ignore law and order. Noting that Korean democracy has grown through the trials and errors of the past, Chon said:" I am sure that the future of Korea will be bright if the Constitution is protected."

The Constitution Day ceremony was held at Seoul's Sejong Cultural Center with some 1,000 Korean dignitaries in attendance, including Chief Justice Yu Tae-hung, National Assembly Speaker Chong Nae-hyok and constituent assembly members.

SEOUL SINMUN Editorial

[Editorial: "President's Will To Defend the Constitution"]

[Excerpts] Peaceful transfer of power is indeed a national aspiration. The Korean people, who have never known a peaceful transfer of power and endured the discontinuation of the constitution from the First Republic till the 26 October incident, firmly believe that the customs practiced in advanced democratic countries — the incumbent president steps down and a new man succeeds him in accordance with the constitutional procedures — should take root in this country.

In this regard, we want to draw attention to what President Chon Tu-hwan said in his speech at the ceremony marking Constitution Day. In his speech at the ceremony, President Chon said: It is not only my earnest desire but also a way to meet the demand of the new era and the new politics to transfer the presidency to my successor through peaceful and constitutional procedures after successfully finishing my mission as stipulated in the Constitution. I have not forgotten this for even a moment.

Such remarks by President Chon show his strong determination to transfer power peacefully. This is not the first time that President Chon has made public this pledge. His firm determination for a peaceful transfer of power has become a will to defend the Constitution. In his speech at the ceremony for Constitution Day, President Chon stressed: I feel acutely a grave sense of mission to protect the Constitution under any circumstances and to have democracy take root in the country.

To take an objective view, the Constitution of the Fifth Republic is the best ever written in our country. In particular, the Constitution has systematically frozen a revision of the Constitution for an extension of the presidential term. In other words, the Constitution has limited it to a single 7-year term, making it impossible to revise this article. Peaceful transfer of power has been systematized in this article, and it is for this that the Fifth Republic's Constitution is highly trusted at home and abroad.

This being the case, it is our belief that today there is no raison d'etre for the past era's discussion of the system, nor any logic to resisting the system. It is unproductive and useless to resist, with the past era's way of thinking, the Constitution of the Fifth Republic, which has been accepted by people in accordance with their aspiration and harmony.

Marking the 34th anniversary of the Constitution, we want to renew our resolution to defend it. We also expect that we could hasten the establishment of a democratic and prosperous state through maintaining constitutional order.

U.S. TREATMENT OF VISA APPLICANTS DEPLORED

[From the column "Microcosm"]

[Text] In all countries the social standing of college professors is highly regarded.

It is said that in Germany professors enjoy higher authority and respect among the people than doctors. Even now people pay great respect to scholars in Korea and Japan.

Though it is said in the United States "money talks," professorial authority is never low. Yet, even such a universally accepted idea seems to be of no use in American society as far as hardhearted field-level government offices are concerned.

This is the story of what a professor in his 60's, who has spent his lifetime at school, has gone through in the last couple of months. Invited by his relatives in the United States, he and his wife were to cross the Pacific Ocean. After obtaining passports issued by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the aged couple immediately applied to the U.S. Embassy consular section for visas. From that moment on, this old scholar began to experience humiliation for the first time in his life.

He had to stand in a queue outside the embassy building from early dawn. This we are concerned about because many others who have applied for visas have had to do so. About an hour after he arrived, at about 0800, he was told to come in the building. When his turn came, a man behind the desk bluntly told him that the visa would not be granted. The reason, the man behind the desk said, was that no one could be sure that the aged couple would come back from the United States. "Good grief, I would not stay in the United States even if I am begged to do so," he said. But the answer was the same as before.

This kind of treatment dumbfounded the old scholar, who has spent a lifetime teaching. Whether he and his wife could visit the United States or not was no longer a problem to him, now that his dignity and pride had already been damaged. He asked the clerk behind the desk a few more questions. He told the old scholar that he could not help it because there were too many Koreans illegally staying in the United States.

It is natural for field-level officials to react with the bureaucratic way of thinking that, since many Koreans are staying illegally in the United States, then permission for Koreans to enter the United States should be restricted. However, there should be personal insight in bureaucratic work, unlike the workings of machinery. It appears to be a little too inconsiderate for the officials at the U.S. Embassy consular section to treat an old gentleman with a job as a professor as no more than a man who intends to stay in the United States.

Most lamentable, of course, is the fact that many Korean people want to stay in the United States illegally. The U.S. and our government authorities, however, should see to it that innocent and decent people are spared from being humiliated because of such cases.

LABOR UNREST CONTINUES AT CONTROL DATA PLANT

SK191255 Seoul CHUNGANG ILBO in Korean 19 Jul 82 p 11

[Text] At around 0710 this morning, some 120 employees, men and women, of the computer spare parts manufacturing company Control Data, located on No. 3 Kuro Industrial Complex, Seoul, staged a sit-in for about 30 minutes on the company's playground, shouting slogans "We will revive our company with our own hands" and "Urban Mission, go away from our company."

These workers said that employees related to the Urban Mission have been staging reckless sit-ins since last March and that they have continued to spread groundless rumors that Control Data U.S.A. would close the company. They said they could not stand such things and, therefore, staged a sit-in.

Forming a committee for measures to salvage the company, with Chong Pung-cha, 26, female, as chairman, they adopted a letter of appeal to Control Data U.S.A. pledging: "If our company continues to operate, there will be no more commotions or chaos like those which have taken place since last March."

But at the rumor which said (Gardener Brown), vice president of Control Data in charge of the International Department, was at the U.S. Embassy to report the company's closing, the employees, who had earlier dispersed, gathered once again and began discussing measures, saying: "If the company closes, we want a 5,000 percent severance payment and will not rule out a struggle to the extreme."

As the employees got very excited and threatened to set fire to the company's building if it is closed, the police are preparing for the worst. At this news, one official at the Ministry of Labor Affairs explained that the company has applied for permission for a tentative closure of the company till 22 July, but has not decided to close it permanently.

FOREIGN TRADE COORDINATION UNIT TO BE FORMED

[Text] Seoul, July 19 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government plans to set up an economic cooperation coordinating body for overseas integrated trade policies, government sources said Monday. The sources said the plan is designed to produce consistent and practical trade measures which will include a linkage system of imports and exports in trade negotiations with other countries. High-ranking government officials have already made visits to Korea's major trading partners to study the feasibility of the plan, the sources said.

The proposed body will coordinate trade negotiations among relevant ministeries, which at present are conducting separate and inconsistent policies. The establishment of the body is also expected to boost the country's exports by linking them with imports to avoid adverse trade negotiations with major trading partners.

The sources pointed out that Korea is faced with strict import restrictions in industrialized countries, including the United States, Japan and France, while importing large amounts of grain and placing orders for the constuction of nuclear power plants and other massive public works projects.

The economic cooperation body will also streamline the assignment of Korean officials to oversee projects since economic portfolios already station their own personnel in foreign countries.

The sources said the body will send its own officials to overseas missions to oversee economic affairs with foreign governments, allowing Korean diplomats to concentrate on political matters.

SIHANOUK DEPARTS BANGKOK FOR PRC, DPRK

[Text] Bangkok, July 17 (AFP) -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of the new Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, left here today for Beijing and Pyongyang on official visits to China and North Korea.

The prince, who paid a four-day official visit to Thailand July 3-7, afterwards crossed Thailand's eastern border with Cambodia several times on his first visit to his homeland since leaving the country on January 6, 1979 -- one day before Hanoi's forces captured Phnom Penh.

On July 9, the prince formally proclaimed his anti-Vietnamese alliance with the deposed Khmer Rouge and the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) headed by Son Sann.

Three days later, he told a news conference here he planned to travel widely to gather support for his struggle to restore Cambodian neutrality. He said he hoped to address the non-aligned summit in Baghdad in early September before speaking to the new United Nations General Assembly session.

On the second, private part of his stay in Thailand, the prince visited border strongholds of each of the three factions in the coalition and met Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr, chairman of the United Nations-sponsored International Conference on Cambodia. Prior to his visit to Thailand, Prince Sihanouk visited the other four member states of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations -- Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines.

MEETINGS HELD TO SEND OFF SRV TROOPS

Siem Reap - Oddar Meanchey

BK171324 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1100 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Text] The Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Provincial People's Revolutionary Committee organized a meeting at the provincial seat on the afternoon of 14 July to confer decorations on and send off a number of the VPA units which are returning to their fatherland after more than 3 years of international duty in the Angkor land. Representing the comrade leaders in the Council of Ministers, Comrade Bou Thang, minister of national defense, attended the meeting and presented the decorations.

Also attending the meeting were Comrade Chan Seng, chairman of the Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Provincial Party Control Committee; the comrades of the provincial People's Revolutionary Committee; representatives of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Youth; and representatives of the Kampuchean Army units and many Vietnamese Army units. Also present on that occasion were Comrade Ngo Dien, Vietnamese Ambassador to Kampuchea; and many local and foreign journalists and radio and television crews.

Speaking at this grand meeting, Comrade Bou Thang said: We have seen with our own eyes a splendid, historic event marking the spirit of militant solidarity between the two armies and peoples of Kampuchea and Vietnam in their struggle against the common enemy.

The comrade recalled the period of joint struggle in the same trench when the Vietnamese people sent their sons and daughters to help the Kampuchean people, particularly when they faced the genocidal danger created by the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique. The VPA has most sincerely responded to the wishes of the Kampuchean people.

The comrade added: With the sincere assistance given in both the construction and combat work by the VPA, the KPRAF has grown rapidly in terms of quantity and quality. The regular, regional and militia forces have ensured the fulfillment of their tasks by defending firmly the border area and constantly protecting the territories of the fatherland, villages, communes and the peaceful life of the people.

The comrade stressed: By being tested and tempered in combat, a number of the regular units of our KPRAF have developed rapidly. The units in this region are able to ensure the combat tasks in various areas which were formerly carried out in cooperation with the VPA units. This is one of the points that brings great joy and pride to our party, people and army.

Comrade Bou Thang hailed the heroic spirit and wisdom of the Vietnamese combatants, who fight without fearing the sacrifice of their flesh and blood merely for the fulfillment of their lofty international duty. The comrade recalled many brilliant, outstanding models of heroism displayed by the VPA units in their close relations with our army and people. They courageously removed mines from the ricefields; helped to dig ditches and wells, built houses, schools and hospitals, took care of our children and elderly, gave medical treatment to patients; and even distributed their food to aid the Kampuchean people in time of drought.

Comrade Bou Thang noted: As has been done twice before, after being replaced by our Kampuchean units, the VPA units which came to carry out their noble international duty are able to return to their fatherland. He added: This clearly displays the most brilliant spirit of internationalism of the VPA in giving its sincere assistance to our people and army in the cause of defending the Kampuchean fatherland and its revolutionary gains.

On that solemn occasion, Comrade Bou Thang remined our people and combatants: Despite its repeated defeats, our enemy has continued its most perfidious and barbarous maneuvers in its attempt to seize our beloved territory. The armed forces of our revolutionary people must always carry their weapons, constantly heighten vigilance, resolutely nurture great indignation against the Beijing expansionists, U.S. imperialists, international reactionaries and the Khmer reactionary groups of Pol Pot, Ieng Sary, Khieu Samphan, Son Sann and Sihanouk, stimulate the emulation drive in order to enhance the construction and combat qualities of the armed forces, and fulfill all the tasks assigned to them.

The comrade stressed: Despite the evil and perfidious maneuvers of the Beijing expansionists in using the Thai reactionary rulers and the Thai territory as a place for fostering and sending back the reactionary Khmers to sabotage the Kampuchean revolution and in creating tension along the Kampuchean-Thai border, the Kampuchean revolution has advanced ceaselessly.

On behalf of the Council of Ministers and the Ministry of National Defense, Comrade Bou Thang presented a flag and the national defense decorations, which are the highest decorations of the PRK, to six VPA units and a symbol of the 7 January victory -- the most outstanding symbol of the liberation day of Kampuchea from genocide -- to each comrade.

Speaking on the same occasion, Comrade Chan Seng praised the outstanding heroism of the Vietnamese combatants, who always stand in the front line in the defense of their national independence and sovereignty as well as in the defense of the Kampuchean nation and to strengthen the Kampuchean revolutionary power.

After expressing his admiration, the comrade asserted: None of us will ever forget the valiant struggle of the heroic Vietnamese combatants -- the outstanding sons of the heroic Vietnamese people -- and their contribution to the defense and construction of our beloved fatherland.

In Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province in particular, the heroic, fraternal Vietnamese comrades-in-arms, who even dared to sacrifice their lives, have joined in the struggle to defend our western border, crushing all the perfidious maneuvers and armed forces of the enemies of all stripes, as well as defeating all of their plans.

The comrade said: This great victory has brought stability to and created the necessary facilities for the improvement of the people's livelihood, restoration of the economy and consolidation of the revolutionary power.

The comrade proudly asserted: The Kampuchean cadres, combatants and people are determined to unite as one around the KPRP and heighten the banners of patriotism and proletarian internationalist solidarity, particularly the Kampuchea-Vietnam militant solidarity.

On the same occasion, representatives of the Kampuchean youth committees and children warmly and cordially extended best wishes to a number of Vietnamese combatants who are returning to their fatherland and asked them to convey their profound thanks to the Vietnamese party and the fathers and mothers who have taught their sons and nephews to have such lofty internationalist ideals in assisting the Kampuchean people, thus enabling them to be reborn and achieve progress.

Permeated with warm and fraternal sentiments, a representative of the Vietnamese units which were returning home expressed profound thanks to the authorities and people of Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province for their assistance, which has enabled the Vietnamese combatants to fulfill their international duty on this territory.

The representative of the returning Vietnamese units noted: The Kampuchean people from all walks of life are joyfully stimulating the three revolutionary movements of struggling to increase production, building the revolutionary forces and combating the enemy, thus creating brilliant feats.

The comrade added: These victories have been broadened and are of strategic significance to the three countries in Indochina. Nothing can reverse the (?superiority), the state of triumph and the state of development of the Kampuchean revolution.

The comrade recalled the historic memories of our cooperation by stressing: We will always remember the close bond of militant solidarity between the masses and combatants of Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province and the Vietnamese cadres and combatants in the cause of the struggle against the common enemy of the two nations.

In a lofty spirit of proletarian internationalist solidarity and cooperation, he stressed: So long as the Kampuchean territory is still in danger and being threatened by the maneuvers of the Beijing expansionists who continue to collude with the U.S. imperialists, the recurrence of the dangerous and genocidal Pol Pot clique and the danger created by the traitors of all stripes, the Vietnamese people and army will continue to stand shoulder to shoulder with the fraternal Kampuchean people and KPRAF and struggle to defeat all dangers.

Inspired by the resolute spirit to fight vigorously in order to conquer the enemy, a representative of the Kampuchean combatants in Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province and a representative of the Vietnamese combatants who will continue their international duty in Kampuchea pledged to unite firmly in carrying out this glorious, heavy duty.

After expressing their enthusiasm for the agreement reached by the two states -- Kampuchea and Vietnam -- in withdrawing some of the Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, which reflects the firm advance of the Kampuchean revolution, the two representatives affirmed that they fully support the good will activity and will make every effort to contribute more actively to the cause of freedom and national independence of the two countries -- Kampuchea and Vietnam -- and the countries of Indochina.

The representative of the Kampuchean army pledged to carry out successfully all the orders of the Ministry of National Defense, always heighten revolutionary vigilance, fight and be ready to fight in order to achieve great victories, pay attention to carrying out the mass instigation work, follow the models set forth by the VPA in building the military units in all domains, intensify the emulation drive in the army units and enhance the construction capabilities and the combat qualities of the provincial armed forces.

On the morning of 15 July 1982, thousands of our people, cadres, personnel and workers in the provincial seat saw off the Vietnamese brothers and comrades-in-arms. Looking sad at the separation, they waved bouquets of flowers and expressed their best wishes, called out names, embraced, shook hands and threw flowers to the departing Vietnamese combatants. Others gave food and souvenirs to the Vietnamese combatants, expressing their warm sentiments as the sons and younger brothers to the Vietnamese combatants. The fraternal Vietnamese combatants expressed their great joy and affection by waving their caps and flags, embracing our people and speaking about the memories of their fraternal coexistence and cooperation which cannot be divided by any power.

Comrade Bou Thang, the comrades in the provincial party Control Committee and the provincial People's Committee and Comrade Ngo Dien, Vietnamese ambaassador to Kampuchea, were also present at this ceremony which proceeded in an atmosphere of gratitude and firm cooperation. They embraced the Vietnamese combatants and waved their hands to the departing combatants as a sign of the splendid bond of proletarian internationalist solidarity.

Phnom Penh Ceremony

BK181046 [Editorial Report] Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian at 1200 GMT on 17 July carries a 20-minute report on a ceremony held in Phnom Penh on the morning of 17 July to send off a number of Vietnamese troops returning home after fulfilling their international duty in Kampuchea.

After hailing the Vietnamese party, people and army for assisting the Kampuchean people, the announcer says: "This morning, having heard the news that the first group of Vietnamese troops, having fulfilled their international duty of saving the Kampuchean people from the genocidal regime, is moving from the western part of our Kampuchean fatherland in order to return home. Tens of thousands of the people in Phnom Penh, including monks, grandfathers, grandmothers, uncles, aunts, cadres, combatants, workers and personnel from all ministries and departments, teachers and students -- all dressed in colorful clothes -- headed toward the boulevard that the army columns will pass. They felt sad at the departure of the Vietnamese troops. Lined up along both sides of Tu Samut Boulevard, which stretches from Vat Phnum to Kbal Thnal, large numbers of men and women waved farewell with bouquets of flowers and national flags of the two countries."

The announcer then describes the decorations at the Independence Palace, which is the center of the ceremony, reports on the arrival of the truck convoy at 0830 and says that after the Pioneers and the representatives of the Kampuchean and Vietnamese women presented flowers to three representatives of the Vietnamese troops who came down from a truck, "on behalf of the Kampuchean party, government and people, Comrade Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense, cited fond memories and expressed affection, gratitude and best wishes to the Vietnamese troops for their safe return home and greater victories. The convoy then moved on while our people lining both sides of the boulevard waved flags and shouted cheers. Some of them moved closer to the convoy and gave flowers and exchanged flags with the Vietnamese troops. These gestures attested to the fact that our hearts will always be close together and the Kampuchea-Vietnam militant solidarity will exist forever."

The announcer then reports on his interviews with a worker of the printing house of the Ministry of Information and Culture, a teacher of Bak Tuk school, a representative of cadres and combatants of the military schools under the Defense Ministry and a resident of Phnom Penh, all of whom expressed gratitude to the Vietnamese troops for their assistance to Kampuchea and their affection and best wishes to the returning Vietnamese troops.

In conclusion, the announcer says: "The convoy went out of sight at 0900."

Troops Visit Defense Ministry

BK181002 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 17 July 82

[Text] On the evening of 16 July 1982, a delegation representing Vietnamese troops who were ready to return home paid a visit to cadres and combatants of the KPRAF at the National Defense Ministry. Present on that occasion to welcome the delegation were Comrade Bou Thang, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense, Comrade Tea Banh, deputy minister of national defense and deputy chief of the KPRAF General Staff; Comrade (?Cheng Than), deputy chief of the KPRAF General Logistics Department; Comrade Prum Thav, deputy chief of the KPRAF General Staff; as well as cadres and combatants of the National Defense Ministry.

In the name of the National Defense Ministry, the KPRAF, the Kampuchean people and orphans, Comrade Bou Thang expressed his most profound thanks to the VPA for its help in liberating the Kampuchean territory from the genocidal regime. He continued: The fact that the Vietnamese army sacrificed their lives to liberate and defend the Kampuchean territory is due to the Vietnamese people, in particular the mothers, wives and families of these Vietnamese combatants, who wholeheartedly advised their children and husbands to sincerely come to help their Kampuchean friends. In conclusion, Comrade Bou Thang emphasized: Cadres and combatants of the KPRAF are increasingly developing their spirit and relying on their own forces to advance and score victories in the struggle. This development is also aimed at building the country, improving good behavior, learning from Vietnamese friends and strengthening and enlarging the garden of friendship and proletarian internationalist solidarity between our countries with every passing day.

Later on, Comrade (Tran Ninh), a representative of returning Vietnamese troops, replied to Comrade Bou Thang's speech by expressing his enthusiastic feelings to the Kampuchean party, government and people for caring for the Vietnamese combatants as if they were their own children and for their close cooperation in fighting the enemy. The comrade went on: The Vietnamese army will return to help the Kampuchean party and government.

At the end of the visit, Comjade Bou Thang presented 7 January 1979 medals to cadres and combatants of the VPA who had performed great achievements in combat to liberate the Kampuchean territory, and gave small replicas of Angkor temple as souvenirs to the delegation. He also organized a party in honor of the Vietnamese delegation which took place in an atmosphere of joy, sincerity and militant solidarity.

DEFENSE MINISTRY HOLDS 4TH MILITARY CONFERENCE

[Text] The RPK Ministry of National Defense held the fourth national military conference in Phnom Penh during the second week of July. The conference was attended by leading-level cadres of brigade units, provincial and municipal military commands, military schools and departments subordinate to the Ministry of National Defense.

Speaking at the opening ceremony as a cochairman of the conference was Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the PRK Council of Ministers. On behalf of the party Central Committee and the Council of Ministers he expressed warmest congratulations for the brilliant feats our KPRAF has performed for more than 3 years. The comrade extended best regards to all the participants and told them to convey his best regards to all the cadres and male and female combatants of our army units who are struggling shoulder to shoulder with the Vietnamese comrades for the defense and construction of our fatherland.

The conference examined and grasped our party Central Committee's resolutions on military work, reviewed the work of the armed forces over the past year and examined and acknowledged the current targets. The conference unanimously agreed with the party Central Committee's resolution evaluating the military work. During the past year, our armed forces together with the people scored many achievements in the national construction work, combat and combat cooperation with the VPA and crushed all the perfidious maneuvers of the enemies. The conference exposed the maneuvers of the enemies and made the following assessment: Despite their repeated defeats, the enemies have not abandoned their perfidious maneuvers. With every passing day, the Beijing expansionists, colluding closely with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries, have further prompted the Khmer traitors Pol Pot, Ieng Sary, Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk and Son Sann to conduct guerrilla warfare, psychological warfare and espionage activities in order to destroy the Kampuchean revolution.

The conference condemned the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea as a defeat for the enemies. Even so, the enemies have obstinately used tricks to fool world public opinion and the Kampuchean people.

All the participants in the conference pledged to carry out successfully the four main tasks set forth by the party Central Committee in its resolution regarding the military, that is:

1. Carry out well the mass agitation work, stimulate the revolutionary movements of the masses and urge the people to build the revolutionary forces in districts and communes;

2. Be ready to crush the enemy, prepare combat plans in conformity with conditions and increase combat capabilities;

3. Build and make the revolutionary armed forces strong and rapidly developed in all domains, maintain close unity with the people and turn oneself into a genuinely hardcore force of the people in the cause of defending the revolutionary achievements and the fatherland;

4. Strengthen and firmly develop Kampuchea-Vietnam solidarity in order to crush all the deceitful and subversive maneuvers of the enemies.

The conference examined and grasped the circular of the party Secretariat and the directive of the Ministry of National Defense concerning the emulation drive to build and increase the construction and combat qualities of the KPRAF, which constitute the following five main points:

1. To fight and be ready to fight, to carry out well the mass agitation work and to fulfill all tasks;
2. To increase unity and to abide strictly by the discipline;
3. To study hard, to attend training actively and to build the unit in all domains;
4. To maintain and control well all the collective materials and to practice thrift; and
5. To launch the production of food for the army's consumption and to implement preventive measures against diseases.

The conference unanimously adopted a resolution pledging to the KPRP Secretariat that upon returning to their respective unit, all the participants will organize courses for the members of their units to study and grasp the circular of the party Secretariat and the directive of the Ministry of National Defense. In particular, they will stimulate the emulation drive among the cadres and male and female combatants.

They also pledged to implement all concrete measures according to the conditions in their units in order to stimulate the emulation drive in response to the requirements of the current duties of the armed forces.

The conference unanimously adopted a letter to cadres and male and female combatants throughout the country calling on all of them to join in the emulation drive and to enhance the construction and combat qualities of the armed forces in order to crush all the perfidious maneuvers of the enemies and bring about a peaceful and free life for our people.

Speaking at the closing ceremony of this fourth national military conference, Comrade Bou Thang, minister of national defense, hailed our KPRAF for the brilliant feats made in their national defense and reconstruction tasks. Fighting shoulder to shoulder with the fraternal Vietnamese forces, our entire army and people have crushed all the perfidious maneuvers launched by the enemies of all stripes. It is of special note that our KPRAF inflicted successive defeats on the enemies in the last dry season.

Comrade Bou Thang exposed and condemned the formation of the so-called CGDK by the reactionary Khmers, Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan, which is aimed at enabling the genocidal Pol Pot regime to return to massacre the Kampuchean people. He noted that this maneuver has been frustrated by the great united forces of the KPRAF and the people and the proletarian internationalist solidarity with the Vietnamese army in particular.

In conclusion, Comrade Bou Thang exhorted the participants to heighten vigilance, struggle vigorously to crush the enemies in all activities both militarily and politically, link themselves closely with the people, strive to build firm and strong armed forces both in terms of quantity and quality, strengthen and increase firm solidarity with the VPA and the Soviet Union and join with the people in the movement to increase the agricultural production for self-support and for improving the national economy.

The comrade also exhorted all units to grasp the party lines and policies and the technical knowledge needed to enhance their abilities for the defense and construction of the country, making it prosper rapidly.

The conference also conferred awards and citations on outstanding units, cadres and combatants. Three units which received the second class national defense awards are the 24th Battalion of the 3d Brigade; the armed forces of Siem Reap Province; and the armed forces of Baray District of Kompong Thom Province. Eleven other units and four cadres and combatants received the third class national defense awards. On behalf of the Council of Ministers, Comrade Bou Thang, minister of national defense, and Comrade Tea Banh, deputy minister of national defense, conferred awards on the oustanding units amid resounding applause.

The conference ended in a joyous atmosphere permeated with determination to engage in the emulation drive to stimulate brilliant feats during the latter half of this year.

VODK SCORES SRV 'FARCE ON SHAM TROOP WITHDRAWAL'

BK181013 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Station commentary: "The Vietnamese Le Duan Aggressors' Farce on Sham Troop Withdrawal"]

[Summary] "In an attempt to fool world public opinion and to extricate themselves from the total impasse and most serious difficulties in Kampuchea, militarily and politically, the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors have staged a farce on troop withdrawal from Kampuchea." This farce began with the Vietnamese aggressors' 7 July announcement that they planned to withdraw a number of their troops from Kampuchea.

It was followed by another announcement 10 days later that they have gradually withdrawn their troops from Kampuchea. But this farce can fool no one since the Kampuchean people, the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas, the Southeast Asian countries and peoples and all the peace and justice-loving countries and peoples in the world are well aware of the Vietnamese enemy's cunning nature.

The realities in the Kampuchean battlefield are totally contrary to the propaganda launched by the Vietnamese Le Duan clique. "Since the end of the 1981-82 dry season when they suffered the heaviest and most shameful defeats, the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors have continuously stationed more fresh troops from Vietnam in the Kampuchean battlefield. From 20 June to 13 July alone, while propagating their partial troop withdrawal, the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors sent 4,300 troops in 140 trucks from Tay Ninh Province in Vietnam along Route 22 to Kampuchea via Kompong Cham and Kompong Thom Provinces. They stationed 3,000 of these reinforcements in Chikreng and Siem Reap districts and 1,300 others in the western part of Kampuchea adjacent to the Thai border. It is also known to the world that in May the Vietnamese Le Duan clique sent 20,000 troops belonging to the 3d and 4th divisions in North Vietnam to Kampuchea."

All of this clearly attests to the sham withdrawal of the Vietnamese aggressor troops from Kampuchea that Nugyen Co Thach has kept ballyhooing. Everybody knows well that the Vietnamese aggressors will never withdraw even a single trooper from Kampuchea. This troop withdrawal propaganda is just a trick to fool the world that Vietnam is a peace seeker and has now softened its attitude. This is aimed at making the world, particularly the Southeast Asian countries, fall for the Vietnamese trick and at wiping out Democratic Kampuchea's forces and its legitimacy and right to representation at the United Nations, so that Vietnam can bury the UN resolutions on Kampuchea and realize its plan to occupy Kampuchea forever in accordance with its Indochinese federation strategy.

The Southeast Asian countries and peoples as well as all the peace and justice-loving countries and peoples throughout the world will never fall for this trick of partial troop withdrawal or any other perfidious maneuvers of the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors.

If the Vietnamese Le Duan clique really wants to solve the Kampuchean problem and to restore peace and stability in Southeast Asia, all it should do is to respect the UN resolutions and the declaration of the International conference on Kampuchea by withdrawing all of its aggressor troops immediately and unconditionally from Kampuchea.

LEADERS GREET SRV LEADERS ON TREATY ANNIVERSARY

[Greetings message, dated 17 July 1982, from LPDR Prime Minister Kaysone Phomvihan and President Souphanouvong to SRV leaders on the fifth anniversary of the signing of the treaty of friendship and cooperation]

[Text] To Comrade Le Duan, general secretary of the VCP Central Committee;

Comrade Troung Chinh, president of the Council of State;

Comrade Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers; and Comrade Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the National Assembly, in Hanoi:

On the occasion of the fifth anniversary of the signing of the treaty of friendship and cooperation between the LPDR and the SRV, on behalf of the LPRP, the SPC, the LPDR Government, the Lao people and in our own names, we are extremely happy to extend our warm salutations and best wishes to you, Comrades, and, through you, to the VCP, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers of the SRV, and the fraternal heroic Vietnamese people.

The treaty of friendship and cooperation between Laos and Vietnam constitutes a significant event in our existing relations which have developed since our two countries have joined with each other in carrying out the struggle against the common enemy for independence and freedom, and marks a splendid development of the special solidarity, militant alliance and all-round cooperation between Laos and Vietnam, which have been constantly nurtured and cultivated by the two parties and peoples.

Looking back over the past 5 years, we note with great satisfaction that the implementation of the treaty has brought actual good results to the national defense and socialist construction of the Lao people, thus testifying to the strength and vigor of the great friendship, militant solidarity and all-round cooperation between Laos and Vietnam, which have remained important factors ensuring victories for our two countries in the past struggle against the imperialists and the current national defense and national construction in our respective countries.

Fully realizing the necessity of our militant alliance, which has become the law of existence and development of our two countries, we will do out utmost to continue strengthening and making the special relations of Laos and Vietnam flourish forever. At the same time, we will unceasingly enhance further the strength of the solidarity among the Lao, Vietnamese and Kampuchean peoples, and strengthen further solidarity and all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union and the countries in the socialist community, thus contributing to the struggle of all nations for peace and socialism.

During the past several decades of our revolutionary struggle, we have been very proud to have the VCP, founded and nurtured by the great Chairman Ho Chi Minh, and the fraternal Vietnamese people as our close comrades who have consistently rendered assistance filled with the spirit of proletarian internationalism to the Lao revolution. We would like to take this opportunity to express our profound gratitude to the party, government and people of Vietnam for such precious assistance and support. We wish the fraternal Vietnamese people, under the resolute and talented leadership of the VCP led by Comrade General Secretary Le Duan, greater achievements in implementing the resolutions of the Fifth VCP Congress and in carrying out the tasks of building and defending their socialist country.

May the great friendship, speical solidarity and all-round cooperation between the two parties and peoples last forever.

Vientiane, 17 Jul 1982

[Signed] Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee and prime minister of the LPDR;

Souphanouvong, president of state and chairman of the SPC of the LPDR

DEPUTY PREMIER SALI ON RELATIONS WITH SRV

VNA Interview

OW170931 Hanoi VNA in English 0711 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jul 17 -- "The special friendship between Laos and Vietnam is a precious tradition and an invincible strength of the two nations and parties, a vivid reality and a law of development of the revolution in both countries," said Lao Vice Premier Sali Vongkhamsao on the fifth anniversary of the Vietnam-Laos treaty of friendship and cooperation (July 18). Sali Vongkhamsaown who is also secretary of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party Central Committee, in an interview with a VNA correspondent in Vientiane, said:

"In execution of Article 2 of the treaty, the peoples and armed forces of our two countries have wholeheartedly supported and assisted each other and closely cooperated to strengthen their national defence capabilities, safeguard their independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, ensure their peaceful labour, and defeat all provocative plots and acts carried out by the Beijing authorities in collusion with U.S.-led imperialism and other reactionary forces in an attempt to sabotage and annex Laos and Vietnam. Our bilateral relations and mutual assistance meet the interests of both peoples and contribute to peace and stability in this region".

"Laos and Vietnam have formed commissions for economic scientific-technical cooperation at the central and local levels as well as between sister provinces with a view to diversifying their relationship and increasing the exchange of experience.

"During its economic rehabilitation period and in its current first five-year plan, Laos received Vietnam's aid and loans to build its material and technical bases, broaden its goods exchanges and train its cadres.

"Vietnam has helped Laos train more than 1,000 cadres and technical workers each year and improve their cultural level. Also each year, more than 900 Vietnamese technicians and specialists are sent to Laos and more than 50 delegations of the governments, ministries, provinces, economic branches and mass organizations. Although it still faces many difficulties caused by the enemy and natural calamities, Vietnam has helped Laos investigate, survey, design and build more than 50 projects in agriculture, forestry, irrigation, communications, transport, geology, engineering, etc. It has also helped Laos work out 50 economic programmes in such areas as state farms, road repair and maintenance, education and medical care, industrial production and urban construction.

"In the recent past, Laos has commissioned a number of Vietnamese funded projects such as the Dong Luc machine repair factory, the Ban Ang Airport (Xiengkhoang Province), the provincial towns of Meuang Phin, Nong Het and Viengsay, the Hat Xieu brick and tile factory (Vientiane) and the warehouses in Meuang Khoa.

"The two countries have also enhanced their cooperation in literature, art, public health, education, news agency, press, radio, cinematography and physical culture and sports.

"The economic co-operation between the two countries has recorded initial results: For instance, the joint exploitation of gypsum in Long Hen to supply materials for the cement industry in both countries, or the coming joint exploitation of the timber resources on Highway 9 (Savannakhet) of which preparations are nearing completion.

Goods exchanges between the two countries at central as well as local levels have constantly been extended and diversified. Vietnam exports to Laos mainly consumer goods, materials and equipment in exchange for agricultural and forestry products.

The achievements recorded by the Lao people in the recent past are inseparable from the common successes of the three Indochinese countries, the assistance from the Soviet Union and the other fraternal socialist countries and international aid, especially the mutual we have achieved major success in many fields within a short period. [sentence as received] That is a basis for the development of the cooperation between our two countries in the future.

Through our practical experience, we can affirm that the development of friendship and (?broad) cooperation among the Indochinese countries, between the Indochinese countries and the Soviet Union and the other fraternal socialist countries is a factor to ensure victory for socialist construction in Laos.

Sali Vongkhamsao continued: "We have also successfully implemented the treaty on the delineation of the national borders between Laos and Vietnam by completing the planting of border markers and the building of border gates. This has helped the people on either side of the border to earn their living in peace and make mutual visits, thus enhancing the fine tradition of friendship between our two countries."

On behalf of the party, the government and people of Laos, Sali Vongkhamsao expressed his sincere and deep gratitude to the party, government and people of Vietnam, and said: "The great services and noble sacrifices of the Vietnamese people for the Lao revolution will forever remain in the national history of Laos and in the heart of each of our compatriots."

KPL Interview

BK171133 Vientiane KPL in English 0914 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Text] Vientiane, July 16 (KPL) -- Sali Vonghamsao, secretary of the party Central Committee, vice premier and chairman of State Planning Committee, on July 15, gave an interview on Laos-Vietnam relations to mark the 5th anniversary of the signing of the treaty between Laos and Vietnam.

Answering questions on the effect of the implementation of agreements in the fields of socialist construction, national defense tasks in Laos and Vietnam, as well as the success in the efforts for peace, stability, friendship and regional cooperation, Vice Premier Sali Vongkhamsao said that the party, government and people of Laos deeply acknowledge the indestructible special relations between Laos and Vietnam, the combative solidarity and friendship of the two countries.

The spirit of firm ties of comradeship between the Lao People's Revolutionary Party and the Communist Party of Vietnam has clearly been manifested in all struggles against the common enemies, and in the efforts in the tasks of national construction in their respective countries.

S. Vongkhamsao further pointed out various achievements due to the assistance of Vietnam during the past 5 years in which more than 50 Vietnamese-funded economic development projects were realized. All of these, he stressed, come about due to the solidarity, cooperation and assistance basing on proletarian internationalism, equality, and respect of each other's national independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity which the two countries enjoy. Consequently, he said, the prestige of the two countries has been highly raised in the international arena.

The actual deeds carried out in the past 5 years, said the vice premier, have been done according to the spirit mentioned in the treaty on special friendship between Laos and Vietnam. It has become a victorious force and valuable tratition needed for the development of the two countries' revolutions.

Under the able leadership of the LPRP led by General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan, we have educated the whole party and people to appreciate the significance in the Laos-Vietnam special relations, and to cherish such friendship, S. Vongkhamsao emphasized.

The Lao people highly appraised the great contributions of the Vietnamese People's Army in collaboration with the Lao People's Army in the defense of security and independence of the two countries. In conformity with the Article 2 of the treaty, S. Vongkhamsao further pointed out, there is a need for assistance and the firm cooperation between the two countries in order to enhance the strength in defending the independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity, and the peaceful labouring tasks of the peoples and to fight against all maneuvers and provocation of the Beijing ruling circles in collusion with the U.S.A. and other reactionary forces which intend to bring the two countries under their control.

The relations and mutual assistance of the two countries meet the two nation's interests and those aiming for regional peace and stability. This fact does not threaten any other country's security, the vice premier said.

Concerning the economic and cultural cooperation between the two countries, the vice premier noted that in the past 5 years, the two countries had set up economic, scientific and technical cooperation committees, and exchanged different level delegations on this field aiming at enhancing relations and exchanging experiences. Millions of dong were granted as loans and aid to Laos by the Socialist Republic of Vietnam all of which are used for the fulfillment of the first 5-year plan in Laos including the construction of technical bases, trade exchanges and formation of personnels.

Each year, more than 1,000 Lao technicians receive training in Vietnam and more than 900 Vietnamese experts help in different projects here in the forms of aid to Laos. Despite having difficulties caused by enemies as well as by natural calamities, the Vietnamese people still continue to actively assist Laos.

The achievements obtained by the Lao people have in themselves expanded the common victory of the three Indochinese countries which enjoy support and aid from the Soviet Union and other socialist countries as well as from the international organisations.

The past fact clearly shows that the enhancement of relations and all-round cooperation among the three Indochinese countries, and that with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries, represents a significant factor to guarantee victory in socialist construction in Laos.

Concerning foreign policy, S. Vongkhamsao said that Laos and Vietnam are to firmly consolidate mutual support, solidarity and assistance basing on Marxism-Leninism, proletarian internationalism, equality, and respect of each other's independence, sovereignty, and territorial integrity. The foreign ministers' conferences of the three Indochina countries prove this fact. The efforts of the conferences also contribute to peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world.

The vice premier also expressed sentiment of affection for having genuine friends such as Vietnamese people who tirelessly honour their international obligations and continually assist Laos in all fields. Having expressed thanks to the Vietnamese party, government and people, the vice premier further stressed that the noble sacrifices made by the Vietnamese people for the interests of the Lao revolution will always be recorded in the Lao history and in the memory of the entire Lao people.

Vice Premier Sali Vongkhamsao, in the end, expressed conviction that the ties between Laos and Vietnam will be forever blossomed which meet the aspiration of the two countries. Wishes of successes in the implementation of the resolutions adopted by the 5th Congress of the VCP were also formulated by Vice Premier Sali Vongkhamsao.

VIENTIANE RALLY MARKS LAOS-SRV TREATY

BK171059 Vientiane KPL in English 0908 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Text] Vientiane, July 17 (OANA/KPL) -- The Laos-Vietnam Friendship Association [LVFA] organized this morning a rally here to mark the 5th anniversary of the signing of treaty of friendship and cooperation between Laos and Vietnam.

Present on this occasion were Sali Vongkhamsao, secretary of the party CC, vice premier and chairman of the State Planning Committee; Colonel General Saman Vi-Gnaket, party CC Secretariat member, deputy minister of national defense, and head of the General Political Department of the army; and other members of the party and representatives of the mass organizations. Nguyen Xuan and Neou Samon, respectively ambassadors of Vietnam and Kampuchea to Laos, were also present.

In their addresses delivered at the rally, Ounheuan Phounsavat and Nguyen Xuan, respectively deputy minister of propaganda, information, culture and tourism and vice president of LVFA, and Vietnamese Ambassador, pointed out the significance of the treaty and achievements scored in the implementation of the treaty signed on July 18, 1977. The treaty, they said, is based on Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism, which pay due attention to each other's independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity, and equality.

They also expressed this conviction that, in the future, the special friendship relations and cooperation between the parties, governments and peoples of the two countries will be further developed and consolidated.

The mutual assistance under the comradeship spirit between Laos and Vietnam will surely strengthen the tie of combative solidarity and will in itself expand the common victorious force of the three Indochinese countries. This will help to defeat the hostile policy of Beijing hegemonists and expansionists who closely collude with U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces and foolishly carry out their maneuvers against our three nations, O. Phounsavat stressed.

Thanks to these relations, O. Phounsavat finally said, the three Indochinese countries have successfully and firmly safeguarded their respective national independence and sovereignty. The socialist outpost in this region. [sentence as received] This has contributed to the struggle of world humanity for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

AUSTRIAN FOREIGN MINISTER PAHR ARRIVES 16 JULY

[Excerpt] The foreign minister of Austria, Dr Willibald Pahr, flew into Bangkok this morning to begin a 4-day official visit to Thailand at the invitation of his Thai counterpart Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila. Foreign Minister Pahr was welcomed at Don Muang International Airport by Air Chief Marshal Sitthi on arrival.

The two foreign ministers held official talks this afternoon which, according to informed sources, concentrated mainly on the possibility of achieving a comprehensive political settlement of the Kampuchean problem. Dr Pahr is also president of the UN-sponsored International Conference on Kampuchea which held its first meeting in New York in July last year, coincidentally 1 year to today when this meeting took place. Bilateral issues were also discussed as followups to the talks which took place during the official visit to Vienna in April this year of Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon and that of Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila himself which took place toward the end of last month.

Sitthi, Pahr on Meeting

[Text] Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr, who is currently on an official visit to Thailand from 16 to 19 July, met and held official talks with his Thai counterpart Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs at 1500 today. The talks ended at 1630.

Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila told newsmen he had exchanged views with the Austrian Foreign Minister on the Kampuchean problem. The Austrian foreign minister informed Air Chief Marshal Sitthi about his visit to the SRV and his meeting with Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach. The Austrian foreign minister cited Nguyen Co Thach as saying that Vietnam is willing to withdraw its troops from Kampuchea if it can be guaranteed that there will not be any threat from Kampuchea to Vietnam.

Air Chief Marshal Sitthi said: We have acknowledged and will further consider this guesture by Vietnam because we must study further details and want to hear Nguyen Co Thach's explanation when he comes here on 28 July. After we have clearer information, we will then hold consultations with the other ASEAN members on this matter. Air Chief Marshal Sitthi continued: Thailand does not want to confront any country. We want a political settlement. We are ready to consider any path which can lead to durable peace.

Meanwhile, the Austrian Foreign Minister told newsmen that during his meeting with the Thai foreign minister today, he informed his Thai counterpart about the topics he had discussed with SRV Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach. He said his visit to Vietnam was very interesting in many respects. First, Vietnam welcomed him in his capacity of chairman of the committee on solution of the Kampuchean problem in accordance with the UN resolutions. Formerly, Vietnam recognized him only as the foreign minister of Austria.

Secondly, Vietnam indicated it was preparing in principle for a total withdrawal of its troops from Kampuchea if the Khmer Rouge threat to Vietnam and the Kampuchean people ended, and if the Khmer Rouge government was not revived. It can be said that Vietnam has demonstrated a flexible attitude and better gesture toward the efforts to find a solution to the Kampuchean problem as the UN resolutions call for the total withdrawal of foreign troops from Kampuchea.

Asked if the international conference on Southeast Asia proposed by the Indochinese countries would help solve the Kampuchean problem, the Austrian foreign minister said that, in principle, any conference should be useful. However, it should concentrate on the Kampuchean problem. If the conference covers every problem, it might not help very much in solving the problem.

Malaysia's Ghazali Arrives

BK171243 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Text] Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie met with Democratic Kampuchean leaders during his 1-day visit to Bangkok and left this morning on his scheduled visit to Singapore. He told newsmen prior to his departure that while here me met with Thai Foriegn Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila and Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr, who is the chairman of the International Conference on Kampuchea. He also met with Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea and Son Sann, prime minister of Democratic Kampuchea.

The Malaysian foreign minister was asked to comment on the establishment of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, but he refused to comment and asked newsmen to ask the Thai foreign minister.

BK170555 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 17 Jul 82 pp 1-2

[Excerpt] Thailand still have doubts on several parts of the so-called "new elements" in the latest Vietnamese position on the Kampuchean question, Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila said yesterday. After being briefed by Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr who just came from Hanoi, Sitthi told reporters many points in the Vietnamese position relayed to him by Pahr have yet to be clarified in details.

"We will seek clarifications and take some time to study it," Sitthi said. "In fact, we would rather wait to hear it directly from Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach himself," ACM Sitthi added.

Asked whether the new Vietnamese position represented any sign of progress in the Kampuchean stalemate, Sitthi noted that Pahr considered it "some progress"; as for Thailand, the Thai position remains hopeful on finding a political solution to the Kampuchean question. "We want to wait and see what he (Thach) will tell other countries that he will be visiting," ACM Sittwi said.

Pahr and Sitthi met at the Foreign Ministry yesterday afternoon for about an hour. A spokesman for the Foreign Ministry said the discussion also included bilateral issues and followups to the talks which took place during the visits to Vienna by Premier Prem Tinsulanon in April and Sitthi in June.

Malaysian Foreign Minister Ghazali Shafie stopped over in Bangkok last night and met with Sitthi to listen to what Pahr had told him. Ghazali said in Kuala Lumpur before he left for Bangkok, Vietnam's announcement of partial military withdrawal from Kampuchea is "encouraging" but added: "We do not know what a partial withdrawal means," according to an AP report.

He also said the partial withdrawal proposal is "a wrong way out" for Vietnam. The right solution, he added, is for Vietnam to withdraw all its troops from Kampuchea, attend the ICK [International Conference on Kampuchea] and agree to a political solution guaranteeing an independent Kampuchea that is not hostile to its neighbours.

In his speech at the dinner reception in honour of Pahr which Ghazali also attended, ACM Sitthi reiterated the significance of the formation of the "three major nationalist resistance movements." "We believe that this will complement the international efforts to bring about the comprehensive political settlement in Kampuchea. And it is therefore essential that the new government of Democratic Kampuchea should enjoy the widest support of the international community," ACM Sitthi said.

He also said that Thailand hopes the International Conference on Kampuchea [ICK) under the chairmanship of Pahr will be able to solve the Kampuchean problem.

Pahr's Hanoi Visit Viewed

BK170245 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 17 Jul 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Pahr Opens Door Toward Khmer Negotiations"]

[Text] There are several interesting approaches made by Vietnam which Willibald Pahr, Austrian foreign minister and chairman of the International Conference on Kampuchea (ICK) has brought back to Bangkok from Hanoi. These new approaches confirm, to some extent at least, the hope and optimism we saw in the communique which was issued last week after the "Indochinese foreign ministers' conference" in Ho Chi Minh City. We consider it highly important that Pahr whose visit was accepted by Hanoi only in his capacity as Austrian foreign minister and not as chairman of ICK should have been able to discuss the Kampuchean issue with the Vietnamese authorities.

This fact in itself stresses that thaw in the recalcitrant attitude that has been Vietnam's line since December, 1978, when she invaded Kampuchea. There are three points about Pahr's talks in Hanoi which we must underline: 1) Pahr got the impression that the situation in Kampuchea is no longer irreversible; 2) He discussed total pullout of Vietnamese troops according to ICK resolutions and not a partial withdrawal as announced in the Ho Chi Minh City communique; 3) Pahr takes the stand that the international conference proposed in that same communique should be supplementary to the ICK and cannot replace ICK.

While we take our hats off to Pahr, we are astonished at the humble attitude which Vietnam has taken. Could our highly optimistic speculations, made against our better judgment, during this week be possibly correct? We can only keep our fingers crossed.

Time and time again, like a broken record, Hanoi has said that the situation in Kampuchea is irreversible. It is not an original statement since it is part of the Brezhnev Doctrine which says that all socialist revolutions are irreversible. Has the Kremlin told Hanoi that what it was doing was not a "socialist revolution" but outright aggression which Vietnam has been unable to bring to a quick conclusion? We do not believe that since the same thing is happening to the Soviet Union in Afghanistan.

If this "reversible factor" is taken into consideration with Pahr discussing total pullout of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea in Hanoi, then the variables in the equation multiply. Two questions which we had asked earlier will bear repetition: How much is Vietnam hurting? How much of this is due to the Kremlin pulling strings from backstage? The answer to both these questions will be evident if Vietnam accepts Pahr's proposal that an international conference as proposed by the Ho Chi Minh City communique could be held as a supplementary to ICK.

But let us generalize on the full thrust of Pahr's discussions in Hanoi. Vietnam, without overtly saying so, was prepared to talk to Pahr in his capacity as chairman of ICK and Pahr himself took a very tough stand limiting himself strictly to the mandate he obtained from ICK. This leads us to the speculation that what Hanoi is seeking in Kampuchea, at the moment for various reasons, is only a government in Phnom Penh which is not pro-Chinese.

If our speculation is correct then Pahr, representing ICK, and ASEAN are on very strong ground. ASEAN, when ICK convened in New York last year, stood strongly, against vigorous Chinese objections, that when the Vietnamese pull out or [are] militarily ousted there should be a UN-supervised general elections to produce a popular government with the mandate of the people. And according to the agreement which made the coalition government possible, Kampuchea will be a neutral country and will not come under the wing of any major power.

Close upon the important Ho Chi Minh City communique, Pahr has opened the door rather widely for a political settlement in Kampuchea.

The Vietnamese leaders certainly may not want such a solution but the turn of events might have forced them to salvage as much of their objectives as possible. It is our opinion that a positive set of circumstances have been set in motion and now it is the duty of ASEAN, the newly formed coalition, and Pahr representing ICK to gently and firmly to follow up on the new developments.

AFP: SRV BUILDING 'MAGINOT LINE' IN KAMPUCHEA

[By Jim Wolf]

[Excerpt] Bangkok, July 19 (AFP) -- Vietnam has begun to build a kind of Cambodian Maginot Line 10 kms (six miles) from the border with Thailand, Thai border authorities said today.

The authorities, quoting Vietnamese defectors and other intelligence information, said the staggered concrete-and-barbed wire defense line was apparently designed for rainy season reorganization. The "phase line," as the U.S. Army might call it, is said to stretch from north of the key Thai border town Aranyaprathet to areas opposite Thailand's southeastern Trat Province, a distance of some 200 kms (120 miles). Work began on the structure last month, the authorities said. They said it appeared to be more permanent than previous wet-season defenses, which mainly used sandbags. Western defense attaches were unable to immediately confirm such work was under way, but said they had previously looked into reports of a possible "bamboo barrier."

Thai authorities say the Vietnamese have pulled back from the frontier because the monsoon shifts the tactical advantage to the more mobile guerrillas of the ousted Khmer Rouge government. They say the announced withdrawal of part of the Vietnam's 150,000-plus garrison in Cambodia was also tied to rainy season tactics and amounted to a mere troop rotation.

Vietnam's reported partial withdrawal, said to have begun Thursday, was the first public pull-back since the 1978 invasion. According to a well-placed Thai source, who quoted intelligence reports, the Vietnamese units said to have been withdrawn had been in Cambodia for up to three years. The source, who asked not to named, said other units had been beefed up prior to the pullback.

MATICHON WARNS OF 'MORE TROUBLE' FROM SRV

BK161003 Bangkok MATICHON in Thai 16 Jul 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Be Firm and Determined"]

[Text] The Supreme Command information office has issued a statement refuting the accusation made by Vietnam that Thailand, in cooperation with the CIA, has sent infiltrators to undermine its government. The statement, which was issued promptly, says the accusation is a new Vietnamese farce to deceive the world's people. Nobody knows whether the statement will make Vietnam feel ashamed of its notorious behavior or not. The world's people are now keeping their eyes on Vietnam's actions. Vietnam has been trying to draw Thailand into the Kampuchean conflict because Thailand is one of the countries helping the coalition government of the three Kampuchean factions who are now fighting for their national independence and democracy.

The Supreme Command information office points out in the statement that the Lao, Kampuchean and even the Vietnamese themselves all want to uproot the present Vietnamese Government because it has caused many difficulties and sufferings in their countries. While the Vietnamese people are fleeing their country, the Vietnamese ruling circle is trying to keep Laos and Kampuchean under its control. The Vietnamese, Lao and Kampuchean peoples are opposing the Vietnamese Government. This is obvious.

The world's people trusted and used to sympathize with Vietnam when it rose up to wage a heroic struggle against imperialism. Vietnam does not realize that things have changed.

We do not believe that Vietnam will simply discard its dark scheme soon. The second and third waves of more trouble will definitely follow. We must be firm, determined and ready to cope with any kind of situation.

VIETNAMESE REFUGEES IN BANGKOK CAUSE 'ALARM'

[Text] A sudden influx of Vietnamese refugees who have escaped from their restricted communities in the northeast into Bangkok has touched off alarm among security people who fear that it might be part of a plan engineered by an outside government to create unrest in the city.

Informed military intelligence sources disclosed yesterday that a number of the fugitives were known to have held regular meetings at sports facilities here in Bangkok. Several of the refugees, both male and female, have been traced and sent back to the northeast where they are being questioned about their activities, the sources said.

The sources declined to disclose the number of refugees who have escaped into Bangkok or to identify those already arrested and are being interrogated. However, the sources said it was believed that their activities might be connected with those of the Communist Party of Thailand (CPT). The sources said that the influx of the Vietnamese refugees into the city seemed to coincide with secret movement by a large number of known CPT members into Bangkok and other urban areas. Several of them, including those with positions of provincial committee members, have already been arrested, the sources said. An investigation is now being conducted to look for more important figures who might be involved in the plan, the sources added.

Meanwhile, Second Police Region Commissioner Lt Gen Rut Kantarat told the BANGKOK POST in a separate interview yesterday that there are currently about 75,000 Vietnamese refugees and their relatives living in the restricted communities in the northeastern provinces of Nong Khai, Idon Thani, Ubon Ratchathani, Nakhon Phanom, Sakon Nakhon, Loei and in Prachin Buri in the east and Surat Thani and Phatthalung in the south. All of them had illegally entered the country during the political turmoil in Vietnam between 1942 and 1943, he said. Of this total, about 40,000 are those who formed the first batches to arrive in Thailand and have been provided with temporary settlement while the rest are their children, he said.

KING REPORTED RECOVERING FROM ILLNESS

[Text] His majesty the king is recovering satisfactorily from lung and heart complications, the Royal Household Bureau announced yesterday. A panel of eleven doctors tending to his majesty is satisfied with his majesty's stable condition, the announcement said. The announcement added that his majesty had regained appetite and could sleep more.

On Friday, the Royal Household Bureau announced that his majesty had recovered after having relapsed into a worrying condition for several days. In that announcement, the bureau said that the panel of doctors had advised his majesty to suspend all public functions for an "extended period of time."

The bureau said yesterday that in light of his majesty's steady recovery from the illness, no more daily medical bulletin on the condition of the king will be issued from today onwards.

SENDOFF FOR SIX VPA UNITS IN PRK REPORTED

[Excerpts] Implementing the joint communique of the sixth regular conference of the SRV, LPDR and PRK foreign ministers held in Ho Chi Minh City on 6 and 7 July 1982, a number of VPA units which have completed their international obligation in Kampuchea have left for their own country.

On 14 July 1982, the local authorities on the northern Kampuchean border held a solemn meeting to send off the VPA units returning to their fatherland. Attending the meeting were Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense; representatives of the local party committee, administration, mass organizations and the armed forces and various strata of the people. SRV Ambassador to the PRK, Ngo Dien and representatives officers and combatants of VPA units who have completed their international obligation also attended.

At this meeting, Comrade Bou Thang, on behalf of the Kampuchean Council of State, pinned First Class National Defense decorations, the highest decoration of the PRK, onto the flags of six VPA units which have completed their international obligations in Kampuchea. On behalf of the PRK's Council of Ministers and National Defense Ministry, he also awarded a souvenir of solidarity, alliance and fulfillment of international obligations to these six units, and pinned the 7 January victory medals to the cadres and combatants of various units.

In an enthusiastic atmosphere, medals were bestowed on the comanders and guidons of the six units, and presents were given to the commanders. A colonel commanding one VPA unit made a statement for the six units. He expressed the honor felt by the cadres and combatants who have fulfilled the glorious international obligations in fraternal Kampuchea and expressed their elation at the great and comprehensive victory of the Kampuchean revolution in the past 3 years.

On behalf of the VPA units which have fulfilled their international obligations, we solemnly awarded to the party organization and administration of the locality and a KPRAF unit two scrolls bearing the words: The militant solidarity between the peoples and armies of Vietnam and Kampuchea will last forever; Let's unite to fight and be courageously victorious for the sake of the people. He also presented a portrait of respected and beloved President Ho Chi Minh to the local military command. The meeting concluded in an atmosphere of militant solidarity and alliance and fraternal friendship among comrades who have shared a common combat trench.

On 15 July 1982, the local people in the northern border area of Kampuchea gave an emotional sendoff to the VPA units returning home. Comrade Bou Thang and the local administration's leaders inquired about the health of cadres and combatants before their departure. Large numbers of people, cadres of local administration agencies, cadres and combatants of the Kampuchean Armed Forces, and teenaged students were standing along both sides of the road with flowers in hand to wave an emotional goodbye to the Vietnamese troops.

NHAN DAN on Troop Withdrawal

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jul 18 — "The withdrawal of a number of units of the Vietnam People's Army from Kampuchea this month shows our good will in taking the first step in our relations with Thailand and our sincere desire to improve our relations with other Southeast Asian countries" says NHAN DAN in a commentary today on the withdrawal of a number of Vietnamese units from northern Kampuchea on July 15. The paper continues:

"We hope that the Thai Government will positively respond to this will. [as received] Considering the security and stability along the Kampuchea-Thai border and Thailand's response, the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the People's Republic of Kampuchea might consider further withdrawal of Vietnamese troops in the near future.

"The withdrawal of a number of units of the Vietnam People's Army from Kampuchea", the paper stresses, "also indicates a steadydevelopment of the Kampuchean revolution. Over the past three years or so in spite of the brutal and wicked manouevres of the imperialists, the expansionists and their henchmen, the Kampuchean situation has markedly improved in political, military and economic fields. The election of the National Assembly, the adoption of a new constitution and the holding of the Fourth Congress of the People's Revolutionary Party of Kampuchea were important events in the process of revival and development of that country.

"In the military field, the Kampuchean Revolutionary Armed Forces have considerably grown up in both quantity and quality, in command and fighting level, and in military equipment. Meanwhile, the local armed forces and militia have developed throughout the country".

"While the assorted groups of Kampuchean reactionaries have formed a so-called 'coalition government', the partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea has testified to the strong position of the Kampuchean revolution in both political and military fields. If the reactionaries in the Beijing ruling circle, their lackeys and other reactionary forces take advantage of the partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea to push up their hostile activities against the Kampuchean people, then the People's Republic of Kampuchea and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam will consult each other in accordance with Article Two of the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation signed between the two countries and will take appropriate measures", the paper stresses.

SIHANOUK ROLE IN COALITION GOVERNMENT SCORED

[Text] After going shopping for a few days, clown Sihanouk jumped on the Bangkok stage and loudly introduced himself as the president of genocidal Pol Pot's Democratic Kampuchea and no longer as an international clown, which some Western journalists used to call him.

Some curious Western journalists came and asked clown Sihanouk why he had previously let the Khmer Rouge return to power, which was like releasing a preying wolf among the sheep, and why he is now cooperating with the Khmer Rouge.

Dumbfounded for a while, the Democratic Kampuchean president answered: Times have changed. As Khmers we would rather be cannibalized by the Khmer Rouge (UPI 12 July). This was to please the Beijing boss and father of Pol Pot's genocide after wolf Pol Pot had eaten 3 million Khmers.

Having been dug out of the garbage can several times before by Beijing in the event of stalements, Sihanouk is now being used by the expansionist and hegemonist boss and other bosses as a mask for the genocidal Khmer Rouge in order to continually undermine the revival of the Kampuchean people.

He then raised a hue and cry to slander Vietnam because Vietnam has rescued the Khmer people from the jaws of the wolves Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan of Beijing expansionism and hegemony. Finally, to better express the sentiments of the characters in the farce, clown Sihanouk entertained again: We do not hate Americans. Washington supports the coalition government of the genocidal Democratic Kampuchea because of its own interests.

ANNIVERSARY OF TREATY WITH LAOS MARKED

Leaders Greet Lao Counterparts

OW171600 Hanoi VNA in English 1535 GMT 17 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 17 -- Vietnamese leaders today congratulated their Lao counterparts on the successful implementation of the treaty of friendship and cooperation and the treaty on the delineation of national borders between Vietnam and Laos over the past five years.

The congratulations were addressed to Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party Central Committee and prime minister; and Souphanouvong, president of the Lao People's Democratic Republic and chairman of the People's Supreme Assembly; by Le Duan, general secretary of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee; Truong Chinh, president of the Council of State; Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers; and Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the National Assembly, who said:

"The signing of these historical documents was an event of great importance and a very fine development of the special Vietnamese-Lao relations in the new stage of revolution -- the stage of socialist construction and national defence in each country. This event also marked a splendid development of the traditional, close relations cultivated by our two parties and peoples in the decades-long struggle against imperialist aggression, for independence, freedom and socialism.

"We note with joy that with the implementation of the treaty of friendship and cooperation over the past five years the militant solidarity and all-sided cooperation between the two countries on the firm basis of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism have vigorously developed, particularly on the political, economic, cultural and technical planes. The Vietnamese-Lao border has thus been built into one of lasting peace and friendship, and good conditions have been created for revolution in both countries. The Vietnamese party and people are glad that the special relations between Vietnam and Laos as well as the Vietnamese-Lao-Kampuchean relations are very solid, pure and exemplary, that they are vital to our existence and decisive to the development of revolution in each country, and provide us with the necessary strength to cope with our common enemy and build a new life for our peoples.

"Over the past five years, under the clearsighted leadership of the glorious L.P.R.P., headed by esteemed Secretary-General Kaysone Phomvihan, the heroic Lao people have overcome many difficulties and trials. They have thwarted all schemes of sabotage of the reactionaries in the Beijing leadership in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces, and recorded great achievements in national construction and defence, thus firmly advancing the Lao revolution towards socialism and enhancing the position of Laos in the world. We firmly believe that the Lao people, in the light of the resolutions of the Third L.P.R.P. Congress, will score greater success in defending and building a peaceful, independent, unified, socialist Laos.

"At all stages of their revolution and in each of their victories the Communist Party and people of Vietnam have enjoyed consistent, wholehearted support and assistance from the party and fraternal people of Laos. On this occasion, the people, the Communist Party, the National Assembly and the Government of Vietnam sincerely thank the people, the party, the People's Supreme Assembly and the Government of Laos for their fraternal support and assistance given in the pure spirit of proletarian internationalism. We shall do our best to carry out in the most effective way the treaties we have signed with Laos to preserve forever the special Vietnamese-Lao relationship and help enhance the solidarity of the peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea and the unity of the socialist community, for national independence and socialism, and for peace and cooperation in Southeast Asia and the rest of the world.

"May the great friendship, special militant solidarity and all-sided cooperation between Vietnam and Laos and among Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea further consolidate and develop more fruitfully.

"We wish you the best of health and many outstanding achievements in your noble mission."

Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has also sent his congratulations to Lao Foreign Minister Phoun Sipaseut. On this occasion, the Vietnam-Laos Friendship Association and the Vietnam Fatherland Front Central Committee have sent their greetings to the Laos-Vietnam Friendship Association and the Central Committee of the Lao Front for National Construction.

Hanoi Meeting 17 July

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 17 -- A grand meeting was held here this evening to mark the 5th anniversary of the signing of the Vietnam-Laos treaty of friendship and cooperation. The meeting is sponsored by the Central Committee of the Vietnam Fatherland Front, the Vietnam-Laos Friendship Association and the Vietnam Committee of Solidarity and Friendship With Other Peoples.

Taking part in the presidium of the meeting were Do Muoi, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers; Dang Thi, member of the party C.C., chairman of the Commission for Economic Relations With Foreign Countries; Hoang Minh Giam, president of the Presidium of the Vietnam Committee for Solidarity and Friendship With Other Peoples; Tran Huu Duc, president of the Vietnam-Laos Friendship Association; and representatives of mass organizations in Hanoi. Souk Vongsak, member of the Central Committee of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party, minister of public health, president of the Laos-Vietnam Friendship Association and head of the visiting Lao delegation; and Lao Ambassador Khampheun Tounalom, and Sieng Saral, ambassador of the People's Republic of Kampuchea to Hanoi, also attended.

In his speech, Tran Huu Duc pointed out: "The signing of the treaty of friendship and cooperation between Vietnam and Laos is a logical development and an expression of the splendid fruition of the special relations between the two countries which had been tempered in the hard revolutionary struggle against imperialist aggressions, for independence, freedom and socialism."

"The Vietnamese people," he went on, "greatly rejoice at the big achievements of the fraternal Lao people and consider them as a powerful source of encouragement in their revolutionary struggle and a big contribution of the Lao people to the strengthening of the revolution in each country and to the militant solidarity between Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea in the fight against the common enemies who are the reactionary forces in the Chinese ruling circles in collusions with the U.S. imperialists and the other reactionary forces."

Speaking at the meeting, Ambassador Khampheun Tounalom said that the treaty is a new symbol of the era of peace, independence and socialism, a rare model of the relations between nations in present-day human society as well as between fraternal countries and among nations in this region of the world.

Friendship Groups Meet

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 16 -- The delegation of the Laos-Vietnam Friendship Association, which is here for the celebration of the fifth anniversary of the Laos-Vietnam Friendship and cooperation treaty today called at its Vietnamese counterpart in Hanoi. The delegation, led by Souk Vongsak, member of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party Central Committee, minister of public health, and president of the Laos-Vietnam Friendship Association, was warmly welcomed by Tran Huu Duc, president of the Vietnam-Laos [Friendship] Association, other leading officials of the association, and representatives of the Commission for External Relations of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam.

Tran Huu Duc expressed his joy at the significant achievements of the fraternal Lao people in national construction and defence. He wished the Lao people under the correct leadership of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party headed by General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan further success in the implementation of the resolution of the third party congress.

NHAN DAN Marks Anniversary

[Text] Exactly 5 years ago today, on 18 July 1977, the Vietnam-Laos treaty of friendship and cooperation was ceremoniously signed at the capital of Vientiane. Also on the same occasion, the two sides signed a treaty delineating the national boundaries of the two countries and a number of other important documents. This event of historic significance marked a new step in the development of the militant solidarity, mutual trust and all-round cooperation between Vietnam and Laos in the interest of defending national independence and building socialism in each country; and contributed to the cause of peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the rest of the world. The signing of the Vietnam-Laos treaty of friendship and cooperation dealt a heavy blow to the aggressive and expansionist design of imperialism and international reaction.

Over the past 5 years, with the extraordinary efforts of the two peoples, the treaty of friendship and cooperation has developed its great effectiveness, bringing about joyful results in many respects. The actual implementation of this treaty vividly shows that, in the new era of the two nations that have won glorious victories, the special Vietnam-Laos relationship has developed and is developing even more magnificently in both scope and quality, and with a broad, deep and diverse content. The implementation of specific agreements for cooperation in the economic, scientific-technological, cultural, educational and other fields in the framework of this treaty has greatly contributed to developing the economy and culture, improving the people's life and strengthening the national defense potentials of both countries, thus meeting the requirements of the revolutionary cause of the two countries in the new stage.

Many Vietnam-Laos friendship projects have been built and put into commission. The provinces and districts of the two countries sharing common borders and having established sisterhood with each other, have organized frequent meetings and exchanges of views to help each other and learn from each others' experiences that are both useful and necessary toboth sides. The cooperation and militant alliance between the armies and peoples of the two countries have been constantly strengthened, thus making it possible to defeat the kind of multifaceted war of sabotage waged by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists acting in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces. This close solidarity and coordination has further improved the effectiveness of each country's efforts to defend its national independence.

The treaty on the delineation of national boundaries between the two countries has been implemented with very good results. The two sides have basically finished planting border markers and opening friendship gates to enable the people along both sides of the border to work, live and make cross-border visits normally, thus enhancing the existing fine tradition of friendship between the two countries.

In the coming years, the two sides will intensify mutual cooperation and assistance to build economic establishments in the interest of each country; help each other distribute products and make transit shipments; proceed toward coordinating with each other to effect a division of labor and comprehensive cooperation for developing the potentials of each country; and carry out cooperation on an equal basis in the spirit of the resolution of the Third LPRP Congress and the resolution of the Fifth VCP Congress.

We are very pleased with the deep concern for and high evaluation of the Laos-Vietnam relations of friendship and all-round cooperation by the party, state and people of Laos. The political report of the LPRP Central Committee presented by Comrade General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan at the third party congress in April this year stressed: As always, we will do our best to consolidate and strengthen militant solidarity, the special relationship and comprehensive cooperation between Laos and Vietnam and between Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism, respect for each other's independence and sovereignty, equality, mutual trust and mutual comradely assistance, with the aim of developing the combined strength of the three countries in the defense of national independence and the building of socialism in each country, and to jointly defend the outpost of socialism in Southeast Asia for peace in this region and the world.

The fine results of the implementation of the Vietnam-Laos treaty of friendship and cooperation and the Vietnam-Kampuchea treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation are a source of great encouragement to our people. The Beijing expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces are intensively carrying out a scheme of sabotage, division, provocation and aggression in an attempt to annex the three countries of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea and open the way for expansion toward Southeast Asia. However, they have failed ignominiously. In the face of the enemy's perfidious design, the peoples of the three Indochinese countries have further enhanced their militant solidarity and increased their vigilance and mutual all-round cooperation with the determination to defend their fatherlands and build socialism successfully in each country. Reality has testified ever more strongly to the fact that the militant solidarity and all-round cooperation between Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea constitute an invincible strength and the most important factor for ensuring all the successes of the revolution in each country and of the common revolutionary cause.

On the 5th anniversary of the signing of the Vietnam-Laos treaty of friendship and cooperation, our people assert their determination to strengthen solidarity and cooperation in all fields with the fraternal Lao people and to fulfill their international obligations. On this occasion, we sincerely wish the fraternal Lao people many new and even greater achievements in their undertaking to defend and build their rich and beautiful fatherland.

[Station commentary: "Fine Development of Vietnam-Laos Friendship"]

[Text] Exactly 5 years ago today, the treaty of friendship and cooperation between the SRV and the LPDR was signed, marking a new step in the development of the special relationship and militant alliance between the two countries. True to the old adage that "Gold is tested by fire and strength by ordeals," the two friendly neighbors, Vietnam and Laos, have held genuine friendship for each other through half a century and more of stalwart struggle against the two nations' common enemies -- the French colonialists, the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing expansionists. Through the blood and fire of the struggle for a common objective, the friendship between the two neighboring nations has been tested; and time has proved that this is an exemplary, pure and lasting relationship. This valuable tradition of friendship, which has been maintained and fostered by both parties -- the VCP and the LPRP -- and the peoples of both countries, is becoming more durable and fresh with each passing day.

Through the reality of life, the two fraternal nations of Vietnam and Laos have come to understand that only by relying on and uniting with each other can each nation successfully defend its independence and freedom and build a peaceful, stable and happy life.

Comrade Le Duan, general secretary of our party, once pointed out: The special relationship between Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea is a law governing the development of the three countries' revolutions, and a condition for survival as concerns the destiny of the three nations. From one generation to another, our people must safeguard the pure friendship and the tradition of solidarity between the three nations and constantly consolidate and strengthen the special relationship and militant alliance between the three countries with the determination to foil all the schemes and acts of sabotage, division and aggression by the common enemy -- the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists acting in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces. We consider this a firm guarantee for the cause of defending independence and freedom and successfully building socialism in each country on the Indochinese Peninsula and at the same time, an extremely important factor for peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

At the Third LPRP Congress, Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan also expressed the resolve to strengthen the special solidarity, militant alliance and all-round cooperation between the two countries of Vietnam and Laos. He asserted: As always, the LPRP and the Lao people will do their best to consolidate and strengthen militant solidarity, the special relationship and comprehensive cooperation between Laos and Vietnam and between Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism, respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, equality, mutual trust and mutual comradely assistance, with the aim of developing the combined strength of the three countries in defense of national independence and the building of socialism in each country.

Five years are all too short a period of time as compared with the history of each country's development. However, the treaty of friendship and cooperation has developed its effectiveness and brought about good results for the revolutionary causes of both countries.

The cooperation between the two countries in the fields of trade, science and technology, culture, education and others has been constantly strengthened and developed. Many important Lao economic projects have been built and put into operation with the assistance of Vietnamese specialists. The (Lam Nguem) hydroelectric power plant, the 110-kilovolt high tension wire section supporting the industrial complex north of Vientiane, and hundreds of kilometers of roads designed and built by Vietnamese cadres and workers in the friendly country are the flowers of the Vietnamese-Lao friendship.

Vietnamese educational specialists have been sent to help their Lao counterparts in training managerial and technical cadres, and tens of thousands of Lao students have studied in Vietnam. These students are future cadres for the building of socialism in Laos which, though an ancient country, is full of vitality.

The party, government and people of Laos highly appreciate the solidarity and effective assistance of our country. Conversely, our party, government and people also understand and highly appreciate the great contributions made by the Lao revolution, as well as the Kampuchean revolution, to our people's cause of defending the country and building socialism. The assistance to the cause of the two peoples is not unilateral. The treaty of friendship and cooperation was signed not for the sake of the revolutionary cause of friendly Laos alone, but for the sake of our revolutionary cause as well. As a matter of fact, over the past 5 years it has become an indispensable factor for each success and victory of our country's revolution.

The Chinese expansionists, the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary powers have been seeking every means possible to slander and undermine the solidarity and friendship among the three Indochinese countries. However, all of their perfidious schemes and ugly acts have failed tragically.

The solidarity, cooperation and friendship of the special Vietnamese-Lao and Vietnamese-Lao-Kampuchean alliance, which has passed through terrible ordeals, is being consolidated and strengthened more firmly than ever before. This is evidenced by the fact that the recent conference of the three Indochinese countries' ministers of foreign affairs in Ho Chi Minh City achieved a high identity of views on the situation, on the distinction between friend and foe and on important initiatives in the struggle for peace and stability in Indochina and Southeast Asia. It is also evidenced by our state's recent decision to award the Ho Chi Minh Order, our country's distinguished order, to a number of Lao state leaders.

In its advance, the revolutionary cause of the three Indochinese countries may still encounter many difficulties and ordeals. However, the solidarity among the three Indochinese countries, which has been cemented in the treaties of friendship and cooperation, will be a source of a strength to ensure that the revolution of each country, as well as the struggle for peace and stability in this part of the world, will achieve success.

We are very pleased to note that the solidarity, cooperation and friendship between Vietnam and Laos has been developed satisfactorily over the past years. On the occasion of the fifth anniversary of the signing of the treaty of friendship and cooperation between Vietnam and Laos, once again we express our gratitude to the party, government and people of friendly Laos for their assistance and close friendship. We sincerely hope that the Lao people, under the LPRP's leadership, will score even greater achievements in defending and building their country, thereby contributing actively to the struggle for peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

NHAN DAN on Lao Medals to Leaders

[NHAN DAN 17 July editorial: "Our Common Honor"]

[Text] On 13 July 1982, Laos decided to confer its National Gold Medals -- the highest distinction of the LPDR -- on Comrade Truong Chinh, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the SRV Council of State; and on Comrade Pham Van Dong, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the SRV Council of Ministers. We are deeply moved at the amicable and warm sentiments extended by the party, state and people of Laos toward our people through this important political act.

The fact that Laos presented its highest distinction to Comrade Le Duan last year and to Comrades Truong Chinh and Pham Van Dong this year reflects the Lao party and people's high regard for our people's revolutionary undertaking, and of the contributions given by our party and people to the Lao revolution and the common revolution of the three fraternal countries. This is also a manifestation of its respect for the comrade leaders of our party and state — those who are taking up the cause of great President Ho Chi Minh and who are symbolizing our people's revolutionary undertaking.

In its note, Laos solemnly pointed out that our two esteemed comrade leaders, Comrades Truong Chin and Pham Van Dong, had made great contributions during their revolutionary lives to the struggle against imperialism and various reactionary forces for peace and socialism, and to the strengthening and development of the great friendship, the tremendous solidarity and the overall cooperation between the Lao and Vietnamese peoples. We regard this appraisal as a common honor for our people. Every manifestation of the exceptional Vietnamese-Lao solidarity has brought elation and great encouragement for us. In their revolutionary undertaking, no victory of our people's separable from the valuable support and assistance of the fraternal Lao party and people and their effective cooperation.

The process of fighting together and sharing the same victories of our two peoples over the past half century has built up the extremely close existing Vietnamese-Lao relationship -- a pure and faithful relationship based on Marxism-Leninism and on proletarian internationalism and which has been built with the flesh and blood of the many generations of our two countries.

In the current new stage of the revolution in the three Indochinese countries, the party, state and people of Laos, fostering their heroic traditions, are struggling to defend and build their country, strengthen its solidarity with Vietnam, promote Indochinese solidarity, stand side by side with the Vietnamese and Kampuchean peoples with a determination to foil all the dark schemes of the expansionists in the Beijing leadership -- in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces -- and to struggle for peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

The party and people of Laos have always fulfilled their national duties and their international obligation in an outstanding manner. Our people sincerely thank the Lao party and people for their wholehearted support and assistance to our nation's revolution. We are proud of being able to welcome the finest sentiments that the fraternal Lao party, state and people have extended to us by conferring Laos' highest medals on our party and state leaders. We vow to do our utmost to strengthen the exceptional solidarity between Vietnam and Laos and between Vietnam and Laos and Kampuchea. It is one of our valuable assets, an unending source of strength and the most important factor for victory.

LEADERS GREET NICARAGUAN REVOLUTION ANNIVERSARY

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 18 -- Vietnamese leaders today sent their warmest greetings to revolutionary Commander Daniel Ortega Saavedra, coordinator of the Council for National Reconstruction of Nicaragua, on the third anniversary of the victory of the Nicaragua revolution (July 19). The message, jointly signed by Truong Chinh, president of the Council of State, and Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers, says:

"The success of the Sandinista revolution on July 19, 1979 opened up a new era in the history of Nicaragua: An era of real independence and freedom. This success has strongly encouraged the struggle of oppressed peoples in Latin America and elsewhere in the world. Over the past three years, in spite of all schemes and acts of sabotage of the U.S. imperialists and reactionary forces at home and abroad, the heroic Nicaraguan people, under the leadership of the Sandinista National Liberation Front and the Government for National Reconstruction, closely uniting together and overcoming many difficulties and trials, have firmly defended their revolutionary gains and obtained great successes in national construction and defence. With its correct foreign policy, Nicaragua's international prestige has been constantly heightened.

"The Vietnamese people are very glad at the brilliant achievements of the Nicaraguan revolution and consider them as their own. On this occasion, we reaffirm the full support of the Communist Party, the state and the people of Vietnam for the Nicaraguan people's just cause against the U.S. imperialists' policy of hostility, intervention and aggression".

Minister for Foreign Affairs Nguyen Co Thach has also extended his greetings to his Nicaraguan counterpart, Miguel d'Escoto.

JAKARTA VIEWS SRV'S PARTIAL TROOP WITHDRAWAL

[Unattributed commentary: "Partial Withdrawal of Vietnamese Forces From Kampuchea"]

[Excerpts] Western news agencies have reported from Hanoi that last Thursday Vietnam withdrew part of its forces from Kampuchea. This partial withdrawal was announced by Foreign Minister Nugyen Co Thach the following day before he left for a tour of four ASEAN countries. Although he did not disclose any figure, Western news agencies quoted sources in the Vietnamese capital as saying that it was between 20,000 and 30,000 men. Western news agencies in Hanoi now set the strength of the Vietnamese forces at between 150,000 and 180,000. If these figures are reliable, it can be assumed that Vietnam had withdrawn part of its forces without any announcement. The announcement of the partial withdrawal by its foreign minister on 16 July was meant as implementation of the plan which was announced on 7 July, the day Prince Sihanouk as president of Democratic Kampuchea returned to his homeland for the first time in 4 years following his successful diplomatic offensive during his tour of the five ASEAN countries. Nguyen Co Thach's 16 July announcement was made with the hope that his Southeast Asian tour will not be less successful than Sihanouk's diplomatic offensive.

Although Sihanouk has dismissed the partial withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops as a ploy, nevertheless it reflected Hanoi's difficult choice. On the one hand, Hanoi did not want a negotiated settlement of the Kampuchean issue because, according to its assessment, it will open the door wider to China for reestablishing its sphere of influence in Kampuchea. When this sphere of influence has been secured in Kampuchea, the door to Laos will be open for Beijing. These will lead to the isolation of Vietnam.

On the other hand, Hanoi also did not want to see the aggravation of the conflict through military blackmail in Kampuchea because, according to Hanoi, it will increase the Soviet role in Southeast and East Asia. Expansion of the Soviet role in this region will lead to the isolation of Vietnam because Thailand, Singapore and the Philippines -- Vietnam's closest neighbors -- regard the Soviet Union as the greatest threat to the security of the Southeast Asian region. Thus, Vietnam cannot do other than withdraw part of its forces from Kampuchea.

INDONESIA, CANADA SIGN NUCLEAR COOPERATION ACCORD

[Text] Jakarta, July 14 (ANTARA) -- Indonesia and Canada have signed a cooperation agreement in the application of nuclear power for peaceful purposes. The Indonesian minister of mines and energy, Subroto, and the Canadian foreign minister, Mark MacGuigan, signed the cooperation agreement in Ottawa, Canada, Monday. Minister Suboroto is in Canada for a five-day visit to that country. In the first day of his current visit, Subroto met his Canadian counterpart, Marc Lalonde, to discuss the present development of energy trade in the world and bilateral cooperation in the development of coal and nuclear energy. Subroto also had the opportunity to hold talks with Canadian Trade Minister Ed Lumley on the participation of Canadian companies in infrastructural projects in Indonesia.

While in Canada, Subroto will visit Quebec, Toronto, Edmonton, Victoria and Vancouver, and will also meet several Canadian key officials dealing with the energy field, to discuss the development of oil, coal and hydropower energy in west Canada.

According to the spokesman of the Canadian Foreign Office, the newly signed agreement will pave the way for the supply of Canadian uranium and the transfer of Canadian nuclear technology to Indonesia.

PURCHASE OF U.S. F-5 FIGHTERS TO BE POSTPONED

[Text] Kuching, East Malaysia, Jul 17 (AFP) -- Malaysia is still interested in the F-5 fighters from the United States, but for the time being the purchase of the aircraft would have to be postponed due to the economic situation, the national news agency BERNAMA reported today, quoting Deputy Defence Minister Abang Abu Bakar as saying. The deputy minister said the ministry would review the situation later.

According to an agency report, the United States had earlier informed Congress of its intention to sell 16 F-5 fighters to Malaysia. However, Abang Abu Bakar said the government would proceed as scheduled with the purchase of Skyhawks. He also disclosed that Malaysia's Air Force would soon receive 44 Pilatus PC-7 basic training aircraft from Switzerland.

MALAYSIA, THAILAND VIEW JOINT WEAPONS PRODUCTION

[Text] Malaysia and Thailand are looking into the possibility of joint production and standardization of weapons and ammunition. Such cooperation will enable both countries to lessen costs in having to buy them elsewhere. This was agreed to following the recent visit to Thailand of the deputy minister of defense, Abang Haji Abu Bakar. During his stay, Abang Haji Abu Bakar held discussions with his Thai counterpart, Air Chief Marshal Tan Sri Phaniang Kantarat, and the supreme commander of the Thai Army, Gen Tan Sri Saiyut Koetphon. They also discussed matters on the strengthening of the existing defense arrangement in the border areas. The deputy defense minister also visited an ammunition factory and the special war training center.

[Text] The Vietnamese foreign minister, Mr Nguyen Co Thach, arrived in Singapore this afternoon for a 4-day visit. He was met on arrival by the parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Trade and Industry and Social Affairs, Mr Sidek Saniff. Mr Nguyen Co Thach, who is accompanied by four officials, is in the republic at the invitation of the minister for foreign affairs and culture, Mr Dhanabalan. During his stay Mr Nguyen Co Thach will hold talks with the deputy prime minister for foreign affairs, Mr Rajaratnam, and Mr Dhanabalan. He will also tour the harbor and visit the Housing and Development Board.

Meeting of Counterparts

[Excerpts] Singapore, July 19 (AFP) -- Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach had talks lasting about two hours with his Singapore counterpart, Suppiah Dhanabalan, today. Emerging from the talks, a beaming Mr Thach would only say, "We understand each other's position better." Asked whether he explained Vietnam's offer to pull out some of its troops from Cambodia, a withdrawal Hanoi says has already started, Mr Thach commented only that it was "a significant partial withdrawal."

When Mr Dhanabalan emerged from the conference room, he declined to go into details of the talks but told waiting newsmen he would give a briefing after the afternoon session. Meanwhile, an official who sat in at the talks said the atmosphere was "frank."

MARCOS ASKS FOR JAPANESE ECONOMIC ASSISTANCE

HK170049 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 16 Jul 82

[Excerpt] President Marcos has called on Japan to lead in the fight for free trade and assistance to developing nations to bring about a new international economic order. The president issued the challenge during a meeting with Masumi Esaki, special envoy of Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki who called as head of a Japanese mission. The chief executive said he was happy that the Japanese prime minister had sent a very distinguished delegation headed by no less than the former minister of international trade and industry, who understands the economic problems of the region.

During their discussions, the president outlined five points of interest to which Japan can extend assistance and understanding to enhance bilateral relations. These are: financial support for the copper-smelting industry and the integrated steel mill; lower tariff on Philippine bananas and [words indistinct] for the banana trade; traffic rights for Philippine Air Lines to stop over in Japan en route to the United States; and increased assistance to the Philippines from the overseas economic cooperation fund.

In response, Mr Esaki expressed understanding of the country's problems and sympathy for the Philippines. He cited the Kilusang Kabuhayan at Kaunlaran and energy development programs as very important, and said Japan is willing to provide the necessary technological assistance. The president welcomed the offer because, he said, this is one of the secrets of the success of Japan which the country would like to learn.

FEBC Commentary

[Text] A top-level Japanese economic mission recently called on President Marcos to discuss Philippine-Japan relations. The purpose of this meeting, it would seem, is to improve the relations between the two countries, which at the moment appear to be one-sided, that is, in favor of Japan. The head of the mission, according to reports, said Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki had committed his government to helping the Philippines in farming, small and medium-scale industries, technological cooperation in energy development, and human resources development.

This is quite an impressive commitment. If implemented it would redound greatly, not only to the country's development, but to the improvement of Philippine-Japan ties. But commitment and promises are one thing, and implementation another. Skepticism and cynicism appear to get the better of us because of present realities. Take for instance the simple request of the Philippine Government to Japanese log buyers for them to identify Filipino log sellers. The Japanese have remaind tight-lipped in their business dealings. The Philippine Government made the request to check and trace log smugglers but of course, non-disclosure favors the Japanese, as it would guarantee them a continued supply of logs, and at cheap prices at that.

Here is one way that the Japanese can assist our country save millions of pesos in revenues, and help prevent the denudization of our forests by indentifying the log smugglers. But they won't, for this is not in their best business interest.

But we can still hope, perhaps this time sincerity will get the better of our Japanese neighbors and really come out with a helping hand. This is one time we will be glad to see our skepticism and cynicism shattered to pieces.

DPRK SCORES 'ARMED PROVOCATIONS' AT MAC MEETING

[Text] The 467th Secretaries Meeting of the Military Armistice Commission was held at Panmunjom on 21 July at the request of our side. At this meeting, our side lodged a strong protest against the enemy side for frequently committing armed provocations in the demilitarized zone in violent violation of the armistice agreement and other provisions agreed upon by both sides. Our side urged the enemy side to bear responsibility for this.

According to a statement by Col Kim Yon-ki, secretary of our side, the South Korean puppet army, mobilizing scores of personnel armed with heavy and automatic weapons, committed grave armed provocations at 1310 on 9 July by firing hundreds of rounds of large-caliber machineguns and automatic weapons from a position situated southeast of Military Demarcation Marker 1200 south of Samilpali in the DMZ in the east frontline sector at our civil military guard members performing their routine duties at a spot opposite the South Korean position, gravely threatening their lives.

If our personnel had not patiently controlled themselves, the provocations committed by the rascals would have expanded to a grave armed confrontation between both sides. The South Korean puppet army also committed grave military provocations by firing several rounds of M-16 automatic rifles from a spot 750 meters east of Military Demarcation Marker 0400 in the central frontline sector at 1540 on 7 July at our outpost opposite this spot and by firing many rounds of machineguns from a spot 1,700 meters southwest of Military Demarcation Marker 1000 in the east frontline sector at 1540 on 14 July.

The South Korean puppet army introduced 2 90-mm recoilless rifles into a spot 500 meters east of Military Demarcation Marker 0056 in the west frontline sector at 0900 on 13 July, 2 60-mm mortars into a spot 250 meters east of Military Demarcation Marker 0013 at 1535 on 12 July and 250 military personnel armed with M-16 automatic rifles and light machine guns into a spot 1,500 meters east of Military Demarcation Marker 1141 in the east frontline sector from 1420 to 1600 on 15 July. The South Korean pupper army staged a military exercise at 1011 on 16 July by introducing over 30 completely armed military personnel into a place 1,700 meters southwest of Military Demarcation Marker 1000 in the east frontline sector. At 1000 the same day, it built up its positions by introducing 88 military personnel into a place 1,800 meters southeast of Military Demarcation Marker 0204 in the west frontline sector.

Meanwhile, the rascals of the U.S. imperialist aggressive army at 0820 on 12 July introduced 76 military personnel armed with M-16 automatic rifles into an outpost on Mumyong Height in Somyon-ri south of the headquarters district of the Military Armistice Commission.

The number of violations of the armistice agreement by the enemy from 6 to 16 July amounted to over 720. The number of provocations and the violation of the armistice agreement against us by the enemy since the 514th MAC meeting amounts to over 1,600. Our secretary said the enemy's continuous and wicked military provocations and violations of the armistice agreement in the DMZ against us are part of the war policy of the U.S. imperialist aggressors, who are frantically running amok to start a new aggressive war in our country. He then said that because of the rascals' criminal acts, no single day has passed peacefully in the DMZ and that tension has been heightened more and more with each passing day. Saying he cannot but pay close attention to this, he strongly urged the enemy to take responsible action to prevent various provocations in the DMZ, violating the armistice agreement and other provisions. Making irrelevant excuses, however, the enemy did not make an affirmative response to our demand.

Saying such an act of the enemy only showed the rascals' insincerity and irresponsibility in implementing the armistice agreement, our secretary went on: It is too obvious that when the vast troops of both sides are confronting one another across the DMZ, armed collisions in this area could readily expand into an all-out war. To alleviate tension in the DMZ, the enemy's violations of the armistice agreement, including its armed provocations, should unconditionally and immediately end.

In conclusion, our secretary sternly warned that the enemy should carefully reflect on the dangerous outcome of the rascals' repeated provocative crimes of converting the DMZ into a fortress and into a springboard of armed provocations against us and that it should act discreetly.

VRPR SCORES CHON ROLE IN CONTROL DATA SIT-IN

SK211024 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 19 Jul 82

[Station commentary]

[Text] As was reported on 19 July, the Chon Tu-hwan ring staged a pro-government activity by instigating some 120 employees of the Control Data Korea Company, located in the Korea Export Industrial Complex, Karibon-dong, Kuro-ku, Seoul, to gather in the playground of this company, shout such slogans as "Employees related to Urban Mission must go" and adopt a letter of appeal to the Control Data U.S.A. This is a most ignominious act of suppression aimed at obliterating the just struggle for rights to existence staged against the United States by the women workers of the Control Data Korea Company.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring distorts the situation as if the struggle waged by the women workers of the Control Data Korea Company were instigated by somebody else. This is sophistry designed to deceive our workers and public opinion.

As for the struggle waged by the women workers of the Control Data Korea Company, it was waged against the U.S. owner's contempt for the Korean people and harsh exploitation. This being the case, their struggle was not instigated by somebody else. It was an explosion of their frustration and fury against the U.S. owners and was a just action aimed at regaining national dignity and pride which have been trampled upon by the U.S. owners.

As is widely known to the world, the Control Data Korea Company has been committing all sorts of inhuman tyranny and maltreatment of the workers, trampling upon their basic rights to existence, human rights of the workers and hiring women workers at low wages. Women workers of this company are working without ventilation, suffering from poor sight, stomach problems and other occupational diseases. Even though they are forced to work under difficult working conditions where they are watched with time checkers under the name of a computer production system, their monthly salaries average 80,000 won, less than half that needed for the barest living. The company owner has fattened himself with millions of dollars in profits, every dollar of which was earned by the blood and sweat of the workers.

Unable to stand such circumstances, the women workers of the Control Data Korea have long waged a righteous anti-U.S. struggle to regain their rights to existence. Twice in February and March they waged sit-ins, shouting such slogans as "Management, go away," "Let us make defective goods" and "Reinstate those illegally dismissed without delay." In recent months, they have joined the struggle to regain their rights to existence.

Instead of heeding the demands of these workers, the American owners randomly sacked these women workers involved in the struggle and quite recently threatened to shorten operating hours. Following his American master's directives, the Chon Tu-hwan ring brutally suppressed the women workers engaged in the struggle and arrested them, charging them with fascist evil laws through mobilization of the armed policement. Far from accepting the workers' demand, the Chon Tu-hwan ring began a pro-government activity by instigating other workers, trying to obliterate their struggle.

This is indeed an act of treason which can be committed only by such a traitorous, pro-U.S. flunkeyist as the Chon Tu-hwan ring. It is also an act of nation-selling designed to enslave our workers to U.S. monopoly captialists.

Our workers will not sit by idly watching the situation developing today. They will not tolerate such traitorous acts. The Chon Tu-hwan ring should see the situation squarely and stop such dirty pro-government functions as this. It should apologize to the nation for having driven the South Korean economy into trouble and for plunging people into starvation. It should step down from power without delay. It is our belief that the workers of the Control Data Korea Company should wage a more vigorous anti-U.S. struggle to regain their rights to existence until their demands are accepted, and that other workers throughout the nation will wage solidarity, joint struggle in response to the workers at the Control Data Korea Company.

SOUTH SAID SELLING WORKERS IN 'SLAVE LABOR MARKET'

SK220920 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0802 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 22 (KCNA) -- The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique sold abroad over 80,000 poor workers under the name of "manpower export" in the first six months of this year, according to a report. The puppet clique set the "goal of manpower export" for this year at the record figure of over 195,700, and worked hard to attain the target. The fascist clique plans to send out more workers from next year to the slave labour market abroad.

NONDONG SINMUN SUPPORTS PUSAN ARSONISTS

[Text] Pyongyang, July 22 (KCNA) -- The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique arrested persons who had set fire to the "American Cultural Centre" in Pusan and put them to brutal tortures, and are up to insidious plots to impose harsh penalties upon them. This is a target of accusation in papers here today. A signed commentary of NODONG SINMUN says:

As to the fire set to the "American Cultural Centre" in Pusan, it was an eruption of the long pent-up grievances and resentment of the South Korean people at the U.S. imperialist aggressors who, keeping South Korea under their colonial rule for 37 years, have forces all sufferings and misfortunes upon them.

Their struggle against the aggressors reflected the unanimous desire of the South Korean people to live an independent life by ending the colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists; it was entirely a just action, not a "crime" by any means.

By labelling those involved in the arson as "Communists" and sentencing them to heavy penalties on charges of the violation of the notorious "National Security Law," the puppets attempt to cow the South Korean people who struggle for independence against U.S. imperialism and legalise their brutal crackdown upon the patriotic people. And they are motivated in this by the crafty scheme to turn to anti-Communism the daily growing anti-U.S. sentiments by linking the struggle of the South Korean people with us; it is a criminal scheme never to be condoned.

They act on the instructions of the U.S. imperialists and under their manipulation in brutally persecuting those who set fire to the "American Cultural Centre" in Pusan.

It is a well known fact that the U.S. imperialists instructed the Chon Tu-hwan group to harshly treat those involved in the case.

Indelible are the crimes of the U.S. imperialist aggressors who issued a suppressive order against other people for their colonial rule over South Korea and of the Chon Tu-hwan group which murders fellow countrymen, complying with the brigandish demand of the U.S. imperialists, to gratify its greed for power. The commentary says in conclusion:

Anachronistic are the attempts of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges to bar the people's struggle for independence against U.S. imperialism and bridge over the crisis of the tottering colonial fascist rule by frantic sword-brandishing. The U.S. imperialists must look straight at the realities and pull out of South Korea without delay, giving up their South Korean occupation policy.

Wojciech Jaruzelski, first secretary of the Polish United Workers' Party, made summing up reports.

NODONG SINMUN Article

SK220918 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0811 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 22 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today dedicates an article to the 38th anniversary of the resurrection of Poland.

After the publication of the historic declaration on July 22, 1944, the Polish people, under the leadership of the Polish United Workers' Party, have energetically waged a struggle to rehabilitate the destroyed country and develop economy and culture, science and technology, registering many successes, the author of the article says, and continues:

The imperialists and the home reactionaries who hate advancing Poland as a thorn in their side have resorted to vicious manoeuvres to undermine the building of a new life of the Polish people and overthrow the socialist system for the establishment of a reactionary bourgeois regime in the long run. But the Polish party, government and people are vigorously advancing along the road of socialism, determinedly repulsing the subversive acts of the enemies.

Our people hail the successes made by the Polish people in their struggle for tiding over the present difficulties temporarily created in the country and express full support and solidarity for their just struggle. The Korean and Polish peoples closely support and cooperate with each other in the common struggle against imperialism and for the victory of the cause of peace and socialism. Our people believe that the friendly and cooperative relations between the peoples of Korea and Poland will grow stronger and develop in many fields in the future.

Extending warm felicitations to the fraternal Polish people, on the occasion of the 38th anniversary of the resurrection of Poland, the Korean people sincerely wish them new success in their work for defending the sovereignty of the country and the socialist gains, tiding over the temporary difficulties created in the country and promoting the welfare of the people, the article stresses.

Kim Il-song Greetings

[Text] Pyongyang, July 21 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, on July 21 sent a message of greetings to Comrade Wojciech Jaruzelski, first secretary of the Central Committee of the Polish United Workers' Party and chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Polish People's Republic, and Comrade Henryk Jablonski, president of the State Council of the Polish People's Republic, on the occassion of the 38th anniversary of the resurrection of Poland. The message reads:

On the occasion of the 38th anniversary of the resurrection of Poland, I extend warm congratulations to you and, through you, to the Central Committee of the Polish United Workers' Party, the Government of the Polish People's Republic and the Polish people, on behalf of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Korean people and on my own behalf.

The resurrection of Poland 38 years ago was a brilliant fruition of the protracted struggle of the Polish communists and patriotic people for national and class liberation. After liberation the Polish people have made a big stride ahead in the work for liquidating the left-overs of the old society and building a new popular and socialist Poland.

Today the Polish people, under the leadership of the Polish United Workers' Party, are energetically struggling to achieve the stability of the country, tiding over the difficulties temporarily created by the subversive activities and sabotage of the imperialists and the home counter-revolutionary forces, and defending the socialist position. We express firm solidarity with you in your just cause and express the conviction that the fraternal Polish people will successfully solve the difficult problems facing them and continue to advance vigorously along the road of socialism.

The traditional relations of friendship and cooperation between the parties, governments and peoples of our two countries cemented through the common struggle against imperialism and for the victory of the cause of socialism will grow stronger and develop in the future.

UNC URGES 'TRUE DEMILITARIZATION' OF DMZ

[Text] Panmunjom -- The U.N. command yesterday charged the North Korean communists with recent violations of the armistice agreement and called for the true demilitarization of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ). Col. Patrick H. Brady, UNC senior secretary to the Military Armistice Commission, proposed in a meeting with his North Korean counterpart that both sides mutually inspect the entire DMZ and remove all barriers and fortifications found there. "Such a collective action could have no other effect but to prevent incidents, reduce tension and promote peace," he stressed at the 467th MAC secretaries meeting. The meeting was held at the request of the North Korean side of the MAC secretaries.

Brady charged that North Korea violated armistice agreement on 986 occasions from July 2 through July 18. He noted the incidents which were detailed at the meeting occurred in the DMZ. The meeting was held six days before the 29th anniversary of the armistice which ended the three-year Korean war.

The North Korean side alleged that UNC forces had fired into its sector, had brought prohibited weapons and combatants into the truce zone and had constructed combat positions there. Brady said the UNC would investigate the allegation and that the results would be reported to the MAC. "If your side is truly interested in preventing incidents in the DMZ," he told his North Korean counterpart, Senior Col. Kim Yon-ki, "There is a way." He then made the proposal for the demilitarization of the truce zone.

SEOUL ANTI-GUERILLA WAR GAME ANNOUNCED

SK220758 Seoul YONHAP in English 0748 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] Seoul, July 22 (YONHAP) -- South Korea will conduct an anti-guerilla war game in Seoul and its vicinity for five days late this month to prepare itself for North Korea's possible guerilla attack, the Counter-Espionage Command (CEC) announced Thursday.

Armed forces, national police, Homeland Reserve Force, Civil Defense Corps as well as civilians will join the country's first such training, code-named "Myolgong 28," to check the nation's defense preparedness against guerilla infiltration or surprise attack on the capital city the enemy might launch just before full-scale invasion.

The drill will feature the land, sea and airborne infiltration of mock armed agents or spies, and subsequent counterattack. The command said the simulated enemy will number more than 1,000, and their combat tactics as well as fatigues, language and behavior will be the same as North Korean soldiers. South Korea's monthly civil air defense training will be conducted along with the anti-guerilla exercises this month, the CEC added.

N. KOREAN DIPLOMAT ARRESTED FOR SMUGGLING

[Text] Manama, Bahrain, July 21 (YONHAP) -- A North Korean diplomat was caught July 18 attempting to smuggle 1,200 wristwatches into Egypt, according to the AL-ARAB published in Cairo.

The newspaper reported that Sim Hui-tok, vice president of the North Korean trade mission based in Kuwait, was apprehended Sunday by Egyptian customs officials trying to illegally bring the watches into the country at Cairo Airport. The watches were confiscated and Sim is under investigation, according to the newspaper.

The story first appeared in AL-ARAB July 20 issue, and said only that the arrested person was a foreign diplomat. On the following day, the paper identified the diplomat as a North Korean. Because Sim tried to enter Cairo in the capacity of a diplomat, AL-ARAB did not disclose his name and job title. His identity was revealed by Egyptian customs officials.

Sim became the second North Korean diplomat detained trying to smuggle contraband goods into Egypt. In the 1970's, a member of the North Korean diplomatic mission in Cairo was arrested for smuggling hashish into the country.

KOREA TIMES REPORTS ON LABOR UNREST AT CONTROL DATA

[Text] The close-down of Control Data Korea, a U.S.-invested computer parts maker in the Kuro Industrial Estate, has again brought to light the activities of the Urban Industrial Mission [UIM] engaged in Christian evangelism among your workers. The management and non-unionists in the company blame the UIM for creating labor problems at Control Data Korea that finally led to the firm's shut-down.

It was said that of the 266 unionists among the 349 employees of CDK were about 20 "hard-core" UIM members and 40 "sympathizers," who resorted to radical means in dealing with the management over labor conditions at the company. In last-minute efforts to prevent the closure of their workshop, the non-unionists assured that they would keep the plant free of harassments by the UIM. During a rally on Monday, they put up placards, saying, "We will save our company with our own hands," and "We urge UIM to get out of our plant immediately." But it was too late.

According to labor authorities, the CDK branch of the National Metal Workers Union was formed in 1973, six years after the establishment of the company with 100 percent investment by U.S. Control Data. The union continuously demanded shortening of work hours and wage increases by large margins, though CDK workers were relatively better treated than their counterparts in other firms, labor authorities said, claiming that UIM was behind these labor movements. Especially since last December, unionists in the CDK had repeatedly engaged in sit-in demonstrations, sabotage, go-slow actions and degrading product quality while demanding a 49 percent pay raise, they said.

A spokesman for the Yongdungpo UIM told the KOREA TIMES that there was "not a single UIM member" among unionists in the CDK though some union leaders had maintained close personal relations with the UIM staff. The spokesman said Miss Han Myong-hui, head of the CDK union, had been attending the Nodong (labor) Church, a Presbyterian congregation operated by the Yongdungpo UIM, but she was not a member of the UIM. He declined to reveal the present strength of UIM membership, though he said they were engaged in a "fairly large number" of industrial establishments.

The latest labor dispute at the CDK began on Dec. 21, 1981, when the union demanded a 49 percent wage increase, rejecting a 12 percent raise proposed by the management. The labor dispute was reported to the Ministry of Labor on Jan. 30 this year. Labor authorities said that a union meeting decided to resort to degrading quality to press for the wage hike on Feb. 19 and the unionists cut back output by 25 percent late that month. For this action, union leader Yi Yong-son and five other workers were fired.

The union members staged sit-in demonstrations in the company compound for nine days from March 15 until the two parties finally agreed on a 19.9 percent wage increase on March 23.

But labor problems continued at the company with the workers demanding the reinstatement of the fired colleagues. The management claimed that the protesting workers caused a 15 to 20 percent production cut by a go-slow campaign. On May 3, the Korean representative was replaced by Han Sang-uk but the unionists were engaged in a signature collecting drive to get the re-employment of the fired workers from May 30.

Herald Editorial

[Editorial: "Healthy Labor Relations"]

[Text] The shutdown of the Control Data Korea plant in Seoul is an isolated yet depressing episode of our industrialization and the operation of foreign business in Korea. A protracted labor dispute with local employees added to the pressure of declining profits, forcing the factory to close down, taking jobs away from over 300 workers.

The unfortunate incident prompts a second thought on the proper pattern of labor relations which could sustain the nation's economic development in general and productive collaboration with investors from abroad in particular. What is the just end of healthy labor movement? What is the effective means to attain that end? The investors and entrepreneurs, both domestic and foreign, also should be ready to formulate sound and imaginative managerial concepts and industrial relations for harmonious and productive operation. On the part of both management and labor, accommodation and cooperation is the name of the game.

The Korean subsidiary of Control Data Corp., an American computer parts manufacturer, had for some time been troubled with labor protests which lately shifted to militant methods including sit-ins and sabotage, apparently inspired by the so-called Urban Industrial Mission who is making steady inroads into the ranks of our labor unions.

Observers of the local industrial scene are surprised at the fact that closedown resulted partly from an intense labor offensive at a plant where workers enjoyed much better conditions than at most other comparable factories. They included five-day-week, 400-percent annual bonus and 60-day maternity leave for women who accounted for most of the employees there. As the firm was about to go down the drain, a group of nonunionists and moderate workers organized a campaign against the hard-line activists to rescue the company from sinking but it was too late. The affair ended in a losing game for all with neither side gaining anything. What price labor dispute?

Democratic trade unionism presupposes dialogue and compromise for mutual benefit. Grievances and demands made should be justifiable and acceptable under the prevailing circumstances. However, some politically and ideologically inspired extremists tend to reduce unionism from an art of live and let live to an exercise in futile desperation and mutual destruction. Our economy is yet to recover from the slowdown and maximum efforts are being made to preclude double-digit inflation. Workers, for their part, are expected to show self-restraint in asking for pay raises to aid the nationwide stabilization drive. Making inordinate demands and rejecting negotiated settlement will do more harm than good. Business must be kept going for the sake of the wage earner as well as the capital investor. To do so requires shared understanding and devotion to the common interest of the company. Sound labor relations based on sound work ethics ought to be promoted for the good of all.

GENERAL STAFF CHIEF ON SRV TROOP WITHDRAWAL

BK210901 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0425 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 21 Jul (SPK) -- Soy Keo, chief of the KPRAF General Staff, emphasized that the partial Vietnamese troop withdrawal was decided upon because of the stability of the situation in Kampuchea. The following is the interview granted to our agency by the chief of the general staff, which also deals with the question of a safety zone along the Kampuchean-Thai border:

Question 1: Would you please let us know about the significance of the recent partial Vietnamese troop withdrawal from Kampuchea?

Answer: The partial withdrawal of Vietnamese combatants from Kampuchea was carried out like those after the struggle against the French colonialists and the U.S. imperialists. This act proves that Vietnamese aid is disinterested.

The reduction of Vietnamese manpower in Kampuchea shows the stability of Kampuchea, and it is not because of pressure from the so-called "coalition government" of Khmer reactionaries, the Chinese expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionary forces. We decided upon this withdrawal based on the stability in Kampuchea and the development of the Kampuchean armed forces, which can accomplish these tasks.

The PRK and the SRV pursue a peaceful foreign policy and we always prove our good will. In this spirit we took a first step by deciding to withdraw some of the Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, which was done efficaciously. If Thailand positively responds to this act and if security at the Kampuchean-Thai frontier is secured, we will consider, with Vietnam, supplementary withdrawals. On the contrary, if it profits from this act, we will implement the Kampuchea-Vietnam treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation and will take appropriate measures to smash all aggressions against the People's Republic of Kampuchea.

Question 2: What is your opinion about a recent statement made by Prasong Sunsiri, general secretary of the Thai National Security Council, on the safety zone along the Kampuchean-Thai border as put forward by the three Indochinese countries?

Answer: Earlier we proposed the creation of a demilitarized zone on the Khmer-Thai border, but Thailand did not accept it. Now, we propose a safety zone on the frontier of the two countries where there will be only Kampuchean and Thai troops on both sides of the border. What can be more natural than this goodwill proposal? Nevertheless, Mr Prasong Sunsiri rejected it right away, affirming that it is "the same proposal on a demilitarized zone put forward two years ago!"

The Thai authorities frequently talk about a threat from Kampuchea because of the Vietnamese troops' presence in the region of the Khmer-Thai border. According to our recent proposal for the creation of a safety zone at the border between the two countries, there will be no more Vietnamese troops in the part of the safety zone situated inside Kampuchea; there will also be no more remnants of the Pol Pot army and other Khmer reactionary forces in the part of the safety zone located inside Thai territory. What did Mr Prasong Sunsiri say about this issue?

Unfounded affirmations and contradictions in the Thai authorities' declarations prove that Bangkok deliberately follows in the wake of the expansionist policy of the Chinese hegemonists in their black scheme to maintain and profit from the tension at the Thai-Kampuchean border and the confrontation between the ASEAN countries and the PRK and other countries of the Indochinese Peninsula. That is why Thailand continues to provide "sanctuaries" on its territory for the remnants of the Pol Pot army and other Khmer reactionaries, aimed at sabotaging the Kampuchean revolution and creating obstacles to the rebirth of the Kampuchean people.

The Kampuchean people ardently aspire for peace and friendship with neighboring countries, in particular with the Thai people. At the same time, they are resolutely determined to smash all foreign attempts to undermine their independence and dearly-won freedom.

Question 3: Recently a Thai personality declared that if it is necessary to create a demilitarized zone or a safety zone, this zone has to be at the Kampuchea-Vietnam border. Would you please tell us about your opinion on this issue?

Answer: The fact is that there is dangerous tension at the Kampuchean-Thai border provoked by Bangkok's hostile policy toward the People's Republic of Kampuchea. Concurrently with the bandit acts of the Pol Pot clique, which is situated in "sanctuaries" on Thai territory, directed against the Kampuchean population in the border regions, the Thai authorities systematically committed violations against PRK territory, air space and territorial waters.

On the contrary, since 1979 the Kampuchea-Vietnam border has become a frontier of friendship and cooperation between the two fraternal peoples. To compare the situation at the Kampuchean-Thai border with that on the Kampuchea-Vietnam frontier, is to change black to white and aim at cheating world opinion.

HENG SAMRIN, CHAN SI GREET PZPR LEADERSHIP

BK220825 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0401 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 22 Jul (SPK) -- On the occasion of the 38th anniversary of Poland's national day, Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State; and Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers, sent their "warm felicitations" and "fraternal greetings" to the leaders of the Polish party and government.

In a message to Wojciech Jaruzelski, first secretary of the Polish United Workers Party [PZPR] Central Committee and chairman of the Council of Ministers; and Henryk Zablonski, chairman of the State Council, Heng Samrin and Chan Si said:

We salute with esteem the realistic and clear-sighted policy that you are pursuing with success against the intrigues and interference of Western circles in the internal affairs of Poland.

We are delighted to note that the Polish people are worthy of their history. Despite the threat, boycott, psychological diktat and slanderous propaganda schemed up by the imperialists and directed against the Polish People's Republic, the valiant Polish people managed to overcome the initial difficulties and their country will survive forever as an independent, sovereign and socialist country. All of this irrefutably reflects your shrewdness, diligence and subtletyas the head of the Polish party and government leadership in the defense of the revolutionary gains and your people so that they may fully enjoy their right to decide the destiny of their nation.

We are convined that, under the just leadership of the PZPR, the present situation in Poland will improve with each passing day and the just struggle of the Polish people will be completed victoriously.

On behalf of the Kampuchean party Central Committee, government and people, we express our sincere felicitations to the fraternal Polish party, government and people on the occasion of this historic national day which symbolizes not only a workers state which has abolished all forms of exploitation and internal and external domination, but also a typical state which has struggled for the construction of socialism. We assure you that what we are doing now is to consolidate and achieve at all costs our common objectives: socialism and peace.

On this occasion, Minister of Foreign Affairs Hun Sen also sent his "sincere felicitations" to his Polish counterpart Jozef Czyrek.

KAMPUCHEA SUPPORTS PEACE, SOCIALISM IN SE ASIA

BK211045 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 21 Jul 82

[KAMPUCHEA commentary: "For Peace, National Independence and Socialism"]

[Text] The tense situation in Southeast Asia, particularly at the borders of the three Indochinese countries with Thailand and China results from the following two major causes:

1. The policy of aggression and interference pursued by the Chinese ruling circles in collusion with U.S. imperialism to take vengeance on the three Indochinese countries for their ignominious defeats.

2. The policy of following in the wake of Beijing and Washington practiced by the reactionary authorities of some ASEAN countries, particularly the Thai authorities who have cheaply sold the sovereignty and national independence of their country and who run counter to the interests of the Thai people by making themselves the lackeys of China and the United States in opposing the revolutions of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos.

It is widely known that the traitorous reactionaries who once oppressed the Kampuchean people, were toppled by the people and were forced to flee abroad to save their own skin are now being supported, maintained and fed by the Beijing and Washington bosses and the reactionary Thai authorities to be used as stepping stones in their attempt to reverse the situation in the three Indochinese states.

In Southeast Asia as well as in the world at present, two diametrically opposed policies are prominently evident: First, a policy to struggle for peace, national liberation, independence and socialism; and secondly, a policy of belligerency and a tendency toward aggression, expansion and suppression of the national liberation struggles.

It is within the first policy that the three Indochinese countries are tirelessly and consistently struggling to safeguard their respective national independence and to build their nations step by step toward socialism, thus contributing to the defense of peace in the region and the world.

Men of good conscience believe that peace is more valuable than anything else, an object of worship that each and every one of us has the duty to protect at all costs and a source guaranteeing fundamental rights or the right to life of the people in general. In particular, peace is the source guaranteeing the national independence of each state, the happy life of each nation and the progress of mankind. War causes a thousand and one kinds of devastation, tragedy and consequences. Especially, war can never solve any problem in relations between nations on this planet.

For these reasons, the peoples of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos have united in the struggle to eradicate tension in the region, to ensure the restoration of stability, cooperation and peace through negotiations, as well as to contribute to the effort by the countries in the socialist community and other progressive countries to keep the world away from a nuclear war.

It is irrefutable that the new proposals imbued with good will put forward by the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao foreign ministers in the communique of their sixth conference are a genuine contribution to the search for regional peace. These proposals have been warmly greeted and applauded by progressive and peace- and justice-loving opinion the world over, including the progressive opinion of people of all walks of life in the ASEAN countries. The French Foreign Ministry also hailed the partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and regarded it as a gesture of both political and military significance. It also declared that France is ready to support the initiative about the convocation of an international conference on Southeast Asia as proposed by the three nations of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos.

It is to be recalled that Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos have, on many occasions, made several peace initiatives to the ASEAN countries at past conferences as well as through bilateral proposals, and that they are always waiting for a positive response to these constructive proposals from the ASEAN countries, particularly Thailand.

As for us, we have taken the first step by implementing this logical measure at a time when the situation in the three countries reflects the daily growth and strength of the traditional solidarity and friendship of the three nations of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos.

The facts clearly show that, now more than ever, the strategic Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos alliance can strongly ensure the national independence of each country in the face of the expansionist and aggressive ambitions of the Chinese expansionists and U.S. imperialists. The Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos summit conference to be held by the end of this year is also proof clearly reflecting the militant solidarity of our three countries which agree with each other in all fields in the common interests of the three fraternal nations. No reactionary force can split the traditionally firm militant solidarity of the Kampuchea, Vietnamese and Lao peoples. The peoples of the three countries firmly hold that the struggle for peace, national independence and socialism cannot be separated. History also clearly demonstrates that if you want national independence, you must build socialism; and in order to build socialism in its various stages, peace is an indispensable factor. Without peace, human society cannot achieve progress as planned.

However, the imperialists and hegemonist-expansionists -- in order to serve their ambitions -- are attempting to sabotage the advance of the movements for national liberation, peace and socialism. In Southeast Asia, they are pushing the ASEAN countries into confrontation with the Indochinese countries and creating permanent tension to weaken the Kampuchea, Vietnamese and Laos revolutions so as to facilitate their attempt to return to domination.

The situation in Southeast Asia is developing in the direction most favorable to the forces of peace, national liberation and socialism in the region. Despite multiple difficulties, the situation in Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos continues to advance steadily.

The Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao peoples once again stress that our sole, sacred wish always is to live in peace, friendship and cooperation with all countries, first of all with the neighboring countries in Southeast Asia on the basis of the principles of mutual respect for sovereignty, national independence and territorial integrity and noninterference in each other's internal affairs.

The just cause of the three Indochinese nations fortified by the strategic Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos revolutionary alliance and strengthened by the socialist and progressive forces in the world is firmly advancing on the road toward victory and actively contributing to the maintenance of peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world.

Despite their perfidious maneuvers in all forms, the Chinese expansionists in collusion with U.S. imperialism cannot reverse the wheel of history. The farce about the formation of the so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea by mustering other corpses to prolong the breath of a rotting corpse once again exposes the impasse of both the bosses and the lackeys.

VODK: SRV FORCING KHMERS TO SUPPORT TROOP PRESENCE

[Commentary: "The Vietnamese Enemy Has Forced Our People in Puok, Siem Reap, Srei Snam and Kralanh Districts of Siem Reap Province To Attend Meetings and Voice Support for the Continued Presence of Vietnamese Troops in Kampuchea"]

[Text] Since the beginning of July, the Vietnamese aggressors have forced our people in Puok, Siem Reap, Srei Snam and Kralanh districts of Siem Reap Province to attend meetings and affix their fingerprints as a sign of support for the Vietnamese aggressors who wish to maintain their troops in Kampuchea. Those inhabitants who refused to attend the meeting or to give their fingerprints were threatened, arrested and put in jail by the Vietnamese aggressors. This reflects the tricky and cunning nature of the Vietnamese aggressors, expansionists, annexationists and exterminators of the Kampuchean race.

The Vietnamese aggressors are ballyhooing and deceiving world public opinion by claiming that Vietnam has decided to withdraw a part of its troops from Kampuchea. Nguyen Co Thach announced upon his arrival in Bangkok that the Vietnamese troops have begun to withdraw from Kampuchea. But what is the true situation on the Kampuchean battlefield?

1. Vietnam has not withdrawn even a single soldier from the Kampuchean battlefield.

2. While ballyhooing about its partial troop withdrawal, Vietnam has sent more troops to be stationed in Siem Reap Province and the eastern and western parts of Kampuchea.

3. As well as maintaining all of its troops in the Kampuchean battlefield, the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors have forced the Kampuchean people to attend meetings and affix their fingerprints as a sign of support for the continued presence of the Vietnamese troops and their further occupation of Kampuchea and as a call for the Vietnamese aggressors not to withdraw their troops from Kampuchea.

This is an extremely hideous and cunning trick. In carrying out this trick, the Vietnamese aggressors are seeking to gain two benefits: First, to have a pretext to maintain their troops and further occupy Kampuchea; and, second, to fool the world community into believing that Vietnam has softened its stand and is willing to join in solving the problems of peace and security in this region. The Vietnamese aggressors want the world to fall for their tricks, make the world forget about the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchea, which demand the total and unconditional withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, and lessen the pressure of the world community. All these acts are aimed at enabling Vietnam to occupy Kampuchea forever.

KAYSONE PHOMVIHAN ATTENDS AWARDS CEREMONY

[Text] A ceremony to confer medals and commendation certificates on various units, localities and individuals, which or who have scored outstanding achievements in contributing to fulfilling tasks of serving the recent Third LPRP Congress, was formally held on the afternoon of 20 July. The ceremony was attended by Comrade General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan together with comrade members of the party Central Committee Political Bureau, including Nouhak Phoumsavan, Souphanouvong, Phoumi Vongvichit, and General Khamtai Siphandon, and comrade party Central Committee Secretariat member Sali Vongkhamsao. Also attending as guests of honor were Khamsouk Keola, vice chairman and secretary general of the Supreme People's Council; Souvanna Phouma, adviser to the government; comrade members of the party Central Committee Secretariat, members of the party Central Committee, and alternate members of the party Central Committee; members of the Supreme People's Council Standing Committee; many ministers and vice ministers; and more than 1,000 representatives of various offices, organizations, ministries and units of both military and civilian branches.

On this glorious occasion Comrade Lt Gen Saman Vi-Gnaket, member of the party Central Committee Secretariat, made a speech on behalf of the organizing committee for the preparation of the congress, reviewing the activities of various subcommittees attached to different sectors during the preparation period for the third congress of the party and the period during which the congress was continuing. He also read the decree of the president and another decree of the prime minister on the commendation of various collective units and individuals which or who have scored outstanding achievements in fulfilling tasks of serving the congress. Afterwards, the organizing committee invited Comrade President Souphanouvong to award the medals to representatives of various sectors in accordance with the decrees amid songs of praise played by the LPLA band and amid the loud applause of commendation by the masses present at the ceremony.

A total of 796 units and 6,914 comrades were awarded with first, second and third-class medals of freedom; first, second and the third-class labor medals, and government certificates of commendation.

Later, Comrade General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan delivered a speech to wholeheartedly praise and hail the various units, localities and individuals for endeavoring in contributing to the gloriously successful fulfillment of tasks serving the third party congress.

NATION REVIEW DERIDES THACH 'HOT PURSUIT' REMARK

[Editorial: "Hot Pursuit Is More of a Boast Than a Threat"]

[Text] Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has done it again while talking to the press in Singapore. He has clearly said that Vietnam could run out of patience and that its troops would attack the Khmer Rouge guerrillas -- he did not make any specific mention of the forces of Prime Minister Son Sann or those of President Norodom Sihanouk -- who are fighting in western Kampuchea and then will cross in "hot pursuit" across the border into Thailand to annihilate them. This, according to his logic, is because Thailand and its ASEAN partners have been indulging in anti-Indochinese hostilities for several years.

It is extremely difficult for us to take him seriously. Let Thach face the important fact that Vietnam invaded Kampuchea in December 1978 and was easily able to slice through Kampuchea until her troops were stopped in western Kampuchea by the Khmer Rouge guerrillas. No doubt, the Khmer Rouge got some time to get themselves organized because China invaded Vietnam in the middle of February and fought a month-long war calling it the "first lesson," obviously hinting the possibility of a second lesson.

However, since the invasion of Kampuchea, the Vietnamese troops have had four dry seasons during which they could have wiped out all resistance to their occupation of Kampuchea -- but they were unable to do so. That a large part of western Kampuchea is under the control of the forces of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea is a fact that Thach must be well aware of. He certainly must have seen pictures of Sihanouk riding an elephant to a jungle camp inside Kampuchea in order to proclaim the new government and to announce the names of the Cabinet members.

So what does Thach mean by talking about "hot pursuit?" The Khmer patriotic forces are trying to advance into Kampuchea further east and not trying to retreat into Thailand. Smashing the guerrillas, forcing them to retreat into Thailand, and then giving them "hot pursuit" is sheer braggadocio. And according to his own words Vietnam is pulling back troops from Kampuchea and he thinks that with the depleted forces the guerrillas can be routed. Of course it is not logical because even with all the troops that Vietnam poured into Kampuchea, they were not able to rout the guerrillas.

Possibly, Thach thinks that Thailand will become scared but, from our point of view, this is not even a threat. Hanoi will be able to threaten Thailand only when her forces have occupied all of Kampuchean territory and, taking into consideration the past record, this seems highly unlikely and, with the latest developments unifying the various factions under the coalition, such a prospect of taking full control of Kampuchea vanishes. If Thach is to go back to Hanoi and report some success of his tour through this region, he must think of a new line of approach.

PREM RECEIVES OUTGOING SRV AMBASSADOR 21 JULY

[Text] SRV Ambassador to Thailand Hoang Bao Son paid a courtesy call on Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon today at 1500 prior to his departure from Thailand upon completion of his tour of duty. The ambassador was accompanied by Director General of the Protocol Department Nikon Phraisaengphet.

The SRV ambassador said he felt honored by this farewell call accorded by the prime minister because he has high esteem for the prime minister.

During the past 4 years here, he became intimate with and was highly impressed by the Thai people. In carrying out his duties, he met with difficulties sometimes, but was given full cooperation by the Foreign Ministry and concerned government agencies. This cooperation has helped him overcome obstacles. It also illustrates the efforts of the two countries to preserve their friendship. The SRV ambassador said no matter what his new post would be he would always work for improving relations between the two countries.

The prime minister thanked the ambassador. He said he feels a personal closeness to the SRV ambassador. Although they still hold different views on several matters, he said Thailand and Vietnam may one day share a common attitude if they really try to look at the facts as they are. The prime minister conveyed his best wishes to the SRV ambassador. He also presented a souvenir for the SRV ambassador.

ANTIPIRACY UNIT BEGINS OPERATIONS IN SOUTH

BK220222 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] The supreme commander of Thailand, Gen Saiyut Koetphon, formally declared open an antipiracy force set up with $3.7 million in financial support from 12 donor countries. The antipiracy force, which began operations from the naval base in Songkhla Province on 17 July, is equipped with three patrol boats and two Porter planes. The supreme commander said that the task force will concentrate on about 18,000 square kms of water from Ranong to Satun Provinces where the rate of piracy on Thai fishing trawlers and Vietnamese boat people is especially high.

Representatives of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees said in the opening ceremony that donor countries are expected to continue supporting the program after the fund is used up in a year.

According to the supreme commander, the harbor division will help turn the areas into a safety zone by registering all the fishing trawlers under a computerized system. The antipiracy efforts will also be backed by provincial and marine police.

The 12 [figure as heard] donor countries are: Australia, Canada, Denmark, West Germany, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Britain and the United States.

AMENDMENT TO REGULATION FOR CITIZENSHIP SOUGHT

BK210438 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] The Thai Government is considering amending a ministerial regulation which, if approved, will restore Thai citizenship to Vietnamese refugee children born in Thailand. A high-level committee chaired by the interior undersecretary of state is working out an amendment on the regulation which was issued under the Revolutionary Order Number 337 during the administration of Field Marshal Thanom Kittikhachon. The new regulation is expected to be finished and presented to the Ministry of Interior for approval in the next 2 weeks.

According to the interior undersecretary of state, there are about 70 applications for Thai citizenship from Vietnamese born here. Their citizenship was previously revoked by the ministerial regulation. Among the prospective requirements, applicants for Thai citizenship must not have criminal records and are not regarded as posing a threat to national security.

RETURNING TROOPS ARRIVE IN HO CHI MINH CITY

OW211614 Hanoi VNA in English 1536 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 21 -- The Vietnam People's Army units who were repatriated after fulfilling their internationalist duty in Kampuchea arrived in Ho Chi Minh City on Monday. This partial troop withdrawal was effected in conformity with the joint decision of the two countries at the recent conference of the foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries in Ho Chi Minh City.

On their way home from the Vietnamese-Kampuchean border, the returning units were warmly welcomed by large crowds of the population. On their arrival in Ho Chi Minh City, they were greeted by Phan Minh Tanh, member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and vice-secretary of the city's party committee, and representatives of the military sector, public offices and mass organizations.

HANOI HITS PRC REACTION TO INDOCHINESE PROPOSALS

BK211229 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Station commentary]

[Text] The reactionary forces in the Chinese leadership are reacting to the new proposals put forth by the three Indochinese countries in Ho Chi Minh City. The proposals made at the recent ministerial conference aimed at contributing to turning Southeast Asia into a zone of peace and stability. Their reaction has become more frantic, particularly after the withdrawal of a number of Vietnamese units from Kampuchea.

From Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang to such propaganda organs as the New China News Agency and Radio Beijing have spoken out strongly against our proposals. They have warned ASEAN countries and the world public against what they call Vietnam's threat.

What right has Beijing to teach others? They are all aware of the naked truth. Right after we made public our proposals on the partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, on setting up a security zone along the Kampuchea-Thai border, on the convening of an international conference on Southeast Asia and leaving vacant the Kampuchea seat at the United Nations, we have received warm welcome from all over the world, while in the ASEAN countries, many government officials maintained that these proposals reflect the flexible attitude of the Indochinese countries.

Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja regards the Indochinese proposals as an encouraging development, saying that Vietnam's decision to withdraw troops from Kampuchea is not an empty statement. Our new proposals are actually aimed at contributing to the building of a peaceful and stable Southeast Asia. The withdrawal of a number of Vietnamese army units from Kampuchea on 15 July is clear evidence of our good will in taking the first step in [improving] relations with Thailand and our sincere desire to improve the relations with other ASEAN countries. It also testifies to the steady development of the Kampuchean revolution in the past 3 years. The Beijing authorities have deliberately distorted our good willed proposals and tried to prevent the trend toward dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries because they are fearful of peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

If countries in the region conduct dialogue to find a solution to all problems for their peaceful coexistence, how can Beijing fish in troubled waters? And how can it succeed in annexing one country after another on the way of expansion to the south?

For this reason the Beijing authorities have stepped up the war of destruction in many fields against the three Indochinese countries, evaded the latest proposals for signing bilateral or multilateral treaties of peaceful coexistence and ignored Vietnam's call for resuming the Vietnam-China talks aimed at solving problems in the relations between the two countries.

There are still differences between Indochina and ASEAN, but the prospects for dialogue have been opened up. In Southeast Asia as well as in other parts of the world, the common trend is toward peace, stability, friendship and cooperation. So the more Beijing evades and counters the good willed proposals of the three Indochinese countries, the more it exposes itself as the enemy of peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

NHAN DAN REBUTS PRC CLAIMS ON SPRATLYS, PARACELS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 21 -- NHAN DAN today makes it clear again that the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes are Vietnamese territories. The paper says that the Chinese news agency XINHUA, in a recent commentary on the white book "The Hoang Sa and Truoung Sa Archipelagoes, Vietnamese Territories" issued by the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry in January this year, failed to produce any evidence to substantiate China's claims.

NHAN DAN continues: "The Vietnamese Foreign Ministry's white book, based on objective analyses, affirms that 'most embarrassingly they (the Chinese authorities) have failed to bring out when the Chinese state began to take possession of 'Xisha' and 'Nansha' and how this state exercised its sovereignty over them'.

"XINHUA's commentator failed to produce any documents and events to back his arguments, but only said vaguely that China was the first to discover, put to use and administer these two archipelagoes and that China was the only country to have exercized its jurisdiction over them prior to the thirties. In January 1980 the Chinese Foreign Ministry produced excerpts from ancient books and recalled past events to prove that China had owned 'Xisha' and 'Nansha' for a long time. It quoted 'Wujing Zongyao,' a book written in the reign of King Renzong (1023-1063) of the northern Sungs, that 'the court orders that royal troops be dispatched to build and defend the bases of maritime patrol in Guangnan' (present-day Guangdong), that 'combat ships be built' and that 'if from Tunmenshan one avails oneself of the east wind and takes the southeast route one will reach Jiuru Kozhou in seven days'. Identifying Kiuru Lozhou as the 'Xisha Archipelago' the Chinese Foreign Ministry concluded that 'the court of the northern Sungs had placed the Xisha Archipelago under its administration' and that 'Chinese naval units has patrolled the area of the Xisha Archipelago' right in the 11th century'.

"The Chinese ministry evoked astronomical surveys conducted by the Yuan dynasty in the 'South Sea' to back its conclusion that 'the Xisha archipelago lay within Chinese territory under the Yuan'. It also mentioned a patrol tour made by Vice-Admiral Wu Sheng some time between 1710 and 1712 during the Qing dynasty, saying that the vice-admiral 'set out from Qiongya, proceeding to Tonggu, Qizhouyang and Sigengsha, making a three-thousand-li tour of patrol and observation'. Making use of this description of the tour, the Chinese Foreign Ministry concluded that 'Qizhouyang is present-day Xisha Archipelago area which was then patrolled by naval units of Guangdong Province.

"The Chinese Foreign Ministry must have been very pleased with these books and events, but unfortunately what was related in these books did not have nay direct bearing on what the Chinese authorities were seeking to prove. Regarding the first point, Wujing Zhongyao only mentions orders of the court of the northern Sungs for the establishment of bases for maritime patrol in Guangzhou harbour. The book describes these bases and sea routes from Guangzhou to the Indian Ocean, without saying anything about Chinese patrols in the vicinity of the 'Xisha Archipelago'. The Chinese Foreign Ministry simply juggled with the original context to suit its claim that as early as the dynasty of the northern Sungs the 'Xisha Archipelago' was under Chinese sovereignty."

"Concerning the second point, according to Yuanshi, the astronomical surveys at the twenty-seven points were not made on a national level, as claimed by Beijing, but 'in the four seas'. That was why these twenty-seven points included places outside the 'Chinese domain' such as Kaoli, (Korea) Tiele (a place in present-day Siberia), Peihai (the Northern Sea), Nanhai, etc. Yuanshi also says that the Chinese empire was limited by Hainan Island in the south and by the Gobi Desert in the north. Beijing simply deleted this passage.

"On the third point: According to geographical maps printed by China, the places patrolled by Vice-Admiral Wu Sheng were on or around Hainan Island. Qizhouyang, which Beijing described as 'Xisha', is according to a sea map printed in China in May 1965 with legends in both the Chinese and Vietnamese languages, a sea area east of Hainan Island in which there are seven islets called Qizhou. It is not the sea area around the 'Xisha Archipelago'. It is obvious that the Chinese authorities have played a trick with geographical names to induce people into believing that Vice-Admiral Wu Sheng did make a patrol tour around the 'Xisha Archipelago'.

"The ancient books and events quoted by the Chinese Foreign Ministry in its document of January 1980 have failed to testify either to the Chinese state's possession of the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes or to its exercising sovereignty over them, but only prove Beijing's distortion of truth.

"Long ago, the Vietnamese state took possession of the two archipelagoes when they were not under the jurisdiction of any other nation, and it has exerted its sovereignty over them throughout several past centuries including the period when the French Government represented Vietnam in external affairs. Chinese troops' landing on and occupation of the Hoang Sa Islands in 1956 and in 1974 were obviously acts of aggression, because the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes then already belonged incontestably to Vietnam. The Chinese authorities being the aggressors, their aggressive actions cannot validate their sovereignty over the occupied islands.

"Since its occupation of the Hoang Sa Archipelago, Beijing has tried to consolidate and strengthen its position on the islands while doing its utmost to legalize its aggression. It also plans to turn this group of islands into a military base, a strategic springboard in the region. Only by examining Beijing's designs on the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes in the light of its overall strategy can one see clearly China's ambition to monopolize the East Sea and expand southward in Southeast Asia".

The paper points out that it is not the Vietnamese people alone -- the direct and present victim of Beijing's expansionism and hegemonism -- who have seen through the design of the aggressors, but broad public opinion in the world has also denounced and condemned the expansionist moves of the reactionary circles in Beijing. NHAN DAN goes on: "We solemnly reaffirm once again that the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes have long been Vietnamese territories, and that the Vietnamese state took possession of these islands when they were not under the jurisdiction of any other nations and it has exerted continuous sovereignty over them".

"The Vietnamese people are resolved to defend their territorial integrity and sovereignty over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes against all expansionist schemes of the reactionaries in the Beijing ruling circles," NHAN DAN concludes.

PARTY, STATE LEADERS GREET POLISH NATIONAL DAY

OW211641 Hanoi VNA in English 1504 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 21 -- Vietnamese party and state leaders today extended warmest greetings to their Polish counterparts over the 38th national day of the Polish People's Republic (July 22).

The joint message was sent from Le Duan, general secretary of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee; Truong Chinh, president of the Council of State; Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers; and Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the National Assembly; to Wojciech Jaruzelski, first secretary of the Polish United Workers Party Central Committee, chairman of the Council of Ministers and president of the Military Council for National Salvation; Henryk Jablonski, president of the Council of State; and Stanislaw Gucwa, chairman of the National Assembly (SEJM).

It says: "Over the past 38 years, under the leadership of the vanguard party of the Polish working class, with industrious and creative labour and close relations and allround co-operation with the Soviet Union and the other countries in the socialist community, the working class and entire people of Poland have made great achievements in socialist construction. They have turned Poland from an underdeveloped country in Europe into a socialist country with a developed industry and agriculture. As a reliable member of the Council of Mutual Economic Assistance and the Warsaw treaty, Poland has been doing its best to implement its socialist foreign policy, thus contributing to increasing the strength of the socialist system and that of the forces struggling for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

"The Vietnamese people have always followed with concern every step forwards of the Polish people and greatly rejoiced at their achievements over the past 38 years".

"At present", the message goes on, "Because of hostile plots and moves by imperialism and other anti-socialist forces, the Polish people's revolutionary cause is facing serious difficulties and trials. With close fraternity, the Communists and entire people of Vietnam reaffirm their unshakable support for the Communists and entire people of Poland. We are convinced that with a time-honoured tradition of patriotism and love for socialism and wholeheartedly backed and assisted by the Soviet Union and the other countries in the socialist community as well as all progressive forces in the world, the Polish people will bring into play their achievements, gradually overcome difficulties in their advance, and take Poland steadily forward along the road of socialism.

"Vietnam and Poland have always assisted each other in fighting as well as in peaceful construction. The close friendship and allround cooperation between the parties and peoples of the two countries based on Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism have been constantly consolidated and developed in the interests of the two nations, the socialist community and world peace as well".

"On this occasion", the message says, "on behalf of the Communists and entire people of Vietnam, we would like to express our sincere and profound gratitude to the party, the SEJM, and the government and people of Poland for their strong support and effective assistance to our past war of resistance for national salvation as well as to our socialist construction and national defence at present".

"May the friendship, militant solidarity and fraternal cooperation between our two countries be ever-lasting", the message says.

NHAN DAN Marks Holiday

OW220911 Hanoi VNA in English 0818 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 22 -- NHAN DAN today marks Poland's 38th national day with an editorial titled "Socialism Is the Choice of the Polish People".

Noting that the situation in Poland today differs greatly from what it was a year ago, the paper says: Last year Poland was in a serious crisis. Anti-socialist forces were counter-attacking frenziedly, threatening socialist construction and national independence as well as peace and security in Europe. But the martial law promulgated on December 13 put an end to the counterrevolutionary forces' bid for power, thus warding off a civil war and creating good conditions for the gradual stabilization of the situation.

"We now hope that", NHAN DAN says, "the Polish people's traditional heroism and their achievements in socialist construction will further inspire them in the struggle to preserve socialism in their country". The paper goes on: "Following the July 22, 1944 victory, under the leadership of the Polish United Workers Party, with their industry and creativeness and the assistance of the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries, the Polish people built backward, war-torn Poland into a socialist, industrially and agriculturally developed, and technologically advanced country. The more than three decades following liberation witnessed a development unheard of in the time-honoured history of Poland".

NHAN DAN says that to the imperialists and their henchmen, Poland has always been a prime target, and the recent crisis was the result of the latest effort. "But again the Polish people stood firm", the paper notes. It says: "Poland is now bringing the situation to normal in order to develop socialist construction [in] a balanced, steady way. This, of course, cannot be done overnight, and the Polish people are receiving great, timely and valuable assistance from the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries to cope with present difficulties".

NHAN DAN also notes that imperialism and other reactionary forces, not wishing to see a stable Poland, are hatching new schemes to cause another crisis.

"The Vietnamese people," the paper says, "deeply sympathize with the fraternal people of Poland who are struggling to recover from the crisis and continue socialist development. Celebrating the Polish national day, we reaffirm our close fraternity with and unshakable support for the communists and the entire people of Poland in defending and consolidating socialism. We also wish to express our sincere gratitude to the party, the government and the people of Poland for their strong support for and effective assistance to our struggle against U.S. aggression and to our present efforts to build and defend socialist Vietnam."

TRUONG CHINH ADDRESSES LETTER ON WAR INVALIDS DAY

BK220548 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Letter from SRV Council of State Chairman Truong Chinh on the occasion of War Invalids Day]

[Text] Cordially to war invalids, sick soldiers, families of fallen combatants and families that have rendered meritorious services to the revolution:

On the occasion of the 35th War Invalids Day, 27 July, on behalf of the party and state, I respectfully bow in memory of those soldiers who have valiantly sacrificed their lives for the nation's glorious revolutionary cause. I cordially convey my best regards to all war invalids and sick soldiers of both sexes and to the families of fallen combatants and families who have rendered meritorious service to the revolution throughout the country.

Our party, state and people always hold in high esteem, love and wholeheartedly care for the war invalids, sick soldiers, families of fallen combatants and families who have rendered meritorious service to the revolution. All echelons and sectors and all our soldiers and people have, through realistic actions, implemented policies and regulations with regard to those who have rendered meritorious services to the people and country. Many war invalids and sick soldiers of both sexes, families of fallen combatants and families who have rendered services to the revolution have developed their fine traditions and struggled to overcome difficulties, showing themselves to be worthy as model citizens and exemplary revolutionary families.

I heartily commend their great efforts and hope they will develop even more vigorously their warm patriotism and the spirit of collective socialist mastery and, together with the people, engage in the emulation movement to implement the resolutions of the fifth party congress successfully so as to contribute worthily to the cause of building and defending the fatherland.

On this occasion, I remind all state organs and all echelons and sectors to heighten their sense of responsibility and carry out set policies and regulations satisfactorily. Let mass organizations and compatriots pay constant attention to caring for and helping the war invalids, sick soldiers, families of fallen combatants and families which have rendered meritorious service to the revolution to reduce the difficulties they are encountering in the present stage.

We must strive to carry out venerated and beloved President Ho's advice: Let us ensure that the war invalids, sick soldiers, families of fallen combatants and families which have rendered meritorious service to the revolution will live a happy material and spiritual life.

With my best regards,

[Signed] Truong Chinh

NHAN DAN MARKS PEOPLE'S POLICE FORCE ANNIVERSARY

[NHAN DAN 20 July editorial: "Develop the Traditions of Sacrificing Oneself for the Country and Rendering One's Services for the People"]

[Summary] "Under the correct leadership of the VCP and with the attentive educational care provided by esteemed President Ho Chi Minh, the people's police force has grown stronger with firmer revolutionary ethics. This force has coordinated closely with the people's public security force, the VPA and militia and self-defense forces to cope with threats in the struggle against imperialist aggressor forces and other counterrevolutionary elements to protect national independence and freedom, socialist material and technical bases and the people's lives and property."

Through many years of arduous struggle and sacrifice, units of the people's police have performed their duties outstandingly and effectively displayed revolutionary heroism. Many units were awarded with hero commendations, medals and orders for their achievements during the struggles against the U.S. war of destruction and the Chinese war of aggression in northern border areas.

"Recently, fired with enthusiasm for carrying out the resolutions of the Fifth VCP Congress and scoring more achievements to mark its 20th anniversary, the people's police force has once again been awarded with the noble Ho Chi Minh Order by the Council of State. This is a great honor for the people's police, the people's public security force in the task of maintaining political security, social order and safety.

"However, negative phenomena are still prevalent in the contingent of the people's police in some places. This problem must be urgently overcome and eliminated."

The commemoration of this year's traditional day of the people's police comes at a time when the country is striving to carry out the two strategic tasks of building socialism and triumphantly defending the socialist fatherland.

"Faced with a situation in which the Beijing reactionaries, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces, are conducting a multifaceted war of sabotage to weaken our country, the people's police must firmly grasp the party and state's lines and policies and strive to fulfill its tasks absolutely. One of the enemy's major objectives is to discredit the revolutionary armed forces which comprise the people's public security force, the people's police and the VPA force. At a number of places, the enemies have instigated criminals and their henchmen to disguise themselves as policemen and militiamen to commit robberies and sabotage production in order to undermine the people's confidence in this vital tool of the revolution. They have incited a number of bad elements to disturb social order and safety, and instigated hooligans, thieves, smugglers and speculators to carry out illegal activities and thereby undermine production, damage state property and violate the people's life and property.

"As a result, the people's police must develop still further its splendid traditions of sacrifice for the country and rendering services to the people, and strive to foil all acts of sabotage conducted by the enemies, hooligans and criminals."

Each officer and combatant of the people's police force must regularly enhance his revolutionary ethics and be absolutely loyal to the fatherland, the party and the people. The contingent of the people's police must strive to become strong in all domains to be able to foil all sinister schemes of the enemy.

As the force which implements the state law, the people's police as well as the people's public security force must study and understand the law in order to maintain social order and safety effectively. They must protect the people's right to collective mastery and ensure a peaceful and happy life for the people.

"Under the leadership of the VCP and with assistance provided by administrative echelons, mass organizations and the people's armed forces, the people's police will confidently and vigorously advance further in the cause of maintaining national security, social order and safety, thereby positively contributing, together with the entire army and people, to triumphantly fulfilling the resolutions of the Fifth VCP Congress."

NHAN DAN VIEWS YOUTH UNION ROLE IN AGRICULTURE

[NHAN DAN 21 July editorial: "Enhance the Role of Youth Unions in Agricultural Cooperatives"]

[Text] The youth program for accelerating grain production, launched by the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union Central Committee and the Ministry of Agriculture, is being adopted broadly in various localities.

In many districts and villages, especially in agricultural cooperatives, the Youth Union organizations are turning this program into a specific action plan for this 10th-month crop season being busily prepared. In agricultural cooperatives, youths, mostly female, constitute the vigorous labor forces. They possess good education and are eager to learn and take the lead in performing new economic and social changes.

They always are the first to apply scientific and technical innovations to production and build and use the material and technical bases of cooperatives, and they are eager to implement the party policies and guidelines for rural areas. Youths must also be the core force in building a new socialist countryside.

Facets of the agricultural production movement over the past several years show that, in all the advanced cooperatives and districts where crop yields and production volume are high and the animal raising and other sectors and tasks are developed, the young labor forces' collective mastery has been exercised well and their labor and revolutionary abilities have been mobilized to good purposes.

By applying the system of product contracts for rice with groups of workers and individual workers through a few crop seasons, the role and abundant abilities of young cooperative members have developed even better. Leadership has been exercised correctly and closely in nearly all cooperatives. The Youth Unions in cooperatives have succeeded in gathering and organizing young workers to strengthen the various labor and specialized work teams. They have well fulfilled all such various key technical tasks as the production and management of seeds and fertilizer, irrigation work, farmland water conservancy and protection of vegetation.

Owing to their efforts, the crop productivity and production volume has definitely increased, all the technical measures of intensive cultivation have been implemented and the operational control of cooperatives' management committees over production is exercised effectively.

In many advanced cooperatives such as Hoan Son in Ha Bac Province; Nghi Thinh and Hung Tay Ba in Nghe Tinh Province; Doan Xa in Haiphong; and many others, the Youth Unions have also played an important role in establishing rational contract quotas to ensure the interests of the workers, state and collectives.

As children of the families receiving work contracts, the Youth Union members have exemplarily performed their three labor tasks well, fulfilling the contract quotas quite satisfactorily, and have increased the income of their families definitely.

The Youth Unions in many cooperatives have further organized assault teams to help the families of war invalids and fallen heroes and all other needy families. By their exemplary actions, the youths have urged the families receiving work contracts to adequately deliver their products to the cooperatives and the state.

Facts have shown that, in the process of implementing product contracts, the Youth Unions do not cause the operation to lose ground and they have an opportunity to develop their collective mastery, acquire a more profound knowledge of production and economic management, and create conditions for cadres, union members and youths to progress and mature quickly.

However, youths still have shortcomings. Tens of thousands of newly graduated students and youths -- including those who have completed their complusory military service -- still lack production experience and their technical skills are still poor, especially with regard to soil preparation. Moreover, they have not acquired the habit of working meticulously and thoroughly. These shortcomings can be overcome quickly. At the same time, their good points can also be developed rapidly.

Turning the youth program for accelerating grain production into the revolutionary act of millions of Youth Union members in agricultural cooperatives is now a cause of concern for various party organizations and local party factions. This great organizational task requires that grassroots-level party organizations emphasize leadership over Youth Unions and youth movements. Experience has revealed that only by combining the Youth Union program of action closely with the cooperatives' production plan can Youth Unions determine realistic guidelines and objectives, and institute a consistent and fruitful plan to motivate the masses.

The youth movements on the production front can be enthusiastically active and steady and can achieve high economic results and educational effectiveness as long as they can create a powerful motive. Through these movements, the socialist awareness of youths can be enhanced constantly and the interests and legitimate aspirations of young peasants can be fulfilled properly. Also, only through seething youth movements can Youth Union organizations become stronger.

HAIPHONG, PROVINCIAL COUNCILS REVIEW 1982 PLANS

[Text] The people's councils of Haiphong City and Quang Nam-Danang and Lam Dong Provinces recently met to review the implementation of their plans during the first 6 months of the year and decide tasks for the last half of 1982.

The Haiphong City People's Council adopted measures for accelerating the production of grain, foodstuffs, and consumer and export goods; completing capital construction projects provided for in the plan; attaining import and export targets; strengthening leadership over distribution and circulation work; and ensuring the people's cultural and material life.

As its immediate goal, Haiphong will solve more satisfactorily the problem of supplying power, running water, grain, vegetables, sauce and fuel; and will continue to make progress in maintaining security and order. It will strive to achieve an average yearly paddy output of 58 quintals or more per hectare, increase the yearly value of gross industrial production by 5 percent over 1981 and net some 500 million dong worth of export goods. It will, in the last half of 1982, prepare every condition for the satisfactory collection and purchase, above and beyond compulsory quotas, of 50,000 tons of paddy from the 5th- and 10th-month rice crops, 4,500 tons of pork, 900 tons of tobacco, 1,000 tons of fresh seafood and 1 million liters of fish sauce.

Along with affirming the achievements scored during the past 6 months, the Lam Dong provincial people's council pointed out the province's shortcomings in directing agricultural production. The province has paid little attention to the collection, purchase and control of products and goods. It has not grasped the situation in localities firmly in order to correct their deviations in production and in delivery of products promptly according to the agricultural tax policy and economic contracts. Industrial, forestry and handicraft sectors; plan norms are far from being achieved. In the last half of the year, the province will strive to plant its entire summer and 10th-month rice crop areas and carry out intensive cultivation to achieve a high output in grain production. It will organize and motivate individual peasants, production groups and agricultural cooperatives to declare their cultivated areas correctly so as to help sectors and echelons control their production and do collection and purchase work satisfactorily, thereby contributing to stabilizing the people's life and export activities. It will accelerate the transformation of industry and trade and punish speculators and smugglers who disrupt the market.

The Quang Nam-Danang provincial people's council decided on specific measures aimed at attaining the targets of 520,000 tons of grain and 420 million dong worth of industrial, small industry and handicraft products; striving to fulfill and overfulfill the 1982 state plan; and creating favorable conditions for the fulfillment of the 1983 state plan.

At the meeting Hoang Minh Thang, head of the delegation of National Assembly deputies from the province, reported on the work and results of the third session of the Seventh National Assembly.

AUSTRALIA

GOVERNMENT UNDECIDED ON KAMPUCHEAN COALITION

BK220926 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] Australia's ambassador-designate to the United Nations, Sir Richard Woolcott, says Australia has not yet decided whether to back the new anti-Vietnamese coalition of Kampuchean resistance groups at the UN. Speaking in Manila, where he is winding up his term as Australian ambassador to the Philippines, Mr Woolcott said Australia still recogized no government in Kampuchea.

Australia last year withdrew its recognition of Democratic Kampuchea, the ousted Khmer Rouge regime, which holds the country's UN seat, and abstained in the General Assembly vote on its credentials. Mr Woolcott said that it was too early to judge how the formation of the coalition of resistance groups would affect Australian policy. He said Australia would see how the coalition developed and whether it could be said to be truly representative of the Kampuchean people. However, he said Australia would consider its position in the light of circumstances in September when the UN General Assembly will again take up the issue of Democratic Kampuchea's credentials.

Mr Woolcott added that Australia would not want the coalition to become a cover for continued Khmer Rouge control of Kampuchea. The coalition links the communist Khmer Rouge and non-communists -- the Moulinaka faction of the former Kampuchean head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk, and the Khmer People's National Liberation Front led by one of his former prime ministers, Mr Son Sann.

IRON, COAL EXPORTS TO JAPAN -- A predicted further slump in the Japanese steel industry is certain to mean a huge loss in export earnings for Australia. Japanese trade officials say the steel production for the third quarter of this year is expected to total 24 million tons, that is nearly 2 million tons less than in the second quarter. Officials say it is almost certain Japan's annual steel production will fall below 100 million tons for the first time in a decade. Radio Australia's Tokyo office says that as Japan is Australia's main customer for iron ore and coal, the Japanese slump will mean a loss of export earnings for Australia totalling hundreds of millions of dollars. AID TO TUVALU -- Australia is to provide aid to Tuvalu with aid worth $1.3 million this financial year for a number of projects. The money will be spent on engineering machinery, building and construction materials, marine equipment and fisheries developments. A team of Australian consultants is to arrive in Tuvalu next month to study the feasibility of extracting resource materials from lagoon seabeds. The money will also be used on educational and cultural projects. [Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 19 Jul 82 BK]

ALUMINUM SMELTER PROJECT DEFERRED -- The building of an aluminum smelter in southwestern Victoria has been deferred. The deferral of the big project was announced in Melbourne on 19 July by Sir Arvi Parbo, the chairman of the aluminum company -- Alcoa -- and the Victorian premier, Mr Cain. Sir Arvi said the completion date for the smelter to be built at Portland was being put back from late next year to the middle of 1985 largely because of the depressed state of the world aluminum market. He said that in addition, Australia's competitiveness in the market was declining and Alcoa did not have sufficient cash flow to continue with the project. ASSEMBLYMAN PELAEZ WOUNDED IN GUN ATTACK

[Text] Associated Press reports that former vice president and now Assemblyman Emmanuel Pelaez was wounded and his driver killed when they were ambushed last night on their way home in Quezon City. Pelaez sustained four bullet wounds, but he was reported this morning to be in stable condition at a hospital in Quezon City. His driver of 35 years, identified only as (Arseno), was dead on the spot. Initial police investigation disclosed that the car bearing Pelaez was only about a block away from his residence when two cars sandwiched the Pelaez vehicle on both sides. The gunmen aboard the two cars then opened fire with automatic weapons and fled. The police and constabulary have fielded teams of undercover men to track down the ambushers of Pelaez. Details of the crime were not immediately available.

Investigation Begins

[Text] Authorities say well-trained terrorists from the southern Philippines may have been responsible for the ambush of Assemblyman Emmanuel Pelaez. PC [Philippine Constabulary] Chief Lieutenant-General Fidel Ramos said the authorities are looking into reports that terrorists linked with the MNLF have come to Manila to create disturbances in connection with the forthcoming Islamic Conference.

As this developed, a massive manhunt for the perpertrators was ordered by General Ramos, alerting the four regional commands in Mindanao and the Manila [words indistinct] outlying regions. For his part Metro Manila Police Commander Prospero Olivas has ordered a dragnet operation involving top Metrocon and police authorities, to conduct a round-the-clock police operation to identify and apprehend the perpetrators. Metrocon and Metropolitan Manila [word indistinct] who responded to the scene of the ambuscade last night recovered [words indistinct] empty shells of a high-powered firearm. Together with the empty shells, the police brought the Pelaez cream-colored Toyota to the PC crime laboratory at Camp Crame for ballistics examination. General Olivas as of now has [words indistinct] to conduct spot checks on vehicles carrying firearms.

MRS MARCOS RETURNS FROM SOVIET UNION VISIT

[Excerpts] The first lady, back from a successful visit to the Soviet Union, says there is yet hope for a workable world peace. Madam Marcos made the statement upon arriving from her 2-week mission, which also took her to the United States. In her latest mission, and in earlier trips, the first lady had chances to exchange views on world issues with top leaders of nations of various ideologies. She said they all expressed desire to bring about lasting peace in the world. Madam Marcos and a high-level delegation composed of cabinet members and ministers flew in last night amid the cheers of welcomers.

CARDINAL SIN PESSIMISTIC ABOUT ANTI-GRAFT CAMPAIGN

OW211351 Hong Kong AFP in English 0640 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] Manila, July 21 (AFP) -- The Philippines' top Catholic prelate today said President Ferdinand Marcos' campaign against graft and corruption "is much too late" and would not yield any substantial results.

Jaime Cardinal Sin, archbishop of Manila, told AFP the president should have rooted out graft and corruption "in the early years of martial law" before they had taken deep root in the government.

Cardinal Sin, the previous president of the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines, indicated that corruption was now too entrenched and the people involved in it too well-connected for the president's present campaign to succeed. President Marcos however recently claimed his campaign was doing well, particularly against swindling and corruption which "nobody bothered about before." The culprits were taken to court and punished, he said.

Cardinal Sin, long a critic of President Marcos and particularly so during the 1972-81 martial law period, also belittled persistent press reports that the Communist Party of the Philippines and its military arm the New People's Army (NPA) had become a serious threat. The cardinal said reports of the NPA's growing mass support in the countryside were exaggerated, while admitting that some young Catholic priets and nuns collaborated with the NPA at grass-roots level.

The cardinal said there "is absolutely no possibility" of the Catholic Church in the Philippines linking hands with the communist insurgents since the latter's leadership would never abandon godless Marxist ideology.

NPA guerrilla strength has been estimated at anything from 4,000 to 7,000 men.

SUSPECTED NDF LEADERS CHARGED WITH ARMS SMUGGLING

OW211353 Hong Kong AFP in English 0644 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Text] Manila, July 21 (AFP) -- Military authorities have charged former government technocrat Horacio Morales and eight other suspected leaders of the underground National Democratic Front (NDF) of smuggling arms into the country from the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) late last year.

Documents submitted to a suburban city court yesterday said a cache of about 200 high powered Russian-made guns from the Middle East and several rounds of ammunition were unloaded in a fishing village near the Manila Bay last October. Intelligence reports said the arms were part of a conspiracy of the Maoist Communist Party of the Philippines and the NDF to overthrow the government.

Mr Morales, former executive vice president of the Development Academy of the Philippines, and Catholic priest Edicio de la Torre were arrested on April 21 and 22 in metro Manila.

They and the seven other arrested suspects, mostly young professionals in Manila, are presently detailed in a military stockade, while military authorities prepare subversion charges against them. The suburban Quezon City magistrates office is conducting preliminary investigations prior to filing the case for trial.

Meanwhile defence lawyers have filed a habeas corpus plea before the Supreme Court seeking bail for Mr Morales, who has complained of "mind-bending torture" including electric shocks and the "water cure" during military interrogation, they said.

COUNTERMEASURES TO WHALING BAN STUDIED; U.S. BAN EXPECTED

[Text] Tokyo, July 24, KYODO -- The International Whaling Commission's [IWC] decision to impose a world wide ban on commercial whaling came as a great shock to the government and related industries Saturday.

The government will immediately start studying measures to counter the decision, which, if implemented, will put an end to the long history of the Japanese whaling industry, government sources said. As a first step in this direction, the sources said, the government is expected to file an "objection" with the commission to declare that Japan is not abiding by the decision, the sources said.

Akira Matsuura, director general of the Fishery Agency, said in this connection that the government will begin studying countermeasures after a Japanese delegation returns home from the current meeting of the IWC in Brighton, Britain, where the decision on the ban was made Friday. Matsuura said the IWC decision runs counter to the original aim of the commission -- the conservation of whale stocks and healthy development of the whaling industry. He added that he cannot but regard the decision as "unscientific."

The sources said th at the government will also start negotiations with the U.S. Government, w hich has a great influence in antiwhaling campaigns. The United States, the sources noted, also has legislation stipulating that the government can take retaliatory steps against any nation continuing whaling. If Japan does not abide by the IWC decision on the three-year ban on commercial whaling from 1986, the United States is expected to take punitive action against this country in forms such as a ban on Japanese fishing operations in the U.S. 200-mile fishery zone, the sources noted. Japanese fishermen annually catch about 1.1 million tons of fish, worth about yen 70 billion (dollar 280 million) in the U.S. fishery zone, they said.

The IWC decision sent a shock wave throughout the Japanese whaling industries where some 1,300 persons are actually engaged in whaling activities. In addition, about 50,000 people are employed in related industries, such as whale meat and oil processing and distribution.

LDP'S SHIGESADA MARUMO DIES AT AGE 66

OW240120 Tokyo KYOKO in English 0048 GMT 24 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 24, KYODO -- Shigesada Marumo, a ruling Liberal-Democratic Party member of the House of Councillors, died of cerebral hemorrhage at a hospital in Tokyo Friday night. He was 66. Marumo, a medical doctor from Gumma Prefecture and former director general of the Environment Agency, fell unconscious Friday afternoon and was taken to Toranomon Hospital in Tokyo where he died.

He was returned to the Upper House four times after first being elected from the national constituency in the 1962 House of Councillors' election with the support of the Liberal-Democratic Party and Japan Medical Association. He served as the secretary general of the Upper House members of the LDP and chairman of the Upper House Finance Committee. While serving as the director general of the Environment Agency, he played a key role in enforcement of the bill on automobile exhaust fumes. He was regarded as one of the leading members of the faction led by former Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda.

Following the death of Marumo, the strength of the Upper House parties stands at LDP 134, Japan Socialist Party 47, Komeito 27, Japan Communist Party 12, Democratic Socialist Party 11, Shin-Sei Club 7, Niin Club 3, Ichino-Kai 3, and independents 3. There are 5 seats vacant.

NODONG SINMUN SCORES S. KOREAN MILITARY EXERCISE

[NODONG SINMUN 26 July commentary: "Dangerous Rope Dancing"]

[Text] The South Korean puppets have announced that they will conduct a large-scale military exercise in Seoul and Kyonggi Province in the latter part of July. Under the provocative signboard "Communist-Anihilation 82" they will mobilize all suppressive agencies such as the army, the police, bureaucratic groups, the homeland defense reservist forces and the militia, and even civilians, directly picking a quarrel with us. This exercise will coincide with the visit to South Korea of bellicose U.S. elements, that of puppets to the United States on the latter's demand, repeated military conferences between them, the recent visit to the frontline by the boss of the puppets to fan war flames and the brazen military provocations in areas along the Military Demarcation Line.

Clamoring that the military exercise is designed to cope with a contingency which might occur shortly before the outbreak of a war, the puppet authorities have created tension. This represents an unusual move which could only appear on the eve of a war. The puppets have said that, through this exercise, they will review an all-out security posture for the defense of the metropolitan area from a surprise attack from the North. The theory of a surprise attack from the North is one they have spread to conceal their military exercise and is one concocted by the U.S. imperialists.

The tactical exercise to be staged by the puppets is a war exercise for northward invasion against us. Perplexed by the situation in which voices have been raised to demand the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggressors from South Korea and the resignation of the fascist military clique and in which the trend for the fatherland's reunification has increased, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is desperately running amok to make a breakthrough by following the path of military adventure.

An attempt to stage a military exercise on an irrelevant excuse and to create an atmosphere of war is a maneuver to divert the attention of the people at home and abroad by misleading public opinion and to overcome the crisis of colonial terrorist rule which they are facing. This attempt is a trick designed to block the righteous advance of the South Korean people by threatening them with arms, to eliminate democratic forces and suppress patriots.

The puppets openly vowed that during the exercise they will ferret out those whose acts are suspicious. Reminding us of the proverb "a day-old puppy is not scared by a tiger," there are those who, not satisfied with their past behavior of advocating peace and negotiations while kicking up anticommunist rackets behind this smokescreen to fan the sentiment of North-South confrontation and to heighten tension, are doing a dangerous rope dance of war of northward invasion.

Provoking others is foolish for those who, while floundering, are unable to quench the fire at their feet. The Chon Tu-hwan ring should act discreetly. If it runs amok senselessly to make a breakthrough by clinging to military adventure and by kicking up communist-anihilation rackets, it will never achieve good results.

The puppets have kicked up war rackets masterminded by the U.S. imperialists. The plan for this tactical exercise is the result of a war conference in the United States between the chief of staff of the puppet army and his U.S. masters. Without the approval and support of the U.S. imperialists, puppet army troops under the control of a U.S. Army commander cannot be mobilized in tactical exercises. Driven into a corner, facing an anti-U.S. struggle, the U.S. imperialists have driven the puppets to the path of military adventure to overcome the crisis of colonial rule by executing a policy of aggression and war.

The act of making the gunpowder reek of kicking up war rackets, picking a quarrel with us, is a dangerous act of heightening tension in Korea and of leading the situation to the verge of war. If a war breaks out in Korea, the United States will not benefit from this. We are keenly watching the developing situation in South Korea.

PARTY ORGAN CALLS U.S. 'CHIEFTAIN OF AGGRESSION'

SK252232 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2211 GMT 25 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 26 (KCNA) -- In the budget for fiscal 1983, the U.S. Government increased the military appropriations by 45,000 million dollars, bringing it up to 263,100 million dollars, while cutting the expenditure under the "Social Security program" by 11,700 million dollars as compared with the current fiscal year. This is a topic of a NODONG SINMUN article Sunday.

The signed article captioned "U.S. Imperialists' Frantic Arms Buildup" says that this is a war budget of tremendous scale involving military spendings previously unknown in U.S. history. Follows an abridged text of the article:

This systematic raise of the military spendings by the U.S. imperialists at present, which is not a war time, in an acute economic crisis, reveals their attempts to find a way out of their political and economic crisis in aggression and war. Their fabulous military expenditure for fiscal 1983 proves that their namoeuvres for the provocation of another world war have entered a very dangerous stage. This finds vivid manifestation in the fact that they pay primary attention to the production and development of such mass destruction weapons as strategic nuclear and chemical weapons in the military appropriations for the new fiscal year.

The U.S. imperialists have worked out a "nuclear arms buildup program" under which they intend to hasten the production of neutron bombs, a mass destruction weapon, while producing new types of nuclear weapons, to fill their arsenals for aggression. They have decided to hurl a colossal 180,000 million dollars into this "program" in a few years to come. And they are contemplating to allocate a sizable part of the military appropriations for the new fiscal year to the production of chemical weapons, defying the protest and denunciation of all the peace-loving people of the world.

They never cease to build and expand aggressive military bases abroad. More than 2,500 aggressive military bases of theirs are now distributed all over the world. In the new fiscal year they plan to readjust and reinforce them with mass destruction weapons including nuclear arms.

They intend to put no small part of their military expenditure in the hands of their puppets and encourage them to the provocation of a war of aggression. Having proclaimed South Korea "a main object of military aid," they have transferred quantities of military equipment to the military fascist clique and now they are handing over to the latter even several dozen Hawk missiles of latest type. The U.S. ruling circles even worked out an emergency plan to transfer ammunitions and war supplies worth 2,000 million dollars to the South Korean puppets in case they provoke a new war in Korea. On the other hand, the U.S. imperialists are staging war exercises almost every day everywhere in the world to start another war.

Owing to such frantic arms buildup and new war provocation maneouvres of the U.S. imperialists, the peace and security of the world are now gravely menaced and the danger of a new world war is growing daily.

Facts prove that the U.S. imperialists are the chieftain of aggression and war and harasser of world peace. They should look straight at the current of the times and act with discretion.

MINJU CHOSON RAPS U.S. WAR POLICY IN KOREA

SK231535 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1518 GMT 23 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 23 (KCNA) -- MINJU CHOSON today comes out with an article titled "U.S. Imperialists, Heinous War Maniacs" denouncing the U.S. imperialists for stepping up the war provocation manoeuvres in Korea, far from drawing a proper lesson from their miserable defeat in the Korean war. The author of the article says:

Driven into a hopeless bog by a serious political and economic crisis, the U.S. imperialists are persistently clinging to the undisguised policy of "strength," seeking a way out of it in aggression and war. In the recent period, they chose the Korean Peninsula as a "test ground" for their global strategy and are hastening preparations for starting a war in this region, openly crying that Korea is the most delicate spot for the outbreak of a war.

Noting that the U.S. imperialists are stepping up arms buildup more feverishly than ever before in and around South Korea, the paper says: What is noteworthy in such preparations of the U.S. imperialists for another Korean War is their massive shipment of sophisticated nuclear weapons into South Korea.

The paper points out that the U.S. imperialists are working overtime to increase the South Korean puppets' military strength and conducting adverntures war exercises including the "Team Spirit 82" and military provocations against us.

The paper continues: The U.S. imperialists' colonial enslavement policy and new war provocation manoeuvres have reduced South Korea to a complete colony and aggressive military base of the U.S. imperialists without a shade of chajusong (independence). Owing to the war provocation manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets, South Korea is being turned further into a hotbed of a new war and the situation of the Korean Peninsula has been brought to the extreme pitch of strain and a grave danger has been created in our country in which a war may break out any moment.

Facts prove that the U.S. imperialists are the splittists who seek to create "two Koreas," illegally occupying South Korea and pursuing the colonial enslavement policy, and the heinous war maniacs who keep the situation in our country constantly strained and try to kindle the flame of a new war in Korea.

The U.S. imperialists are bent on misleading world opinion and covering up their aggressive policy, with outcries over "threat of southward invasion" and stepping up their war provocation moves behind the scene. But, this is nothing but the last-ditch efforts of those facing destruction. The U.S. imperialists should look straight into the reality and refrain from running riot and should promptly withdraw all their troops and military equipment from South Korea.

NODONG SINMUN ON U.S. GLOBAL 'ISOLATION'

[NODONG SINMUN 24 July special article: "The U.S. Imperialists Are Being Isolated and Rejected by the World's Nations Everywhere"]

[Text] Nearly 30 years have passed since the U.S. imperialists suffered a disgraceful defeat in the Korean war for the first time in their history and surrendered themselves to our people.

The U.S. imperialists have been continuously hit and driven away throughout the world without healing their wounds after being severely defeated in the Korean war. They are more isolated and rejected by the people of the world, including those of Asia, Africa and Latin America.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The U.S. imperialists are being isolated and rejected by the world's people everywhere. They have lost nearly all monopolistic rights and authority even within the capitalist world.

Today the U.S. imperialists are rejected by all the peoples throughout the world -- from Asia and Africa to Europe and the Western Hemisphere, from the developing countries to the Western capitalist countries. They are facing denunciation not only in the political field but also in the military and economic sectors.

The isolation of the U.S. imperialists is, first of all, shown by the fact that their contradictory policy of war and aggression is being strongly denounced and rejected by the world's people. Despite the fact that they lost broad areas of domination and their strengthen has declined, the U.S. imperialists are fanatically adhering to the maneuvers of aggression and war, harboring an ambition for dominating the world.

The U.S. imperialists, in particular, have formulated astronomical military expenditures unimaginable in peacetime and are fanatically stepping up expansion of nuclear armaments. In some areas they made their stooges fight on their behalf. Because of this, international tension is being heightened and the danger of a new world war is growing. The U.S. imperialists' reckless maneuvers of aggression and war infringe on peace and security, hinder the people's building of a new life, block the independent development of nations and people and are leading mankind to the calamity of nuclear war.

The people of the world aspiring independence, sovereignty and social progress and treasuring justice and peace oppose the U.S. imperialists' arms buildup and preparations for nuclear war and demand the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggressor forces and bases in other nations. In particular, the Reagan administration's reckless nuclear war policy is arousing a fierce whirlwind of anti-U.S. and antiwar movements throughout the world.

Famous social and political activists, progressive figures and a number of publications in the world are denouncing with indignation the U.S. imperialists' adventurous war maneuvers, branding them as an act of lunacy for the destruction of mankind and an irresponsible policy which destroys world peace and is leading mankind to a nuclear calamity. A demonstration by some 250,000 people opposing the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers of aggressive war and nuclear war was staged in Bonn, West Germany, in October 1981. Following this, unprecedentedly large-scale anti-U.S. and antiwar demonstrations were repeatedly staged in the capital cities of West Europe, including Brussels, London and Rome.

In June, some 1 million people staged an antiwar demonstration in New York, the largest in the history of the United States. They shouted the slogans "We oppose the nuclear arms race!" and "We denounce the U.S. nuclear war preparation maneuvers!"

Anti-U.S. and antiwar movements are being waged each day. Such movements include the demand for designating Asian and Pacific areas and the Indian Ocean as nuclear-free peace zones; the demand for withdrawal of U.S. imperialists' aggressor forces from mainland Japan and Okinawa and abolishing the U.S.-Japan security treaty; the demand for abolishing U.S. military bases at Diego Garcia and returning the island; the demand for discontinuation of U.S. imperialists' interference in El Salvador; and the struggle to frustrate the U.S. imperialists' plot to dispatch U.S. Marines to Lebanon.

Today there is no place on the globe where the U.S. imperialists' fanatic arms race and war provocation maneuvers are not denounced.

No day passes without the world people's curse and denunciation of the U.S. imperialists. The voices of denunciation and condemnation of the U.S. imperialists, branding them the ringleader of aggression and mastermind of modern warfare, are ringing out across the world, across the continents and oceans.

The voice of the world's people denouncing the U.S. imperialists' policy of war and aggression is more loudly ringing out in connection with the Korean question. Placing great significance on Korea's geographic position in realizing their ambition to dominate Asia and the world, the U.S. imperialists are scheming to perpetuate the division of Korea, continuing the military occupation of South Korea and colonial rule, and are fanatically accelerating preparations for a new aggressive war against the northern half of the republic. The U.S. imperialists are reinforcing the U.S. forces stationed in South Korea, strengthening the puppet army and frequently staging joint military training while adhering to a two-Koreas plot.

Due to such maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists, a grave situation in which a war may break out any moment and a dangerous situation in which Korea's division may be perpetuated are being created on the Korean Peninsula. This arouses the deep concern of the progressive people of the world who desire peace in Korea and its peaceful reunification. Thus, the world's people are unanimously denouncing the U.S. imperialists' policy for the division of the nation, their policy of the occupation of South Korea and colonial fascist rule there, and their new war provocation maneuvers.

They are ardently supporting our position and our just and fair proposal for peace in Korea and its peaceful reunification. The peoples of the five continents of the world, including socialist countries and nonaligned nations, are sternly denouncing the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their war provocation maneuvers, shouting the slogans "The U.S. imperialist aggressors should withdraw from South Korea!," "Korea is one!" and "Korea should be reunited as the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo!"

The indignation of world nations is especially strong during the anti-U.S. joint struggle month. Newspapers, news agencies and radios and magazines in many nations of the world from Scandinavia to the Andes and from Africa to the Caribbean carry articles, and various political parties, public organizations and international organizations and famous people from all walks of life issue statements exposing and sternly denouncing the U.S. imperialists' two-Koreas plot and war maneuvers.

Because of this, the U.S. imperialists are rejected and isolated by the world's people. The U.S. imperialists are not only hard hit by the anti-U.S. and antiwar movements of the world's people, but also rejected by the newly emerging countries. Today the newly emerging countries, raising the banner of anti-imperialism for independence, oppose the U.S. imperialists' neocolonial policy and strenuously struggle to safeguard independence and sovereignty, protect natural resources and defend the national interests.

These countries are frustrating or paralyzing the U.S. imperialists' vicious plot of aggression and plunder by banning the import and performance of U.S. films, by nationalizing U.S.-owned miltinational enterprises and by waging struggles to reject the sale of U.S. manufactured goods in their domestic markets, to force the U. S. imperialists to withdraw troops and military bases from their countries and to establish a new international economic order.

The developing countries, instituting various forms of economic cooperation organs, are preventing the U.S. imperialists from exercising their power in international economic affairs by joining hands against imperialism in the international arena.

A professor from Harvard University once said: The U.S. people deplore the stark reality of the United States being scoffed at and isolated by the whole world. This is an outcry over the poor status of the U.S. imperialists who have been isolated from and rejected by the world.

The poor status of the U.S. imperialists is reflected at international forums over which they have presided for a long time. In the past, the U.S. imperialists insolently exercised their power in the United Nations. They adopted the United Nations as their tool to realize their wild desire for dominating the world, compelling UN members to obey their brigandish intentions by mobilizing their rubber stamps. Today, however, the U.S. imperialists can no longer trifle with the United Nations. Furthermore, they are being pushed into a corner of the United Nations, cursed and denounced.

At the 30th UN General Assembly socialist and nonaligned nations dealt a heavy blow to the U.S. imperialists by achieving adoption of a resolution demanding the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea. These nations dealt another heavy blow to the U.S. imperialists defending the Israeli Zionists and South African rascists by making the United Nations pass a resolution demanding sanctions against them.

The U.S. ambassador to the United Nations confessed: Over the last 20 years, U.S. influence over the United Nations has considerably weakened. The United States is regarded as the most vicious member of all the countries. The United States votes alone on many issues, finding it extremely difficult to gain support on any issue. At all international forums, including the United Nations, the U.S. imperialists are denounced as the ringleaders of imperialism who are conducting all kinds of evil deeds.

As is well known, when a dispute over the Malvinas Islands between Britain and Argentina arose, the U.S. imperialists at first babbled that they would play the role of mediator, taking a neutral attitude toward the dispute. However, they openly clarified their support for Britain shortly after it completed preparations for attacking the islands, thereby defaulting on their treaty commitment with Latin America. In connection with this, Latin American countries, including Argentina, denounced the U.S. imperialists for acting like the devil, branding them as betrayers and friends of aggressors. Moreover, Latin American countries are plunging the United States into a predicament by proposing to oust it from the OAS and move OAS headquarters from the United States to a Latin American country. This shows that the U.S. imperialists are isolated and rejected by Latin America, which once was a calm backyard and hereditary fiefdom of the United States.

The seriousness of the isolation of the U.S. imperialists is also manifested in their cold treatment and rejection by their Western allies.

In the past, the U.S. imperialists, on the basis of relatively superior military and economic power, induced the Western capitalist countries into all sorts of military blocs and organizations under the pretext of anticommunism and dominated them politically, economically and militarily, playing the role of world leader. By taking advantage of such a leadership position, the U.S. imperialists have been able to recruit mercenaries for their anticommunist crusade as they pleased and control the member countries by forcing their intentions and demands on them. In our time, however, the U.S. imperialists' leadership role has diminished and their baton has lost its influence.

SEATO and CENTO, which the U.S. imperialists fabricated as political and military organizations for world domination, have already crumbled, and now a crack has developed in NATO. In NATO today, the U.S. imperialists' adventurous policy of aggression is no longer accepted. The U.S. imperialists now face deep-rooted opposition from NATO member countries in the political, military and economic fields.

Surrounding the issues of increasing the annual military spending of the NATO countries by 3 percent and deploying U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles in West Europe, resistance from West Europe against the United States is growing. This reflects the seriousness of the situation there.

Although the U.S. imperialists raised this issue at the meeting of the NATO Council of Ministers and forcibly pushed various decisions, many member countries either reacted negatively or opposed them. This resistance stems from the fact that an increasing number of Western European countries now fear that blind obedience to the U.S. imperialists could hurt their sovereignty and pride, damage their national interests and threaten their very existence.

In an effort to bring such a situation under control, Reagan, the boss of the U.S. imperialists, recently toured Western Europe. His tour brought no success but widened the chasm. In addition, it provoked yet more anti-U.S. sentiment.

In Rome, London, Paris, Bonn and West Berlin, no matter where Reagan goes, hundreds of thousands of residents of all walks of life jam the streets to stage strong anti-U.S. demonstrations, shouting such slogans as "Yankee, go home" and "Reagan is a fascist."

Foreign news reports say that the European anti-U.S., anti-Reagan demonstrations were unprecedentedly big and reflected popular sentiment.

What is more, the U.S. imperialists face great resistance from West Europe and Japan on economic issues. The joint action by the Western capitalist countries against the U.S. high interest rate policy and U.S. trade pressure shows this.

At the OPEC summit meeting in June, the Western European countries turned the brunt of their criticism toward the high U.S. interest rates and demanded that the United States lower the rate, unanimously saying that high U.S. interest rates hamper economic measures to overcome the recession. This shows that many Western countries are determined not to obey the U.S. imperialists' crafty and egotistical arm-twisting policy by which the U.S. imperialists are profiteering at the expense of other countries and that they are heading in the direction of defending their national dignity and interests.

Today the U.S. imperialists are rejected and isolated on all continents and areas, not in a specific continent or area, and are isolated and rejected not over specific problems but over basic issues in the political, economic and military fields.

The isolation facing the U.S. imperialists is not an ephemeral phenomenon, nor is it isolation caused by an ephemeral cause or by chance. It is an inevitable consequence produced by the policy of aggression practiced by U.S. governments, in particular the most aggressive and bellicose foreign policy frantically pursued by the Reagan administration. It is also a natural phenomenon of our era's historical development.

Today our era is an era of independence. All the progressive people of the world are against all forms of domination and enslavement and more and more countries are advancing along the road of independence. In the midst of such a strong trend sweeping the world, even the capitalist countries who in the past upheld the U.S. imperialists as a savior and protector are slowly heading toward independence, opposing the U.S. imperialists' control and constraint.

The time when the U.S. imperialists used to control the world and infringed on the fate of other countries while shouting the doctrine of America first is gone forever.

The Reagan administration's aggressive foreign policy runs counter to the trend of the era of independence -- a completely anachronistic policy running counter to the interests and demands of the people of the world. The more the U.S. imperialists strengthen their policy of aggression and war, the greater fury and resistance they will face from the people of the world. Nothing can prevent the U.S. imperialists from being isolated and rejected from the people of the world and from declining and falling.

KPA GENERAL YI TU-IK MARKS ARMISTICE ANNIVERSARY

[NODONG SINMUN 26 July special article by KPA Col Gen Yi Tu-ik: "U.S. Imperialists Should Stop Adventuresome Schemes To Provoke War and Withdraw From South Korea"]

[Text] We are meaningfully marking the 29th anniversary of the victory in the fatherland liberation war under the solemn circumstances in which the workers throughout the country are bringing about a new revolutionary upswing to attain the second 7-year plan and the grand 10 major prospective targets ahead of schedule and to accelerate the complete victory of socialism, upholding the great leader's historic policy speech and under the slogan "Create the speed of the 1980's with the spirit of the era of the grand Chollima upsurge."

On this day, all people and People's Army officers and men extend greatest honor and gratitude toward the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the great military strategist and ever-victorious iron-willed commander, who wisely led the fatherland liberation war to a brilliant victory. They are overflowing with the burning resolve to strenuously fight to advance the fatherland's reunification and the ultimate victory of our revolution, upholding the leader and under the party's leadership.

The past 3-year-long fatherland liberation war, which was forcibly started by the U.S. imperialists, was a fight on which the fate of the country and nation depended and was a rigorous ordeal inflicted upon our young republic and people.

To eliminate our republic in its cradle, the U.S. imperialists, who dreamed of dominating the whole world, waged a most brutal and destructive war -- unprecedented in the history of war -- by mobilizing along the Korean frontline vast aggression forces and even the armed forces of 15 of their lackey countries. This notwithstanding, our people and KPA officers and men, who firmly rallied around the great leader, overcame all of the hardships of war and honorably safeguarded the country's sovereignty and national dignity by fully displaying mass heroism and peerless bravery and a self-sacrificing spirit.

On 27 July 1953, the U.S. imperialists confirmed their defeat themselves in the Korean war by bowing before our people -- for the first time in their history of aggression -- and signing the armistice agreement.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows: The historic victory in the fatherland liberation war was a vivid demonstration of the boundless vitality of our republic and people's democratic system and of the invincible might of our people who had become the masters of the country.

Our people's resplendent victory in the fatherland liberation war was a forceful demonstration of the invincible might of the Korean people and the People's Army under the wise leadership of great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. And the victory clearly established the fact that no aggressor can bring to their knees a people who rise up for their fatherland's freedom and independence with arms in their hands. By determinedly frustrating the U.S. imperialist aggressors' armed invasion, our people greatly contributed to the prevention of a new world war and defending the security of the socialist countries and world peace.

For the victory of the fatherland liberation war, the great leader put forth the chuche-oriented military strategy and original tactics. He extraordinarily strengthened the party and people's government and fostered and developed the People's Army into an invincible revolutionary armed force. He saw to it that the superiority of the people's democratic system was highly displayed and he tightened as firm as an impregnable fortress the security of the rear areas. He isolated the U.S. imperialists internationally and consolidated solidarity with the world's revolutionary peoples in every way.

Such an outstanding and tested leadership of the great leader was the basic factor enabling us to smash the U.S. imperialists and win a brilliant victory in the fatherland liberation war. From the first day in the war, the great leader had the People's Army win all victories with his chuche-oriented strategy and excellent tactics. By putting forward correct strategic and tactical policies and chuche tactics at every period and stage of the war, while clearly viewing the prevailing situation and the enemy's military attempts, the great leader had the People's Army always take the initiative in the war and deal severe blows to the aggressors.

Visiting the soldiers on the frontline and the people in the rear in the severe days during the war, the great leader stirred them to victory. With a fatherly love, he took care of the lives of soldiers and the people. Thus, our people and the People's Army officers and men fought, like immortals, both on the frontlines and in the rear, firmly rallying around the great leader, and made it possible for us to advance to ultimate victory in the war.

Our people's victory in the fatherland liberation war vigorously encouraged the anti-imperialist, national liberation struggle of the world's revolutionary peoples, who were fighting for their national independence and sovereignty. The victory opened up a new era for the anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle.

Although 29 years have passed since the gunfire of war stopped in Korea, the situation in our country is still as tense as before and a more serious obstacle to the fatherland's reunification is being raised. This is only because of the U.S. imperialists' criminal two-Koreas plot and their schemes to provoke a new war.

While strengthening their colonial occupation policy toward South Korea, the U.S. imperialists are violating our nation's sovereignty; while putting forth the two-Koreas plot, they are desperately obstructing our country's reunification.

With the unchanged ambition to make inroads into the whole of Korea while hanging onto South Korea as their colony, the U.S. imperialists are not withdrawing form South Korea while they are violating the Korean armistice agreement and the U.N. resolution. Disregarding our proposal for changing the armistice into a peace agreement, they are reinforcing their aggressive forces and increasing armaments in South Korea, turning the whole of South Korea into a powder magazine.

In particular, the present U.S. rulers, while advocating superiority through power, are embarking on the road of military adventure to threaten other countries with force and bring them to their knees. In executing such an aggressive world strategy, they regard the Korean Peninsula as an important test site.

Talking about the strategic importance of South Korea, the U.S. warmongers are clamoring that they will not hesitate to use even nuclear arms to protect South Korea. This is an act showing that they will further dominate the whole of Korea by means of force, while continuing to hang on to South Korea as a military stronghold for carrying out their strategy in the Far East.

To realize such aggressive ambitions, the U.S. imperialists are babbling about the nonexistent threat of southward invasion and about the North's military superiority; under this pretext, they are greatly augmenting their aggressive forces in South Korea. By introducing up-to-date military equipment and weapons of mass destruction including F-16 fighter-bombers, A-10 close-support planes and AWAC planes into South Korea, the U.S. imperialists are further reinforcing their aggressive forces. They have shifted the priority for the strategic deployment of the U.S. 7th Fleet to the East Sea of Korea and are making Chinhae Port a new base for military operations.

Furthermore, the U.S. imperialists have already deployed hundreds of nuclear arms to South Korea. Nevertheless, they are trying to introduce afresh even neutron bombs and nuclear missiles to be used in the theater of war. They are also scheming to deploy cruise missiles aimed at Korea to ships of the U.S. 7th Fleet.

Defining South Korea as the central point for their military aid in Asia, the U.S. imperialists are also increasing military assistance to the puppets and reinforcing the puppet army with modern lethal arms and military equipment. It is no secret that the U.S. imperialists have already mapped out plans and completed a military operational system for the invasion of Korea. Having already organized the Rapid Deployment Force, which is composed of the U.S. Army's crack units, the U.S. imperialists are putting it in posture of constant mobilization and trying to introduce even the armed forces of the Japanese Self-Defense Forces onto the battlefield in Korea.

The U.S. imperialists are also endlessly staging war games and committing military provocative acts against our republic. In this year alone, the U.S. imperialists have frequently waged war games, including the largest-scale military drill Team Spirit '82, on the assumption of a sudden invasion against our republic. They are endlessly committing acts of espionage thorugh the high-speed, high-altitude SR-71 reconnaissance plane, and military provocative acts along the Military Demarcation Line.

The number of cases -- that our side has officially protested -- of violations of the armistice agreement committed by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets in the sky, on land and at sea, including their military provocative acts, since the Korean armistice has reached as many as 344,800-odd cases; the number reached 10,100-odd cases from January to May this year alone.

Owing to the U.S. imperialists' reckless military advantures, South Korea is further being turned into a source of a new war and the situation in our country is being extremely aggravated. In recent days, the U.S. imperialists have been enthusiastic in scheming to provoke a new war, while accelerating the increase in military armaments. This is aimed at hanging onto South Korea forever as their colony and military base and beachhead for a war and at realizing their ambition for making inroads into all of Korea using this beachhead as a stepping-stone.

The U.S. imperialists are clamoring about someone else's threat of southward invasion and superiority of strength, thus babbling about protecting South Korea and peace and security on the Korean Peninsula. This is nothing but a shameless brigandish sophistry aimed at justifying their policy of occupying South Korea and their maneuverings to prepare for a war of aggression. To maintain their colonial control over South Korea, the U.S. imperialists are pertinaciously pursuing the two-Koreas policy. They are actively using the puppets as their shock brigade.

The U.S. imperialists are the ones who, whenever their colonial rule faces a crisis in South Korea, have their stooges execute high-handed politics; who instigated the puppets to commit the bloody barbarity of a massacre against the patriotic people in Kwangju who cried out for democracy and reunification; and who are pulling the strings behind the scenes in the fascist rampage against the South Korean youths, students and people who are holding high the anti-U.S., pro-independence slogans. The U.S. imperialists are also the ones who are inspiring antagonism and confrontation within the nation.

All these facts clearly show that if the U.S. imperialist aggression forces are left intact in South Korea, we cannot look forward to achieving national sovereignty on a nationwide scale, and the fatherland's independent reunification, nor can we anticipate the peace and security of our country and of Asia. To force the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialists from South Korea and to determinedly block and frustrate their aggressive schemes are prerequisites to consolidating the peace and security of our country and Asia and achieving the fatherland's independent reunification.

A policy of strength is a wild fancy of silly people. The era in which one could dominate over and oppress other people has disappeared forever. No nation and people wants to be subordinated to others, none wants to live a life of oppression.

Many world countries are marching forward toward independence; the South Korean people have also held high the anti-U.S. and pro-independence banner to end the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule.

The U.S. imperialists have no excuse or pretext to interfere in the internal affairs of our country while sitting astride South Korea. Our people do not want war but are never afraid of it.

The U.S. imperialists should stop the anachronistic policy of occupying South Korea and the adventuresome war schemes and immediately withdraw from South Korea, taking along all aggressive forces, in conformity with the UN resolution. They should not instigate the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique to frantic acts of fascism, war and division.

If the U.S. imperialists and their stooge the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique should ignore the demands of the times and people and continue to pursue a war policy, they will never escape a shameful defeat.

In preparation against the ever-undisguised U.S. imperialists' and their stooges' schemes of aggression and war, all people and People's Army officers and men in the northern half of the republic should further heighten their revolutionary vigilance and defend the socialist fatherland, as firm as an impregnable fortress, always in an alert and mobilized posture.

Our people and People's Army officers and men, who are marching forward under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the guidance of the glorious party center, will resolutely crush the U.S. imperialists' schemes of aggression and war and will certainly achieve the cause of the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification.

PRC OFFICIAL NOTES KIM CHONG-IL FRIENDSHIP ROLE

SK260504 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0420 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Text] Beijing, July 24 (KCNA) -- Comrade Xi Zhongxun, member of the Secretariat of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China and vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National Peoples Congress, met at the Great Hall of the People in Beijing on July 24 the delegation of NODONG SINMUN headed by its Deputy Editor-in-Chief Kim Sok-nae on a visit to China.

Comrade Xi Zhongxun asked the head of the delegation to convey his greetings wishing the great leader of the Korean people Comrade Kim Il-song longevity in good health and Comrade Kim Chong-il good health.

Noting that the friendship between China and Korea will continue to develop in the future, he said that, as there is Comrade Kim Chong-il, this flower of friendship would come into fuller blossom.

The talk took place in a cordial atmosphere. Present on the occasion were Editor-in-Chief of the Chinese PEOPLE'S DAILY Qin Chuan, its Deputy Editor-in-Chief Tan Wenrui and Korean Ambassador to China Chon Myong-su.

[Text] Pyongyang, July 26 (KCNA) -- Vice-President Pak Song-chol on July 25 met and had a friendly talk with Wilson M. Bhukoli, editor-in-chief of UHURU, organ of the Revolutionary Party of Tanzania.

Present on the occasion was Kim Sang-chun, vice-chairman of the Committee for Cultural Relations With Foreign Countries.

CHON ACCUSES NORTH OF 'CONFRONTATION POLICY'

SK231220 Seoul YONHAP in English 1138 GMT 23 Jul 82

[Text] Seoul, July 23 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan, accusing North Korea of a continued confrontation policy towards the South, said Friday North Korea has been intensifying its provocations to cover the people's discontent over the plan to transfer North Korean President Kim Il-song's position to his son.

Addressing a dinner at the presidential mansion Chongwadae for the members of the Advisory Council for Peaceful Unification Policy, Chon said North Korea continues to resort to a "policy of confrontation aimed at deepening animosity among the Korean people." The 201-member council is an advisory group to the president on matters relating to Korean reunification.

The South Korean leader described as "anachronistic" the plan reportedly underway in Pyongyang under which Kim Chong-il, son of the North Korean leader, is to accede to his father's position, and said North Korea's recent provocations along the Demilitarized Zone and its attempt to abduct South Korean fishermen were intended to divert its people's attention away from the scheme.

The president said reunification is the ardent wish of the Korean people as well as an impending national task, because it would end the misery of division. The division of South and North Korea is the cause of a constant threat of war, the suffering of separated families and heavy defense expenditures, Chon said.

The chief executive reiterated Seoul's commitment to a peaceful unification of the two Koreas, saying, "However long it takes and however difficult it may be, reunification should by all means be achieved by peaceful and democratic means." He called South Korea's formula for reunification "the most reasonable and realistic," and said many nations, even some nonaligned countries tilting towards Pyongyang, have given their support to the proposal.

The formula proposed by Chon in January calls for an inter-Korean summit meeting and the signing of a basic relations pact between the two Koreas pending reunification. North Korea has rejected the idea.

Saying that reunification may come earlier than is expected, Chon called on the nation to make a positive effort "with hope and confidence" to create an environment conducive to it. "If we make a united effort for continued nation-building, the gap between the national strengths of South and North Korea will further widen, and one day North Korea may have to give up its futile dream of unifying the peninsula by force," Chon said.

TONG-A ILBO DISCUSSES SHULTZ APPOINTMENT

[Editorial: "Inauguration of Shultz' Diplomacy"

[Excerpts] Mr Haig reportedly resigned as much due to the great policy differences between himself and Reagan's aides and hardliners surrounding the President as to his strong personality and ambition. Whatever the reason, Shults's appointment is considered to be the best way to generate internal harmony within the administration. Shultz, the new U.S. secretary of state, a man who is widely known as a consensus shaper and a team player who can handle compromises and negotiations, is expected to work smoothly with Reagan's inner circle -- the so-called California Mafia -- through cooperation and reconciliation.

Since the U.S. President is responsible for U.S. foreign policy, it seems unlikely that there will be a great shift in the basic structure of the foreign policy of the Reagan administration, which is pursuing a revivial of American power and a hawkish policy against the Soviet Union. In reality, Reagan's strategy against the Soviet Union, however, takes on the color of hardline policy on the basis of a powerful military buildup. Reagan's Soviet strategy also pursues dialogue and negotiations. This being the case, the emergence of Shultz appears to signal more flexibility and a change in the management of U.S. foreign policy, rather than a change in the basic direction of U.S. foreign policy.

In view of today's urgent situation and Secretary of State Shultz's experience, the most urgent tasks facing U.S. foreign policy will likely be the Middle East issues. It also appears likely that U.S. foreign policy will have a change of direction from Haig's priority toward Israel to balanced diplomacy between Israel and the Arab states.

As for U.S. foreign policy in Europe and Asia, there will not be much change. However, in view of his experience in economic matters rather than diplomatic problems in past government posts, Shultz appears to be placing more emphasis on international economic problems, unlike Haig who stressed the importance of the military and security spheres.

Touching on the Korean question at confirmation hearings in the Senate, Shultz reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to the defense of Korea will be strong. He also hinted at differences of opinion on the stationing of U.S. troops in South Korea between the United States and Communist China.

As to the question of U.S. troops in South Korea, the Reagan administration has repeatedly affirmed its policy that U.S. troops will continue to remain there. Ostensibly, Communist China could have a different opinion about it, as hinted by Secretary of State Shultz, but it inwardly wants a continued stationing of U.S. troops in South Korea because it wants peace and security on the Korean Peninsula and it recognizes the danger of another armed clash. We want the United States to clearly understand this.

On the occasion of Shultz's assumption of office as the man in charge of U.S. foreign policy, we wish him success and victory. We hope multilateral developments in Korea-U.S. relations and Korea-U.S. friendship will be further promoted.

KOREA HERALD VIEWS FRENCH RECOGNITION OF NORTH

[Editorial: "French Role in Korea"]

[Text] When he visits Seoul early next month French External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson may face a tough decision to make with regard to his government's development of a "two Korea" policy. At the same time, his personal familiarization with the Korean scene may induce Paris to put off or even forego the likely recognition of North Korea.

Some argue that French recognition of the communist regime is just a matter of time, for it was promised as one of the planks of the left-wing coalition during the last election and the socialist government led by President Francois Mitterand has all along been committed to the so-called principle of universality in dealing with foreign governments.

Only last month the French foreign minister told the French lower house that Paris is ready to normalize ties with Pyongyang but such normalization would not necessarily come shortly and would be facilitated by conditions acceptable to all parties concerned. The statement sounds suggestive enough, its ambiguity notwithstanding.

As a sovereign state France is in a position to pursue its own independent foreign policy. As a power in today's world, France is also in a position to exert considerable influence on international developments.

As such the possible recognition of North Korea by France in the immediate future against the wishes of the Republic of Korea would be more than a breach of friendship with Seoul and unfavorably affect the situation on this peninsula.

It is our belief that the principle of universality France upholds should rightly be adopted by East bloc nations as well so that they may recognize South Korea. If that were to be done, there would be nothing wrong with Paris recognizing North Korea. This is what equitable cross-recognition is all about.

A precarious stability based on balance of power has been barely maintained here. An act on the part of France to throw greater weight on the side of Pyongyang is certain to tip the diplomatic balance, undermining the stability of Korea. It may set an untoward pattern for other socialist and nonaligned governments to follow.

Korean-French parnership and cooperation is growing in many aspects of bilateral relationships, political, economic technical and cultural. France is a main supplier of our atomic power plant equipment and know-how. Larger projects in railroad, iron and communications are up for negotiations in coming years as Korea gets ahead with its development programs.

At this point of evolving a wide range of mutually beneficial contact and exchange a move of the Mitterrand government to turn the cold shoulder on Seoul will hardly be auspicious. North Korea's hollow offers of significant purchase from France are nothing but a political ploy to confuse and mislead the Frenchmen.

We expect Minister Cheysson's visit to become an occasion to broaden his understanding of the Korean situation and Seoul's genuine interest in bolstering cordial and reciprocal ties of friendship conducive to increased cooperation in trade and foreign relations.

KOREA TIMES ON STATUS OF LOAN TALKS WITH JAPAN

[Text] The government is likely to get tough in its approach to Japan as the latter showed no sign of compromise in the tortuous negotiations on Seoul's bid for loans from Tokyo following its outright rejection of a modified Japanese formula on the much-disputed economic cooperation issue.

Seoul has spurned Tokyo's alternative package conveyed Friday and termed it "one which is worthy of no consideration," critical of what appears to be an attempt to throw a wet blanket on efforts for early solution of the pending problem. The talks on the loan issue are now in for a setback as a result of the uncompromising posture of the Japanese Government, diplomatic sources noted.

The Seoul government seems to be studying cautiously the value of Seoul-Tokyo negotiations on the loan issue in coming days in the complete absence of an affirmative response to Seoul's bid, they went on. They did not rule out the possibility of a rupture in the loan-related negotiations unless the Tokyo side was will to back down from its stance.

The latest Japanese formula was said to have been alsmost the same as its earlier proposal, typified by $1.5 billion in official development assistance (ODA) loans and the rest ($2.5 billion) in the form of Japanese Export-Import Bank (JEXIM) credits. It does not contain anything acceptable to Seoul whose counterproposal called for an increased amount of ODA loans and commodity loans.

In a word, it showed no change in the basic framework of the first Japanese formula, which was conveyed to Seoul last April through Japanese Assistant Foreign Minister Kensuke Yanagiya.

Reluctant to comply with Seoul's renewed demand for an increase in ODA loans to $2.3 billion and commodity credits amounting to $1.7 billion, the Japanese Government only suggested 30 percent of $1.5 billion in ODA loans and 15 percent of $2.5 billion JEXIM credits for use as "domestic capital" for Korea in a "nimble" gesture.

The amount of domestic capital for Korea which Tokyo is willing to offer is about $825 million. Diplomatic observers predicted that there would be no more concessions from Seoul in its bargaining with Tokyo on the loan issue, noting that Seoul's recent counterproposal for $2.5 billion in ODA loans and $1.7 billion in commodity credits was the "minimum amount" it could concede. They viewed that the year-old economic cooperation issue could be solved only if Tokyo would present a formula "understandable" to a majority of the Korean people.

FURTHER REACTION ON JAPANESE TEXTBOOK ISSUE

Government, Parties To Act

SK252313 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 2200 25 Jul 82

[Text] The government and parties will take strong action early this week to cope with the school textbook review policy of the Japanese Education Ministry and absurd remarks made by the ministers concerned. Taking a serious view of the distortion of the history of Japan's aggression against Korea in Japanese school textbooks and absurd remarks made by Japanese Education Minister Ogawa and by Matsuno, directer general of the Hokkaido Development Agency, the government has already instructed the ROK Embassy in Japan to investigate the true aspects and circumstances of this incident and submit a report on it. It will then take action early this week in accordance with this report. It will urge the Japanese Government to take corrective measures with regard to the incident. A government official concerned said Japan's distortion of Korean history and the remarks of some Japanese ministers are serious matters which might influence the friendly relations between the ROK and Japan and that the government is keenly watching how the situation develops.

Meanwhile, the Democratic Justice Party [DJP], the Democratic Korea Party [DKP] and the Korea National Party [KNP] will hold meetings of party executive members early this week and take parliamentary and party-level action to cope with this issue. The DJP will convene a meeting of party executive members and of the party Central Executive Committee this morning and this afternoon, respectively, and take parliamentary-level corrective action through the ROK-Japan Parliamentary League. Based on the result of this activity, it will convene the National Assembly standing committees, such as the foreign affairs and education committees. The DKP will also convene a meeting of party members belonging to the National Assembly foreign affairs and education committees and discuss the matter of convening National Assembly standing committees concerned to urge Japan to immediately correct its policy for reviewing school textbooks. The KNP will hold a meeting of party executive members today and urge the government to take strong measures to make Japan correct its militarist attitude towards the ROK.

Embassy Guard Strengthened

SK260302 Seoul YONHAP in English 0252 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Text] Seoul, July 26 (YONHAP) -- Seoul police strengthened the guard for the Japanese Embassy here Monday against possible demonstrations by indignant Korean citizens protesting the recent remarks of a Japanese minister which justified the Japanese annexation of Korea in 1910 as well as allegedly distorted historical facts concerning Korea in Japanese school texts. Japanese state minister in charge of national land Yukiyasu Matsuno claimed over the weekend that it is wrong for Korean textbooks to describe the Japanese annexation of Korea as "an invasion by Japan."

Fifty riot policemen and four patrol squads were deployed around the embassy near the Capitol, according to a police spokesman.

CHOSON ILBO Views Issue

SK252346 Seoul CHOSON ILBO in Korean 25 Jul 82 p 2

[Article by political desk reporter Yim Tong-myong: "What Are the Government and Ruling Camp Doing?"]

[Text] Japan is attempting to justify its past aggressive militarism through the newly authorized Japanese history textbook. It describes Japan's invasion of Korea as an "advance" and degrades the 1 March movement as a "riot." Japan also notes that annexation of Korea by the Japanese imperialists was made "through agreement" and worship at the Shinto Shrine was not forcibly conducted but merely was "encouraged."

It appears to be not by accident that the distortion of such historic facts takes place at the same time when the move to revise Japan's peace constitution is envisaged and a troop reinforcement plan is announced and when negotiations over economic cooperation with Korea are underway.

Undoubtedly, the Japanese Education Ministry is attempting to conduct so-called "political education" for the growing generation, describing Japan's past colonialism as a natural and legal trend of history by taking advantage of the school textbook review system so that the growing generation would not have a sense of guilt.

West Germany has clearly acknowledged its invasion as a historic fact since World War II to express its intention not to repeat the aggression of the past. It has conducted political education for the German people in an effort to get rid of Nazism. However, Japan's attitude, to the contrary, makes us shudder. Japan, running counter to the trend of the times, is attempting to favorably describe its militaristic invasion. It even shows an intention to restore the sense of superiority and nostalgia for the past era of colonialism. This arouses a deep concern about the future of Korea and Japan.

What is our government's attitude toward this? The Education Ministry is hoping the Foreign Ministry will deal with this issue, merely stating it is collecting contrary evidence, while the Foreign Ministry is hoping the Education Ministry and academic circles will handle the case, noting that this issue is related to academic theories. The Foreign Ministry, in particular, seems unwilling to raise this issue because it has a pending diplomatic question over economic cooperation between Korea and Japan. However, this issue is something which should be settled prior to economic cooperation between Korea and Japan.

In fact, Korea and Japan have been very close on the one hand and very far apart on the other. This originates in the consciousness of the unfortunate history of an attacker and victim. In order to develop the relations between Korea and Japan in a desirable direction in the future, it is necessary to eliminate the consciousness of such an unfortunate history. Thus, the peoples of Korea and Japan should have a sense of history based on correct historical data. By so doing, we will have a common view, even if the standpoints are different from each other.

When we have different views on history, our consciousness will not be in harmony and neither economic cooperation nor cultural exchange will be successfully carried out. This is clearly shown in the history of negotiations between Korea and Japan since the liberation. With difficulty the two countries agreed to normalize relations. However, we wonder whether the word normalization is appropriate as far as relations between the two countries are concerned.

The attitudes of the political parties are also deplorable. They are merely repeating words that they should be prudent as to how they should deal with the question, without a firm awareness of the issue. Korea-Japan relations are not so easygoing to argue about the methodology. What are required for our politicians are not prudent methods but a firm consciousness about the type of basic perception Korea-Japan relations should be formed on.

We do not know at all what the government and political parties, the Democratic Justice Party in particular, are concerned about. If they are concerned about economic cooperation, this is precisely the trap Japan has set. The important question is not to get a little more money or a little less money. No one would believe that our country would face a grave situation even if we do not get that money. Japanese Education Minister Ogawa and State Minister for National Land Development Matsuno defended the government by making even such absurd remarks as "annexation is not invasion" and "argument on textbook is interference in Japan's domestic affairs."

We are envious of -- although this would be an extreme and ironic expression -- the fact that Japan has such ministers as Ogawa and Matsuno.

GOVERNMENT TO ASSIST CONTROL DATA EMPLOYEES

SK240121 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 24 Jul 82 p 8

[Text] The Ministry of Labor plans to arrange positions for workers at Control Data Korea [CDK] who lost their jobs when the computer parts maker formally closed down its business in Korea yesterday.

Labor officials said that among the total 349 employes of the American-invested company, 50 to 60 white-collar workers would be able to work at a Control Data subsidiary in Korea which sells and leases computers if they want.

For the remaining blue-collar workers, the ministry will positively take measures to get them the same kind of jobs in similar pay scales.

Those who can not find other jobs promptly will be trained at an institute for operating computers free of charge for six months. The insstitute is to be established by the CDK by March next year in order to help the former employes acquire high-level techniques and get employed. The ministry will seek cooperation from the representatives of companies in the Kuro industrial estate in finding jobs for the jobless former CDK workers.

A ceremony was held yesterday morning at the CDK compound in the Kuro industrial estate participated in by over 200 employes to mark the closure of the company established in 1967. The CDK was learned to have paid a total of 850 million won to 237 blue-collar workers as severence pay including discharge allowances amounting to 200 percent of monthly pay for each year. The severance money paid each worker is twice the amount fixed by law and averaged about 3,600,000 won for a person.

Some of the workers who protested the close-down of the company and demanded more severance pay, 3,000 percent to 5,000 percent of monthly pay, did not participate in ceremony.

Eleven workers staged demonstrations in the compound of the Catholic Myongdong Cathedral in downtown Seoul from around 8:30 p.m. Thursday, demanding the U.S. CDK withdraw its decision to pull out of Korea.

MONTSAME SCORES WASHINGTON 'NUCLEAR MANIACS' POLICY

OW242120 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1720 GMT 24 Jul 82

[Text] Ullaanbaatar, 24 Jul (MONTSAME) -- A decision of the American adminsitration to reject negotiations with the Soviet Union and Great Britain on full and universal prohibition of nuclear weapons' tests under the evidently farfetched pretext of infeasibility to control such agreement is another testimony of the White House's intentions to continue unchecked build-up of nuclear weapons.

This is a new blow dealt by the American administration on the hopes and aspirations of peoples who demand a full ban on the production of nuclear weapons and its liquidation. The decision of the White House undoubtedly will influence negatively the prevention of the nuclear weapons proliferation which will considerably complicate the task of sparing humanity from it and will increase the danger of flaring up a nuclear war. This step of the Reagan administration is quite opposite to its claims as if it is striving for the limitation and reduction of nuclear weapons.

In its anticommunist fever guided by the wild idea of attaining world supremacy, Washington methodically torpedoes all proposals and initiatives aimed at strengthening peace and security of peoples no matter whoever they stem from. Washington staked on the victory in a nuclear war and now is fervently militarizing in order to deliver the first swift strike on the Soviet Union and other countries of socialism. The other day the American Congress approved a bill for channelling in the next fiscal year of over 1,000 million dollars to start the production of a new king of the strategic weapons -- Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles ''MX''. A decision is adopted to start preparations for a war in space. New atomic submarines, intercontinental strategic bombers are being built...

With every new A-bomb and strategic missile, the clouds of a nuclear catastrophe are darkening over humanity. A threat to its existenc in increasing. There can be no winners in a nuclear war. Washington recklessly plays with the fate of peoples of the world and above all of the American people... All those who cherish peace, the future of children, the existence of our common motherland -- the earth -- should unite their efforts to avert a thermonuclear catastrophe, to stop nuclear maniacs from Washington.

TSEDENBAL, BATMONH GREET 38TH POLISH ANNIVERSARY

OW230011 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1723 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 22 Jul (MONTSAME) -- Yumjaagiyn Tsedenbal and Jambyn Batmonh cordially congratulated the leaders of the Polish People's Republic and the entire Polish people on the occasion the 38th anniversary of the rebirth of Poland.

A congratulatory message addressed to Wojciech Jaruzelski and Henryk Jablonski says, in part: For the years of people's power the Polish people under the guidance of the party of communists has attained great successes in making radical socio-economic changes in Poland and in consolidating its independence and international position. Thanks to the striking achievements in the socialist construction and active peaceloving foreign policy, People's Poland rightfully deserves international prestige. The class unity of Poland with the Soviet Union and other fraternal countries has been and is an important factor which contributes to safeguarding and multiplying of the socialist gains of the Polish people.

Our party and the M.P.R. Government fully support the measures taken by the P.U.W.P. aimed at overcoming the difficulties in the country, defending vital interests of the Polish people and at the further consolidation of its socialist gains, the telegram says.

SON SANN INTERVIEWED IN MANILA BEFORE LEAVING FOR PARIS

HK240031 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 23 Jul 82

[Text] Kampuchean coalition Prime Minister Son Sann disclosed yesterday that China has provided light arms for his anticommunist forces of the Kampuchean resistance movement. He said he plans to go to China to seek more military aid this time for the coalition forces. He also insisted that despite the coalition with the communist Khmer Rouge and the faction of Prince Sihanouk, his faction will retain its own political identity. Son Sann declared these in an interview with newsmen yesterday before he left Manila for Paris.

According to Son Sann, he decided to join the coalition for the interest of the Kampuchean people and to liberate his country from Vietnamese domination. He said his faction has 9,000 armed forces and 30,000 more ready to fight as soon as they are provided weapons.

SPK: DK-SRV AMITY CONTINUING AFTER TROOP PULLOUT

BK231219 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1430 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Commentary: "The Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship, an Endless Ode"]

[Text] Phnom Penh, 22 Jul (SPK) -- Some Vietnamese troops have just left Kampuchea with the agreement of the governments of the PRK and SRV.

Progressive world opinion warmly greeted this event which again demonstrates the indestructible friendship between the two peoples. For decades, the Vietnamese people sent their best sons and daughters to help the Kampuchean people in their struggle against Japanese colonialism and U.S. imperialism, and these troops withdrew once they had fulfilled their missions and the Kampuchean people had recovered their independence. This time the improvement of the situation and the growth of the Kampuchean revolutionary forces -- in quantity as well as in quality -- have prompted Kampuchea and Vietnam to reduce the Vietnamese forces. This reduction reflects the consistent policy of proletarian internationalism pursued by Vietnam toward its Indochinese brothers and confirms the unselfish assistance provided by the VPA to the Kampuchean people in defending their country and revolutionary gains.

Many of the cadres and combatants of the returning units came to rescue our people from the claws of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime -- lackey of Chinese expansionism. Some of these, who were at our side in the struggle against the U.S. imperialists, came back under the treaty of friendship and cooperation between the two countries to help us defend our independence and the peace and well-being of our people.

The farewell that our people bade to these internationalist combatants was very moving. How could we easily part with these brave children of Vietnam who, educated by the communist party and the people, have sacrificed their personal comfort and come to share with us the innumerable difficulties encountered by our revolution? How could we forget the Vietnamese combatants who gave their lives so that our people could recover peace and so that the Pol Pot murderers would not return? How could we forget that combatant who fell, ripped to pieces by a mine he wanted to defuse to make our fields cultivable? Or one who drowned from exhaustion in his last attempt to save bags of rice intended for our people when we were faced with starvation? And many others who helped us daily to dig canals, wells, build water scoops, hospitals, take care of the population, and who shared their daily ration of rice with our people...?

This partial withdrawal is also an act of good will toward Thailand and it will be followed by many others if the latter responds favorably to it, as specified in the communique of the 7 July conference of the Kampuchea, Lao and Vietnamese foreign ministers.

But, if the Chinese expansionists, U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries take this opportunity to increase their activities against the Kampuchean people, Kampuchea and Vietnam will resort to appropriate countermeasures, in conformity with the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation of 18 February 1979.

History has shown to the people and compatants of Kampuchea that their national union and their international solidarity, particularly with Vietnam and Laos, are the best guarantee for their victory. Faced with maneuvers of their enemies, they will work tirelessly to preserve the fatherland. And, as Chairman Heng Samrin said, "The Mekong River may run dry, the Truong Son Mountains may erode, but the Kampuchea-Vietnam friendship will never change."

SPK REFUTES 'REACTIONARIES' CHARGES AGAINST SRV PULLOUT

SK250850 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0443 GMT 25 Jul 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 25 Jul (SPK) -- According to foreign sources, over the past few days, the Chinese and Thai leading circles and Kampuchean traitors in the pay of the international reactionaries issued many declarations concerning the Vietnamese partial troop withdrawal from Kampuchea.

These reactionary circles pretend that before this withdrawal, Vietnam sent more reinforcements to Kampuchea.

The Kampuchean press agency SPK is authorized to declare that this is a gross distortion of the situation by the Chinese expansionist circles and the international reactionaries. In doing so, they intend to minimize the significance of this partial Vietnamese troop withdrawal (?praised) throughout the world -- including in some ASEAN and Western countries -- as an act of good will on the part of Kampuchea and Vienman, as evidence of progress in all fields scored by the People's Republic of Kampuchea and of the stabilized situation inside the country.

By distorting these facts and inventing lies, the enemies of the Kampuchean people are seeking to spread doubt among world opinion which considers this act -- decided at the conclusion of the sixth Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos foreign ministers conference -- as a sincere wish of the Indochinese countries to establish an atmosphere of peace, stability, friendship and cooperation in their relations with Thailand and other ASEAN countries.

SIN SONG PRESS CONFERENCE ON SECURITY EXHIBITION

[Text] Comrade Sin Song, deputy minister of the interior, gave a press conference at the ministry on 19 July to discuss the exhibition on the maintenance of political security and social order. Attending the press conference were many local and foreign correspondents. The deputy minister first outlined the aims and significance of the exhibition, saying, [begin recording] Following the great victory on 7 January 1979 which saved our country from the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary regime, our revolution has been advancing along the path of restoring and strengthening the relations of friendship, solidarity and fraternal cooperation between Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos and with the USSR and other fraternal socialist countries as well as with progressive forces in the world.

Under the correct and wise leadership of the KPRP, which pursues the correct path of Marxism-Leninism, our Kampuchean revolution has achieved great victories in all fields -- politics, economy, foreign affairs, military, culture, education, social affairs and public health -- as well as in the mantenance of political security and social order. Despite all the difficulties created by the enemies, we have succeeded in maintaining political security and social order. Over the past 3 years, the enemies have vigorously sent in their reactionary forces in a foolish attempt to oppose our revolution.

With the toppling of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary gang by our people, the Chinese were irate because they lost an important zone for use in their strategy of invading and occupying the three Indochinese countries and the other Southeast Asian states. Therefore, the Chinese reactionaries, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and the other reactionary forces, intensified their efforts to drag the ASEAN countries into a war scheme by using Thai territory as a base for rallying their lackeys against the revolutions in the three Indochinese countries and for sending Thai spies to launch a special war, particularly psychological warfare, against us. This is why after the defeat of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary gang, the Chinese reactionaries ordered the gang to change its political program, tactics and schemes, pretending to be patriots. They instigated Pol Pot, Son Sann and Sihanouk to form a tripartite coalition government on 22 June 1982 in order to rally their lackeys of all stripes to destroy our revolution and the peaceful life of our people. They used Sihanouk, who is a traitor, to cover up their perfidious activities, particularly the evil faces of traitors Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan, and to fool world public opinion.

they have continued to carry out their destructive war in all fields -- political, economic, foreign affairs and military -- in an attempt to weaken us, undermine the solidarity between our party and the people and whip of narrow-minded nationalism to break the Kampuchea-Vietnam strategic alliance. For instance, they have accused Vietnam of using toxic chemicals to kill our people in an attempt to bring about the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea.

Since the liberation of our country on 7 January 1979, the Chinese reactionaries, in collusion with the imperialists, have continued to support their lackeys of all stripes and have sent their spies into Kampuchea from Thai territory to launch activities against our revolution. However, these spies have been crushed or captured by our security forces. They have set up a network of various reactionary parties, such as the "Sereika", the "Nationalist", "Khmer Soul", "Moulinaka", the "Royal Lion", "Chattomuk" and "New Khmer", to carry out perfidious activities aimed at toppling our revolutionary power so as to reinstall the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary regime.

Similary, 3 months after the complete liberation of our country, U.S. and Thai spies persuaded Son Sann to form a party with its headquarters on Thai territory, and sent their lackeys into Kampuchea to rally the reactionary forces. Aided by a number of cadres with erroneous and feeble revolutionary knowledge and spirit whom they recruited from various factories, they formed a reactionary government with Hem Kroesna as its prime minister. They set up bases for their armed forces in many places. Their activities were aimed at creating trouble in order to topple the revolutionary power by the fall of 1979, win the Kampuchean seat at the United Nations and undermine the conference of the nonaligned countries in Cuba. But their activities were discovered in time by our security forces in cooperation with our people, various ministries and the Vietnamese armed forces. We arrested almost all the ministers in this traitorous government and completely destroyed their organization.

Another case was the "New Khmer" faction which built up bases and networks in many places in order to create troubles and take over state power in Phnom Penh during the celebrations of the traditional new year in April 1980. Our security forces discovered this faction and destroyed all of its activities. Tit Samrech's "Nationalist", (In Sopheap's) "Khmer Soul", (Som Samut's) "Moulinaka" and another enemy's "Reachasei Chattomuk" movements were crushed one after another by our forces. We captured a number of their commanders with regimental and battalion ranks and some of their provincial and district apparatus.

Although we have scored great achievements in the maintenance of political security and social order in the past more than 3 years, the enemies still nurture long-term, perfidious schemes against us and have persisted in sending their forces to sabotage our people's revolutionary cause. We must therefore always heighten our spirit of revolutionary vigilance and be ready to crush all maneuvers and activities of the enemies.

The police forces are determined to sacrifice their physical and moral strength and make every effort to fulfill the tasks assigned by the party and people. The exhibition on the maintenance of the political security and social order is aimed at exposing and unmasking the designs of the Chinese reactionary expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists aimed at sabotaging the Kampuchean revolution and the three Indochinese countries, raising the spirit of revolutionary vigilance against enemy maneuvers; making it clear that the task of defending the fatherland is a noble and fundamental task of the entire party, people and the armed forces, among which the people's police and armed forces are the vanguards; proving that the militant solidarity of Kampuchea, Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries is a strong pillar, and displaying the exploits in the fight to defeat the enemy maneuvers made by our police forces in cooperation with the armed forces and with the support of the people. [end recording]

Afterwards, the comrade deputy minister clearly answered various questions raised by local and foreign journalists.

To a question by a TASS correspondent as to whether the so-called Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government has any influence on our people, the comrade said: [begin recording]

The tripartite Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea was set up at a time of defeat for the enemies, not a time of victory. The enemies set up this government after they suffered defeats. According to our analysis, despite being a coalition government, it has no impact on our people because the three heads of this government are none other than those elements who had been condemned by our people since 7 January 1979. The Kampuchean people know the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary gang well. They nurture great indignation at this gang which killed almost 3 million people during its rule of more than 3 years. The blood-stained faces of Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and their men remain clear in the minds of the Kampuchean people. On the other hand, who is Sihanouk? Sihanouk is just a traitor who has been constantly condemned by our people over the past 3 years. Do the Kampuchean people owe Sihanouk any gratitude or vice versa? In fact, Sihanouk has not done anything good for the Kampuchean people. Over the past decade, Sihanouk has done nothing but sleep and sit on the pool of blood and sweat of the Kampuchean people. No...it is Sihanouk who owes the Kampuchean people a debt of gratitude. Once Sinhanouk wrote to Pol Pot, praising him for his abilities in exterminating almost 3 million Kampuchean people. This means that Sihanouk colluded with Pol Pot in killing the Kampuchean people. Sihanouk was glad when Pol Pot and Ieng Sary killed the Kampuchean people. Thus, Sihanouk has committed a serious crime against the Kampuchean people.

We ought to ask why Sihanouk escaped from Pol Pot's prison? Without the resistance movement of the Kampuchean people and without Vietnam's assistance, Sihanouk might have stayed in Pol Pot's prison his entire life. This means that the Kampuchean people saved Sihanouk. Once out of prison, Sihanouk should have joined the people in the defense and reconstruction of the country. But, instead of doing this, he joined forces with Pol Pot and Ieng Sary, who massacred 3 million people, and set up the coalition government on 22 June in Kuala Lumpur.

So what is new in this government and what influence does it have on the Kampuchean people? We see that it has none at all. Sihanouk is still alive because the Kampuchean people saved him. While the Kampuchean people are condemning the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary reactionary group, Sihanouk has turned to join it in ordr to further massacre the people.

As for Son Sann, where does he come from? He is a servant of the U.S. imperialists. He is no patriot. He fled the country to live comfortably abroad at the expense of the U.S. imperialists. Why did Son Sann not come to the rescue of the Kampuchean people when they were being massacred by Pol Pot-Ieng Sary over a period of 3 years 8 months and 20 days? With the assistance of Vietnam, Laos and socialist countries such as the USSR, the Kampuchean people rose to defend themselves and are now surviving.

And now that the country is being rebuilt, why has Son Sann claimed that he is a patriot and is trying to rescue the people? In fact, the Kampuchean people know very well that Son Sann is a traitor and a reactionary.

So we see that this tripartite coalition government led by Sihanouk, Khieu Samphan and Son Sann has no influence on the Kampuchean people and it will not change the situation in Kampuchea. Over the past 3 years, we have achieved victories in every field. Our armed forces and national security forces have been strengthened, and are on the offensive in the fight against the enemy and are becoming masters of Kampuchea. So, although they form a coalition government with 3 or even 10 parties, they can never reverse the situation in Kampuchea. [passage indistinct]

VODK WELCOMES ICK AD HOC COMMITTEE MISSION

[Station commentary: "The Kampuchean People Welcome the Ad Hoc Committee of the International Conference on Kampuchea in Its Mission To Stimulate Implementation of the Resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the Declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchea"]

[Text] The International Conference on Kampuchea [ICK] held in July 1981 adopted a resolution setting up an ad hoc committee to help stimulate the implementation of the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the declaration of the ICK which demand that Vietnam withdraw all its aggressor troops from Kampuchea immediately and unconditionally so as to allow the Kampuchean people to exercise their right to self-determination without any external interference.

This ad hoc committee, headed by its chairman, Senegalese Ambassador (Masamba Sara), is coming to carry out its mission in Southeast Asia. The Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea sincerely welcome the efforts of the committee and hope that it will come to inspect the actual reports and facts on the Vietnamese Le Duan enemy's aggression in Kampuchea and the criminal acts that the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors have carried out and are carrying out in a most barbarous and cruel manner by massacring the Kampuchean people with all kinds of weapons, including toxic chemicals.

In almost 4 years, the UN General Assembly has adopted three resolutions demanding Vietnam -- the aggressor which invaded the Democratic Kampuchean state, a sovereign and independent state, in defiance of the norms of international relations and the fundamental principles of the UN Charter -- to withdraw all of its aggressor troops from Kampuchea unconditionally in order to allow the Kampuchean people to decide their own destiny through a free election under the UN supervision. The ICK also adopted a declaration demanding that Vietnam withdraw all of its aggressor troops from Kampuchea immediately and unconditionally. These resolutions and the declaration constitute a reasonable and correct basis for a comprehensive, just and permament settlement of the Kampuchean problem. But, until now, the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors have obstinately refused to respect and implement these resolutions and the declaration. On the contrary, they have resorted to all kinds of deceitful maneuvers in an attempt to bury the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the declaration of the ICK and to legitimize their aggression in Kampuchea so that they can forever occupy Kampuchea. This obstinate attitude of the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors constitutes a most savage contempt for the opinion of the world community and an act contrary to the principles of the UN Charter.

The Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors will definitely carry on all kinds of dark maneuvers and deceitful diplomacy in order to realize their plan to annex Kampuchea that they failed to accomplish through military means over a period of almost 4 years.

In the face of such an obstinate Vietnamese attitude, in the search for a solution to the Kampuchean problem the governments of all peace and justice-loving countries and the United Nations must stand firm on the resolutions of the 34th, 35th and 36th UN General Assemblies and the declaration of the ICK.

The Kampuchean problem caused by the Vietnamese aggression in violation of the UN Charter must be settled by standing firmly on the basis of the UN General Assembly resolutions and the ICK declaration, that is, the total and unconditional withdrawal of the Vietnamese aggressors from Kampuchea. Only by so doing can peace be restored in Kampuchea and can security and stability be ensured in the Southeast Asian region as a whole.

The ICK ad hoc committee, which is well aware of this problem, has made continuous efforts on the basis of the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the declaration of the ICK. We hope that the ad hoc committee will further strive to overcome all obstacles and difficulties in order to rapidly bring about the total withdrawal of the Vietnamese aggressors from Kampuchea in accordance with the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the declaration of the ICK so as to restore peace in Kampuchea and enable Kampuchea to remain an independent, sovereign, peaceful, neutral and nonaligned country which will be beneficial to peace and stability throughout the Southeast Asian region and to peace in the whole world.

The Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea are ready to give close cooperation to the ad hoc committee and assist it so that it will be able to carry out its mission successfully.

VODK: 400 NEW SRV TROOPS SENT TO BATTAMBANG

BK240632 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 23 Jul 82

[Text] On 15 July the Vietnamese enemy posted 400 new troops in Phnum Srok District of Battambang Province -- 100 each in Nam Sai ward, Kouk Rumdeng ward, Svar Sar village and (Ta Vong) ward. This clearly exposes the sham good will of the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors and exterminators of the Kampuchean race who keep propagandizing about their partial troop withdrawal. In fact, they have not withdrawn even a single soldier from Kampuchea, but have continuously dispatched more troops to the Kampuchean battlefield.

This has enabled the world to become clearly aware of the tricky nature of the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors. If they ballyhoo about a troop withdrawal it means that they are sending in more troops and if they speak about peace, friendship, stability and cooperation it means that they are making preparations for war.

VACCINATION OF ANIMALS -- In the first of this year, the veterinary service in Battambang Province vaccinated over 40,000 head of oxen and buffalo against foot-and-mouth disease, anthrax, black leg, hemorrhagic septicemia and rinderpest, over 3,999 hogs against swine pest, and tens of thousands of hogs against diamond skin disease. [Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 17 Jul 82 BK]

UNHCR AID DISTRIBUTION -- Between 11 and 13 July, the Kampuchean Red Cross distributed UNHCR aid to 2,586 families of people in various localities in Pursat, Kompong Chhnang and Battambang provinces. This aid comprises hoes, knives, files, nails, saws and various other tools. [Text] [Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1300 GMT 19 Jul 82 BK]

PHOUMI NOSAVAN INTERVIEWED ON LAO RESISTANCE

[By Jim Wolf]

[Text] Bangkok, July 26 (AFP) -- Laotian guerrilla leaders said today they were moving toward setting up a broad-based "union government of national liberation" to oppose the Hanoi-backed communist government in Vientiane.

Exiled General Phoumi Nosavan, a rightist based in Bangkok since 1965, said he would be prime minister of the new body which he planned to proclaim on Laotian territory in "a matter of weeks."

Gen Phoumi, a 62-year-old one-time prime minister, said his goal was to cement a kind of Indochina-wide anti-Vietnamese front also involving the new resistance coalition in Cambodia and dissidents in Vietnam.

In a telephone interview with AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE, he listed a kind of who's who of the fragmented Laotian resistance as nominees to his proposed nine-portfolio cabinet. But he said he was still awaiting replies from several of the most militarily significant figures, notably Hmong General Vang Pao, who resides in the United States, and neutralist General Kong Le, who splits his time between China, France, Thailand and the Lao bush.

Gen Phoumi said the new govermnent would implement a previously announced plan to restore the former kingdom of Laos, deposed by the Pathet Lao communists who seized power with Vietnamese help in December 1975.

The earlier announced restoration plan, first floated last September, has so far come to naught, largely because the Lao resistance is made up of disparate and frequently mutually antipathetic ethnic groups, analysts noted.

Vietnam maintains an estimated 40,000 troops in Laos at the request of the Pathet Lao government under a 25-year treaty signed in 1977.

Gen Phoumi said his decision to set up a rival Lao government was influenced by the so-far successful union of the three disparate Cambodian resistance factions in a loose alliance formally proclaimed July 9.

He said the decision also followed consolidation of a guerrilla stronghold which would be the seat of the new government in the southern Lao province of Champassak, which abuts Thailand and a Khmer Rouge-held zone of Cambodia. The site, called Dong Khan Thoung, had been secured as part of a wider "Vietnamese-free" zone with the help of Khmer Rouge guerrillas, Gen Phoumi said.

Laotian leaders made an initial attempt to unify the resistance in September 1980, when they formed the Lao People's National Liberation Front United Front (LPNLUF). The umbrella organization was warmly welcomed by the Khmer Rouge and by China, which reportedly runs a camp near Kunming where about 1,000 Lao, Hmong and Yao are given guerrilla training.

Gen Phoumi said he had no specific promises of aid from China for the new government, but was hopeful that once it was set up assistance would be forthcoming.

Referring to the re-emergence of Prince Sihanouk to lead the anti-Vietnamese fight in his homeland, the general said this appeared to be "a very propitious moment" for his struggle. Other Laotian sources said the prince had sent an envoy to hear Gen. Phoumi's plans during Prince Sihanouk's visit to Thailand earlier this month before proclaiming the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea.

ASEAN FOREIGN MINISTERS TO MEET IN BANGKOK

BK241142 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 24 Jul 82

[Text] Foreign Ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations are to meet in Thailand in the third week of August. Their senior officials will be here next week on preparations for the ministerial meeting. Thai Foreign Ministry spokesman Chet Sutcharitkun said the upcoming foreign ministers' meeting will be a special get-together following their annual session in Singapore last month and it is expected that the ASEAN foreign ministers will discuss the Kampuchean problem.

SUPREME COMMAND DENIES HANOI RADIO REPORTS

[Text] The Supreme Command Information Office has reported that on 21 July Vietnam Radio, quoting an SPK report, accused Thailand of committing more than 200 violations against Kampuchean territory, sea and airspace during the period 9-15 July. The Supreme Command Information Office hereby rejects the accusation as totally groundless. The Thai Armed Forces have strictly upheld the Thai Government's policy on noninterference in the fighting in Kampuchea. There is also no reason for the Thai Armed Forces to take such actions as charged by Vietnam. Vietnam's report on Thai violations is a total lie.

Vietnam Radio on the same day also reported that a number of Vietnamese in occupation units in Kampuchea arrived in Ho Chi Minh City on 20 July and they were welcomed by warm cheers from the people along their way from the border. The radio also talked about an address given to the returning troops. According to an AFP report, there has been no sign of Vietnamese troops arriving in Ho Chi Minh City, as reported by Vietnam Radio. If the AFP report is true, one must say that the Vietnamese leadership is expert at staging a show.

SRV ARTILLERY SHELLS KHMER SEREI CAMP 23 JULY

[Text] Aranyaprathet -- Vietnamese gunners shelled a Khmer Serei camp across the Thai-Kampuchean border on Friday morning, according to refugee sources. The sources said about 30 107-mm artillery shells believed fired from a Vietnamese base in Phum Yeang, about seven kilometres inside Kampuchea, exploded in the jungle between a camp of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front and a sprawling refugee camp in Nong Chan. It was not known if any Khmers were killed or wounded in the shelling which began at about 6 a.m. and continued until noon, the sources said. They added that the bombardment caused mild panic among the refugees, but there was no evacuation.

Colonel Nhem Sophon of the KPNLF claimed yesterday that the shelling was in retaliation for an attack by his troops on a Vietnamese outpost in Phum Soriya, about 12 kilometres inside Kampuchea, on Thursday and Friday. He said that his troops killed 26 Vietnamese soldiers in the two-day battle with only one KPNLF guerrila killed.

Meanwhile it was reported that an unspecified number of Khmer refugees was on Friday trucked out to the Khao-I-Dang holding centre in Ta Phraya District to Surin Province where they would be repatriated through Chong Chom pass. Sources said several refugees in the centre had expressed their desire to return to Kampuchea through Nong Chan, Ban Sa-Ngae and Chong Chom pass following the recent formation of a coalition government by the three Khmer resistance factions. There are now about 40,000 refugees in the holding centre.

A Khmer Rouge officer told the BANGKOK POST from a jungle base in Nong Pru, 50 kilometres south of this district, that the Vietnamese had not pulled out of Kampuchea as claimed, but had replaced the troops from South Vietnam with the northerners. He claimed that the southern Vietnamese would be deployed along the Chinese border.

Khmer Rouge-PRK Clashes 24 July

[Text] Aranyaprathet -- Khmer Rouge and Vietnamese-led Heng Samrin forces exchanged mortar fire in a fierce battle over the weekend, according to Thai military and guerrilla sources.

The renewed fighting -- the first in three weeks -- started at about 4 p.m. on Saturday. It began when a 300-man Khmer Rouge guerrilla force under the command of Mit Phheap, deputy commander of the 474th Division, launched an attack on a Kampuchean post near Highway 502, opposite Ban Nong Ian, 17 kilometres south of this district.

The ground fighting lasted about 40 minutes during which the Khmer Rouge fired an unspecified number of 120-mm mortar rounds and 75-mm recoilless gun shells on the Heng Samrin post. Villagers of Ban Khok Sabang, Ban Saen Suk, Ban Mai Pak Hong and Ban Khlong Namsai took refuge in bunkers during the attack but they suffered no casualties or damage to their property.

Mit Phheap later told a POST reporter just across the border in Ban Nong Ian that his men had killed 10 Vietnamese-led troops and captured seven AK-47 rifles. He added that his guerrillas had managed to seize the bodies of some Vietnamese soldiers but he declined to disclose his own casualties.

After the initial skirmish, sources said, reinforcements were sent to the Heng Samrin post and fierce mortar barrages were unleashed on the guerrillas from a Vietnamese firebase in Ban Pho Sam Ton. The mortar duel and gunbattle continued intermittently throughout Saturday night and until yesterday morning, said the sources, adding that the Khmer Rouge yesterday sent 100 more men to fight in the battle.

On Friday, Vietnamese gunners shelled a Khmer Serei camp following a clash between the guerrillas and Vietnamese-led forces inside Kampuchea, opposite Nong Chan, Ta Phraya District.

OFFICIAL SAYS PRC STILL SUPPLYING ARMS TO CPT

BK240500 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 24 Jul 82 p 6

[Text] A senior army official charged yesterday that China is still supplying arms to the guerrillas of the Communist Party of Thailand (CPT) despite her claim that she was giving only moral support to the outlawed communist movement.

Director of operations of the army Maj Gen Chaowalit Yongchaiyut said the Chinese arms were delivered to the Thai Communist insurgents through minority factions along the Thai border with Burma in Chiang Mai and Mae Hong Son. But he did not say how the arms traffic reached the Thai borders nor was he specific about their amount or types.

It is the first time that a senior government official publicly accused Beijing of continuing its military assistance for the trouble-plagued CPT after Chinese leaders declared that they were giving only moral support to the party. Maj Gen Chaowalit was talking to reporters after addressing a seminar of public relations officials at the Government House yesterday morning. The army officer, also known as a top anti-communist strategist, told the seminar that the armed branches of the CPT had been totally destroyed by the government forces. "The war of liberation of the CPT is over," he said.

He said the government was about to wind up its armed fight with the communist insurgents and is now concentrating on winning over the sympathisers of the CPT to the government's side. It is too late for the CPT to change the tide of events even if it was able to hold its long-delayed fourth congress, he said.

Maj Gen Chaowalit is one of the strategists behind the much-publicized 66/1980 anti-communist policy which is credited for the defeat of the CPT.

Turning on the events in Indochina, Maj Gen Chaowalit said it would take Vietnam considerable time before it can develop its military supremacy over Thailand. He said he was confident Hanoi is not yet ready to invade Thailand.

ARMY HUNTS VIETNAMESE REFUGEES HIDING IN BANGKOK

[Text] The Second Army Region has recently set up special squads to track down and arrest Vietnamese refugees and their descendants who escaped from the northeast and are hiding in Bangkok.

A well-informed military source told the BANGKOK POST yesterday that the squads have kept a low profile and carried out their assignment independently without the cooperation or assistance of the police. The squads, he said, have successfully located several refugees and brought them back to their hometown provinces for detention and interrogation. He added that a few of the captured refugees were discovered to be members of the outlawed Communist Party of Thailand.

These refugees came to Thailand more than 30 years during and after the battle of Dien Bien Phu. Their children, even if born in this country, are not eligible for Thai citizenship although the government is currently considering proposals to change this situation.

The source said a large number of these refugees and their children had slipped out of the northeastern provinces, where they are confined in camps, to look for jobs elsewhere or to engage in political activities detrimental to national security. The souce added that the Second Army Region had on several occasions asked officials of the local administration department to trace runaway refugees but there had been no satisfactory response. The Second Army Region then decided to take its own measures by forming special squads.

NATION REVIEW VIEWS ROLE OF MILITARY IN POLITICS

[Editorial: "Military Must Help Establish Full Democracy"]

[Text] Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon's Order No. 65/2525 -- the Cabinet approved it on April 20, and it was signed and ratified on May 27 -- has been hailed as a "strategy of political offensive to defeat the communists". The grand strategy outlines the roles of different social groups in the latest comprehensive attempt at the democratication of the Thai political system.

This newspaper has already pointed out two obvious flaws: First, there is no clear definition of "genuine democracy" and, second, the order only touches briefly on the role of the military, simply saying that the military will come to terms with democracy and "support and uphold the democratic system." To clear up any ambiguity that may arise let us first list our concept of "genuine democracy," which may not be to everyone's satisfaction. But "genuine democracy," should include these features: 1) Majority rule with fair consideration for minority rights; 2) majority rule through free elections under political equality; 3) accountability of the elected government at all levels maintained through periodical elections.

If communism is the "dictatorship of the proletariat" (which it is not), then democracy is the "dictatorship of the ballot box" (which it is). This is not a very original oversimplification but many political philosophers have accepted it. So, if everything unfolds here according to what has been envisaged in the present Constitution, the provisional power of the appointed Senate will end next April and general elections will be held within three months.

No one knows how the election system of single constituency and team candidacy -- instead of the multiple constituencies and individual candidacy -- will work. But we should give the new system a try since, at least, this may help consolidate the political party system because only a few major parties will be able to contest the general elections.

This will bring the political party system so essential to the blossoming of democracy into effect with some beneficial efforts like parliamentary majority and a loyal opposition.

However, all this may not be of great importance unless the armed forces live up to the spirit and letter of Order No. 65/2525. The role of the military in the democratization process, to begin with, is to assure that there will be an orderly transition of the present "half-baked democracy" to what has been labelled "genuine democracy".

However, both Supreme Commander Saiyuth Koetphon and Armed Forces Chief-of Staff Rian Ditthabanchong have strongly hinted that the military does not want the revival of a strong House of Representatives. The military, according to them, still wants to keep its active role in the approinted Senate. At present, 104 military officers in active service are in the 225-member Senate.

While historically the military has played a key role in Thai politics, it must not continue to claim such a privileged status and be the ultimate arbitrators in Thai politics. The time has come for the military to return this privilege to the people who are the actual and legitimate owners of this country.

If the military wants to have its hand in politics it could become the most important of the pressure groups, the others being the business grouping, the communications media and the academic circle. And, if military leaders actually want to enter politics, they should do so by reliquishing their active role and taking part in the elections. It is also time to think of an elected Senate rather than an appointed Senate -- an idea that Parliament President Harin Hongsakun has often kicked around.

BANGKOK POST SCORES ICJ HUMAN RIGHTS REPORT

[Editorial: "What Sort of 'Justice' Is This?"]

[Text] Human rights are the subject again, and Thailand is the target this time. From the peaceful city of Geneva, Switzerland, comes word that we have been singled out for attention in a report by the International Commission of Jurists [ICJ]. This body finds that our attention to human rights is "improved" but still is far from perfect.

This general statement may well be true. We just can't work out exactly what it means, or whether it is complimentary or critical. The respected ICJ has chosen some particularly peculiar issues with which to club us -- anti-insurgency laws and prostitution. These two issues are "major causes of concern" to the ICJ.

The lawyers, who by training are supposed to be able to say exactly what they mean, seem strangely unable to tell the difference between a general, sweeping statement and a specific case. Take their discussion of the anti-insurgency laws, for example. According to the Geneva report the government's new anti-communist activities act "has brought about a situation of de facto martial law over the entire country." Well, has it really? Do we face soldiers' guns and tanks wherever we go and look in Thailand? Of course not.

Later, the report deals with what the ICJ considers to be the specific problem. This is the part of the law which authorises a reward of up to 10,000 baht to our paramilitary and volunteer Rangers for the killing of a communist insurgent. The ICJ claims that this has brought about in the Rangers a "propensity to kill even ordinary villagers, and label them as insurgents or sympathisers." Now to some outsiders, this may seem at first glance at the report to be a problem but this general statement is so sweeping as to be meaningless, even had the ICJ pointed out that Rangers do not operate nationwide, which it did not.

More outrageous are the comments on prostitution. They are so vague, so sweeping, so lacking in detail and so, well, inaccurate, that they do no justice to this respected international body.

The ICJ claims that there are 700,000 prostitutes in Thailand, that prostitution involves 10 percent of all Thai women between 15 and 25, and that it is the "largest industry in the country." There is nothing in the report to back up these claims, which are far higher than any other estimate we have ever seen from any source. But the report goes downhill even from here.

"These women have not voluntarily chosen to become prostitutes," the ICJ tells the world. "The women are ill-treated and even tortured if they try to escape, or if a customer complains about their non-cooperative behavior." Well, we all know that there are despicable brothel operators who operate this way. But the idea of 700,000 Thai women being beaten into submission at regular intervals surely strains the imagination.

The ICJ report says that the Thai press is "still relatively free," a vague statement if ever there was one. Everything in the world is relative. Frankly, we think the ICJ report is relatively poor.

TV STATION RECEIVES LETTER ALLEGEDLY FROM PFLP

[Text] Top executives of TV Channel 9 were quite surprised, and probably alarmed to some extent, when they received a letter purported to have been sent by a radical branch of the Palestinian Liberation Organization. Carried by "a last request letter" was indeed a thinly-veiled threat: Stop calling us "bandit" in your news broadcast.

If they were alarmed, they have a solid reason, for the letter was signed by George Habash, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine [PFLP], and mailed from P.O. Box 997, Jidda, Saudi Arabia on July 10.

The letter was addressed to Channel 9 Director Suwan Mettayanuwat who said yesterday that he would show the letter to the board of directors of the Mass Communications Organization of Thailand to discuss whether they should take the matter seriously and forward copies to the Foreign Ministry or the Prime Minister's Office for further instruction.

"We knew from Thais in Saudi Arabia, you called us bandit, you talk about Palestinions (sic) against Israeli anywhere in the world," says the letter, which was written in broken English and was incoherent.

It quickly points out: "We are Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. We fight for our right in Palestine land. If you see the movie Rider (sic) of the Lost Ark in that movie showed Palestine land not Israel."

"We fight against Israel not Thailand, not your organization. We love Thais, we dont't want to hurt you. Why do you hurt us?" the letter says.

Then the letter reminds the director of Thailand's experience in dealing with radical Palestinians a decade ago. "Remember we used to occupied Israel Embassy in Bangkok, after than we knew that day is your prince's birthday."

The letter ends with "This is a last request letter. Hopefully, your next broadcast about us." [sentence as published]

Suwan said that he did not know whether the letter was really sent by George Habash. "Let the Foreign Ministry and the premier's office decide. If they want us to change we will do it. Actually, I am not even sure that we had called them Palestinian bandits," he said.

There was a clear error in the letter, though. The seizure of the Israeli Embassy coincided with the investiture of Crown Prince Vajiralongkorn, not his birthday.

KHUN SA, TROOPS CROSS BORDER TO REINFORCE SUA

[Text] Chiang Mai -- Notorious drugs kingpin Khun Sa and some 400 men of his Shan United Army [SUA] crossed the border into Thailand here early yesterday morning to reinforce his troops who have engaged in a fierce pitched battle with elements of the Burmese Communist Party, informed police sources reported. The sources said that fierce fighting erupted at about 3 a.m. yesterday and continued throughout the day around Doi Lang in Mae Ai District straddling the Thai-Burmese border.

Several grenades and bullets fired by the warring SUA troops and the Red Wa hilltribesmen fell in the vicinity of a local Prachaban school, forcing its closure by the order of Governor Chaiya Phunsiriwong. Efforts were underway yesterday to evacuate Thai villagers living in Doi Lang to safer places in the low land, said the sources.

Khun Sa and his 400 troops, according to the sources, crossed into Kaen Yung of Ban Tha Ton, Mae Ai District, to assist his forces now battling with the Red Wa hilltribesmen. Few details were available about the fighting and casualties, the sources said.

A detachment of Thai troops and Border Patrol Policemen [BPP] from the 35th "Por-Tor-Thor" (civilian police-military) command was yesterday ferried by helicopters to Doi Lang to prevent the fighting from spilling over and to help evacuate the Thai villagers in the area. Sources said the Wa communists were taking revenge on the Shan rebels over an incident early this year when the Shans attacked the Wa to seize their opium.

Meanwhile, it was reported that about 100 BPP men were airlifted by five police helicopters to an unnamed mountain stradding Mae Ai and Mae Chan Districts to intercept a drug caravan heavily guarded by SUA rebels which reportedly was to pass through the area. The report said that the BPP men failed to locate the caravan because of poor visibility, but managed to capture a SUA man with an M-16 rifle, an M-72 anti-tank rocket and 25 M-79 grenades.

GOVERNMENT TO TAKE OVER UN CROP PROJECTS

[Text] The UN crop substitution projects in northern Thailand will be taken over by the Thai Government by the end of this year.

The Public Welfare Department and the Forestry Department will represent the Thai Government in the take-over. Assets as well as documents related to the projects will be handed over to the two departments, said Sonsit Saengprasoet, director of the crop substitution and marketing in highlands (Thai-UN).

Sonsit said most of the UN projects, started as early as 1973, have concentrated on 11 districts in Chiang Mai and Lampang. Projects in 33 villages will come under the responsibility of the Public Welfare Department; four will be taken care of by the Forestry Department.

The crop substitution projects are aimed at encouraging hilltribe people to grow cash crop instead of opium poppy. They also help prevent destruction of forests by hilltribe people in northern Thailand.

VPA UNITS BACK FROM PRK RECEIVE MILITARY ORDER

BK260224 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 25 Jul 82

[Text] On 24 July the VPA units which had returned after fulfilling their international duty in Kampuchea held a grand ceremony in Ho Chi Minh City to receive the Military Service Order, First Class, awarded by the Council of State.

On behalf of the Military Commission of the party Central Committee and the Ministry of National Defense, Col Gen Le Trong Tan, vice minister of national defense, solemnly read the decision of the Council of State chairman and pinned the much-honored order on the determined-to-win military ensign of our army units which had just returned after fulfilling their international duty in Kampuchea.

He warmly praised the cadres and combatants of these units for their achievements while on international duty in fraternal Kampuchea in past years -- for having upheld the spirit of overcoming difficulties and braving sacrifices and hardships and for having, together with the people and revolutionary armed forces of Kampuchea, fulfilled all tasks assigned, thereby contributing to the ever-increasing stabilization and fine development of the situation in Kampuchea in all respects, and to the ever firmer consolidation of the relations of solidarity and militant alliance between Vietnam and Kampuchea.

AFP on Withdrawal

[By Michel Blanchard]

[Text] Hanoi, July 26 (AFP) -- Vietnam's grandly announced partial troop withdrawal from Cambodia has ended up somewhat as a failure politically. Intended as a political "goodwill" gesture by the Hanoi and Phnom Penh governments, observers mystery surrounding the withdrawal had left it fall short of its target. [sentence as received]

The withdrawal was announced on July 7 at the end of the sixth conference of the Indochinese foreign ministers of Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos, that was held in Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon. No details haye yet been given of how many troops were pulled out and how they were withdrawn.

News that the withdrawal had begun came only on July 16, when Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach told AFP that it had started the day before. The VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY (VNA) did not announce withdrawal preparations in Cambodia until July 18, and gave no details. The press then reported a "solemn meeting" in northern Cambodia in honour of "six units" which were to be withdrawn. It was not known how many soldiers made up each unit.

Vietnam's official newspaper NHAN DAN reported that the troops had passed through Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, on July 17, and also did not say how many were involved. VNA said the troops had been "warmly" welcomed in Ho Chi Minh City last Tuesday "by a large crowd". But the AFP correspondent, who was in the city at the time, did not at any time see any troops or any large welcome demonstration.

In addition, the correspondent was refused permission to go to Phnom Penh by the same route as the troops were supposed to take. Nor, in spite of many requests, was he allowed to visit the barracks of the troops back from Cambodia or meet any officers. He could only attend a decoration ceremony last Saturday at the Tan Son Nhut military staff camp in Ho Chi Minh City. NHAN DAN today reported that the units were decorated with the "First Class Military Order of Merit".

The withdrawal was treated as a "military secret" to be kept at all costs. Bureaucracy, lack of coordination between different departments and difficulties in communications all helped to turn a diplomatic operation into a semi-failure because of the uncertainties surrounding the whole affair.

In Ho Chi Minh City, it was impossible to obtain the most basic information. Neither the Kampuchean Consulate nor the External Relations Service, an intermediary all journalists have to go through, seemed to know of the withdrawal. They did not know anything about the date, the itinerary, the number of troops involved, where they came from and their destination, and weapons they were carrying. The only thing that could be found out last Thursday was that the withdrawal had taken "a few days" and had already ended the Monday before. Contrary to VNA reports, they said that the troops were stationed outside Ho Chi Minh City, but did not say anything about the numbers.

Observers here, quoting diplomatic sources, said the withdrawal certainly took place and the number of soldiers might be around 10,000 to 20,000. Vietnam is said to have more than 150,000 overall in Cambodia. But the observers noted that other countries remained u..convinced, even though Foreign Minister Thach is now on tour to several countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), and hopes to get something from Thailand in exchange for the withdrawal.

NHAN DAN SCORES PRC REJECTION OF PEACE PROPOSALS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 26 -- NHAN DAN today says that the Beijing-mounted propaganda campaign against the latest peace proposals of the Indochinese countries is a discordant note. The paper says that while public opinion in many countries in Southeast Asia, and other parts of the world believes that there are new, important aspects in the three Indochinese countries' stand, that their latest proposals can be a basis for negotiations, and that the partial withdrawal of Vietnamese forces from Kampuchea is an act of goodwill, the Chinese expansionists say all this is but a deception and urge people to be on the lookout. NHAN DAN continues by noting that Washington, meanwhile, clings to the U.N. General Assembly's erroneous resolution on Kampuchea, and certain persons in Singapore and Thailand have chorused their agreement with Beijing's allegations by describing Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach's statements in his recent visit to Singapore as a threat to the ASEAN countries.

NHAN DAN says: "Beijing is worried because many people in the world community have realized the practicality and flexibility of Vietnam's stand on the Kampuchean question. It finds unpalatable the constructive proposals of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea for peaceful settlement of existing problems in the region to guarantee stability along the Thai-Kampuchean border and maintain peace in Southeast Asia. Moreoever, NHAN DAN says, these proposals serve to underline the obduracy of China, and other reactionary forces in abetting the Khmer genocidal clique against the People's Republic of Kampuchea and causing confrontation among the countries in Southeast Asia. In order to fish lending a hand to China to oppose the three Indochinese countries Bangkok is mounting a campaign againt armed Maoist groups in Thailand. [sentence as received]

"The row kicked up by Beijing cannot cover up its isolation in its slander campaign", NHAN DAN says. Some ASEAN countries, the paper notes, are seriously studying the new Indochinese proposals, and public opinion in other countries holds that these constructive proposals will help solve existing problems in the region in the interest of peace and stability.

FOREIGN MINISTER THACH VISITS BURMA 22-25 July

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 26 -- Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach paid an official friendship visit to Burma from July 22-25 at the invitation of the Foreign Ministry of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma. The Vietnamese foreign minister called on Burmese President U San Yu and Prime Minister U Maung Maung Kha, and conveyed President Truong Chinh's and Premier Pham Van Dong's greetings to them.

Present at the reception, together with President U San Yu, were U Aye Ko, general secretary of the Burma Socialist Programme Party and secretary of the Council of State; U Tin U, deputy general secretary of the Burma Socialist Programme Party and member of the Council of State; and U Chit Hlaing, minister for foreign affairs. President U San Yu expressed his sincere friendly feelings towards the Vietnamese people and asked Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach to convey his best wishes to President Truong Chinh and Premier Pham Van Dong.

The Vietnamese and Burmese foreign ministers held talks. Also present on the Vietnamese side were Vietnamese Ambassador to Burma Pham Manh Diem; Phan Doan Nam, head of the General Department of the Foreign Ministry; and Tran Huy Chuong, head of the Third Asian Department of the Foreign Ministry. On the Burmese side were Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs U Tin Ohn; Political General Director U Tun Tin; Protocol General Director U Thein Aung; and head of the Southeast Asian Department U Soe Myint.

The two sides exchanged views on the consolidation and enhancement of the friendship and cooperation between the two countries and on other issues of mutual concern. They noted with satisfaction that the relations between the two countries had constantly developed, thus positively contributing to peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The talks took place in an atmosphere of friendship and mutual understanding. The Burmese foreign minister was invited to visit Vietnam and he accepted the invitation with pleasure.

During his stay in Burma, Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach paid a tribute at Aung San's tomb and visited the Golden Shwedagon pagoda and the Historical Museum. He also made a tour of agricultural research institutions and stock-breeding farms.

The Vietnamese foreign minister met and held talks with the Austrian foreign minister, who was currently on a visit to Burma.

On the morning of July 25, Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach left Burma for a visit to Malaysia. He was farewelled by Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing; Vice Foreign Minister U Tin Ohn, and other high-ranking officials of the Burmese Foreign Ministry. Also present on this occasion were Vietnamese Ambassador Pham Manh Diem, ambassadors and charges d'affaires of socialist countries, and the Malaysian charge d'affaires in Burma.

LEADERS GREET CUBA'S CASTRO ON NATIONAL DAY

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 25 -- "As comrades-in-arms always standing shoulder to shoulder with the Cuban people, the Vietnamese people regard each victory recorded and each difficulty encountered by Cuba as their own," say Vietnamese leaders in a message today to Fidel Castro Ruz, first secretary of the Communist Party of Cuba and president of both the Council of State and the Council of Ministers of the People's Republic of Cuba.

The message, occasioned by the 29th anniversary of the Cuban day of national rebellion, is signed by the general secretary of the Communist Party of Vietnam, Le Duan; the president of the S.R.V. Council of State, Truong Chinh; and the chairman of the S.R.V. Council of Ministers, Pham Van Dong. It recalls the steady advance of the Cuban revolution since the historical attack on the Moncada barracks, and says: "Today, in the face of the warlike policy of the Reagan administration which is redoubling its effort to counter the Cuban revolution and the national independence movement in Latin America, the fraternal Cuban people, promoting the Moncada spirit, are united as one man around the glorious banner of the Communist Party of Cuba headed by you, to strive for the completion of two strategic tasks -- production and defense -- in order to step up socialist construction and firmly protect their country while continuing to carry out their honourable internationaist obligations toward other forces of revolution, peace, national independence, democracy and social progress in the world.

Cuba, as president of the Non-Aligned Movement, is making great contributions to strengthening the unity and enhancing the active role of the movement".

"As comrades-in-arms always standing shoulder to shoulder with the Cuban people", the message continues, "the Vietnamese people regard each victory recorded and each difficulty encountered by Cuba as their own. We take this opportunity to reaffirm our unshakable solidarity with and our full support for the Cuban people in building and defending their socialist country. The Vietnamese people demand that the United States put an end to all hostile acts and schemes against the People's Republic of Cuba".

The chairman of the S.R.V. National Assembly, Nguyen Huu Tho, writing to the president of the National Assembly of People's Power of the People's Republic of Cuba, Flavio Bravo Pardo, says:

The Vietnamese people greatly rejoice at the big achievements of the fraternal people of Cuba. From the bottom of our hearts we wish the Cuban people success in implementing the various resolutions of the Second Congress of the Communist Party of Cuba, especially in their two strategic tasks of production and defence, thereby foiling all hostile schemes and acts of the Reagan administration and advancing the Cuban revolution to new peaks of development".

"May the militant solidarity, friendship and fraternal cooperation between the peoples and national assemblies of our two countries continue to consolidate and develop with great success," Chairman Nguyen Huu Tho says.

Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has also greeted his Cuban counterpart, Isidoro Malmierca Peoli, on this occasion.

Nguyen Co Thach expressed his wishes for further development of the friendship, militant solidarity and allround cooperation between the Vietnamese and Polish peoples and for Foreign Minister Stefan Olszowski's good health and success in his noble mission.

TRUONG CHINH SPEECH AT HANOI VOTERS' MEETING

BK231634 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 2 Jul 82 p 1

[Speech by SRV Council of State Chairman Truong Chinh at 1 July Hanoi meeting arranged by the Hanoi Municipal VFF Committee and People's Committee for Hanoi National Assembly Deputies to brief Hanoi voters on the results of the third session of the Seventh National Assembly]

[Text] Dear comrades and compatriots, the third session of the Seventh National Assemby has concluded with fine success. At this session, the National Assembly discussed the following subjects:

-- Progress in the enactment of a criminal code for our country.

-- Activities of the Supreme People's Court and the Supreme People's Organ of Control.

-- The 1982 draft state budget.

-- Progress in the creation of a new national anthem.

-- The by-election of candidates to the Council of State and the reelection of the heads of a number of National Assembly committees.

The main purpose of this session was to reexamine the 1982 state budget estimates.

After hearing reports and holding spirited discussions, the National Assembly issued a resolution approving the 1982 draft state budget -- which was presented by the Council of Ministers -- and assigning the Council of Ministers with the duty of closely guiding various sectors, echelons and grassroots-level units in fulfilling and overfulfilling the many targets of the 1982 state plan and state budget as already ratified by the National Assembly.

The draft state budget is an important component of the state plan. Guidelines for the struggle to meet the 1982 state budget must be closely linked with the many very important and urgent tasks we currently face on the economic front. I would like to avail myself of this opportunity to talk to you, the voters of the entire municipality, about the goals of the state budget and the state financial policy as recently suggested by the National Assembly.

Our goals are to struggle to increase the sources of income for the state budget and to reduce spending that is regarded as illogical or not really urgent so as to meet the state's essential expenditure requirements; to gradually overcome the state of overspending; and to proceed to create a balance between income and expenditures in the budget. In order to attain these goals, we must satisfactorily carry out the following tasks:

-- We must step up production because production is the foundation from which finance is built. We must ensure the fulfillment and overfulfillment of production plans, especially those plans for the manufacture of the main products of the national economy. Emphasis should be placed on the manufacture of those products designed to meet the people's urgent needs and which can bring about a great source of income for the state. Developed production must be accompanied by greater production levels and improved product quality; and must be done in such a way as to save manpower, materials and funds to reduce production and transportation costs.

-- We must increase efforts to bring the sources of goods and money under the state control. State-run enterprises must scrupulously comply with regulations on the turning in of products and on all kinds of collection for the state budget. We must develop socialist trade; step up purchase and collection activities; enhance market management; resolutely oppose theft, speculation, smuggling, the manufacture of fake goods and illegal trade; and satisfactorily handle the collection of taxes and debts in such a way as to avoid collection shortfalls and to ensure that the collection of industrial taxes, agricultural taxes and other kinds of levies is carried out in accordance with policies.

-- We must carry out the motto "The state and people work together so do the central and local levels" in various areas -- economic, cultural, educational, art, public health, physical education, sports and so forth. We must practice maximum thrift in production, construction and everyday life.

-- All sectors, echelons and units must scrupulously comply with the state's unified system and financial management.

Responsibility for the implementation of the above-mentioned tasks rests not only with state organs and enterprises but also with workers, peasants, handcraft workers, small merchants and all of the people. The latter are duty-bound to enthusiastically develop production, practice thrift, participate in the building of various projects at the central and local levels, fulfill various obligations such as selling products and paying taxes and debts to the state, observe various policies on market management and struggle against negative phenomena and breaches of policies or laws in society.

By satifactorily carrying out the above tasks, not only will we be able to materialize the 1982 draft state budget but we will also be able to create favorable conditions for effecting a general change in the country's economic and financial situation.

Dear comrades and compatriots, Hanoi -- the capital of the country -- is duty-bound to lead other localities in creating a new change in the socio-economic situation during the present stage. I hope that the Hanoi Municipal People's Council and People's Committee will disseminate the essence of the recent National Assembly session to the entire population and will take practical and creative steps to outstandingly organize the implementation of all the tasks which have been put forward by the party and state.

I cordially wish the compatriots of the capital good health so that they may enthusiastically engage in socialist emulation activities and contribute effectively to implementing the 1982 state plan and state budget.

Thank you, comrades and compatriots.

STATE COUNCIL AWARDS MEDALS FOR WAR INVALIDS DAY

The reception took place in a cordial and friendly atmosphere.

VIETNAM SOCIALIST PARTY MARKS 22 JULY ANNIVERSARY

BK250508 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnam 1430 GMT 24 Jul 82

[Text] On 22 July, the Central Committee and the Executive Committee of the municipal organization of the Vietnam Socialist Party held a get-together to mark the party's 36th founding anniversary -- from 22 July 1946 to 22 July 1982. Attending the function were many cadres and members of the party.

At the get-together, members of the Socialist Party recalled the party's activities through different stages in the past and its worthy contributions to the anti-French resistance, the anti-U.S. resistance, the struggle against expansionist Chinese aggressors and to the current undertaking to build and defend the fatherland. The delegates present at the meeting also recounted anecdotes about President Ho Chi Minh's solicitous concern and care for the Socialist Party as well as for the Vietnamese intelligentsia.

The Socialist Party members signed up to support the nationwide campaign for peace and disarmament and against the war schemes of the U.S. imperialists and reactionary forces launched by the VFF Central Committee and the Vietnam Committee for the Defense of World Peace.

On the same day the Vietnam Socialist Party Central Committee held its seventh enlarged conference. The conference discussed and unanimously passed a report on the general situation and tasks, a report reviewing its tasks for the first 6 months of this year, and a draft action program for the last 6 months of the year after hearing them presented by Secretary General Nguyen Xien and Deputy Secretary General Hoang Minh Giam.

SRV FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES FOR 3-DAY VISIT

BK250825 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 25 Jul 82

[Text] The Vietnamese foreign minister, Nguyen Co Thach, flew in from Rangoon via Singapore for a 3-day visit to Malaysia. He was received on arrival at the Kuala Lumpur International Airport by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, the secretary general of the ministry, Tan Sri Zakaria Ali, and senior officials of the Foreign Ministry. Mr Nguyen Co Thach is accompanied by five senior officials, including its ambassador designate. He will hold discussions with his Malaysian counterpart, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, on regional matters in general and the Kampuchean issue in particular tomorrow.

In the afternoon Nguyen Co Thach will call on Datuk Sri Dr Mahatir Mohamed at Parliament House. He will leave for Bangkok on Tuesday.

Kampuchea Dispute Continues

BK261005 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Text] Vietnam and Malaysia continue to disagree on the process to solve the Kampuchean problem. This was the outcome of discussions at the Foreign Ministry between the foreign ministers of the two countries this morning. Another round of talks is scheduled for tomorrow.

The secretary general of Wisma Putra [Foreign Affairs Ministry], Tan Sri Zakaria Ali, described the meeting as serious and useful. He said, the minister of foreign affairs, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, explained to his Vietnamese counterpart, Mr Nguyen Co Thach, Malaysia's perception to help solve the Kampuchean issue. Tan Sri Ghazali again stressed the declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchea, which included the complete withdrawal of foreign troops and self-determination of the Kampuchean people. This was to ensure neutrality of that country so as to avoid interference by foreign powers. The resolution also took into account Vietnam's integrity.

Tan Sri Zakaria said, there was no disagreement on peace and stability in Southeast Asia. Mr Co Thach presented his views on how the Kampuchean problems could be solved. They were based on several proposals of the Ho Chi Minh City declaration, including an international conference.

Mr Co Thach said Vietnam could not withdraw completely from Kampuchea so long as a Chinese threat remains. Tan Sri Ghazali also sought clarification from Mr Co Thach on reports that Vietnam would resort to subversion in ASEAN countries in retaliation to ASEAN hostile attitude toward Hanoi. The Vietnamese foreign minister said Vietnam would not use subversion, but it reserves the right of self-defense if ASEAN continued to be hostile against Indochinese states. However, he hoped that Vietnam would not have to resort to such action.

Tan Sri Ghazali mentioned to Mr Co Thach Malaysia's support for the recently formed Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea which would strive for a political solution in that country. To this, the Vietnamese foreign ministers said such a move was tantamount to an interference in Kampuchea's internal affairs.

Mr Co Thach then invited Tan Sri Ghazali to visit Hanoi. The invitation was accepted. Tan Sri Zakaria said Malaysia would continue its dialogue with Vietnam with an open mind.

Commentary on Talks

BK261216 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] Vietnam's foreign minister, Mr Nguyen Co Thach, and his Malaysian counterpart, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, had begun talks on the Kampuchean issue in Kuala Lumpur today.

There will be much to discuss and clarify in their talks. In the wake of the recently formed Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea [CGDK], there have been new developments.

In Singapore last week, after his talks with his Singapore counterpart, Mr Co Thach was reported to have said that Vietnam was prepared to undermine the noncommunist states in Southeast Asia if they continued to maintain anti-Vietnamese policies as far as the Kampuchean issue was concerned.

To political analysts, by that statement Vietnam views the formation of the tripartite coalition of Democratic Kampuchea as an anti-Vietnamese act as well as a veiled threat of the ASEAN states, which have been instrumental in its formation. Then there is a proposal of an international conference on Southeast Asia made by Vietnam to replace the International Conference on Kampuchea -- ICK -- under the auspices of the United Nations, which is the brainchild of the ASEAN states and to which they hoped to find a solution to the Kampuchean problem.

Vietnam has also renewed its offer of a partial withdrawal of its 200,000 troops in Kampuchea, an offer made before, but was turned down by the ASEAN grouping which prefers a total withdrawal.

In the exchange of views on these developments, Malaysia is expected to keep an open mind with the hope that a face to face discussion will lead to a better understanding of each country's real intentions and positions. It is also to be hoped that Vietnam would be more responsive and accommodating and be less adament in its stand on the Kampuchean issue. Reportedly it has abandoned its irreversible stand, which is a promising sign. But, what is hard to understand is that following this, it perceives the formation of the tripartite CGDK as an anti-Vietnamese act. Rather, it should be perceived by Vietnam as a face-saving device for an honorable disengagement from Kampuchea.

It has all along claimed that it invaded Kampuchea and set up the Heng Samrin government to free the people from the repressive and genocidal Khmer Rouge regime of Pol Pot. With the formation of the tripartite coalition, the Khmer Rouge is now just a component of a more representative government. This is definitely consistent with Vietnam's claimed rationale for the invasion and occupation of Kampuchea.

If it truly wants to extricate itself from the mess it unwittingly or wittingly got into in Kampuchea, Malaysia and its ASEAN partners are ever ready to help Hanoi find an honorable way out of this. A solution to the Kampuchean issue will certainly be of mutual benefit. The ASEAN countries want peace and stability in the region to carry on with their economic development. Vietnam will also gain by concentrating all its resources for rehabilitating itself after the ravages of the Vietnam war, and the ASEAN countries are prepared to assist it in any way they can towards this end. It is to be hoped that the talks between Mr Co Thach and his Malaysian counterpart, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, would be conducted on this basis with tangible results rather than just mere rhetoric

RAJARATNAM DISCUSSES OUTCOME OF THACH'S VISIT

[Text] Singapore, July 23 (AFP) -- Deputy Prime Minister Sinnathamby Rajaratnam has said the reports that Vietnam was being "flexible and making concessions" over Cambodia had been proved untrue by the attitude of Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach who has just left Singapore after a four-day visit. "Apart from being 'flexible,' Mr Tach is also flexing his muscles," Mr Rajaratnam told the Chinese newspaper NANYANG SIANG PAU in an interview published today.

Mr Rajaratnam, who spent about two hours with Mr Thach last Monday, said Vietnam's "veiled threat" to get even with ASEAN -- the five-nation Association of Southeast Asian Nations -- for backing the coalition government in Cambodia showed its lack of confidence. "If you have confidence, you don't have to threaten your opponents" he said.

Mr Rajaratnam was referring to Mr Thach's "veiled threat" that Hanoi could retaliate against ASEAN for its alleged "interference" in Cambodian affairs.

The "threat" was disclosed by Foreign Minister Dhanabalan who briefed newsmen on the discussions with Mr Thach, but the Vietnamese official next day described it as "press distortion." However, Mr Thach went on to reiterate that Vietnam reserved the right to retaliation in self-defence if ASEAN continued its interference in Cambodia.

The deputy prime minister, who oversees foreign policy matters, said that if Mr Thach had come here believing he could frighten Singapore into accepting Vietnam's solution to the Cambodian problem, it was a wrong strategy. At any rate, he added, Mr Thach's attitude showed that reports of Vietnam "being flexible and making concessions" over Cambodia were untrue.

Although four years had passed since the Vietnamese forces invaded Cambodia, the economy of the ASEAN countries -- Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore and Thailand -- had not been ruined and its political system had not crumbled. On the other hand, he pointed out, Vietnam's position had worsened and it was now reliant on Soviet "charity."

The Cambodian war, he noted, had not affected ASEAN even though there was "a potential threat", but for Vietnam, the war went on every day. There was more suffering, more economic disintegration and no reconstruction. ASEAN can therefore wait, he said.

Looking into future possibilities, Mr Rajaratnam said in the next four years, pressure of events might compel the Vietnamese to "do the right thing" by withdrawing all their forces from Cambodia.

SRV'S THACH 'NOT SURPRISED' AT IMF REJECTION

BK250718 Hong Kong AFP in English 0658 GMT 25 Jul 82

[Excerpt] Singapore, July 25 (AFP) -- Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said here today that he was not surprised that the International Monetary Fund (IMF) had reportedly rejected Hanoi's request for a 150 million dollar (U.S.) loan.

Hanoi had wanted the money in special drawing rights for a balance of payment support loan but the IMF declined to pay up "until changes are made in the economy." Mr. Thach who was making a brief stopover in Singapore on his way to Malaysia from Rangoon did not elaborate.

On his talks in Malaysia, Mr Thach said he would do his best to bring about peace and stability in the region.

BRIEFS

MALAYSIA TRADE DEFICIT -- Trade deficit for the peninsular Malaysia in April dropped to about 484 million ringgit compared with 714 million ringgit in March. However, the total trade deficit for the first 4 months of this year is more than 1.6 billion ringgit. The negative balance of trade is mainly due to global recession that leads to poor demand as well as depressed prices for primary commodities. According to figures released by the Statistics Department, export earnings of rubber, crude petroleum, crude palm oil, tin, sawn timber and cocoa beans dropped between 10 and 30 percent during the 4 months. On the other hand, earnings from refined palm oil, coconut oil and petroleum products showed fairly good increases. [Text] [Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 17 July 82 BK]

CRITICISM MOUNTS OVER REWRITING HISTORY IN TEXTBOOKS

OW270121 Tokyo KYODO in English 0042 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 27, KYODO -- Japan has run into a hard position because of mounting criticism from China, North and South Korea, Taiwan and Singapore against Japan's rewriting of history in school textbooks.

Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, calmly reacting to the foreign criticism, told newsmen Monday night that the Education Minister recommends publishers to improve or rewrite expressions every year.

A high ranking Foreign Ministry official said Monday night that expressions should be corrected if they run counter to facts, indirectly criticizing education authorities for rewriting textbooks. The official, who declined to be named, expressed worries about possible deterioration of Japan's external relations with these countries.

A senior Education Ministry official told newsmen late Monday night his ministry would fully study a Chinese protest filed earlier in the day. Isao Suzuki, head of the ministry's Elementary and Secondary Education Bureau, said he had not expected the matter to develop into such a major diplomatic issue.

On Monday, China protested against Japan's rewriting of history in school textbooks which they claim violates "the spirit of the 1972 Sino-Japanese joint statement." The Chinese Foreign Ministry summoned Minister Koji Watanabe of the Japanese Embassy in Beijing to express the protest. It was the first official diplomatic represntation by a foreign country concerning the textbook revision issue. The high ranking Foreign Ministry official said, "Our basic position is as set forth in the joint Japan-China statement in 1972, that we deplore and repent our past faults."

Chinese and South Korean media have been sharply critical of the rewriting of Japanese school textbooks which they claim distort facts about the Japanese invasion of China and rule over Korea before 1945.

In the newly approved textbooks, such terms as "military aggression" and "deportation of Koreans for forced labor" were deleted and substituted by milder euphemisms such as "advance" and "implementation of the national mobilization order to Koreans." Newspapers of North Korea, the United States and Singapore have joined in criticizing the rewording.

In the 1972 statement, which opened formal relations between Japan and China, Japan acknowledged responsibilities for destruction caused to the Chinese people during the Sino-Japanese war of 1937-45.

Meanwhile, in South Korea, Prime Minister Kim Sang-kyop called a meeting of Cabinet ministers concerned Monday to discuss allegedly distorted descriptions in Japanese school textbooks about history of the two countries. This was the first South Korean Government reaction to the current controversy concerning the textbooks which many South Koreans claim justified Japan's 1910-45 colonial rule of Korea or ignored vital facts about the military occupation.

The Cabinet meeting was apparently held in response to the current press campaign against the Japanese Education Ministry which is in charge of screening and approving school textbooks. Although it was not immediately known if the Cabinet meeting discussed any specific description in the textbooks, it is believed to have touched on the fact that some Japanese publishing companies followed the ministry's "editorial guidance " and dropped an explanation from their textbooks about Korean forced laborers in Japan during World War II.

The Seoul government said it is now looking into details of the textbook dispute, including the statement allegedly made by Japanese National Land Agency Chief Yukiyasu Matsuno, a state minister.

The Korean Government, being pressed by some news media to get tough toward Japan, may take proper diplomatic action if necessary, a government spokesman said.

The opposition Korea Democratic Party, meanwhile, issued a statement Monday and expressed suspicion that the Japanese Education Ministry distorted historical facts in an attempt to justify Japan's wartime militarism. In addition, a group of South Korean national assemblymen will send an executive member to Tokyo Tuesday and ask Japanese lawmakers to make school textbooks free of prejudices about Korea.

North Korea, which does not normally follow Seoul's initiative, has joined South Korea in denouncing the Japanese education policy.

The Japanese textbooks were submitted to the ministry for approval for use at schools beginning next school year.

Other textbook publishers, in response to the ministry's censorship, toned down terms about anti-Japanese riotings in Korea and oppression by the colonial rulers against the Korean people.

Suzuki on PRC Protest

OW270211 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 0100 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Answering a press corps question this morning regarding the Chinese Government's formal protest on 26 July over textbook censorship by Japan's Education Ministry, Prime Minister Suzuki said that for the time being Japan will seek to win China's understanding through persuasion.

He said, now that a formal protest has been filed by the Chinese Government, Japan should make a full explanation of the system of textbook authorization in Japan and seek to win China's understanding by conveying Japan's real intentions. He added that Japan should endeavor not to let such an issue develop into a diplomatic question.

Answering another question, if he was going to resolve the issue before his scheduled visit to China in September this year, Prime Minister Suzuki said that he is not setting any specific deadline but that such an issue should be resolved as soon as possible. Thus, he indicated that he would seek an early solution to the issue.

Steps To Stem Criticism

[Excerpts] Tokyo, July 27, KYODO -- Japan took steps Tuesday to stem mounting foreign criticisms over controversial revision of high school textbooks describing Japan's role in China and South Korea before and during World War II. Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki instructed government officials to work out measures to tell China and South Korea his country's "true motive" and win their understanding of alterations in textbooks.

Xiao Xiangqian, director of the 1st Asian Affairs Department of the Chinese Foreign Ministry, summoned a Japanese Embassy official in Beijing Monday and requested a correction in the contents of textbooks. The South Korea Cabinet met Monday to discuss the matter, but it has thus far refrained from taking any formal action.

Prime Minister Suzuki's Cabinet met Tuesday morning and supported his instruction, although some Cabinet ministers expressed reservations.

Yukiyasu Matsuno, director general of the National Land Agency, was quoted as saying that he wondered whether it was desirable for Japan to "distort the fact of history" and prepare textbooks in accordance with what other countries say about Japan's involvement in China and South Korea.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa told newsmen Tuesday morning the government remained unchanged in its "basic" stance for expressing its profound reflections for its aggression to China.

He said China would understand if Japan explains fully on textbook changes. He said Japan should not delay in seeking settlement of the controversy.

An official of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party noted that Japan currently maintains unprecedentedly friendly relations with both China and South Korea and added that his party and the Education Ministry would make all-out efforts to gain understanding of the two neighboring countries.

The government's apparent change in its stance from that of a "prudent attitude" to positive steps to prevent further spread of foreign criticisms stems from its desire to resolve the issue before Prime Minister Suzuki visits Beijing. The prime minister is scheduled to visit Beijing sometime in September on the 10th anniversary of the normalization of Japan-China relations.

Japan also wants to settle a pending issue of extending economic assistance to Seoul. Korea has been asking for dollar 6 billion for its current five-year economic development. Japan has trimmed the amount to dollar 4 billion.

HALF-YEAR JAPAN-PRC TRADE SHOWS DECREASE

[Text] Tokyo, July 27, KYODO -- Customs-cleared Sino-Japanese trade was down 13.6 percent in the first half of this year at dollar 4.4 billion from the same period a year ago due to a sharp drop in Japanese exports of plant equipment, the Japan External Trade Organization (JETRO) reported Tuesday. It was the first time in six years two-way trade dropped on a six-month basis, the semigovernmental trade promoting agency said.

The report said Japan's exports were off a hefty 37.2 percent at dollar 1.76 billion due to the fact that the shipment of plants to China under the country's 10-year program ended last year and that there was no new purchase of the plant equipment due to China's economic readjustment policy. Other reasons cited were China's restrictions in the imports of durable consumer goods, such as color TVs and autos to protect domestic industries, and a drop in exports of steel and textiles to China.

JETRO said, however, that Japan's imports from China during the same period were up 14.1 percent at dollar 2.7 billion due to an increase in imports of crude oil and naphtha, pig iron and ferro-alloy. As a result, Japan suffered a trade deficit of dollar 950 million against a surplus of dollar 420 million in the same period a year ago, officials said.

Japan suffered a trade deficit with China for the first time in 17 years last year, amounting to dollar 200 million and the officials predicted a substantial deficit this year. They forecast that two-way trade would decrease to around 9 billion this year from dollar 10.4 billion last year due to no prospects for recovery in Japan's exports to China although Japan's imports from China are expected to level off in the latter half of this year.

JCP CONGRESS OPENS IN ATAMI, MIYAMOTO GIVES SPEECH

OW270323 Tokyo KYODO in English 0311 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Atami, Shizuoka Pref., July 27, KYODO -- Kenji Miyamoto, chairman of the Japan Communist Party, Tuesday stressed the importance of the struggle against nuclear weapons and for protection of peace.

Speaking at the opening session of the party's first congress in two and a half years, held in Atami, Miyamoto said the U.S. second special disarmament meeting in June ended without tangible results because of the "power policies" of the Western bloc countries joined by the Liberal-Democratic Party government of Japan.

He, however, highly valued the rising antinuclear and peace movements in various countries and said the 82 million signatures collected in Japan in the antinuclear campaign aimed at the U.N. disarmament session represented a "historical and epochal result."

Miyamoto called for the promotion of such a movement on a grass roots and regional level in the future and the fight against the policy of accepting the nuclear umbrella of the United States. Opposition against limited nuclear wars and existence of the Japan-U.S. security treaty are not compatible, he said.

Miyamoto also strongly criticized Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's Cabinet, accusing it of promoting militarism and taking reactionary policies.

Miyamoto, however, refrained from strongly criticizing the Japan Socialist Party as was the case at the time of the previous party congress in 1980. He also virtually did not refer to the international communist movement or to the communist parties of the Soviet Union and China.

Miyamoto noted that the JCP membership increased (?400,000) from 1980 to 480,000. On the number of subscribers to the party paper AKAHATA (RED FLAG), the chairman said merely that it surpassed 3,550,000. He thus admitted that the party still fails to attain the target number of 4 million.

The current congress, which is to come to a close on Saturday, also marks the 60th anniversary of the JCP.

BRIEFS

AID TO GABON -- Tokyo, July 14, KYODO -- Japan will give yen 40 million (about $160,000) in aid to Gabon for the purchase of educational equipment for use at Bongo University, the Foreign Ministry said Wednesday. It said diplomatic notes on the grant were exchanged Tuesday in Liberville between representatives of the two governments. The ministry said Bongo University, founded in 1970, is Gabon's only university. The Japanese aid will be spent for the purchase of such educational equipment as microscropes and a video system, it said. [Text] [Tokyo KYODO in English 0634 GMT 14 Jul 82 OW]

AID TO YAR -- Tokyo, 19 Jul, KYODO -- Japan will extend a yen 8.2 billion (dollar 32 million) loan to North Yemen for construction of a seventh berth at Hodeidah Port, the Foreign Ministry said Monday. The two countries exchanged notes on the assistance the same day, it said. [Text] [Tokyo KYODO in English 0810 GMT 19 Jul 82 OW]

NODONG SINMUN OBSERVES CEASE-FIRE ANNIVERSARY

[NODONG SINMUN 27 July editorial: "The U.S. Imperialists Should Abandon Their Wild, Aggressive Desire for Korea and Withdraw From South Korea"]

[Text] Under circumstances in which a new upsurge has been brought about in production and construction through the struggle to create the speed of the 1980's in the northern half, in which the anti-U.S. struggle has been stepped up in South Korea to achieve independence and in which international solidarity with our cause for the fatherland's reunification has been strengthened further, we greet the 29th anniversary of victory in the great fatherland liberation war. Greeting this anniversary, our people are more firmly determined to force the U.S. imperialist aggressors -- who brought about the disasters of a 3-year war in Korea and who are still engaged in maneuvers for aggression and war -- to withdraw from South Korea and achieve the historic cause of the fatherland's reunification without fail.

The fatherland liberation war, which was forced on us by the U.S. imperialists, was a decisive war which determined whether our people could protect the country's independence and sovereignty or would become the colonial slaves of foreign imperialists. This war was a sacred anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle to oppose the allied forces of the world's reactionaries with the U.S. imperialists as boss and to protect world peace and security. By heroically struggling under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to defend the country's independence and sovereignty with a single mind and body, our people and the People's Army gloriously overcame difficulties and trials in the war, forced the U.S. imperialists and their stooges to suffer a disgraceful defeat and won a historic victory.

The great victory in the fatherland liberation war was a great event which added a brilliant chapter to the history of our fatherland. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The victory achieved by our people in the Korean was was achieved by a revolutionary people against an imperialist reactionary force, and was won by a revolutionary army against an imperialist aggressive force.

The great victory achieved by the Korean people in the fatherland liberation war was a victory of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's immortal chuche idea and his chuche-type military idea and was a brilliant fruition of the great leader's wise leadership and his unique military art. With profound wisdom and scientific insight, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth a profound military, strategic policy, invented flexible, unique tactics at every stage of the war and wisely led the entire party, army and all the people in implementing this policy and these tactics.

By defeating the U.S. imperialist aggressors under the tested leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, a military strategist and a victorious iron-willed commander, our people and the People's Army protected their revolutionary gains, defended the fatherland's independence and the dignity of the people and demonstrated the revolutionary spirit of chuche Korea to the world. By winning victory in the fatherland liberation war, our people smashed for the first time in history the myth on the greatness of the U.S. imperialists, paved the way toward making the U.S. imperialists tread the road of decline, encouraged the anti-imperialist and national liberation struggle of the world's oppressed people and greatly contributed to the cause of peace in Asia and the world.

Twenty-nine years have passed since the cease-fire in Korea. During this period, our people, firmly united around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party center and displaying the fighting spirit of self-reliance, have built an independent, self-reliant and powerful socialist country capable of self-defense in a land where everything was destroyed and reduced to ashes. They have steadily struggled to end the tragedy of national division. It is well known that, to convert the armistice into a durable peace and achieve the country's independent and peaceful reunification, we have set forth many policies and proposals, such as the three principles and five policies for the fatherland's reunification, the proposal for replacing the armistice agreement with a peace agreement and that for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK], and have made every possible sincere effort to implment these policies and proposals.

However, the desire of our people for reunification has not been fulfilled. A grave obstacle blocks the future path of the fatherland's reunification. This is totally because of the obstructionist maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists who do not want Korea's reunification. Instead of learning a lesson from the defeat they suffered in the Korean war and withdrawing, the U.S. imperialists, continuously sitting astride South Korea without abandoning their wild aggressive desire for Korea, have executed their policies for colonial control and war. Coming up with a policy for two Koreas, they have hindered the reunification of our country.

Declaring that the Korean Peninsula is a vital area as far as U.S. interests are concerned, present U.S. ruling circles have increased their aggressive military capabilities in South Korea. By continuously shipping to South Korea various sophisticated lethal weapons and military equipment, the bellicose U.S. imperialist war maniacs have increased military capabilities there. They are trying to additionally deploy neutron bombs and theater nuclear missiles in South Korea where large quantities of nuclear weapons have already been deployed. While continuously supplying new weapons and equipment to the South Korean puppets and massing vast aggressive troops in the area around the Korean Peninsula, they have frantically staged military exercises against us.

Because of the U.S. imperialists' ceaseless maneuvers to increase military capabilities and their war commotions, South Korea has been converted into a dangerous source of war, tension has been heightened on the Korean Peninsula and a grave situation in which the powderkeg of war might explode at any moment has developed there.

The U.S. imperialists' policy for aggression and war represents a violent violation of the sovereignty of the Korean people and is a grave crime disturbing peace on the Korean Peninsula and hindering the reunification cause. While strengthening their policy for aggression and war in Korea, the U.S. imperialists have clamored about the nonexistent threat of southward invasion and the military supremacy of the North. They have invented this to conceal their maneuvers for a war of northward invasion and to justify their military occupation of South Korea and a military buildup. No matter what trick they may use, the U.S. imperialists cannot conceal their true color as an occupier and an aggressor. Nor can they avoid responsibility for the grave situation on the Korean Peninsula.

The U.S. imperialists' policy of interference in and aggression against Korea has become apparent. Using the fascist military elements in South Korea, they have maintained a most reactionary colonial rule there. The fascist Chon Tu-hwan dictatorial military regime is the product of the crisis of colonial rule in South Korea. This regime has been fabricated by the U.S. imperialists' bayonets. It is a most wicked colonial puppet regime masterminded by the U.S. imperialists. Although the U.S. imperialists have called South Korea an independent nation, they are the real rulers in South Korea who, seizing every genuine right, including the right of supreme military command, exercise influence over everything.

By making all sectors in South Korea, including the political, economic, cultural and military sectors, thoroughly serve their aggressive aim, the U.S. imperialists have converted South Korea into their colony and military base. The regime there is a dirty tool designed to execute the U.S. imperialists' policy for colonial control and war. It was none other than the U.S. imperialists who masterminded the barbarous mass slaughter committed in Kwangju by traitor Chon Tu-hwan, a human butcher. It is none other than the U.S. imperialists -- the ringleaders who have cruelly suppressed democrats including Kim Tae-chung -- who have thwarted the struggle of the people to achieve the democratization of society and the fatherland's reunification.

Instigated and masterminded by the U.S. imperialists, traitor Chon Tu-hwan, infamously asking alms of the Japanese reactionary forces, has sold out the dignity and interest of our people and has fanned enmity among the people and heightened tension by increasing military capabilities and kicking up anticommunist war rackets.

All these facts clearly show that the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their policy of aggression are basic factors violating the national sovereignty of the South Korean people, the constant source of disturbance in our country portending the danger of war and the largest obstacle to the fatherland's independent reunification.

Without removing the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces from South Korea, we cannot eliminate the danger of war from Korea, nor can we achieve the democratization of South Korean society, the cause of the people for independence and the country's reunification. This is the result and lesson the North and South Korean people have gained in their bloody struggle over the past 37 years to achieve the fatherland's reunification, independence and democracy.

What attitude one assumes toward the U.S. imperialist aggressors occupying South Korea constitutes a basic yardstick determining whether he desires the fatherland's reunification. By rising as one in the struggle to force the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces to withdraw from South Korea, all Koreans who desire the fatherland's reunification and who are concerned over the destiny of the country and the people should expedite the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification.

Today the spirit of the anti-U.S. struggle has rapidly increased among the South Korean people of all walks of life, youths and students whose dignity and sovereignty have been trampled underfoot under the colonial rule by the U.S. imperialists and who have suffered all forms of humiliation and maltreatment. They have resolutely risen in the righteous, nation-saving anti-U.S. struggle to banish the U.S. imperialists -- the ringleaders of fascism and division and the source of national misfortune and disasters -- and restore the lost sovereignty of the people. The anti-U.S. struggle, which has been waged throughout South Korea, including Seoul and Chunchon, impelled by the arson at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan in March this year, is the eruption of the pent-up rancor and resentment of the South Korean people against the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule. This struggle reflects their firm patriotic will to banish the U.S. imperialist aggressors from the fatherland and restore the dignity and sovereignty of the people. The will of the Korean people to repel foreign aggression and interference and build a reunified, dignified independent country is firm.

The U.S. imperialists should correctly view the firm will of the Korean people who value the dignity and sovereignty of the people more dearly than their lives, abandon their anachronistic policy for occupying South Korea, stop maneuvers to fabricate two Koreas and withdraw from South Korea at the earliest possible date in accordance with the UN resolution, taking along all aggressive troops including nuclear weapons. The U.S. imperialists should also stop criminal maneuvers to instigate traitor Chon Tu-hwan to follow the course of division, fascism and war and take their hands of interference off Korea.

To thwart the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers for aggression and interference, we should eliminate the South Korean puppets who, by turning South Korea into a colonial military base of the U.S. imperialists, have sacrificed the country to foreign forces. The Chon Tu-hwan ring should act discreetly and step down from power in accord with the demand of the people. If it continues to tread the road of fascism, division and war, while treacherously relying on foreign forces by running counter to the desire of the people, they will only expedite their downfall.

The lost sovereignty of the people can only be regained through struggle. The situation in South Korea in which the sovereignty of the people has been trampled underfoot and in which the dark cloud of a new war and perpetual division is hanging low urges all the people to rise under the banner of grand national unity and more vigorously wage the nation-saving anti-U.S. struggle. By firmly uniting under an anti-U.S. banner for independence to smash the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers for aggression and interference and to reunify the divided fatherland, all Korean compatriots in the North and South should rise as one in the struggle to achieve national sovereignty on a national scale.

Sovereignty is the lifeline of the country and the people. With sovereignty, we can protect the honor and dignity of the people. Those people who do not possess sovereignty cannot achieve true independence and prosperity.

The proposal for founding the DCRK set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the historic Sixth KWP Congress is a most rational and practical reunification proposal which delineates a correct way to found a reunified country in line with the desire of the people and to achieve the sovereignty of the people on a national scale.

If the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces withdraw from South Korea and end their interference in the internal affairs of our country, our people will readily and independently found an independent and peace-loving confederal country and achieve the historic cause of the fatherland's reunification.

All Korean people, by rallying around the great national reunification front under the banner of anti-U.S. struggle for independence, will see to it that the U.S. imperialist troops of aggression withdraw from South Korea and that the historic cause of national reunification is achieved by realizing the proposal for the establishment of the DCRK.

To crush the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression and war and hasten the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification, we should carry out socialist construction more superbly in the northern half of the republic.

All party members and working people, upholding the grandiose programs put forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Sixth KWP Congress and the militant tasks put forth in his historic policy speech, should accelerate the cause of imbuing society with the chuche idea under the loftily raised banner of three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture. Thus, by strengthening our revolutionary forces politically, economically and militarily, we should be fully prepared to defend the revolutionary gains and to crush the enemy's acts of aggression and provocation in a timely manner.

Our people, who are struggling to achieve the just cause of national reunification under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and following the guidance of the glorious party center will certainly triumph.

CPRF DEMANDS END TO PUSAN ARSON TRIAL

[22 July statement issued by the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland]

[Text] Today, South Korea has been plagued by a great fascist rampage through which treacheries strangle patriotism and injustice challenges justice. As is already known, the fascist Chon Tu-hwan military clique, a group of the U.S. imperialists' dirty stooges, after staging a murderous trial of those who were involved in the arson at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan in accordance with directives from its masters, are frantically running amok to severely punish the arsonists. According to very limited materials leaked despite the stern press censorship, the Chon Tu-hwan ring held a conference prior to the trials to instruct the judicial authorities to pass a death sentence on Mun Pu-sik, Kim Hyon-chang and Choe Ki-sik. Even the court-appointed lawyers expect them to be sentenced to death.

Deeply concerned over the grave threat to those involved in the arson at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan, because of the vicious, wicked scheme conceived by the U.S. imperialist masters and their stooges and regarding the plot to execute them as an intolerable crime designed to strangle anti-U.S. sentiment and independence being promoted in South Korea, and designed to maintain the tottering colonial military rule there, the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF] resolutely denounces this plot.

Sixteen students and figures from various social sectors, who have been forcefully subjected to unjust trials at a murderous court for over a month, are patriots who have carried out righteous activities to achieve the dignity and sovereignty of the people and who only desire to oppose the United States and save the country.

On 18 March this year, they set fire to the cursed U.S. cultural center nestling in Pusan and scattered anti-U.S. handbills reading "U.S. forces must withdraw," and "We denounce U.S. neocolonialism," thereby resolutely opposing the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule. This courageous act of resolutely rising to break the iron shackles of tyranny was the eruption of pent-up rancor and resentment against the U.S. imperialist aggressors who, occupying South Korea for 37 years and posing as masters, have imposed immeasurable misfortune and disasters on the people. It was a righteous, patriotic struggle to regain the lost sovereignty of the people and achieve democracy and the country's peaceful reunification.

Reflecting the unanimous desire of the people refusing to live as colonial slaves, their righteous anti-U.S. struggle against the aggressors and the traitors to oppose foreign domination and control won sympathy for the people at home and abroad. The flames of the anti-U.S. struggle, which have been ablaze throughout South Korea, including Seoul and Chunchon following those lit in Pusan, clearly show this.

Through meetings and demonstrations and by issuing statements, religious figures in various foreign countries, including Japan, together with the South Korean people of all walks of life, have positively supported the anti-U.S. struggle of those involved in the arson at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan, have denounced the fascist clique for arresting the arsonists and for staging illegal trials and have strongly demanded the release of those detainees. At the murderous court, the detained anti-U.S. fighters have denied the content of the unjust indictment and claimed that their struggle was just and that they are not guilty.

Nevertheless, while supporting the crimes committed by the U.S. imperialist aggressors who, trespassing in another's country uninvited, have behaved outrageously and tyrannically, the Chon Tu-hwan ring has indicted the patriotic people for their sacred struggle to achieve independence, democracy and reunification. This shows that the rascals are faithful colonial servants and toadyist traitors of the century.

The South Korean puppet clique has outrageously committed a barbarous act of suppressing the people in accordance with the scenario prepared by the U.S. imperialist masters. No sooner had the arson occurred than the U.S. imperialists called the bosses of the South Korean puppets to the U.S. Embassy in South Korea. The former strongly urged the latter to bear responsibility for the incident, make apologies, conduct a thorough search for the arsonists and severely punish them. After calling the puppet foreign minister to Washington some time ago, they issued a secret directive on the punishment of patriotic people who have risen in the anti-U.S. struggle.

By maneuvering to cruelly execute the people who have risen in the righteous anti-U.S. struggle, the U.S. imperialists and their stooges are attempting to thwart the spirit of the daily increasing anti-U.S. struggle in South Korea, block the patriotic advance of the people and overcome the crisis of their colonial rule. However, this is a miscalculation. The strength of the people who desire independence is stronger than bayonets. No force can check the trend for independence that has surged through South Korea. Before being banished by the anti-U.S. struggle of the indignant South Korean people, the U.S. imperialists should abandon their foolish, absurd desire for holding onto South Korea forever as a colony and return to their den, taking along their aggressive troops and all lethal weapons, including nuclear weapons.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring should stop its treacherous attempt to win favor from the U.S. imperialists by executing patriotic people, by turning its back on its fellow countrymen and by colluding with foreign forces and end its effort to maintain its dirty remaining life with foreign patronage. It should stop the unjust game of trials against those who have been involved in the arson at the U.S. cultural center and should unconditionally release all of them. If the Chon Tu-hwan ring continues to tread the path of executing the patriotic people who have risen in the anti-U.S. struggle, it will not be able to avoid a more miserable fate than that suffered by the previous dictators who departed this life while engaged in the treachery of relying on foreign forces.

We firmly believe that the South Korean people of all walks of life will more vigorously struggle to banish the U.S. imperialist aggressors from our sacred fatherland, to end their colonial rule and to found a reunified, prosperous and independent country -- a new world of independence free from foreign forces and traitors.

KWP GREETS JAPANESE COMMUNIST PARTY CONGRESS

SK270034 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2204 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 27 (KCNA) -- The Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea on July 26 sent a message to the Central Committee of the Japan Communist Party in congratulation of the 16th Congress of the party. The message reads:

Dear comrades, the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea hails the 16th Congress of the Japan Communist Party and, through it, extends friendly greetings to the entire members of your party. Believing that the friendly relations established between our two parties will develop favorably, we wish your congress success in its work.

NODONG SINMUN HITS JAPAN'S DISTORTION OF HISTORY

SK250526 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2255 GMT 24 Jul 82

[NODONG SINMUN 25 July commentary: "For What Purpose Are They Distorting History?"]

[Text] According to news reports, the Japanese Ministry of Education has approved textbooks with revised portions related to the past Japanese imperialist aggression of our country.

What we cannot overlook in the textbooks for the Japanese elementary and middle school students approved by the Japanese Ministry of Education is the fact that our people's 1 March uprising was described as a riot, the forced draft as voluntary and the use of Japanese along with the Korean language, which is completely contrary to the facts. This ignominious distortion of history is an intolerable insult to our people and a wily trick designed to embellish the Japanese imperialist aggression against Korea.

Our people cannot suppress their fury over the unjust action by the Japanese authorities. History is an objective record of past facts. This being the case, nobody should try to exaggerate or minimize historical facts arbitrarily, nor fabricate or obliterate them. It is a stark historical fact which nobody can deny that our people's 1 March movement was a sacred and patriotic uprising waged to regain national independence. Numerous publications have clearly recorded this already. By describing it as a riot, however, the Japanese persons in authority are trying to make our people's 1 March uprising appear to be a riot by mobsters but not the inevitable result of the Japanese imperialists' colonial rule of our country. Also, this is a crafty strategem designed to rationalize the Japanese imperialists' aggression in Korea and to expunge the patriotic struggle of our people who resisted the aggression.

The same is true of the draft problem. With a vast number of armed forces mobilized in the Pacific war, the Japanese imperialists forcibly drafted at gunpoint numerous youths of our country to resupply the short labor force. Is there any need to recall how those drafted youths were forced to suffer miserably, to fall and die in the Japanese imperialists' military bases, coal and other mines, and munitions plants and construction site

Now the Japanese persons in authority, by advertising such forced draft as voluntary action on the part of our people, are trying to conceal the Japanese imperialists' murderous character and to make it appear to have been supported by someone.

The same kind of strategem by the Japanese persons in authority is to be seen in their description of the use of the Japanese language. They described Japanese as being used along with the Korean language. Under the claim that Korea and Japan are of similar origin and therefore should be integrated, the Japanese imperialists forcibly practiced a policy of assimilation, forced the use of Japanese on the Koreans and employed every effort possible to block the use of our language and letters. However, they failed to rob our people of our language and letters despite the indescribable whippings and conciliatory efforts. Even under the murderous suppression of the Japanese imperialists, our people defended our superior language and letters and continued to use them. The truth is that by alleging that the Japanese language was commonly used, they are trying to conceal their crimes committed under their policy of obliterating the Korean language and forcing the use of Japanese.

It is quite intolerable that the Japanese persons in authority are trying to arbitrarily distort stark historical facts widely accepted by the world.

The fact that the Japanese authorities are trying to teach the young generations distorted history by revising textbooks stems from their intent to indoctrinate them with the militarist thought of invasion by embellishing the Japanese imperialists' aggressive policy. Through this, the Japanese persons in authority are trying to rationalize their touted theory that South Korea and Japan are in the same boat. They also are preparing ideologically to achieve thier ambition of launching another invasion of South Korea and their old dream of the Greater East Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere. The fact that they are trying to distort the history of their aggression against China and other Northeast Asian countries, not to mention the one related to our country, is proof of such intent.

History does not repeat itself, and it should not repeat itself. The distortion of history by Japanese persons in authority shows that their deeply ingrained militarist aggressiveness has not changed and that it is being revived in a new form.

If the Japanese authorities are to avoid the path of their predecessors and be exonerated for their past crimes, they should not counterfeit history but correctly describe it so their people can draw a lesson from it.

CHONG CHUN-KI AT MEETING MARKING CUBAN ANNIVERSARY

SK270444 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0340 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 27 (KCNA) -- A meeting commemorating the 29th anniversary of the July 26 armed uprising of the Cuban people was held Monday at the Central Workers House. Present there were Vice-Premier Chong Chun-ki and personages concerned and working people in the city.

Chong Sung-nam, minister of external economic affairs and chairman of the Korea-Cuba Solidarity Committee, spoke first at the meeting.

Noting that the Cuban revolutionaries in a bold operation raided the Moncada Barracks, a military stronghold of the Batista dictatorial regime, on July 26, 1953, 29 years ago, he said: This was the first torch of the armed struggle which sowed seeds of struggle among the Cuban people who had been oppressed and maltreated under the tyranny of the U.S. imperialists and the Batista dictatorial regime, their tool; this was an important event which brought about a new turn in the history of the Cuban people.

The speaker said that after the victory of the revolution on January 1, 1959, the Cuban people achieved great successes in the socialist revolution and construction under the leadership of the Cuban Communist Party headed by Comrade Fidel Castro.

Our people, he noted, highly appreciate the courageous Cuban people for defending the gains of revolution and successfully building socialism, pushing aside the imperialists' subversive machinations and sabotage under the very nose of the United States. Our people scathingly denounce the U.S. imperialists' aggressive moves and economic blockade policy against the Cuban people and express firm solidarity with the Cuban people in their just struggle for driving the U.S. troops out of Guantanamo, he said.

The Korean people, he stressed, who value friendship with the Cuban people, will further consolidate and develop friendship and solidarity between the peoples of the two countries through the common struggle against imperialism and for the victory of the socialist cause in the future, too.

Ambassador Wilfredo Rodriguez Cardenas spoke next at the meeting. He said that the Korean people have a long history of patriotic, revolutionary and heroic struggle against colonialism and imperialism and have achieved splendid successes in the struggle for building a new society under the leadership of Comrade Kim Il-song.

Noting that the Cuban people regard the staunch struggle of the Korean people for national reunification as their own, the ambassador strongly denounced the "two Koreas" plot of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges for perpetuating the division of Korea.

The Cuban people, he said, demand an immediate withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggression troops from South Korea and support the struggle of the South Korean people for the democratisation of the South Korean society. He expressed militant solidarity of the Cuban people with the Korean people's just cause.

NODONG SINMUN OBSERVES CUBAN NATIONAL DAY

SK261545 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1508 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 26 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today dedicates a signed article to the 29th anniversary of the storming of the Moncada Barracks by Cuban revolutionaries.

The article says the Korean people extend warm congratulations and greetings to the fraternal Cuban people on this anniversary. It goes on:

The storming of the Moncada Barracks was a historic event of great significance in the national liberation struggle of the Cuban people against U.S. imperialism and its lackey, the Batista dictatorial regime, and for freedom and liberation. Following the attack, the Cuban revolutionaries headed by Comrade Fidel Castro dealt telling blows at the enemy in different parts and finally overthrew the Batista dictatorial regime and achieved the victory of the Cuban revolution on January 1, 1959.

Pointing out that since the victory of the revolution, the fraternal Cuban people under the guidance of the Communist Party of Cuba led by Comrade Fidel Castro have recorded great successes in the revolution and construction, frustrating repeated subversive activities and sabotages of U.S. imperialism and its stooges, the article continues:

The Korean people sincerely rejoice as over their own over the successes made by the brotherly Cuban people in the revolution and construction.

The friendly and cooperative relations between the peoples of Korea and Cuba are growing stronger and developing with each passing day.

The Korean people denounce the U.S. imperialist manoeuvres of aggression and economic blockade against the Cuban people and express firm solidarity with them in the just struggle to force U.S. troops to withdraw from Guantanamo.

Convinced that the friendly and cooperative relations with the fraternal Cuban people will develop and strengthen in the common struggle against imperialism and for socialism, the Korean people wish them great success in the building of socialism.

NODONG SINMUN DISCUSSES ESSENCE OF POLITICS

SK222347 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2227 GMT 21 Jul 82

[Excerpt] Pyongyang, July 21 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song gave a new theoretical answer to politics in his historic policy speech "Tasks of the People's Government in Modelling the Whole of Society on the Chuche Idea." In this connection NODONG SINMUN today carries an article headlined "Politics Is Social Function To Organize and Direct People's Activities in a Coordinated Way."

The article says: What is most important in the new theory of politics propounded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song with his originality is that he clearly formulated the essence of politics. As the great leader teaches us, politics is a social function to organize and direct people's activities in a coordinated way in keeping with common class or social interests. This is a new answer to what politics means.

What is new in the elucidation of the essence of politics is that it was comprehensively formulated. This means that the question of politics is viewed in combination with the common social interests, along with class interests, and politics is regarded as one organizing and directing people's activities.

By this newly formulated essence of politica, the fundamental principle of maintenance and development of society has been clarified for the first time in history and it has been expounded that politics is a social function of fundamental significance in social development.

Basing himself on the scientific exposition of the essence of politics, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song clearly propounded its necessity. Politics is an essential requisite, above all, to the collective lives and joint activities of the people. It is also essential requisite to the maintenance and development of society.

An important idea in the theory of politics propounded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is that politics exists in any society. This analysis signifies a new discovery in the exposition of the appearance of the future communist society and the strategic and tactical policies for advancing toward it. Politics will exist even in the society where there would be no more class distinctions with the whole of it working-classized. This is a new exposition of the question of politics.

Another important point in the chuche-based exposition of politics is the idea that only when the popular masses become the master of politics, can they become the master of society.

The article stresses: The new theory of politics propounded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is evolved with man as the central factor, proceeding from the chuche idea. The great leader defined and analyzed all problems from the essence of politics to its necessity and significance with man as the central factor. Such chuche-based theory of politics is truth substantiated by the long history of social development. Herein lies the validity and vitality of the chuche-based theory of politics.

The significance of the chuche-based theory of politics propounded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song lies in that it indicates a scientific way for powerfully promoting social development and help radically enhance the function and role of the political organizations, declares the article.

CHON REITERATES CALL FOR ANTICORRUPTION EFFORT

[Text] Seoul, July 27 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan Tuesday reiterated his call for an end to social irregularities, including the abuse of power, fraud and violence.

In an address to a meeting of representatives of government regulatory agencies, Chon instructed the officials to weed out improprieties and establish firm societal discipline. "There has been tangible progress in our endeavor to construct a just society, a major objective of the Fifth Republic," said the president, who embarked on his political career with pledges to build a "democratic society where justice will prevail."

"However, there are still those in some quarters of our society who misuse their influential connections to their advantage, and violence, fraud and theft are on the rise again." Chon said strong measures were needed to address such improprieties and to insure security in the citizens' everyday life.

Acting on the presidential instruction, participants in Tuesday's meeting decided to encourage both civil servants and private citizens to report cases involving influence-peddling by high officials. They also agreed to reinforce undercover activities to eliminate fraudulent activities and unfounded rumors, and to conduct a massive crackdown on violent criminals and hoodlums at vacation resorts.

NORTH'S VIOLATIONS OF ARMISTICE AGREEMENT INCREASE

[Text] Violations of the armistice agreement by the North Korean communists increased sharply during the first half of this year, it was learned yesterday.

According to statistics compiled by the Defense Ministry on the occasion of the 29th anniversary of the signing of the armistice agreement today, North Korea violated the agreement 4,108 times during the January-June period. This figure was far greater than 3,437 violations committed by the North during all of 1981.

Major violations of the agreement by the northern soldiers include the firing of automatic weapons at defense positions of the Republic of Korea, the dispatching of armed agents into the south, and the abduction of a fishing vessel and fishermen on the high seas.

NORTH REPORTED SHORT OF FOREIGN EXCHANGE

[Text] Tokyo (YONHAP) -- The foreign exchange situation of North Korea has deteriorated as Pyongyang has requested that Japan accept a delayed payment of a six billion yen debt. The date of the payment expired at the end of June.

According to the TONGIL ILBO (UNIFICATION DAILY) published here, the foreign exchange holdings of North Korea were at rock bottom as Pyongyang appears to have spent an enormous sum of money to celebrate the birthday of its chieftain Kim Il-song on April 15.

TONG-A ILBO HITS U.S. SANCTIONS AGAINST USSR

[From the column "Gibberish"]

[Excerpts] Recent U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union can be termed a combination of the carrot and stick. While brandishing the stick in strengthening economic sanctions against Soviet intervention in Poland's domestic affairs, putting an end to Western countries' exports of pipeline equipment to the Soviet Union and pressuring Japan to halt its Sakhalin oil and natural gas drilling project, the United States is offering the carrot of negotiations for grain exports at the Geneva conference for arms reductions.

What matters is that by using the stick, the United States not only hurts the Soviet Union but also its Western allies. This brings to mind Napoleon, who in 1806, following his conquest of the European continent, issued a royal decree called the Berlin royal decree to bring Great Britain to its knees. As a result, chaos erupted in Europe and Napoleon endured strong opposition.

Essentially, today, when the world is polarized, sanctions are unlikely to have any effects. The Carter administration imposed sanctions on grain exports to the Soviet Union, but Argentina -- one of the U.S. allies -- continued to export grain to the Soviet Union. The economic sanctions imposed against Cuba -- a country not far from the United States -- failed.

Efforts to catch rats should not end up breaking jars.

HANGUK ILBO SAYS JAPANESE DIPLOMACY 'DUPLICITOUS'

SK261129 Seoul HANGUK ILBO in Korean 25 Jul 82 p 2

[Article by reporter Yi Chae-mu: "Duplicity of Japanese Diplomacy"]

[Text] A certain foreign ambassador, who worked in Japan for a long time, once said: In reviewing Japanese diplomacy, in particular its way of negotiating with foreign countries, one rarely observes genuine principles, good faith or courtesy. Only when it has had a weak point has it been faithful to principles. This shows that Japanese diplomacy hides duplicity and falsity with smiles and pretentious kindness.

Japan has seldom discussed and reached agreement on an issue in a sincere manner even with friendly nations. It is true that, while running amok in seeking profits like a business firm, Japan has shown a lukewarm attitude or stinginess toward negotiations it had to participate in.

The best example is the trade war between the United States and Japan. A few years ago, when public opinion in the United States was critical of the mass entry of Japanese cars into the United States and the serious trade deficit between the two countries, Japan gave the impression that it would immediately resolve the problem by sending a special envoy and a survey team. However, it has only procrastinated, rectifying nothing.

We are disappointed that such duplicity in Japanese diplomacy has again been unveiled in the course of negotiating the economic cooperation issue. The economic cooperation issue raised by the Korean request for $6 billion in loans has been pending for almost a year and 4 months due to Japanese insincerity, a haughty attitude and ignorance about the issue. After twists and turns, an atmosphere for solving economic cooperation issue was apparently created because of favorable Japanese reaction to Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok's visit to Japan, the Korean side's reduction of the total amount of loans and its suggestion of new conditions for loans and of new interest terms. Crying that the time had come when the economic cooperation issue could be solved, Japan babbled that it would show sincerity in its counterproposal. However, the Japanese counterproposal, conveyed by its Councillor Koto on 23 July, struck dumb the concerned Foreign Ministry officials and even made them indignant.

Maintaining the framework of Japan's original proposal -- $1.5 billion in overseas development assistance [ODA] loans and $2.5 billion in Japanese Export-Import Bank loans -- which was conveyed at the end of last April by the Assistant Minister Yanagiya, the Japanese side only slightly altered the proposal's contents by allowing domestic capital to be appropriated for the loans within the limits of 30 percent of ODA loans and 15 percent of Export-Import Bank loans amounting to $825 million and by offering commodity loans in bank loans from part of the Export-Import Bank fund. This insincere attitude makes us wonder if the Japanese side has any intention of negotiating the issue or if it wants the Korean side to give up the request.

When Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok visited Japan, influential people in Japanese political circles promised to make their best efforts on the issue, praising Minister Yi's visit as courageous and Minister Yi as sensible. After his return home Minister Yi seemed to expect a favorable reply from Japan, but when the concerned individuals received the reply, they were indignant over betrayal.

Not even mentioning the contents of the reply, Japan showed rudeness by violating custom in the way the reply was conveyed. Japan had sent its ambassador in Korea when the economic cooperation issue was involved. This time, however, it sent a Japanese councillor to the Korean Foreign Ministry even though it was the Japanese reply to our counterproposal. Furthermore, the Japanese side added the appeals of its ministries to the reply by making the director of the Asian Bureau of the Japanese Foreign Affairs Ministry, who was visiting Korea to participate in a Korea-Japan narcotics meeting, accompany its councillor.

The Korean Foreign Ministry had problems shaping its attitude for receiving the reply. Since the consultation was working level, the Foreign Ministry should reflect on its poor preparations for countering the bearing of the reply by a councillor-level diplomat. When they were asked for their comment on the economic cooperation issue, they reacted coolly, unlike the past, replying that they had no comment.

If the Japanese persist in the same approach to the issue they are using at this moment, one year and 4 months after the issue was raised, they will not avoid criticism that it is nothing but the business-like approach of a small-minded person.

We know that the traditional diplomatic approach of Japan is to sound out an opposite side with a tantalizing amount of concession, which may be beneficial in negotiations, but will hurt the opposite side's heart. Since economic cooperation is not charity, but a loan, our side should deal with this issue in a resolute manner.

FURTHER REACTION TO JAPANESE TEXTBOOK ISSUE

Government Countermeasures

[Text] The government is studying various measures against the distortion of historical facts in newly authorized Japanese high school history textbooks concerning the Japanese invasion and annexation of Korea and "controversial remarks" by two Japanese ministers justifying the distortion.

Under this measure, acting Prime Minister Kim Sang-hyop received briefings from relevant officials and discussed appropriate countermeasures. Officials attending the Capitol meeting were Minister of Foreign Affairs Yi Pom-sok, Minister of Education Yi Kyu-ho and Vice Minister of Culture and Information Ho Mun-to. Details of the meeting were not known. The acting premier and relevant ministers are expected to further discuss the matter during the regular cabinet meeting today.

According to reports from Tokyo, Yukiyasu Matsuno, state minister in charge of national land, claimed Saturday that making issue of the new Japanese history textbooks by Korea is an "outright interference with Japanese internal affairs" and that it is wrong for Korean textbooks to describe the Japanese annexation of Korea as "an invasion by Japan." Japanese Ministry of Education Heiji Ogawa made similar remarks earlier in the week.

Meanwhile a high-ranking Foreign Ministry official disclosed the government is watching the Japanese Government's stance on the textbook issue "with great concern." Saying that the government has not taken any concrete measures yet, he criticized Matsuno's claim. The government, he said, has received reports from the Korean Embassy in Tokyo on the contents of the Japanese history textbooks and remarks made by Japanese officials on the issue. With the completion of analyzing them, he said, the government will take appropriate measures.

However, he made it clear that the government will not link the textbook issue to the ongoing negotiations over the Korean request for economic cooperation from Japan, saying they are separate issues. He added he does not regard it as proper to call in Japanese Amb. Toshikazu Maeda "at this stage" to lodge a protest to the Tokyo government.

Early in the day, the ministry delivered possible diplomatic measures concerning the contents of the Japanese history books at a senior officials' conference. First Assistant Minister of Foreign Affairs Kong No-myong called at the ruling Democratic Justice Party to brief on the embassy reports concerning distorted historical facts and controversial remarks made by Japanese officials. Director General of Information and Cultural Affairs Kim Pyong-yon and Director General of Asian Affairs Choe Tong-chin visited the Democratic Korea Party and the Korean National Party respectively.

'Distorted' Facts Noted

SK270323 Seoul YONHAP in English 0310 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Excerpt] Seoul, July 27 (YONHAP) -- South Korean historians have classified the controversial historical facts which have allegedly been distorted in a new edition of a Japanese high school textbook amid heated criticism from Korean society. The alleged falsifications and senior Japanese officials' remarks in defense of them are now under close examination by the South Korean Government for possible diplomatic action.

The historians said the references to Japan's invasion and annexation of Korea, as well as its colonial rule over Korea from 1910 until 1945, were "distorted" in the new Japanese textbook.

They said the previous edition stated "Japan created a collision of its ship, 'Unyang-Ho' in 1875, and under the excuse of this incident, Japan forced Korea to open its ports." The new edition, however, says "the collision took place because of Korea's bombardment of the Japanese ship and the collision eventually made Korea open its ports."

In the old text, the Japanese annexation of Korea in 1910, following the "protectorate treaty" of 1905, was described as Japan "invaded" Korea, but in the new edition, the word "invaded" has been replaced by advanced." In addition, the Koreans' nationwide independence movement of March 1, 1919, previously described as "a resistance for independence," is now referred to as "a riot."

Regarding the Japanese colonial government's eight-year land survey which began in 1919, empowering the Japanese to assume ownership of virtually all land in Korea, the new edition has substituted the previous expression reading "the Japanese imperialists exploited lands of Koreans" with "the Koreans lost their right for land."

In the course of its invasion of China in 1937, the Japanese supressed religious freedom in colonial Korea and required compulsory worship at Japanese Shinto shrines.

In the previous edition, this act was described as "Koreans were forced to worship at the Shinto shrines," but in the new version, this has been changed to "Koreans were encouraged to worship at Shinto shrines."

In 1938, the Japanese colonial government banned the teaching of the Korean language, and in 1941, the curriculum of Japanese schools was imposed on Korean schools. By 1943, the Korean language was not taught in primary schools at all. The textbook in question has rephrased the earlier version of "the use of the Korean language was banned and the use of the Japanese language was forced" with "the Korean and Japanese languages were used simultaneously." During the same period, the Japanese forced Koreans to adopt Japanese names. The new text has replaced the work "forced" with "encouraged."

According to the older edition, many Koreans were "forcibly drafted" into the Japanese army or work force, including young women for the "entertainment" of Japanese soldiers, particularly during World War II. In the new school book, the expression "forcibly drafted" has been changed to "mobilized." Historians said the draft of Korean laborers began in 1939, and statistics up to Aug. 15, 1945, showed that 4,146,098 were assigned in Korea and 1,259,933 in Japan. Most Korean workers were put into coal mines, and others were scattered throughout South Pacific islands, Southeast Asia and Sakhalin, an area now under Soviet control, where some of them remain to this day.

KOREA HERALD Editorial

[Editorial: "Japan's View of History"]

[Text] The Japanese attempt to doctor the critical references in school textbooks to the country's prewar militarist policy toward its Asian neighbors, as well as its conduct of war, is a matter of serious concern -- not only for the parties directly affected. As the projected changes focus on the most critical issues on the seamy side of the imperialist Japan, they amount to a gross falsification of history.

Korea and China are two immediate and outright victims of the Tokyo government's attempt to rewrite history. But consequences of the textbook changes will be much broader and far-reaching, because what truly matters is the notion behind the alteration rather than the change itself.

The new textbooks will hoodwink the growing generation in Japan on the mistakes their preceding generation committed in foreign relations. The March 1, 1919 independence movement of Korea is described as a "riot" which the Japanese authorities quelled by using force. Japan's invasion of China in the 1930's was an "advance." The Japanese Education Ministry officials responsible for the textbook compilation seem to theorize that the Japanese annexation of Korea in 1910 was carried out under "agreement." They would reason therefore that the subsequent Japanese administration in Korea is not to be viewed as a forcible imposition. What a distortion of facts!

As a rule, few people willingly make public their mistakes. But when it comes to the question of historical facts and responsibility, one's like or dislike has -- and should be given -- little sway as long as humanity is determined to do better by learning lessions from history. The unfortunate period in past Korea-Japan relations has to be given due assessment by both sides in order to orient thier future ties in a mutually desirable direction. As a matter of fact, the normalization of relations between the two countries in the mid-1960's was based on such a view of history.

What underlies the modification of historical facts is quite worrisome because it seems to reflect the thought of responsible officials of the Japanese Government.

What is baffling, meantime, is the report that the education minister turned a cold shoulder to protests against the textbook change as an act of intervening in Japan's internal affairs. We hope either that he was misquoted or, at worst, that his view is not shared by a majority of Japanese.

The Japanese authorities will do well to think about effects of the change of historical facts on the future relations between Korea and Japan to be shaped by today's young generation. Amicable cooperation will be hard to expect between one that is either misled about or ignorant of its past disgrace and the other that is becoming forgiving, if not forgetful, of the former's past. The changes of textbooks is even suggestive of a change of course in postwar Japan. Why Japan has come to rewrite the textbooks after all those reflective postwar years cannot but pose an ominous question to its neighbor countries.

BUDGET DEFICITS MAY DELAY MAJOR PROJECTS

[Text] Government budget squeezes may take a heavy toll in large-scale national projects including the construction of nuclear power plants, multipurpose dams and the subway network in the metropolitan Seoul next year. Officials at the Economic Planning Board [EPB] said yesterday that the budget deficits are feared to be widened next year as revenues are slow to come, putting strains on the scale of fiscal 1983 national budget.

According to the officials, the government may further delay the start of the construction of nuclear power plants Nos. 11 and 12 to 1984 and scrap the plan to establish a 19.8-billion-won special teacher's college because of shortages of funds. Originally, the state-operated Korea Electric Power Corp. (KEPCO) planned to select the foreign supplier of the atomic reactors of Nos. 11 and 12 nuclear power plants this year.

The liquefied natural gas (LNG) terminal project may also be affected by budget strains, said the officials, adding that the government is unlikely to channel substantial amounts of money into the multibillion won project next year. KEPCO, which is in charge of the project, nonetheless, is scheduled to pick the foreign supplier of major equipment to be used for the construction of the terminal next month. French and Japanese firms are favored to win the contract.

The fund for the construction of coal ports at Inchon and Mokpo may be slashed from 44 billion won to 20 billion won or so.

EPB officials also expected that the government may:

-- Delay the construction of handball gyms in Anyang and Songnam cities which require a total outlay of 4 billion won.

-- Scrap a large portion of Seoul's 45.6-billion won urban renewal projects.

-- Reconsider the plan to invest 200 billion won in the state-run Korea Development Bank.

Officials of the EPB and the government party are reportedly at odds about the subway construction program in Seoul. Reports had it that the budget officials favor a sharp cut in the subway building budget while Democratic Justice Party policymakers are opposed to it.

PARTY, GOVERNMENT MESSAGE MARKS SRV WAR HEROES DAY

[Text] Phnom Penh, 26 Jul (SPK) -- The party and government of Kampuchea today sent a message to the families of Vietnamese fallen, disabled and wounded combatants on the occasion of the War Invalids and Heroes Day (27 July).

The People's Armed Forces of Vietnam, the message said, have been fulfilling their noble task of proletarian internationalism in our fatherland since the liberation of the Kampuchean people on 7 January 1979. The fraternal Vietnamese people have sent their best sons and daughters to fight shoulder to shoulder with the Kampuchean people against the common enemy, Beijing expansionsism, U.S. imperialism and other reactionaries in defense of national independence and for the reconstruction of a solid Kampuchea, contributing to the defense of peace in Indochina and southeast Asia. You have preserved the tradition of solidarity between our two nations which is flourishing more than ever.

The Kampuchean people will never forget these sublime honors, selflessness or sacrifices. We are indignant at the slanders and hostilities of the enemies of all stripes aimed at splitting the sacred militant solidarity of our two peoples. We would like to share weal and woe with the Vietnam Communist Party and the families of the combatants who died for the fatherland and follow these good examples, imbued with noble proletarian internationalism, of our Vietnamese comrades-in-arms.

Our party and people as a whole express their gratitude to the heroic combatants of Vietnam and inscribe their honors and contributions in our annals.

AAPSO MESSAGE TO HUN SEN SUPPORTS SRV PULLOUT

BK240924 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1429 GMT 23 Jul 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 23 Jul (SPK) — AAPSO completely supports the positive proposals of the sixth conference of the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao foreign ministers and highly praises Vietnam's good will reflected in its decision to partially withdraw its troops from Kampuchea.

In a message recently sent to Hun Sen, minister of foreign affairs, the AAPSO Permanent Secretariat said that the proposal to convene an international conference on Southeast Asia will be a positive step forward for stability, security and peace in the region.

AAPSO believes that new conspiracies led by imperialism (?and reactionaries) in the formation of the so-called "tripartite coalition" pose the most serious dangers and are directed at destabilizing Kampuchea and restoring the Pol Pot genocidal regime. AAPSO reaffirms its firm solidarity with the People's Republic of Kampuchea and commits itself to mobilizing the Afro-Asian peoples' support for the Indochinese peoples' struggle in the construction and the defense of their countries and to promote regional peace.

INDUSTRY MINISTRY WELCOMES FOREIGN MINISTERS MEETING

BK241146 [Editorial Report] Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian at 1300 GMT on 23 July carries a 22-minute report with portions recorded on a meeting organized by the Ministry of Industry in Phnom Penh on 23 July to welcome the sixth Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos foreign ministers conference.

The announcer begins his report by noting: "Starting at 0730, more than 5,000 cadres, employees and workers of various factories in Phnom Penh unanimously organized a solemn meeting to welcome the sixth Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos foreign ministers conference which was held in Ho Chi Minh City from 6-7 July 1982.

"Present in the presidium were Comrade Chan Ven, secretary general of the Council of State and chairman of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association; Comrade Meas Samnang, ministry of industry; Comrade Min Khin, deputy secretary general of the KUFNCD National Council; and Comrade Mok Mareth, vice chairman of the Phnom Penh Municipal People's Revolutionary Committee."

After the playing of the national anthem, the announcer presents the recorded speech made by Comrade Meas Samnang. The minister of industry begins his speech by praising the brilliant successes scored by the Kampuchean revolution during the past more than 3 years after liberation from the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan genocidal regime.

After describing various defeats of the Pol Pot clique in the country and its isolation on the international scene, Comrade Meas Samnang continues: "Faced with this hopeless impasse, the Beijing Chinese expansionists, the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries forced Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan -- Khmer reactionaries and traitors to their nation and people -- to unite with each other to form the so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea [CGDK] in order to maintain its seat at the United Nations. All the Kampuchean people are neither alarmed nor afraid of this so-called tripartite coalition government because they are well aware that it is really only a farce to hide the face of the genocidal clique."

He then states: "The Kampuchean revolution has a foreign policy of correctly implementing the stand of peaceful coexistence, particularly with various Southeast Asian countries. The People's Republic of Kampuchea has also the good will to maintain good relations with Thailand. This had been clearly emphasized in joint communiques of the past five foreign ministers conferences of the three countries -- Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos. But the Bangkok powerholders have unrealistically and naively implemented a policy which follows in the wake of Beijing and Washington and rejected all reasonable solutions for the PRK.

"Recently, the sixth Vietnam-Laos-Kampuchea foreign ministers conference, which ended successfully on 7 July 1982 in Ho Chi Minh City, clearly presented the realistic and correct stand of good will of the three countries to peacefully solve various (?problems) and to restore peace in the Southeast Asian region. The sixth conference reiterated that the Vietnamese troops' presence in Kampuchea was not aimed at threatening Thai security, but was directed at fulfilling the internationalist proletarian duties to liberate the Kampuchean people from the genocidal danger.

"When there is a request from the Kampuchean people and if Kampuchea is not threatened by the enemy, the Vietnamese troops will be withdrawn to their country."

The industry minister finally praises all the proposals made by the foreign ministers conference as reasonable, just and realistic. He notes that the entire party, people and army are determined to strengthen their solidarity and unity under the leadership of the KPRP. The two banners of genuine patriotism and proletarian internationalist solidarity have to be upheld, and the strategic bonds of solidarity between Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos must also be strengthened.

After Meas Samnang's 10-minute speech, the announcer says various representatives of workers in heavy, light, chemical, and food industries spoke at the meeting and expressed their determination to completely support the proposals made in the communique of the Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos foreign ministers conference. They also categorically rejected the so-called CGDK.

The recorded speeches of a light industry workers' representative and a representative of the meeting are then presented.

The announcer says the ceremony concluded at 0900 "in a joyful and sincere atmosphere full of proletarian spirit."

DEFENSE MINISTRY AWARDS MEDAL TO SRV DIVISION

[Text] On the afternoon of 20 July 1982, Brig Gen Ki Thoumphala, deputy chief of the Army Political Department, on behalf of the LPDR National Defense Ministry, bestowed the second-class medal of freedom on the neighborly Vietnamese construction volunteers' division which has worked to assist Laos. The award ceremony was formally held at the office of the rear construction organization of Xieng Khouang Province.

Attending the ceremony on the Lao side in addition to Brig Gen Ki Thoumphala were Brig Gen Padit Thiangtham, staff director of the National Defense Ministry; Khoun Chandeng, vice minister of foreign affairs; Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, vice minister of communications, public works and transportation; the chief of the rear construction organization; and representatives of the party committee Secretariat and of the party Military Committee attached to the rear construction organization of Xieng Khouang Province.

Attending on the Vietnamese side were Colonel (Nguyen Duc Duy) chief of the Logistics Department of the Vietnamese People's Army and representatives of the National Defense Ministry; Nguyen Xuan, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the SRV to Laos; Colonel (Thuy), military attache of the SRV to Laos; and (Quy), commander of the construction volunteers' division. Also attending were officers and men concerned of both the Lao and Vietnamese sides.

The formal ceremony began with the playing of the Lao and Vietnamese national anthems. A representatives of the organizing committee made an opening speech reporting the purpose of the ceremony. Brig Gen Ki Thoumphala, deputy chief of the Army Political Department, then read on behalf of the National Defense Ministry the decree of the LPDR president awarding the second-class medal of freedom to the neighborly Vietnamese construction volunteers' division aiding Laos. He wholeheartedly hailed and expressed profound gratitude to the Vietnamese division for helpding build the housing projects of the rear construction organization of Xieng Khouang. The projects included the LPLA combined forces' training school and a brick factory.

Brig Gen Ki Thoumphala, in his speech at the awards ceremony, particularly appraised the spirit of special solidarity between the armies and peoples of Laos and Vietnam, and expressed his wish for the daily enhancement of this spirit. Brig Gen Ki Thoumphala's speech was followed by a speech in response delivered by Colonel (Nguyen Duc Duy), chief of the Logistics Department of the Vietnamese People's Army and representative of the SRV National Defense Ministry, who expressed thanks to the party, government, National Defense Ministry and people of various nationalities of Laos for their attention to building, expanding and strengthening the traditional solidarity between fraternal Laos and Vietnam.

The representative of the Xieng Khouang Provincial Party Committee then took the floor and expressed profound gratitude to the cadres and combatants for concentrating their energies on the building of the housing projects which have been completed in accordance with the schedule. Nguyen Xuan, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the SRV to Laos, then presented bouquets of flowers to the cadres and combatants of the construction volunteers' division to commend them for their preseverance in overcoming difficulties and obstacles and fulfilling the task.

It was also reported that before attending the ceremony, the Lao and the Vietnamese delegations reviewed the guard of honor and shook hands with officers and men of the division in a warm atmosphere. After the cermeony, they also attended a banquet organized in their honor by the division together with the rear construction organization of Xieng Khouang.

ROAD BUILT WITH SRV ASSISTANCE FORMALLY HANDED OVER

BK240138 Vientiane KPL in English 0909 GMT 24 Jul 82

[Text] Vientiane, July 24 (OANA-KPL) -- A hand-over ceremony of Route No 7 linking Phansavan District and Nam Kan village of Xieng Khouang Province, was officially organized on July 21. This route, which is 130 km long, was constructed with cooperation and assistance from the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, in conformity with the agreement signed between the governments of the two countries in 1976.

Present at the hand-over ceremony were Oudom Khatthi-Gna, party Central Committee member, secretary of Sieng Khouang provincial party committee; Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, deputy minister of communications, public works and transport; Khoun Chandeng, deputy minister for foreign affairs, along with members of the provincial Administrative Committee. Le Nam Hai, deputy minister of communications and transport of the SRV, and Nguyen Xuan, Vietnam's ambassador to Laos, were also present at the ceremony.

On this occasion, Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani and Le Nam Hai hailed the efforts of the road-construction units of Vietnam in overcoming difficulties -- hence leading to the completion of Route No 7. The two personalities also stressed on the friendship relations and cooperation, as well as on the special combative alliance between Laos and Vietnam.

At the end of the ceremony, 10 first level of Victorious Itsela orders, 5 second-level of Victorious Itsala orders, 24 victorious friendship medals, and 4 provincial congratulatory certificates were presented to the Vietnamese assisting teams and its workers.

SRV, PRK PUBLIC HEALTH DELEGATIONS ARRIVE

BK251426 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 25 Jul 82

[Text] Public Health Ministry delegations of the SRV, lead by Public Health Minister Professor Dang Hoi Xuan, and of the PRK, led by Public Health Minister Dr Yit Kimseng, arrived in Vientiane on the afternoon of 24 July to attend a conference of public health ministers of the three countries of Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea. The conference will be held in Vientiane from 26 to 28 July.

The delegations were welcomed upon their arrival at Wattai Airport by Acting Public Health Minister Professor Vannalet Latsapho and many high-ranking cadres concerned. Also on hand to greet the delegations at the airport on this occasion were Nguyen Xuan and Neou Samom, respectively ambassadors extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the SRV and the PRK to Laos.

TRANSPORT PROTOCOL WITH USSR SIGNED

[Text] On the morning of 17 July, a ceremony was held at the office of the Ministry of Communications, Public Works and Transportation to sign a protocol in accordance with the technical and economic agreement signed between the Lao and Soviet governments on 1 December 1980. The cooperation protocol deals with various aid materials -- heavy transport and moving equipment -- which the Soviet Government will give to the LPDR. The equipment -- worth 1,220,655 rubles -- will be given to the Lao Transit Transport Company for use in transporting and moving Soviet goods donated to Laos.

The protocol was signed for Laos by Comrade Bouasi Lovansai, director of the Lao Transit Transport Company, and for the Soviet Union by Comrade Sizov, economic counselor of the Soviet Embassy in Laos. The signing took place in the presence of Comrade Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, deputy minister of communications, public health and transportation, and a number of senior Lao and Soviet officials.

NATION REVIEW VIEWS THACH'S SOUTHEAST ASIA TOUR

[Editorial: "Thach Can Come to Grips With Reality Here"]

[Text] Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has been carefully orchestrating his swing through this part of Southeast Asia and we hope he will play his finale in Bangkok by coming up with some sensible propositions when the arrives tomorrow. He took a hard and pugnacious line while in Singapore, played it calm while in Rangoon because even Thach must realize that Burma is one of the very few truly nonaligned nations in this world, and then in Kuala Lumpur he reverted to the hard line again although using milder words than those in Singapore.

Thach knows, and we know, that all these various visits were geared towards his visit here and talks with the Thai authorities. The bone of contention is, of course, Kampuchea which is geographically sandwiched between Vietnam and Thailand.

From the time the communists took over all the three countries of Indochina in 1975, the five ASEAN nations coordinated their policies and their unity was strengthened further after the Vietnamese invasion of Thailand. Even Thach must realize that if he, by cajoling or by threatening, can drive a wedge between Thailand and her ASEAN partners, it is just a pipe dream.

He has accused ASEAN of interfering in the internal affairs of Kampuchea by helping the formation of a coalition government. But those who are actually trying to get rid of foreign interference in Vietnam are Kampucheans -- President Norodom Sihanouk, Vice President Khieu Samphan and Prime Minister Son Sann -- not Thais or those from any other ASEAN country. It has been Vietnam, and only Vietnam, that has indulged in and is indulging in armed interference in Kampuchea. When that is pointed out then he switches his approach to say that it is because of the "Chinese threat."

He also says that Vietnam is pulling out troops from Kampuchea but at the same time says that Vietnam is going to smash the troops of the coalition government and give them "hot pursuit" into Thai territory. Does Thach think he is talking to kindergarten children who will swallow this whole range of inconsistencies?

Thach knows very well that Thailand, being the frontline state, is crucial to take into whatever sinister calculations that have been worked out by Hanoi and Moscow and he can achieve must by sitting down in Bangkok and discussing sensibly the stands taken by Hanoi and ASEAN and trying to find points which can open up a dialogue and explore further avenues to approach the problem. He will be wasting his time if he thinks he can bamboozle the Thai authorities with his spurious logic and non sequiturs. However, we are confident that Thach is sufficiently well-schooled in diplomatic niceties to issue threats to Thailand as he did from Singapore. [sentence as published]

There are several common grounds for Thach to base his discussions while in Bangkok -- there are the UN General Assembly resolutions, the International Conference on Kampuchea resolutions, several statements made in Ho Chi Minh City, by ASEAN, by the United States, by the Soviet Union and China. There is no dearth of subject matter to be discussed about Kampuchea.

Whenever he is at the losing end of an argument, and very often at press conferences, Thach has fallen back on the Chinese threat. That, for him, has been the fallback position but he must realize that if there is a Chinese threat -- possibly there is one because China did teach the "first lesson" -- the place to take up the matter is Beijing and not ASEAN capitals.

Thach must know that there could be a divergence of opinion between China and ASEAN in finding a solution to the Kampuchean problem. China goes along with ASEAN in our search for a political solution but she has not given up her own line of thinking, of "bleeding Vietnam white".

It is the same as Thach saying that the situation in Kampuchea is irreversible -- he did quibble by saying that the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea is reversible without saying that if the Vietnamese troops leave the Phnom Penh regime will crumble the next day.

ASEAN does not subscribe to Vietnam being bled white nor to the situation in Kampuchea being irreversible. It stands by several international resolutions that "foreign troops" should leave Kampuchea and that the Kampuchean people set up their own government. It is as simple as that.

PREM SEEKS SENATE SUPPORT FOR BUDGET BILL

[Text] The government will have to rely heavily on Senate support to get the 1983 budget bill through Parliament which debates it on Wednesday and Thursday.

Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon on Friday met about 100 senators at the Supreme Command headquarters and reportedly asked them to attend the debate and back the government on the bill. "I will feel confident when I sit on the bench and see all of you attending the session," a source quoted the prime minister as saying.

A parliamentary source said the government is worried that elected MPS, both from the pro-government and opposition factions, might attempt to block the budget bill if the Senate refuses to amend the Constitution seeking a multiple-constituency and party-voting system in the next general election. To prevent some pro-government MPS from "betraying" the government by voting against the bill, the source said a group of government MPs would submit a motion to the Parliament seeking an open vote on the budget bill. "With an open vote, it will be known who votes for or against the bill," he noted.

The source added that several MPs were dismayed with the multiple-constituency system and would like Parliament to be dissolved so that an election can be held before it comes into effect. Through Deputy Prime Minister Pramarn Adireksan, elected MPs have already made their views known to Senate leaders regarding the Constitution amendment.

Meanwhile Pol Maj Gen Sa-Nga Kittikhachon, a senior member of the National Democracy Party, said yesterday that he was certain the budget bill would be approved. But, he said, the bill will be heavily criticised, especially on tax collection which is likely to fall short of next year's target of 127,865 million baht. He added that he was against a move by several MPs pressing for the change of the electoral system as stipulated in Articles 90 and 91 of the Constitution. If the charter is to be amended, other undemocratic practices should also be rectified, he said.

FOURTH ARMY LAUNCHES NEW CAMPAIGN IN SOUTH

[Text] The Fourth Army Region has launched a new anti-communist campaign with the aim of destroying all major bases of the insurgents in the southern provinces of Surat Thani, Chumphon and Ranong.

Chief of the Fourth Army Region's information section said yesterday that the objective of the new drive, code-named "Tai Rom Yen-12 Phase 3", is to seize and destory insurgent strongholds in Khirirat Nikhom, Phanom and Tha Chana Districts of Surat Thani, in Ramae and Lang Suan Districts of Chumphon and in Tha To subdistrict of Ranong.

When the Phase 3 operation is completed, the communists will have no major bases left in the south "except some small camps and hideouts", chief of the information section Col Thammarak Itsarangkun Na Ayutthaya told a press conference held at a military base in Surat Thani yesterday. Col Thammarak said the drive began last weekend with separate attacks by government forces against three communist camps in Chumphon, Ranong and Surat Thani.

According to Col Thammarak, the government forces successfully seized and destroyed all the three camps. Four insurgents were also captured alive.

On Saturday at 9 p.m. government troops under the command of Lt-Col Sathon Suwansi approached a communist camp in an area adjoining Ramae District of Chumphon and Tha To subdistrict of Ranong, Col Thammarak disclosed. The forces attacked the Fong Klan camp about 3 p.m. on Sunday and after 30 minutes of fighting were able to overrun the camp and capture the camp leader identified as Samniang Chaiphan or Comrade Wut.

Meanwhile, another unit of the government forces under the command of Lt-Col Lap Butprayun attacked Camp 514 in Phanom District of Surat Thani and was able to seize the camp before dawn.

On Sunday another insurgent camp in Nong Ya Plong, Ban Ta Khun in Surat Thani also fell after an attack by a unit of government forces led by Lt-Sol Samrong Pinglang, according to Col Thammarak.

AFP REPORTS ON LAO REFUGEES IN NORTHEAST

BK270215 Hong Kong AFP in English 0156 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Ubon Ratchathani, northeastern Thailand, July 27 (AFP) -- Like most of the other 11,000-plus men, women and children in this northeastern refugee camp, Khamlai Khamphoui and her family have reached the end of the line. With an ever-dwindling chance of resettlement in a third country, the only way they can go is back.

Used as an ammunition dump during the Vietnam war, the Ubon Ratchathani camp is home for 11,215 Lao people. Some of them have been here seven years and some for only a few months. "They are faced with the question of resettlement or repatriation, and more and more are resigning themselves [words indistinct] the country from which they fled," one official said.

Including a team from the Japanese Volunteer Centre, there are about 40 aid workers in the camp, operated jointly by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and the Thai Ministry of Interior. Later this week, about 3,000 people are to be moved from Ubon Ratchathani to Nakhon Phanom to be processed for resettlement in third countries.

"There is no firm promise of their being taken, but it is a step forward,"one official said. "Others who see no chance of resettlement have chosed to return." Over the past two years, nearly 400 Lao people from the camp have chosen to be repatriated. UNHCR officials in Bangkok say that reports from their office in Vientiane show that the returnees have no problems with the Lao authorities and are allowed to go back to their homes to carry on their lives. But many will not return as long as the Vietnamese are in Laos.

Khamlai is one. She, her husband and their three children, one of whom was born in the camp, have been in Ubon Ratchathani for nearly three years. Her husband was a corporal in the army, and together with a group of 40 or 50 desperate Laos, paid an agent to organise their flight from southern Laos. Clutching her baby son, she said: "I do not know what we will do, but we will never go back."

The camp is due to be closed at the end of the year. "We don't know yet what will happen, but possibly these people could be sent to another camp," one official said. Camp workers say that the Thai Army has been instructed to keep Lao people from crossing into Thailand, using force if necessary.

"In spite of this we get between 10 and 20 trickling in each week," said one. "People are also slipping in at night. I don't know how many, but I cannot say zero."

Although there are no teaching facilities for the more than 3,000 children under 11 years old in the camp, the volunteers run an auto repair school, a weaving class, a library and are starting a soap-making factory. "Basically we are training people who will return to Laos with these skills," one worker said. "About 70 percent of the camp population is undecided as to what to do, but they will probably go back."

LAOS REVOKES THAI FIRM'S LOGGING CONCESSION

[By Phonphimon Akrachalanon]

[Text] The Laotian Government has revoked a multi-million-baht logging concession granted earlier to a Thai firm after the latter failed to deposit a U.S. $300,000 (about 7 million baht) as guarantee within a specified period.

An informed source in the Commerce Ministry said that Vientiane had instead invited another Thai company to take over the deal. The new company, which was not identified by the source, was given three months to conduct a survey on the trees submerged in the reservoir of the Nam Ngum dam of Laos.

The source said the Laotian Government decided to revoke the logging concession given to Udon Thai Samanmit Ltd partnership because of its failure to deposit the U.S. $300,000 guarantee within 30 days after the contract was signed earlier this year. The company reportedly used a little-known bank in Hong Kong to serve as the guarantor, prompting the Laotian Government to withdraw the concession.

Commerical counsellor of the Thai Embassy in Vientiane Worathep Suphadun said the concession will last five years and the concessionaire will have to deposit a guarantee of U.S. $300,000 within 30 days after signing the contract. The concessionaire is required to pay for the logs 55 percent of the export price of Laotian timber. It has been estimated that the concession will cover up to 100,000 million cubic metres of timber. Worathep quoted a report by experts as showing that the volume of the logs submerged in the dam for the past seven years is around 400,000 million cubic metres.

The source said Vientiane still prefers to have Thailand handle the deal and has already commissioned an unidentified Thai firm to conduct a survey to be completed in three months beginning July.

The Thai commercial counsellor said Thai timber businessmen had experienced problems in dealing with Laos. They often charged that Laotian authorities had imposed restrictions and complicated rules which disrupted their business deals. "But on the other hand, the Laotians accused Thai businessmen of harbouring ill intention toward their country and being unscrupulous," he said. A few firms from Japan and Hong Kong have reportedly tried to vie for the controversial logging concession but Vientiane still wants Thailand to handle it.

Commerce Minister Punmi Punnasi will lead a 14-man delegation to visit Laos between August 11-13 to promote trade relations between the two countries. Among the major topics to be discussed is the rampant cross-border smuggling, which has partly affected the trade contracts signed by the two countries when a Thai trade delegation visited Vientiane on March 8-11 this year. The contracts signed then were for Thailand to export 2,500 bicycles, 2,200 sets of car tyres, 4,000 truck tyres, 2,500 dozens of T-shirts and construction materials to Laos. But the exporters have found it difficult to compete with deals made through smuggling, thus, their trade had not been encouraging.

KHUN SA FORCES SEIZE 'MAJOR' WNA STRONGHOLD

BK270209 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 27 Jul 82 pp 1, 3

[By Subin Khuankhaeo]

[Text] Chiang Mai -- An 800-man force from the Shan United Army (SUA), assisted by 200 Kuomintang and Lahu (Muser) hilltribesmen, seized a major stronghold of the leftist Wa National Army (WNA) in a fierce battle near the Thai-Burmese border here over the weekend. The seizure followed a month-long sporadic fighting between the SUA and the WNA for control over the opium trail on the Burmese side of Doi Lang mountain near Mae Ai District.

A Thai Border Patrol Police [BPP] source quoted hilltribes people who fled into Thailand as saying that at least 10 men were killed and many more were wounded. More than 20 wounded guerrillas from both sides later sought treatment at Fang District Hospital and those seriously injured were sent to Suan Dok Hospital in Chiang Mai's Muang District.

The two-day battle forced more than 500 hilltribes people on Doi Lang Mountain to seek refuge in Mae Ai District while more than 100 families living on the Thai side of the mountain had to be evacuated to safer areas.

The BPP source said that both the Shan force and the WNA were heavily armed with M-16's, AK-47's, 60-mm mortars, heavy machineguns, M-79 grenade launchers and 75-mm recoilless guns. He said the sporadic fighting which has been going on since the beginning of this month escalated when the SUA, led by opium warlord Khun Sa, joined forces with the Kuomintang and the Lahus, who belong to the Lahu State Army, in an attempt to take complete control of the Burmese side of Doi Lang.

Khun Sa's men were in total control of the mountain by Saturday afternoon, according to the BPP source. He added that Khun Sa views the Burmese side of Doi Lang as a convenient site for opium refining and trafficking and wants it to replace his old stronghold at Ban Thoet Thai (formerly Ban Hin Taek) which is now under the Thai Government's control. The source quoted villagers as saying that Khun Sa has hired a number of local villagers to help fell trees needed for the construction of a new base at Doi Lang.

Some fighting was yesterday still going on between the pursuing Shan force and the WNA. The latter was reported to have retreated but later it seized ground near the Kok River in an attempt to repulse Khun Sa's men. The Burmese military, meanwhile, was reported to have recruited hilltribesmen to help carry weapons through the rugged terrain to suppress the SUA force. A new battle was expected soon between the SUA and Burmese Government soldiers, said the source.

At the Thai border village of Ban Tha Ton and in Mae Ai District, the local Border Patrol Police and village volunteers have begun night patrols following the disclosure that a number of armed WNA guerrillas had escaped into Thailand. The source said that a villager reported on Sunday night that he was stopped at gunpoint by a band of 10 fully-armed men believed to be WNA members. The villager was questioned by the men and asked what the name of the area was.

The Border Patrol Police have employed armoured personnel carriers during the night patrols but so far there has been no clash between them and the fleeing WNA members, the source said.

FOREIGN INVESTMENT DROPS TO 5-YEAR LOW

BK260235 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 26 Jul 82 p 13

[Text] Thailand's investment for the first half of this year has dropped to the lowest level in the past five years. The number of investment applications received by the Board of Investment [BOI], their investment capital and foreign equity involved has declined by 30 percent, 80 percent and 86 percent respectively, as compared to the same period last year.

Japan, which used to be the largest foreign source of local investment, has shown very little interest in investing in Thailand so far this year, the Board of Investment said.

The BOI attributed the gloomy investment trend to investors' doubts about economic conditions both worldwide and in Thailand. It said, "Although the business and industrial world has expressed the hope of economic recovery in 1982 after the slump in business last year, it appears that this has not happened so far."

The BOI received only 97 applications for promotional privileges as against 139 applications received in the first half of 1981, a decrease of 42 applications or about 30 percent.

The amount of investment capital earmarked for projects also showed a significant decline from 40,601 million baht in the first six months of last year to 7,904 million baht in 1982, a sharp drop of 80 percent.

The registered capital of foreign entities in the 97 applications were only 375 million baht as against the amount of 2,505 million baht in the first half of last year, a considerable drop of 2,130 million baht or 86 percent.

The BOI said that only a few applications during the first six months were considered large projects with investment of over 100 million baht each, such as projects involving production of ethanol, HDPE resin, slaughter-house, and processing plants for meat, pork and poultry. Most of the applications were for small and medium sized projects involving service businesses and production of general goods, the BOI said.

It was also noted that the pattern of foreign interest in investment in Thailand has also dropped with the most significant change being Japan, which used to be the prime investor in Thailand.

In the first six months, the countries which have shown most interest in investing in Thailand, ranking in order of importance, are Hong Kong, the Philippines, the Netherlands, the United States, and Malaysia. Last year, they were Japan, Singapore, Britain, the United States and the Netherlands.

The BOI further noted that it granted promotional privileges to 57 projects between January and June this year as compared to 98 projects in the same period of last year, a drop of 42 percent or 41 applications.

Large projects of importance included the production of newsprint, glass sheets, bolts and nuts, sports shoes, ampicilin, non-dairy creamers, insulators, animal feed, leather tanning, a hotel in Bangkok and two hotels in Phuket.

During the first six months of this year, 41 promoted projects commenced operations -- five projects or 11 percent less than the figure of the same period last year, the BOI said. The number of promotion certificates issued during the first six months of 1982 increased from 53 issued in January-June 1981 to 72 this year, an increase of 19 projects or 36 percent.

BRIEFS

JAPANESE TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE -- Japan will give Thailand about 920 million baht in technical assistance and financial aid this year, according to the director general of the Department of Technical and Economic Cooperation. Japan ranks first among donors of aid to Thailand. Japan will provide about 445 million baht worth of technical assistance, including educational training, technical advisers, volunteers and equipment. The remaining about 475 million baht will finance various projects in the fifth 5-year national economic and social development plan, including establishment of a research center and the educational program at Sukhothai Thammathirat University, training courses at the Forestry Department and the trade training center for the Commercial Relations Department. Japan will also continue to send doctors and nurses to refugee camps in Thailand and will join with the United States in developing agriculture in the northeast of Thailand. NHAN DAN VIEWS ASEAN ECONOMIC TIES WITH WEST, JAPAN

BK261444 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 24 Jul 82

["Excerpt" from NHAN DAN 24 July article by Le Ba Thuyen: "Unequal Marriage"]

[Text] The five ASEAN countries are rich in natural resources. Found here are tin mines with the largest deposits in the world, important pockets of petroleum and natural gas, and immense groves of rubber, coconut, palm and pepper trees. The tin output of this region accounts for 72 percent of the entire world's supply; natural rubber, 83 percent; coconut oil products, 64 percent; palm oil, 84 percent; and pepper, 57 percent. Of the world's precious tropical timber reserves, 90 percent are located here. For this reason, the U.S. capitalist cliques and many capitalist countries have jumped into this region to amass profits to the detriment of the legitimate interests of the peoples of the ASEAN countries.

The U.S. Octopus

Recently, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Albrecht testified before the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee: We need the ASEAN countries as a source of raw materials necessary for our survival, as an expanding market for U.S. exports and as an area for private U.S. investment. By investing in this region, the United States can easily reap huge profits. Take the private U.S. investment corporation OPIC [Overseas Private Investment Corporation], for example. According to a report prepared on 8 June 1982 by Craig Nalen, president of OPIC, with the help of OPIC many U.S. capitalists have invested in various important economic sectors of the ASEAN countries a total of $597 million -- a tenfold increase over 4 years ago -- and the profits they have received, as admitted by Nalen, are by no means insignificant. Some $321 million have been invested in the natural gas exploitation project in the Gulf of Thailand and this project is expected to yield $1.3 billion during its 20-year viability period. U.S. multinational corporations are busy operating in this region.

In the ASEAN capitals, many U.S. factories have sprung up producing electronic components, textiles and consumer goods. The U.S. capitalist cliques completely control the exploitation of chrome and 80 percent of the tin processing industry in the ASEAN countries; and they control the exploitation of copper completely in Indonesia and 43 percent of it in the Philippines. Large U.S. oil companies such as Caltex, Stanvac and Esso play a key role in oil exploitation in this region.

According to Albrecht's report, the total U.S. capital invested in the ASEAN countries, which stood at $1.5 billion about 10 years ago, has now reached the $10 billion mark. this huge investment has not only yielded colossal profits for the multinational corporations, but it also guarantees large and diverse supplies of raw materials for the United States.

At a time when the United States is facing a shrinking world market, Washington is seeking by every means to turn the ASEAN countries into an important outlet for U.S. goods. In 1981, the United States sold nearly $9 billion worth of goods to these countries -- an increase of 30 percent over 1979 -- while trade between the United States and ASEAN totaled $22 billion, making the latter Washington's fifth important client.

In a statement before the U.S. Senate on 8 June, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense Armitage stressed that, over the past 10 years, U.S. economic interests have steadily increased in the resource-rich ASEAN countries, and that this is not a region we can ignore.

Like an octopus, the United States is increasingly tightening its grip on this important region.

Behind the Flowery Rhetoric

Running a close second to the United States in investing in the ASEAN countries is Japan. And understandably so, since Japan has to import almost all the petroleum and important raw materials it needs. The energy and raw materials crisis which grips the entire capitalist world, the unstable situation in the oil producing Middle East and the difficulties facing the capitalist market have prompted Tokyo to pay special attention to the ASEAN countries.

Japan's Prime Minister Suzuki took pains to visit the ASEAN countries, declaring that he brought to them sentiments of everlasting friendship and that priority was being given to Japan-ASEAN relations. He also drummed up publicity for mutually beneficial cooperation. All this is aimed at nothing more than serving the interests of the Japanese capitalist circles. The news agency KYODO has clearly pointed out that the policy of Japan-ASEAN economic cooperation consists of giving priority to cooperation in the fields of agriculture and energy, the exploitation of manpower and the development of industry in these countries.

To date, Japan has poured into the ASEAN countries more than $8 billion of its worldwide investment of $36 billion. This money is concentrated on important sectors such as energy, mining and electronics industries and agricultural and food production. As the prices of land on its archipelago soar, manpower is in short supply and environmental pollution keeps spreading, Japan is intensifying the construction in the ASEAN countries of noxious chemical factories and enterprises which discharge large amounts of dangerous wastes or which require hard labor. It is also exporting environmental pollution to these countries.

The Chinese authorities, craving the rich natural resources of the region, have for a long time coveted the Southeast Asian countries, including the ASEAN states. While it has not yet been able to realize its dream of expanding to the entire Southeast Asian region, Beijing wants to use economic relations as a means of drawing the ASEAN countries into its orbit and to entice them into confronting the Indochinese countries. Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang's tour of the ASEAN countries has revealed part of this scheme.

Realities over the past few years have enabled the Southeast Asian peoples to see ever more clearly that behind the flowery rhetoric is the imperialist and international reactionary forces' scheme to preserve and expand their influence in Southeast Asia so as to plunder its resources, to amass profits by exploitation, and to implement sinister political and military plans.

Growing Indignation

The conference between the ASEAN and developed capitalist countries, including the United States and Japan, held in Singapore in mid-June 1982, proceeded in a rather tense atmosphere. Right from his opening speech, Singapore's prime minister complained that the recession in the capitalist world is exerting a direct and dangerous impact on the ASEAN countries' economy, and that people -- referring to the most developed capitalist countries -- would resort to more sophisticated measures to divide ASEAN and to cover their protectionist policy. He also predicted that differences between the ASEAN and industrial countries may increase.

Some delegates bitterly declared that the ASEAN countries are not a trashcan into which people can dump any kind of unsold or surplus goods.

In reality, the indignation felt by the ASEAN countries toward the developed capitalist countries, especially the United States and Japan, has many causes. Along with increasing investments, flooding the market with goods to paralyze the young local economies, and amassing huge profits, the capitalist countries have dumped on the heads of the peoples of the ASEAN countries the disastrous effect of the West's economic recession. The economic structure of the ASEAN countries, being dependent chiefly on exports, has been badly and directly affected by the general recession.

Meanwhile, the United States, Japan and the EEC countries have tried to curtail imports by imposing high tariffs against textile items, shoes and sandals, home appliances and plywood, thus creating major export difficulties for the ASEAN countries.

Many ASEAN leaders have protested the fact that the United States has, out of an egoistic desire to reduce inflation at home, increased bank interest rates, thus making the price of goods exported by ASEAN decline on the international market. Another hot issue is that the policies of trade protection enforced by the United States, Japan and the EEC have made it very difficult for ASEAN to export its products to these countries. The recent conference of the foreign ministers of the five ASEAN countries criticized the Western countries for planning to close off their markets to ASEAN textile products by the introduction of the so-called provision against the overflow of textile products; and also complained about their policy of discrimination.

Obviously, the ASEAN countries have suffered great damage in their unequal marriage with the United States and Japan. It was against such a background that the conference of foreign ministers of the ASEAN countries held in June of this year devised measures aimed at countering the trade protection policies of the Western countries and called for the holding of international negotiations in order to proceed toward establishing a new international economic order.

A just, equal and rational new economic order can only be achieved if the developing countries and the nonaligned countries, together with the forces of peace, national independence, democracy and social progress in the world, unite and strengthen their mutual cooperation in a persistent struggle against the monopoly of the imperialist forces.

HANOI HITS THAI OPPOSITION TO 'PEACE PROPOSALS'

BK261250 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Station commentary]

[Text] The world public is warmly welcoming the proposals for peace and stability put forth by the foreign ministers of Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam at their recent sixth conference in Ho Chi Minh City. Despite this fact, certain Thai authorities in Bangkok are chiming in with Beijing's allegations to distort the Indochinese initiative. Here is our commentary:

More and more people have raised their voices in support of Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos, particularly after these countries took the first step of initiative by withdrawing part of Vietnamese army units from Kampuchea. This action, they believe, shows the good will of the Indochinese countries toward Thailand. This action also proves that the Kampuchean situation is now stable.

The NEW YORK TIMES, in a recent issue, quoted Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja as saying that Vietnam's partial withdrawal of its troops from Kampuchea is a significant deed. Many Western observers also hailed the Indochinese proposals, saying that they contain new points and can hardly be denied. However, certain Thai authorities in Bangkok are deliberately shutting their eyes to this fact. Harping on Beijing's allegations, they bluntly say that the partial withdrawal of Vietnamese forces from Kampuchea is only to deceive public opinion. They evade the proposal for establishing a security zone along the Kampuchean-Thai border. They reason that Thailand is not a party involved in the conflict.

Let's ask them: Who are allowing the genocidal Pol Pot clique and other Khmer reactionary groups to use Thai soil as a springboard to oppose the revival of the Kampuchean people? Who join Beijing in the farce of putting a new cloth on the political corpse of Democratic Kampuchea? And who plan to provide military aid for this disbanded clique of Pol Pot?

If they had received no support from certain Thai authorities, the remanants of the Pol Pot clique and other Khmer reactionaries would have been eliminated, peace and stability would have been restored in the Kampuchean-Thai border area and there would have been no Thai families leaving their home because of Khmer bandit activities.

Undoubtedly, Bangkok's words and deeds run counter to the legitimate interests of the Thai people and to the interests of peace and stability in Southeast Asia. On the outcome of Bangkok's policy tailing after Beijing, the Thai paper PATINYA on 12 July 1982 remarked: Efforts to prolong the conflict in Kampuchea are causing damage to Thailand and only pushing Thailand further along the road of adventure. Another Thai paper, MATUPHUM, on 8 July 1982 maintained that Thailand should seek the way of dialogue with the Indochinese countries.

All practical-minded observers see the way of dialogue opened by the Indochinese countries as the only correct one in keeping with the legitimate aspirations and interests of the Thai people and other peoples in Southeast Asia. So, the Thai authorities should adopt a practical attitude and take a suitable stand.

NGUYEN CO THACH INTERVIEWED ON VISIT TO BURMA

OW262056 Hanoi VNA in English 1521 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 26 -- The following is the full text of an interview granted recently by Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach to VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY.

Question: Could you speak of the result of your visit to the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma?

Answer: During my friendship visit to the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma, I called on the president and the prime minister of Burma and conveyed to them to greetings of President of the Council of State Truong Chinh and Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong. I conferred with Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing and other high officials of the Burmese Foreign Ministry. The Burmese leaders were greatly interested in promoting relations between the two countries. Vietnam and Burma, which are alike in many ways, can cooperate and compare notes with each other in many spheres of economic development, especially in agriculture. Vietnam and Burma share common interests in maintaining peace and stability in the region. I gave thorough explanations of the proposals of the latest foreign ministerial conference of Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam. The Burmese side said it welcomed all proposals conducive to peace and stability in the region, and deemed it necessary to maintain contacts and increase bilateral ties. The Burmese foreign minister accepted my invitation to visit Vietnam.

Question: What is your impression of the economic achievements of the Burmese people?

Answer: Burma has many natural advantages. It is twice as large as Vietnam while its population accounts for only two-fifths of ours. Burma's arable area is very large, but only more than five million hectares have been put under cultivation and the country is rarely affected by natural calamities. With such good conditions the country could have made great progress in economic development, had it not been for a great obstacle to the Burmese people's peaceful labour -- the threat posed to their security and stability for more than three decades now by the Chinese-backed rebels, and this in spite of the Burmese Government's friendship with China. Even so the Burmese people, with their determination, have recorded great achievements in recent years. Rice output in 1981 increased to 14 million tonnes over the 8 million in 1976, with a percapital output of 500 kilogrames. Since 1978, there has been an increase of 10 per cent every year. Burma now exports almost one million tonnes of rice a year.

It also produces 1.5 million tonnes of oil and is self-sufficient in this fuel. Besides it mines 27 million tonnes of coal a year and grows half of the cotton it needs.

Question: What prospect do you envision for relations between the two countries?

Answer: Both countries are satisfied with the development of their relations which have remained very close for 35 years now, even in the most difficult moments. In the first stage of the Vietnamese people's resistance to the French from 1947 to 1950, the Burmese people gave us a wholehearted support, During the war against the United States, the Burmese Government and people condemned the U.S. for bombing North Vietnam and spraying toxic chemicals on South Vietnam. Since 1979, when reactionary elements in the Beijing leadership overtly adopted a hostile policy to isolate Vietnam, relations between Vietnam and Burma have further developed, as marked by Premier Pham Van Dong's visit to Burma in April 1980 and by the Burmese foreign minister's visit to Vietnam in January 1981. Both countries are desirous of promoting their relations in the interests of peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

NGUYEN CO THACH DISCUSSES RELATIONS WITH PRC

AU261256 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 25 Jul 82 p 2

[Text] Hanoi (APA) -- Vietnam has again and again expressed its wish to conclude a nonaggression pact with China. This was stressed by SRV Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach in a talk with Austrian journalists in connection with Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr's recent visit to Hanoi. A security guarantee from Beijing for the three states of Indochina would permit an immediate withdrawal of all Vietnamese forces from Kampuchea, Nguyen Co Thach added. With the current reduction of its forces stationed in the neighbor country, Vietnam has signalled its good will. The total withdrawal will only be effected, however, when the "threat" which is now hanging over Kampuchea and all if Indochina has ended, Nguyen Co Thach said. The minister avoided making any distinction between the threat posed by China and that posed by the Khmer Rouge, and pointed put that Beijing -- along with its support for the Khmer Rouge -- repeatedly threatened a "second lesson" for Vietnam (the Chinese campaign against Vietnam in 1979 had been labeled a "lesson" by Beijing). The Vietnamese initiatives for negotiations have always been rejected by Beijing, he said.

Viewing the relationship between the Chinese and Vietnamese in historical dimensions, Vietnam is "exceedingly optimistic," Nguyen Co Thach stressed, pointing put that this relationship had never been free of problems "for 4,000 years." "Today the relations are tense, but we are independent, and this independence cannot be called into question," the foreign minister underscored. He added that a second military "lesson" by China was hardly to be expected in view of the Chinese debacle 3 years ago, but China's economic sabotage in the border regions entails serious consequences for Vietnam. Like Premier Pham Van Dong, Nguyen Co Thach does not admit any connection between Vietnam's economic difficulties and the partial withdrawal from Kampuchea. Rather, he claims that the troop reduction is proof of the fact that the military situation has been further stabilized in favor of the Heng Samrin government.

Vietnam's foreign minister considers an understanding with the ASEAN states to be Hanoi's foremost goal at present and is of the opinion that Austria is making a "great contribution toward peace in Southeast Asia."

Regardless of its unchanged (negative) position vis-a-vis the International Kampuchea Conference (IKC), whose resolutions in Hanoi's opinion are "false decisions," Vietnam is hoping that Foreign Minister Pahr (who was IKC chairman) will continue his endeavors in Southeast Asia, Nguyen Co Thach declared.

GOVERNMENT STATEMENT BACKS PALESTINIAN STRUGGLE

OW262024 Hanoi VNA in English 1551 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 26 -- In a statement issued today, the Vietnamese Government reiterated the Vietnamese people's "close solidarity with and full support for the just and certainly victorious fight of the people of Palestine, Lebanon and other Arab countries against U.S. imperialism and Israeli Zionism." The statement reads in full:

"Over the past two months, backed and encouraged by the U.S. imperialists, Israel has used large army forces to conduct a blatant and barbarous war of aggression against Lebanon in defiance of the condemnation by the progressive people thorughout the world.

"This criminal act lies in the framework of 'the strategic alliance between the United States and Israel' aimed at opposing the Palestinian people's resistance war. It grossly encroaches upon Lebanon's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, piling intolerable genocidal crimes against the people of Palestine and Lebanon, and seriously jeopardizing peace and security in the Middle East and the world as a whole.

"The Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam sternly condemns the above crimes of Israel and the United States and demands that they stop at once their invasion and all acts of intervention in Lebanon, withdraw immediately and unconditionally Israeli troops from Lebanon, and respect the legitimate national rights of the people of Palestine and other Arab countries.

"The Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam reaffirms its close solidarity with and firm support for the just and certainly victorious fight of the people of Palestine, Lebanon and other Arab countries against U.S. imperialism and Israel aimed at wresting back all areas occupied by Israel, restore the legitimate national rights of the Palestinian people including the right to self-determination, the right to repatriate and set up an independent and sovereign Palestinian state under the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization (P.L.O.), the genuine representative of the Palestinian people.

"The Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam warmly welcomes and fully supports President Leonid Brezhnev's statement on the situation in Lebanon and in the Middle East, considering it a great encouragement to the people of Palestine, Lebanon and other Arab countries and a guarantee for peace and security in the region.

"The people and the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam are convinced that, though many difficulties and hardships still lie ahead, with their undaunted spirit of struggle and the sympathy and support of the Soviet Union, Vietnam and the other socialist countries, as well as of the whole progressive mankind, the just cause of the people of Palestine and other Arab countries will certainly win glorious victory."

Pham Van Dong Meets PLO Envoy

OW262052 Hanoi VNA in English 1605 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 26 -- Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong today received at the Presidential Palace here 'Ali Fayyad, envoy of the Palestine Liberation Organization (P.L.O.), now on a visit to Vietnam.

'Ali Fayyad conveyed to Chairman Phan Van Dong the greetings of militant solidarity from P.L.O. Chairman Yasir 'Arafat and informed him of the current fight of the people and combatants of Palestine, Lebanon and other Arab countries against the brutal war of aggression by U.S.-backed Israel in Lebanon.

Chairman Pham Van Dong warmly praised the courageous fighting spirit and noble sacrifices of the Palestinian liberation combatants now fighting alongside the progressive forces of Lebanon and Arab countries in various battlefields in Lebanon, especially in western Beirut and southern Lebanon temporarily occupied by Israel. He stressed that 'Ali Fayyad's information has given a clearer picture of the fight and victories of the Palestinian people and their armed forces which, he said, had opened the road for the future development of the liberation struggle.

Chairman Pham Van Dong expressed his confidence that, in spite of many difficulties and hardships, with the staunch and undaunted spirit and the support of the whole progressive mankind the just cause of the people of Palestine and other Arab countries is bound to win. He said that just as the Vietnamese people's fight has ended in victory, so will the Palestinian people's fight and that the more hardships the Palestinian people endure the greater victory they will win. The Vietnamese chairman asked the P.L.O. envoy to convey to Chairman Yasir 'Arafat, the P.L.O. Executive Committee, and the entire Palestinian fighters and people the Vietnamese people's warm feelings and greetings of militant solidarity and their firm confidence in their final victory.

'Ali Fayyad expressed sincere gratitude for and high appreciation of the strong support and firm stand of the Vietnamese people towards the just struggle of the people of Palestine and other Arab countries.

The reception took place in an atmosphere of cordiality and militant solidarity.

NHAN DAN Supports Palestinians

OW270723 Hanoi VNA in English 0706 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 27 -- Vietnam fully sides with the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples in their struggle against U.S. imperialism and Israeli aggression, says NHAN DAN in a commentary today.

The paper points out that the U.S.-abetted Israeli warmongers have launched a barbarous aggressive war in Lebanon, an independent and sovereign Arab country. It ways: "This large-scale aggression aims at wiping out the leadership and armed forces of the Palestine Liberation Organization, destroying the Palestinian people's resistance, annexing Lebanese territories, rigging up in Beirut a pro-U.S. and pro-Israeli administration, and eventually imposing a U.S.-Israeli neo-colonialist rule on the whole of the Middle East".

"However", it goes on, "in the face of firm resistance from the heroic Palestinian people led by the P.L.O. and the patriotic Lebanese and other progressive Arab forces, the U.S.-backed Zionists have sustained more and more human and material losses than in their previous aggressive wars against Arab nations".

The expansionist Zionists have become further isolated in the world, the paper notes, adding that the longer they maintain their occupation of Lebanon, the more serious will be their military, political and economic difficulties. Hailing Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's recent statement on the situation in Lebanon and the rest of the Middle East as a great encouragement for the just cause of the P.L.O. and the Palestinian, Lebanese and other Arab nations, the paper points out that the united strength of the peace and justice-loving people in the world has strongly developed. The government and the people of Vietnam have always sided with the Palestinian, Lebanese and other Arab nations in their struggle against U.S. imperialism and Israeli aggression, the paper recalls.

It quotes the Vietnamese Government as reiterating in its July 26 statement its strong solidarity with and resolute support for the surely victorious just cause of the Palestinian, Lebanese and other Arab nations against U.S. imperialism and Israel.

The paper says: "The Vietnamese people vehemently condemn Israel and the United States, and demand that they put an immediate end to their aggression and all acts of intervention, immediately and unconditionally withdraw all Zionist armed forces from Lebanon, and respect the inalienable national rights of the Palestinian and other Arab nations".

NHAN DAN concludes by quoting Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong as having declared that the Vietnamese people warmly praised the courageous struggle and sacrifices of the Palestinian combatants and completely believed in the final great victory of the just cause of the P.L.O. and the fraternal Palestinian people.

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 26 -- The ambassador of Cuba to Vietnam, Faure Chomon Mediavilla, gave a reception here this evening in honour of the 29th anniversary of the national rebellion of Cuba.

Present at the event were Do Muoi, member of the Political Bureau of the party C.C. and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers; Major-General Vu Xuan Chiem, vice-minister of national defence; Vo Dong Giang, vice-minister for foreign affairs; and Nguyen Van Trong, vice-chairman of the Commission for External Relations of the party C.C. Ambassadors and charges affaires a.i. of socialist countries to Vietnam were also present.

At the reception, Ambassador Chomon Mediavilla and Vice-Chairman Do Muoi proposed toasts for greater successes of the Cuban and Vietnamese revolution and constant strengthening of the militant solidarity and cooperation between the two countries.

PARTY SENDS GREETINGS TO 16TH JCP CONGRESS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 27 -- The Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee has sent its warm greetings to the 16th Congress of the Communist Party of Japan (JCP).

After expressing high appreciation of the courageous struggle of the JCP, the revolutionary vanguard and genuine representative of the Japanese working class and people, over the past half-century, the message says: "Since World War Two, the JCP, promoting its tradition of indomitable struggle, has together with other democratic and progressive forces in Japan, uncompromisingly struggled against U.S. imperialism and Japanese monopoly capital, for a really independent, democratic, peaceful, neutral and prosperous Japan, thereby contributing to the world people's common struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism. The JCP has grown stronger and stronger, and has become an important factor in the political life in Japan".

"The Communist Party of Vietnam highly values the achievements obtained by the Communist Party of Japan over the past sixty years and believes that it will gain further success in the future. We avail ourselves of this opportunity to thank the Communist Party, the working class and the democratic forces of Japan as a whole for their whole-hearted support for the Vietnamese people during their past anti-U.S. resistance for national salvation as well as their present socialist construction and national defence.

"May the solidarity, friendship and cooperation between the Communist Party of Vietnam and the Communist Party of Japan and between the Vietnamese and Japanese peoples constantly consolidate and develop.

"Success to the 16th Congress of the Communist Party of Japan."

NEW INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTS -- Hanoi, 24 Jul (VNA) -- Two types of small-sized turbine, each with a capacity of 250 KW, have been manufactured by the electric equipment manufacture and repair company under the Ministry of Power, for use at small hydroelectric power stations in mountain regions. These turbines have been installed at small hydroelectric power stations in Quang Nam-Da Nang Province on the central coast, and in Cao Bang Province, at the northern border. The Institute of Farm Machinery Research under the Ministry of Engineering and Metallurgy has turned out a cassava drying machine to replace the old manual method. The new machine is compact and easy to handle, and can process cassava into flour or vermicelli. [Text] [Hanoi VNA in English 1541 GMT 24 Jul 82 OW]

KOMPAS SUGGESTS SIHANOUK-HENG SAMRIN TALKS

[Text] Jakarta, July 25 (AFP) -- The influential Indonesian daily KOMPAS today suggested that talks be held between the head of the anti-Vietnamese Cambodian coalition government, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, and the leader of the pro-Vietnamese Phnom Penh regime, Heng Samrin, to seek a peaceful settlement of the Cambodian problem.

"If the Cambodian problem is allowed to become protracted, it would not only poison the good relations between Vietnam and its neighbours but also eventually undermine the regional strength and lead to the undesirable presence of the big powers," the paper said in an editorial.

The paper criticised Hanoi's reasoning that its presence in Cambodia had been prompted by the Chinese threat. "If Vietnam fears Chinese hegemony, Cambodia also fears Vietnam in the same way," KOMPAS said.

The newspaper also called on the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) not to view the coalition government on the basis of Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan or rightist figure Son Sann, but to "look at Prince Sihanouk, a Cambodian nationalist figure who has shown his solid attitude during the Cambodian war."

INDONESIA TIMES VIEWS INDOCHINA COMMUNIQUE

BK260608 Jakarta THE INDONESIA TIMES in English 20 Jul 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Kampuchea: Willingness To Find a Way Out"]

[Text] Almost coinciding with the formation of the loose Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea headed by President Sihanouk, the conference of the three Indochinese foreign ministers in Ho Chi Minh City issued a joint communique containing the Vietnamese decision to withdraw part of its troops from Kampuchea and proposals for a limited international conference on Southeast Asia to be attended by the three Indochinese states, the five ASEAN countries, the five permanent members of the Security Council, and Burma and India, and for a safety zone free of Khmer guerrilla groups along the Thai-Kampuchean border. Vietnam has announced that it has already started thepartial withdrawal.

Some ASEAN leaders have dismissed the communique as a propaganda gambit, but others have reacted to it positively.

After holding talks with Willibald Pahr, the Austrian foreign minister chairman of the International Conference on Kampuchea who had extensive talks with the Vietnamese authorities in Hanoi, Malaysian Foreign Minister Tun Ghazali Shafie stated on Saturday that he would be encouraged if the Vietnamese offer of a partial withdrawal eventually leads to a total withdrawal of all Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea. The impression Tun Ghazali Shafie gathered from Willibald Pahr, whom he described as candid and completely objective, was that there appeared to be a willingness on the part of Vietnam to find a way out of the "quagmire" and that if this was so then ASEAN would be more than willing to help.

This is really a sound and mature attitude. Indonesian leaders will support such an openminded attitude. Other ASEAN leaders too, after eliminating emotions and dogmatism, will also adopt the same attitude as implied in Tun Ghazali Shafie's statement.

Our main intention as stipulated in the United Nations resolutions on Kampuchea is complete withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and to allow the Kampuchean people to choose their own government through free elections under the auspices of an impartial and competent international agency. Besides, the ASEAN countries would like to have peaceful and beneficial mutual cooperation with the three Indochinese states and make Southeast Asia a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality.

If we can achieve these aims without much formality and dogmatism, there is no reason for us not to follow that line. We should not be afraid of being realistic, pragmatic, practical and flexible as long as we arrive at our destination. In search of a political settlement in Kampuchea, we should not discount any slight possibility and throw away any slight chance. It is in this spirit that we should approach the latest Vietnamese move and not dismiss it a priori as a bad job.

Let us talk it over with the other side whether the partial withdrawal will finally lead to complete withdrawal and the proposed limited international conference will lead to national reconciliation in Kampuchea when all national elements, groups and parties will participate in internationally verified free national elections. We should be ready to accept the result of such elections even if the Heng Samrin side dominates the result.

We feel that indirectly Vietnam has comes a long way to meet the ASEAN points of view regarding troop withdrawal and international conference. But as far as the proposal for a safety zone is concerned, it may remain a snag at the present stage of political situation where the ASEAN countries recognise the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea.

But this should not in any way discourage us to listen to what the foreign minister of Vietnam would say about this and other aspects of the Kampuchean question when he visits ASEAN countries soon. We may benefit from whatever positive points may emerge from having talks with him. Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach's coming visit should be utilised as much as possible to clear the way for a comprehensive, just and lasting political settlement of the Kampuchean question. The most important thing is to cultivate political willingness on both sides to settle the question peacefully and politically.

GOVERNMENT TO CONTINUE OIL PRODUCTION CUT

[Text] Jakarta, July 26 (AFP) -- Indonesia will continue to cut its oil production by 300,000 barrels a day until the world oil situation improves, according to Mining Minister Dr. Subroto. The oil production cut is in line with a decision of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) of which Indonesia is a member, the minister said at the weekend.

Dr. Subroto, who had just returned after attending an OPEC ministerial meeting in Vienna, denied that certain OPEC members had violated the OPEC decision by not reducing their production. "It is not true because they know that such a violation could eventually ruin OPEC itself from within," he said.

He stressed that the production cut was necessary to prevent the oil price of 34 U.S. dollars per barrel from declining further, thus overcoming the current oil glut. The oil production cut will reduce Indonesia's oil revenues by around 800 million U.S. dollars this year.

The leading economic weekly, BUSINESS NEWS, today asked how the government would solve the problem of less revenues. The weekly said in an editorial: "Is the government going to maintain the principle of a balanced budget or adapt the system of deficit spending?" "It is most likely to be safer to maintain the balanced budget though in practice there will be some deficit. Monetary stability will be better ensured," the weekly said. The weekly however warned against imposing devaluation saying it was bound to cause domestic inflation. "If the balanced budget principle is strictly followed, imports will automatically be controlled because most imports are carried out by the government and this will help maintain equilibrium in the balance of payment as well," the weekly added.

SRV FOREIGN MINISTER HOLDS TALKS WITH LEADERS

Talks With Mahathir

BK261311 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Text] Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed has told Vietnam that it did not have the right to move into Kampuchea to set up a government of its choice in the name of self-defense. He told the visiting Vietnamese foreign minister, Nguyen Co Thach, that the Vietnamese move into Kampuchea was a very dangerous precedent that threatened the small countries. It also meant the bigger power could move into small neighboring countries with impunity. Vietnam should therefore move out of Kampuchea.

The prime minister's remarks were made known by the secretary general of the Foreign Ministry, Tan Sri Zakaria Ali, after the Vietnamese foreign minister had a 45-minute discussion with Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir. Tan Sir Ghazali Shafie and Senior Wisma Putra [Ministry of Foreign Affairs] officials, including Tan Sri Zakaria Ali, were present at the meeting.

Tan Sri Zakaria said the Vietnamese foreign minister had explained at his meeting with the prime minister that the Vietnamese forces were in Kampuchea in self-defense, because Kampuchea had been used to threaten the security of Vietnam, and the Vietnamese foreign minister also said that his country viewed the Kampuchean issue as a Chinese threat to Vietnam. While ASEAN was concerned with Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea, Vietnam's main concern was the Chinese threat.

To this, Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir replied that the Heng Samrin regime was a government set up in Kampuchea by Vietnam and could not therefore have the legitimacy of a government of the people's choice.

Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir said that Malaysia will, therefore, try to find a political solution by which Kampuchea would have a govenrment of the people's choice through the process of self-determination.

Meanwhile, Mr Nguyen Co Thach is to spend another day in Kuala Lumpur before departing for Bangkok on Wednesday. He had earlier been scheduled to leave tomorrow afternoon. The Vietnamese foreign minister will have another round of talks with Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie tomorrow.

Calls on Rithauddeen

[Text] Malaysia welcomes the Vietnamese efforts to promote trade between the two countries. The bilateral trade between them is slowly picking up. Last year Malaysia's exports to Vietnam were worth about 40,000 ringgit, most of which were motorcycle spareparts.

The principal assistant director of international trade at the Ministry of Trade and Industry, Mr. (Mohanan Menon), gave these details to newsmen after the Vietnamese foreign minister, Nguyen Co Thach, called on Tengku Ahmad Rithauddeen at his office. He says it is the government policy to encourage the private sector to trade freely with the whole countries. The two ministers also exchanged views on various industries, such as steel and glass as well as oil exploration.

AFP Interview

[By N.G. Nair]

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, July 27 (AFP) -- Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said here today that he and Malaysian leaders had agreed not only to continue the dialogue on peace and stability in Southeast Asia, but to refrain from doing anything to worsen the situation.

"This is a very good thing," he said in an interview with AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE at the Vietnamese Embassy here.

Mr Thach, who had discussions with Malaysian Prime Minister Dr Mahathir Mohamad and Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie here on the Cambodian issue yesterday, said: "We, both sides, have agreed that if we cannot do anything better for peace, we will abstain from doing anything bad for peace."

Hanoi's chief diplomat confirmed that his talks here, as in Singapore earlier, had not bridged the differences over Cambodia where Vietnam has more than 150,000 troops backing the Phnom Penh region of Heng Samrin.

He described the talks here as "very calm, very friendly, very frank and very useful", helping to clear misunderstandings about each other's viewpoint on regional problems. Mr Thach was to fly on to Bangkok tomorrow on the last leg of his four-nation Southeast Asian tour.

Mr Thach's discussions with the Malaysian leaders covered the major points mentioned in the communique issued by the Indochinese foreign ministers after their meeting in Ho Chi Minh City earlier this month, including a partial pullout of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia.

He said that a "significant number" of troops had already been withdrawn, but sidestepped a question of the numbers involved, saying amidst laughter: "I will ask my commander in chief to give you the answer." Asked when more troops would leave, the Vietnamese minister said: "It would follow the cessation of Thai support to the Khmer Rouge and the camouflaged Khmer Rouge," referring to the ousted Cambodian regime and its backers.

Mr Thach reiterated that a complete withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia would depend on the removal of the "Chinese threat to our security," Asked when Hanoi would consider the threat removed, he pointed out that they had already proposed the signing of a non-aggression pact between Vietnam and China.

Mr Thach reiterated his earlier statements that the recent formation of a anti-Vietnamese coalition government -- promoted by the non-communist Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) -- was interference in the internal affairs of Cambodia.

He said the people of Cambodia supported the Heng Samrin government. "It is for the people of Cambodia to decide their government. It is not our problem. Why should we consider the internal matters of the Cambodian people? Why should other people worry about elections in Vietnam or Malaysia?" he asked.

Mr Thach said the people of Cambodia were afraid that the Khmer Rouge of Pol Pot, general held responsible for mass killings during their rule 1975-79, will return if the Vietnamese troops were completely withdrawn. He dismissed the resistance coalition joining the Khmer rouge and two non-communist groups as merely a "cosmetic to deceive the people."

Underlining the seriousness of the Chinese threat he said that China had been wanting to dominate the region long before Vietnamese troops went into Cambodia. He said history showed that from the 19th century there had been at least ten Chinese invasions in the area. In this context, he said, Vietnam "appreciated very much" the ASEAN concept of the zone of peace, freedom and neutrality (ZOPFAN) for Southeast Asia. He added that it was a pity that Malaysia and other countries were not pursuing the idea more vigorously.

STRAITS TIMES SCORES THACH STATEMENTS

BK230937 Singapore THE STRAITS TIMES in English 22 Jul 82 p 14

[Editorial: "Bully in the Neighbourhood"]

[Text] Imagine this region to be your neighbourhood. As a good citizen, all you want is peace and good relations among all residents. But your immediate neighbour has been forcibly ejected from his home by the chap living on the other side who has long coveted his property. You do not much care for your neighbour who is not a very pleasant fellow. But what he does in his own house is his business and no one has a right to march in and just take it over.

Naturally, you have to do something about it. Although you have no quarrel with the new occupant, his action is manifestly unneighbourly and wrong. So you try to persuade him to withdraw and, at the same time, try to give your evicted neighbour what advice and support you can to help him recover his home. In all this, you are merely doing your duty as a resident of the neighborhood and as a law-abiding citizen.

However, the new occupant does not see things this way at all. Having taken over the property by force, he now regards it as his by right. The owner's attempts to recover his home are seen by the occupier as trespass and your efforts to help are denounced as interference deserving of retaliation. It is an incredible and a ridiculous form of reasoning, of course. But that is the kind of logic to be expected of someone who knows and respects no law but that of the jungle where might is right. In short, that is the logic to be expected of a thug.

It would probably be unfair to describe the Vietnamese foreign minister, Mr Nguyen Co Thach, as a thug. He hardly looks the sort of person who would barge into someone else's home, throw out the occupants and threaten anyone who tries to reason with him. But that is precisely what his country has done, to Cambodia, to ASEAN. And although Mr Thach (one presumes) was not among the troops that marched into Cambodia to eject its legal rulers, he is certainly the one uttering the threats against ASEAN.

But then he is only speaking on behalf of his country, whose behavior has been that of the neighbourhood bully. His statements should dispel any illusions some might have that Vietnamese troops are in Cambodia and Laos only to protect them from China. If that were true, there would be no need for them to remain in Laos, as Mr Thach says they will, even after China commits itself to nonaggression in Indochina. And if Vietnam really saw China as such a threat, how could Mr Thach envisage a scenario in which the two countries would normalise relations while engaging in hostilities against ASEAN countries? But even bullies need excuses to dress up their bullying and the China threat serves in this respect. The bottom line is that Vietnam now regards all of Indochina as its property and will not countenance anyone arguing otherwise.

BRIEFS

SABAH TRADE SURPLUS -- Sabah has recorded a trade surplus of 665 million ringgit for the first 4 months of this year, over 5 times more than the surplus for the same period last year. This was attributed to the increase in the export of timber log and crude petroleum. The state export stood at 1.684 million ringgit against import of 1.019 million ringgit. Timber log export rose from 154 million ringgit to 626 million ringgit and crude petroleum from 544 million to 646 million ringgit. JAPAN, USSR AGREE TO CONTINUE SAKHALIN PROJECT

OW280949 Tokyo KYODO in English 0931 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 28, KYODO -- Japan and the Soviet Union have agreed to go ahead with their joint development of natural gas and oil deposits off Sakhalin Island using equipment not affected by tightened U.S. economic sanctions against Moscow, an oil company official said Wednesday.

Sadao Kobayashi, president of government-financed Sakhalin Oil Development Cooperation Co., said the agreement calls for the use of a Soviet-possessed drilling rig instead of a Japanese rig which, depending on U.S. technology, cannot be used due to the sanctions.

Two test wells will be dug this year instead of five originally scheduled because of smaller drilling capability of the Soviet rig, Kobayashi said. To cover the reduced drilling operation, next year's test drilling will be boosted to five wells, with Japan trying to charter a rig unaffected by the sanctions, he added.

The agreement came to bypass the sanctions that ban the export of equipment produced not only in the United States but by overseas subsidiaries of U.S. firms or by non-U.S. companies under license.

SUZUKI ON HISTORY TEXTBOOK REVISION CONTROVERSY

OW280617 Tokyo KYODO in English 0548 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 28, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Wednesday the controversial revisions in Japanese high school history textbooks, under fire by China and South Korea, were made at the independent discretion of publishers. Suzuki also told reporters that the government would like to explain the Japanese position on the textbook issue to China to dissolve Chinese misunderstanding.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa also told reporters the government will give an explanation to China in a day or two through the Chinese Embassy in Tokyo. He said the explanation will center on the textbook screening system and how the 1972 Japan-China joint communique, which acknowledged Japan's responsibility for what Chinese suffered during the war, is described in history textbooks in use at high schools.

Miyazawa also said the textbook issue has not yet been taken up at the diplomatic level between Japan and South Korea. He said Kim Yun-hwan, vice chairman of the Korea-Japan Parliamentarians' League, had told Ken Yasui, chairman of the Japan-Korea Parliamentarians' League, here that the textbook issue should be settled at league-to-league level, not at government-to-government level.

Foreign Ministry sources said Kim Suk-wu, first secretary at the South Korean Embassy in Tokyo, called at the Foreign Ministry Monday and made an informal inquiry about the textbook screening system, controversial revisions and remarks by some Japanese Cabinet ministers.

MINISTERS LEAVE FOR CANBERRA ECONOMIC TALKS

OW271209 Tokyo KYODO in English 1151 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 27, KYODO -- Four Japanese Cabinet ministers Tuesday left for Canberra to attend a two-day ministerial meeting with Australia to further promote economic and trade relations. The four are Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, Finance Minister Michio Watanabe, Agriculture-Forestry-Fisheries Minister Kichiro Tazawa and International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe.

Japanese sources have said the meeting is designed for the two nations to reaffirm their inseparable relations. Japan is Australia's biggest trade partner while Australia is Japan's crucial energy supplier.

After the meeting, Trade Minister Abe will visit Thailand for talks with Thai leaders on trade while Sakurauchi and Tazawa will visit New Zealand.

Abe, Sakurauchi Remarks

OW280755 Tokyo KYODO in English 0707 GMT 28 Jul 82

[By Shiro Yoneyama, KYODO staff correspondent]

[Text] Canberra, July 28, KYODO -- International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe said Wednesday the Japanese Government should prepare measures to stimulate domestic demand to promote trade with Australia. "It is necessary for Japan to come up with some sort of measures to stimulate slack domestic demand," Abe said in a speech before a meeting of the Japan Chamber of Commerce and Industry in Sydney. He did not say, however, when such measures should be implemented to promote commerce with Japan's trading partners, including Australia.

After his meeting with Japanese business leaders in Sydney, Abe flew into Canberra for a two-day ministerial conference starting Thursday. Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, Finance Minister Michio Watanabe and Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries Minister Kichiro Tazawa will also attend the Canberra meeting.

Abe assured the Japanese business representatives that their country "still retains the potential to achieve a high economic growth." The Japanese leader, a future hopeful for the premiership, also said the Tokyo delegation to the ministerial conference will "frankly" express its views on the world economy and bilateral economical and political relations with Australian leaders.

Foreign Minister Sakurauchi told reporters here the two countries will explore ways to promote world peace during two days of talks. He indicated that his opening-day speech will cover international relations such as the Vietnamese military intervention in Kampuchea and revitalization of the world economy. Abe told the Sydney gathering he will discuss with his Australian counterpart the development of natural resources and technological cooperation.

Yoshinori Nitta, head of C. Itoh (Australia), complained to the visiting trade minister the Australians do not fully appreciate efforts by Japanese trading companies to promote exports of Australian wool and wheat to Japan and Third World countries. Another Japanese business official in Sydney said Australia's labor strife has deterred Japanese concerns from making investment in manufacturing sectors. "We are scared of the labor trouble when we try to put money into a sizeable plant in Australia," a MITI spokesman quoted the business leader as telling Abe in the closed-door meeting. Other Japanese businessmen suggested to the MITI chief that Japan raise the rate of its dependence on Australian uranium from the current 10 percent of the country's uranium needs. The spokesman said the Sydney-based businessmen pointed out a gradual softening of the labor party's "anti-uranium" policy which has hindered rapid development of uranium ore.

Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser's Cabinet held a meeting Tuesday to discuss imports of Japanese steel but failed to reach agreement on how to cope with the problem. Conference sources said the matter will be taken up during a meeting between Abe and his counterpart, Industry and Commerce Minister Philip Lynch.

Japanese business leaders involved in coal trade with Australia denied local press reports Japan is prepared to cut back on coking coal imports from Australia by as much as 30 percent. "Its silly," one official scoffed at the reports. But another businessman said Japan's sluggish domestic economy has delayed the tempo of Australian coal imports. He also noted that the Australians are asking the Japanese for financial assistance and other relief measures to remedy the situation.

VRPR RAPS CHON SPEECH TO UNIFICATION COUNCIL

SK280847 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 24 Jul 82

[Station commentary]

[Text] Addressing the 23 July dinner arranged at Chongwadae for members of the Advisory Council on Peaceful Unification Policy, Chon Tu-hwan spoke gibberish about the reunification question.

Pretending to be interested in reunification, he babbled about the creation of circumstances favorable to reunification and efforts to realize peaceful reunification. He also raved that increasing national strength is a driving force expediting reunification. This is nothing but a clumsy trick by Chon Tu-hwan, who has adhered to policy of division of the nation under U.S. instigation, trying to convey the impression that he is making an effort to achieve reunification.

The fact that Chon Tu-hwan's gibberish about reunification is a deceptive trick was clearly shown by the antireunification remarks of Son Chae-sik, minister of unification affairs, at a meeting of the Advisory Council on Peaceful Unification Policy on the same day that Chon Tu-hwan delivered a speech at a dinner for members of the Advisory Council.

Son Chae-sik openly clamored that South Korea would take the initiative in realizing reunification, reiterating the sterotyped 22 January proposal -- Chon Tu-hwan's false formula for reunification. This indicates that the Chon ring is trying to reunify the country not in a peaceful way, but by winning victory over communism and to expand the U.S.-dominated colonial fascist system in South Korea to North Korea.

Wantonly violating the 4 July joint communique under U.S. instigation, the Chon ring is running amok to reunify the Korean Peninsula by armed forces -- gaining supremacy over North Korea not through independence but through dependence on foreign forces; not through peaceful reunification but through war; not through national reconciliation but through anticommunist confrontation.

While babbling about peaceful reunification, the Chon ring has accelerated preparations for war. While clamoring about national harmony, it has cruelly suppressed all patriotic forces aspiring for democracy and reunification. While raving about independent and peaceful reunification, it has attempted to conquer North Korea, begging its masters for the permanent stationing of U.S. troops in South Korea.

On 22 July, a day before Chon Tu-hwan addressed a dinner for the members of the Advisory Council, Kim Yun-ho, director of the Counterespionage Operations Headquarters, announced the beginning of the Myongong [communist annihilation] military drill. This clearly shows that the Chon ring's slogan for reunification is a false one to mislead public opinion at home and abroad and to conceal its splittist crimes.

The slogans "communist annihilation" and "victory over communism" are incompatible with reunification. It is absurd for those crying for communist annihilation and victory over communism to babble about reunification. The reunification question is, in essence, a question of realizing the sovereignty of the nation by driving away foreign forces and achieving the unity of the nation.

For this reason, the country's reunification question should be resolved on the basis of three principles -- independence, peaceful reunification and the unity of the nation. This notwithstanding, the Chon Tu-hwan ring has made bellicose and antireunification remarks, such as "communist annihilation," "victory over communism" and "under our initiative." This is evidence that the Chon ring has no intention to achieve reunification.

As long as the U.S. aggressors seek a two-Koreas policy and the Chon ring adheres to the line of anticommunism in accordance with the U.S. masters' orders, reunification of the Korean Peninsula will not be achieved. Under the anti-U.S. banner for independence, our masses will struggle to compel the U.S. aggressors to withdraw from this land and overthrow the Chon Tu-hwan ring, which is adhering to splittist maneuvers.

VRPR LAUDS KIM CHONG-IL'S LOYALTY, CARE FOR LEADER

SK240002 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 20 Jul 82

[From "Today's Feature" program: "Eternal Paragon of Loyalty" -- dialogue between station commentator Madam Yun and announcer Sin]

[Text] [Sin] Hello, Madam Yun. As you know, the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, who is brilliantly inheriting the great leader's chuche cause, is a brilliant example of a communist revolutionary who has perfectly personified loyalty to the respected and beloved leader in its highest form. Now we are here to discuss the dear comrade leader's loyalty to the great leader. Will you begin?

[Yun] The dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, who is held in high esteem by our people, is endlessly loyal to the great leader. Regarding loyalty to the leader and faith in his work and life as invariable principles, the dear comrade leader is devoting himself to the leader.

Once he said about the goal of his life and struggle: I am merely a warrior who is carrying out the honorable duty assigned by the leader. If I die on the road of implementing the honorable tasks assigned by the leader, it is still an honor for me. Nobody speaks ill of you when you die in the course of the revolution, upholding the leader's high will. Such remarks, which are full of ardent loyalty, are the highest form of his faith and rock-firm will, the starting point and core of his outlook of the world and revolution.

[Sin] Yes. The dear comrade leader's loyalty dedicated to the leader is the centerpiece of his ideology, his spiritual mainstay, the measure of his accomplishment and the value and source of all of his wisdom and passion. Now, will you tell us about how his noble loyalty was formed.

[Yun] Generally speaking, people's character and talents are formed under the influence of conditions surrounding their birth and childhood.

[Sin] Quite true.

[Yun] In what kind of family he was born and under what kind of social influence he was reared played a great role in forming his character and talent. As you know, the dear comrade leader was born in a revolutionary home, unprecedented in history. His father, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, is the greatest leader among the leaders of the working class and the sun of mankind, endlessly respected and revered by our people and all of mankind. His mother, the respected Madam Kim Chong-suk, was an immortal communist revolutionary warrior and an anti-Japanese heroine who struggled for the nation's liberation, the people's freedom and liberation, sacrificing everything she had.

All of his relatives, both paternal and maternal, were patriots who spent their whole lives for the nation's liberation. What is more, they were revolutionaries. Born in such a home and reared under such circumstances, the dear comrade leader came to have endless love for this fatherland and people, nurturing endless loyalty to the revolution. The endless [word indistinct] and endless loyalty cherished in his heart have been transformed into an ardent loyalty to the great leader, who has pioneered the revolution, eventually hardening into an invincible conviction and rock-firm will.

[Sin] Right. In my view, the period in which the dear comrade leader was born and reared up was unprecedentedly arduous and convulsive. What do you think?

[Yun] That is quite true. The period during which the dear comrade leader was reared was replete with upheavals and dramatic incidents in the revolutionary annals of our country as well as in the world. The period was replete with such wild and serious events and world-scale changes as the arduous anti-Japanese armed struggle, the fierce Korean war, all the complicated [word indistinct] conducted in the North following the war, then the socialist construction and socialist revolution.

In the grave and convulsive days, he inherited all of the respected and beloved leader's great virtues, including his sacred [word indistinct]. Thanks to the respected Madam Kim Chong-suk's revolutionary education, he was reared to cherish endless loyalty to the leader. Indeed, the dear comrade leader's ardent loyalty could never be generated in any average cradle and or under average conditions. It could bud in the grave flames of the anti-Japanese armed struggle and harden in a period replete with world-scale upheavals and historic events. Such unwavering convinction such as his could be forged only under arduous conditions.

[Sin] The dear comrade leader's ardent loyalty to the great leader was [passage indistinct].

[Yun] The dear comrade leader was ardently loyal to the great leader even when he was young. His ardent loyalty was demonstrated during festivities for the great leader's birthday, the greatest national festival. One day some years ago, the dear comrade leader suggested that all the people celebrate the great leader's birthday as the greatest national festival and supported all the preparatory works. Thus, government ordinance No. 469 designating 15 April, the birthday of the great leader of the revolution Comrade Kim Il-song, as the greatest national festival was published on 10 April 1973. Every year since then, the great leader's birthday has been celebrated as the greatest national festival.

[Sin] I think the dear comrade leader's loyalty to the great leader is peerlessly ardent.

[Yun] You are right. The dear comrade leader's loyalty to the great leader is also displayed in his wishes for the leader's good health and for maintaining his [word indistinct].

In the spring some years ago, the great leader toured various places in Europe. The dear comrade leader made international phone calls many times daily, being concerned about the leader's good health. He asked about the leader's itinerary and helped make arrangements and took care of preparatory work. When the great leader was returning to the fatherland after winding up his visits, the dear comrade leader acquainted himself with the leader's flight plan and felt at ease only after he received a report that the leader had safely passed a certain flight point.

In particular, the dear comrade leader, who has ardent loyalty to the leader, is directing greatest attention to ensuring the leader's good health. He is taking care of even minor matters if related to the leader's health. When he prepares for a conference which the great leader is to attend, he pays attention to making the schedule of the meeting so that the great leader will not be fatigued.

He even takes care of the height, color of the leader's chair and temperature and humidity of the conference room and the stationery to be used by the leader. Thus, he arranges all functions in such a way as to reduce the leader's fatigue and allow him to have time for recreation. He also keeps the leader's office beautiful. Indeed, the dear comrade leader's care for an devotion to the leader's good health and welfare are endless.

[Sin] I understand that the dear comrade leader's ardent loyalty is also demonstrated in his striving to reduce the leader's anxiety.

[Yun] The anxiety of the leader of the working class can be described as the sense of great responsibility for the fate of the fatherland and the masses and as an expression of constant effort to promote revolution and construction to a new and higher stage. The basis of the energetic activities of the dear comrade leader consists of ardent loyalty; he strives to reduce the anxiety of the great leader, who is concerned about the prosperity of the fatherland and happiness of the masses. Rejoicing over reducing the leader's anxiety, the dear comrade leader is directing all his attention to this without caring about his own rest and sleep. When the dear comrade leader was giving working guidance at a construction site in North Pyongan Province, he received a telephone call from the great leader visiting foreign countries, in which the leader expressed concern about farm-work. As soon as the conversation ended, the dear comrade leader went to a farm in Kangwon Province and looked around and examined the corn crop. He spent that night at the farm out of a desire to reduce the great leader's anxiety. The cadre members, who hurriedly came to the farm, explained and reported to him about completion of the corn harvest. Thus, he expressed great satisfaction with their report, saying that it is much more valuable than hundreds of bouquets and that he can reduce the great leader's anxiety. There are many other such touching stories. The dear comrade leader is devoting everything to the task of reducing the great leader's anxiety and ensuring his good health and welfare with ardent loyalty.

[Sin] We should follow and study the model of ardent loyalty of the dear comrade leader to the great leader and more vigorously rise in the struggle for independent reunification and the completion of Kimilsongism. Thank you for being with us.

NODONG SINMUN ON ROLE OF THREE REVOLUTIONS TEAM

[NODONG SINMUN 20 July editorial: "Let Us Enhance the Role of the Three Revolutions Team in the Struggle To Implement Party Policies"]

[Text] An important problem in effecting a new great upsurge on all fronts of socialist construction today is to enhance the responsibility and role of the three revolutions teams.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: Members of the three revolutions teams should firmly arm themselves with the chuche idea, continuously maintain a lofty sense of revolution, mix with the masses of working people and actively whip up their revolutionary zeal and initiative, thereby more vigorously accelerating the three revolutions.

Strengthening the work of the three revolutions teams is an important guarantee for thoroughly implementing the party's lines and policies by further enhancing the sense of responsibility of functionaries and by actively encouraging the revolutionary zeal and initiative of the masses.

Success in the struggle to implement party policies in all sectors of the national economy greatly depends upon how the three revolutions teams can properly carry out their activities. It is also related to the stand of the three revolutions teams in implementing party policies and to the importance of the duties of the team members.

Members of the three revolutions teams are active protectors of party policies and are the comrades-in-arms of the revolution supporting and defending the struggle for their implementation. When they vigorously push ahead with the struggle to implement the party's policies, deeply recognizing their honorable mission and duties and the party's expectation and trust, members of the three revolutions teams can successfully accomplish any difficult and complicated task and create constant miracles and innovations in production and construction.

At present, further enhancing the role of the three revolutions teams is an urgent demand for effecting a new, great revolutionary upsurge in socialist economic construction.

Creating the speed of the 1980's in the spirit displayed in the period of great Chollima upsurge is an important revolutionary task confronting our party and people today. Only when a new, great upsurge in socialist economic construction is effected under the banner of the three revolutions can the cause of modeling of society on the chuche idea be successfully accelerated.

The work of the three revolutions teams today should be concentrated on properly carrying out socialist construction through the three revolutions. Success of the work of the three revolutions teams cannot be contemplated apart from thestruggle to accelerate economic construction.

On the basis of his deep insight of the status of the economic development of our country and its prospects, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has set forth the militant task that functionaries in all sectors of the national economy should actively display their revolutionary spirit of absoluteness and unconditionality in implementing the party's economic policies and, in particular, effect great innovations in major sectors of the national economy, including the metal industry.

The zeal of our heroic working class and the entire people, who have vigorously launched the struggle to create the speed of the 1980's in response to the call of the party, is very high. When members of the three revolutions teams actively lead the struggle to implement party policies, cherishing the party's intent deep in their hearts, a new revolutionary upsurge can be effected in all sectors of the national economy.

The important role of members of the three revolutions teams in the struggle to implement the party's policies has already been proven through their practical activities. A decade has already passed since the movement of the three revolutions teams was initiated by our party. During this period, everywhere the three revolutions teams have worked under the wise leadership of the party has seethed with the flames of the three revolutions and new miracles and innovations have been effected in succession in the work of human remolding, nature remolding and cultural construction.

Through the activities of the three revolutions teams, the functions of party organizations and state and economic organs have been further enhanced, a basic change has been effected in the ideological views, work methods and work styles of functionaries, and a strong habit of thoroughly implementing party policies to the end has been established among the party members and working people.

Thanks to the vigorous activities of the three revolutions teams, the economy has been equipped with modern technology, brilliant success has been achieved in carrying out the chuche-oriented farming method and great progress has been made in establishing tidiness in production and tidiness in life.

Members of the three revolutions teams should effect a new upsurge in production and construction by vigorously carrying out the struggle to unconditionally and completely implement party policies. Our party has set forth a militant task -- the three revolutions teams should fulfill their work emphasizing technical innovation and the creation of new technology, while firmly grasping the struggle to implement the party's line and policies.

Reflected in this military task is our party's intention to glorify the 1980's as the most proud period of exploits in the history of socialist construction of our country by effecting a new upsurge in all sectors of the national economy through the thorough establishment of the revolutionary spirit of absolutely and unconditionally carrying out the party policies and by achieving the 10 major prospective targets ahead of schedule.

Members of the three revolutions teams should further enhance their sense of responsibility and their role to brilliantly carry out the honorable task assigned by the party center. Only when they do so can they perform the heavy mission as the honor guards of the party center who have been sent to plants, enterprises and cooperative farms with the great political trust of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

Members of the three revolutions teams should first of all more properly plan and organize the work of leading all functionaries to fulfill their assigned revolutionary tasks to the end under any circumstances with the spirit of absolutely and unconditionally carrying out party policies.

Functionaries are the leading members of the revolution who are responsible for organizing and leading the work to implement the party line and policies. Success in the struggle to implement party policies rests with functionaires. The key in completing this year's plan ahead of schedule and in successfully achieving the grand target of the new prospective plan is how properly functionaries can carry out their political work and economic organization work.

The three revolutions teams should lead all functionaries to thoroughly establish among the working people the habit of unconditionally accepting party work and of persistently and untiringly pushing ahead with this work under all circumstances. They should also actively assist functionaries in vigorously carrying out the work to implement party policies.

Members of the three revolutions teams who have been sent to plants and enterprises should effect greater upsurges in production by implementing the demands of the taean work system in a timely manner, properly organize production activities and concentrate greater efforts on mobilizing all available reserves. In particular, members of the three revolutions teams who have been sent to the metal, chemical and minning industries should mix with the producing masses, strengthen their political work and vigorously wage the struggle for unconditionally and completely carrying out party policies together with functionaries, thereby opening wide the road of victorious march.

Members of the three revolutions teams who have been sent to the agricultural sector should take it as their (?main) task to thoroughly implement the chuche-oriented farming method and concentrate great efforts on enhancing the scientific and technological knowledge of farmers and on doing farmwork in a scientific and technological manner.

Members of the three revolutions teams should see to it that all sectors and units where they work maintain the principle of self-reliance and effect a new great revolutionary upsurge with their own strength, technology, resources and materials by mobilizing all available inner reserves.

By firmly grasping and vigorously pushing ahead with the struggle to create the speed of the 1980's in the spirit displayed in the period of great Chollima upsurge, members of the three revolutions teams should see to it that new progress and a leap forward is effected on all fronts of socialist construction,

Fulfillment of the plans of the national economy within the planned period is an important demand for implementing the party's economic policy unconditionally and thoroughly.

The plan of the national economy is the party's directive and no one has the right to violate it. The three revolutions teams should actively support all functionaries and workers in the related fields to realize this and to highly display the revolutionary spirit of fulfilling the plan in line with daily, 10-day and monthly targets and by index.

Achieving the chuche-orientation, modernization and scientification of the national economy by registering the mass technical innovation on all fronts of socialist construction and holding high the flames of creating new technology is one of the important tasks which the three revolutions teams should carry out with attention.

The three revolutions teams should strengthen creative cooperation with workers and technicians, directing attention to the technical innovation movement and creation work of new technology, and should [word indistinct]. Thus, they should brilliantly achieve overall mechanization, semiautomation and automation. The three revolutions teams should play an important role in accelerating the chuche-orientation, modernization and scientification of the national economy.

The movement for securing the red banner of the three revolutions and the movement for learning the examples of unheralded heroes are mass movements initiated and led by our party for achieving the cause of modelling society on the chuche idea by accelerating the three revolutions.

The three revolution teams should put all fronts of socialist construction in the flames of mass innovation by more vigorously supporting the national economy in unity with party organizations. Various problems may arise in the course of executing party policy by the three revolutions teams. All three revolution teams should deeply study and understand the work method of the great leader, should find out all available work methods of the great leader, should find out all available work methods by discussing party policy and should attentively resolve pending questions.

It is a noble trait of the three revolutions teams to inspire the masses, relying on their strength, whenever gigantic and difficult tasks are put forward, and to resolve all questions in the manner of leading by personal example. It is an important principle for the three revolutions teams in their activities to continuously maintain the revolutionary attitude in the struggle to implement party policy. The three revolutions teams should understand the policy and intention of our party more correctly than other people, should evaluate all questions from the viewpoint of party policy and should rectify in a timely manner even minor unlawfulness in the course of their work.

The revolution advances and wins victory amid the struggle between decay and vigor. The three revolutions teams should actively help the functionaries and workers who carry out party policy by assuming it as their only guideline highly demonstrate the spirit of unconditionality for the decision and directives of the party.

Our party's expectation for the three revolutions teams is very great today. The three revolutions teams should enhance their role, deeply realizing their grave mission and the sense of responsibility assigned by the party and the revolution, and should make all fronts of the national economy register another great revolutionary upsurge.

NODONG SINMUN CALLS FOR RAISING TECHNICAL EXPERTISE

[NODONG SINMUN 23 July editorial: "Let Us Enhance the Role of Scientists and Technicians in Creating the Speed of the 1980's"]

[Text] Upholding the party's militant call, all workers throughout the country are vigorously struggling to create the speed of the 1980's. In this struggle, scientists and technicians are assigned an important duty. We have vast forces of scientists and technicians. When we enhance their sense of responsibility and role, we can continuously make new advances and bring about upsurges in all sectors of the people's economy. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: By enhancing the responsibility and role of scientists and technicians in all sectors of the people's economy and by strengthening creative cooperation among workers, scientists and technicians, we should enact a continuous innovation with new ideas, positive suggestions and bold activities.

The great upsurge which we should bring about today in production and construction calls for a basic turning point in the technological sector. Our economy has entered a very high stage of technological development -- a stage of comprehensively making the people's economy chuche oriented, modern and scientific. As a result of the work of powerfully forging ahead with the technical revolution, all sectors of the people's economy have been equipped with modern technical means and production processes have developed into technical ones.

To once again bring about a great revolutionary upsurge in socialist economic construction, we should bring about an innovation in the technological sector. To achieve this end, we should help scientists and technicians fully display their revolutionary zeal and positive creativity by enhancing their role.

One of the important methods of bringing about a great upsurge in socialist economic construction is to positively utilize potential. The experience in great upsurges in our country shows that, when we carry out an all-out revolutionary movement to effectively utilize existing equipment, materials and labor to the maximum, we can bring about an upsurge in production and construction.

The method of positively utilizing potential today is to improve management of the economy and renovate technology. Without achieving technological development, we cannot achieve a decisive improvement in effectively utilizing the existing foundation of the economy.

Self-reliance, which we should highly display in creating the speed of the 1980's can more correctly demonstrate its vitality when we more properly combine it with technology. One of the important questions in achieving self-reliance is to correctly solve scientific and technological questions. No matter how firmly people are determined to carry out their work independently, we cannot gain good results without correctly solving scientific and technological questions. When we smoothly solve scientific and technological questions, we can demonstrate the might of self-reliance and make the flames burn furiously.

The revolution in the technological sector is one of the reliable factors creating the speed of the 1980's. Scientists and technicians should once again closely understand the importance of their role in bringing about a great upsurge and should resolutely rise to create the speed of the 1980's.

The important task on which scientists and technicians should concentrate today is solving scientific and technological questions in making the people's economy chuche oriented, modern and scientific. Accelerating this task is a decisive factor for expediting socialist construction and strengthening the country's economic might.

Only when, holding aloft the party's call, all scientists and technicians enact a basic turning point in making the people's economy chuche oriented, modern and scientific, can we more rapidly develop the economy, using our domestic technology and resources, implement the second 7-year plan ahead of schedule and open prospects for achieving the goal of the 10-point prospective plan for the 1980's. Scientists and technicians should, above all, concentrate on more smoothly solving fuel, raw material and power questions, relying on our country's resources.

The important question in developing the economy, relying on our country's raw materials is to strengthen the self-reliance and chuche nature of the metallurgical and chemical industries. What is required on the battleground of great socialist construction is more iron. To more smoothly meet the demand of the people's economy for iron, we should develop a new metallurgical method, using our country's raw materials, as well as the work of increasing the production of steel by building new metallurgical plants.

The scientific sector plays an important role in solving raw material questions. Based on the principle of strengthening the self-reliant and chuche nature of the chemical industry, we should reconstruct and expand the existing chemical plants, build many new chemical plants relying on our country's resources and extensively introduce new production process methods.

In particular, we should pay close attention to independently producing and supplying raw materials needed for light industry.

Scientists and technicians should smoothly solve scientific and technological questions in accelerating the work of achieving the comprehensive mechanization, automation and remote control of the people's economy. By accelerating the work of making both precise and large-scale equipment in the machine industry sector and of introducing high-speed equipment and an automation system into this sector by developing the machine industry, as well as the introduction of press forging, they should invent and manufacture much modern machine equipment so that they can continuously raise the technological level of the people's economy. At the same time, they should concentrate on the work of placing on a new scientific foundation production and technical processes, production methods and management activities in all sectors.

Unconditionally accomplishing all assigned tasks with the spirit of self-reliance is a fighting ethos scientists and technicians should highly display in the struggle to bring about a great upsurge today.

All scientific and technological questions which scientists and technicians should solve today are responsible tasks which they should accomplish to implement party policies. To unconditionally accomplish these glorious tasks assigned by the party, we should highly display the fighting spirit of self-reliance. A technical innovation is work carried out on the principle of self-reliance and arduous struggle.

Progress in the technological sector means pioneering an unknown world. Without independently overcoming mounting difficulties, we cannot gain any scientific and technological successes. Because the unheralded heroes thoroughly armed themselves with the fighting spirit of self-reliance as well as with endless loyalty to the party and the leader, they attained creditable achievements for the fatherland and the people. When all our scientists and technicians highly display the fighting spirit of self-reliance by following the noble example set by the unheralded heroes, they can unconditionally accomplish the tasks assigned them by the party, no matter how difficult and vast these tasks may be, and they can perform exploits in creating the speed of the 1980's.

Positively carrying out the activities of the 15 April technical innovation shock brigade is an important requirement for vigorously forging ahead with the technical renovation movement. When we vigorously carry out the activities of the technical innovation shock brigade, the superiority and vitality of which has been fully proven through practical activities, we can gain astonishing successes in the technological sector.

Setting a clear goal and adopting a correct methodology is a key to positively carrying out the technical innovation shock brigade activities. We should correctly set our goal to meet the desire of the party for enacting a great upsurge. We should adopt a correct methodology and correctly give assignments so that we can achieve this goal.

To positively carry out the activities of the technical shock brigade, it is important for us to strengthen creative cooperation among scientists, technicians and workers. When we strengthen this creative cooperation, we can invent new ideas, make positive suggestions and boldly carry out our activities.

Scientists and technicians should always frankly listen to the opinions of workers who are well versed in the status of production. Workers should assume an enterprising attitude of introducing successes attained by scientists and technicians in their work. At the same time, they should fully utilize the collective wisdom of scientists and technicians.

How we successfully promote the revolutionary zeal and creative positiveness of scientists and technicians decisively depends on the role of party organizations at all levels. Party organizations at all levels should deeply mix with scientists and technicians and carry out political work in an offensive manner to encourage them. What is important in this regard is to raise the degree of their loyalty to the party and the leader and to help them correctly understand the importance of their weighty responsibility in the struggle to enact a great upsurge today. At the same time, party organizations should rountinely organize the work of finding and developing affirmative examples. They should correctly give assignments to scientists and technicians, grasp the status of their work, readjust this work and encourage them to implement to the end the plan which has already been formulated.

The party's expectation of scientists and technicians is very great. If our scientists and technicians destroy conservatism and passivity and boldly think through and carry out their activities, they can be loaded with honors as victors in creating the speed of the 1980's. By fully showing lofty loyalty to the party and the leader in the struggle to enact an upsurge today, all scientists and technicians should more brilliantly glorify chuche Korea.

CHONGJIN SHIPYARD LAUNCHES 5,000-TON SHIP

PROSECUTION ASKS MAXIMUM SENTENCES IN LOAN ISSUE

SK280946 Seoul YONHAP in English 0923 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Seoul, July 28 (YONHAP) -- The prosecution demanded the maximum 15 years in prison Wednesday for the two masterminds of the biggest curb money market scandal in South Korea's history. The prosecution also demanded that the so-called "queen" of Korea's private money market, Chang Yong-Cha, and her husband Yi Chol-hui, former vice director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, forfeit one million U.S. dollars and 13 million Japanese yen on charges of fraud, breach of trust concerning duties,receipt of bribes in breach of trust concerning duties, and violation of the foreign currency regulation law.

After the final trial session of 32 defendants charged in connection with the scandal at the Seoul District Criminal Court, former president of the state-run Korea Mining Corp. Yi Kyu-kwang, who allegedly used his influence to aid the couple, faces five years in prison and a 100 million won fine on a charge of violating a special law which imposes heavy penalties on certain offenses, including the acceptance of bribes by government officials.

The prosecution demanded ten and seven years in prison for former president of the Chohung Bank Yim Chae-su and former president of the Commercial Bank Kong Tok-chong, respectively, on charges of breach of trust concerning duties and receiptof bribes in breach of trust concerning duties.

If sentenced according to the prosecution's recommendation, the two bank presidents would serve the maximum prison terms prescribed by Korean penal codes for their offenses. Prison sentences demanded for other defendants range from one to seven years. They will be sentenced Aug. 11.

CABINET MEETING VIEWS JAPANESE TEXTBOOK ISSUE

SK271158 Seoul YONHAP in English 1138 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Seoul, July 27 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government will keep a close watch on Japan's future moves in connection with the alleged falsified historical descriptions of Korea-Japan relations in new editions of several Japanese textbooks and the Japanese Government leaders' remarks in defense of the books, Vice Culture-Information Minister Ho Mun-to said Tuesday.

Emerging from a Cabinet meeting, Ho said that the government is deeply concerned about the possible adverse effects the distortions may have on children and on future relations between the two countries.

During the 90-minute session, Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok briefed the Cabinet on the results of bilateral diplomatic contacts concerning the issue, and Education Minister Yi Kyu-ho discussed the problematic points of the distorted descriptions in the Japanese textbooks, according to Ho. In his report, Foreign Minister Yi said that his ministry notified Tokyo that Seoul was taking a serious view of the situation, and that he received a reply from Tokyo saying that the Japanese Government was taking measures in consideration of the "seething" public sentiment of the Korean people. The content of the Education Ministry's report is not immediately known.

Ho said that "the official government stand is based on maintaining existing friendly relations between the two countries and correcting untrue facts to preserve amicable ties." Noting that Japan would take necessary steps if it does not want to see the deterioration of two-way relations, Ho said that Seoul will formulate countermeasures depending on Japan's response.

KOREA HERALD Report

[Excerpts] The government has taken a tough policy line against Japan with regard to recent developments between the two countries, changing the chief delegate to the forthcoming silk talks and demanding a Japanese clarification of controversial remarks made by Japanese Cabinet members.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs demanded that the Tokyo government clarify Yukiyasu Matsuno's claim that the Korean criticism of Japanese textbooks is an "interference of Japanese internal affairs." Matsuno, state minister in charge of national land, made this remark last Saturday.

According to a ministry official, the Korean Embassy in Tokyo was instructed Monday to deliver the demand to the Japanese Foreign Ministry. The official said the Matsuno remark concerning the "interference of Japanese internal affairs" could have great consequences in Korean-Japanese relations and the Japanese description of history would need a detailed academic analysis.

In the meantime, the ministry changed its plan to send Choe Tong-chin, director general of Asian affairs, to Tokyo as head of the Korean delegation to the silk talks between Korea and Japan, scheduled for today and tomorrow. According to a ministry announcement, Yi Sang-chin, a minister at the Korean Embassy in Tokyo, will head the Korean delegation while the Japanese team will be led by Director General of Asian Affairs Akitane Kiuchi. The two countries will discuss the 1981 quota of Korean silk exports to Japan which has yet to be agreed on, it said.

Although the reason for the change of the Korean delegation chief as not made known, the government presumably intends to send the signal of its dissatisfaction to the Tokyo government over the latest Japanese response to the Korean request for $4 billion in loan from Japan.

The change of the chief delegate to the silk talks implies that the Seoul government is not interested in holding working-level contacts on the loan issue. The Asian affairs director was originally scheduled to continue negotiations over the loan issue following the silk talks.

KOREA TIMES Report

[By Pak Mu-chong]

[Text] The distortion of historical facts in newly approved Japanese textbooks concerning Korea-Japan relations has driven the comparatively leisured political arena into an uproar. The sophistries by two Japanese ministers justifying the fabrication of history made the situation worse, causing the people to flare up in anger.

The controversy, which had been talked about sporadically, started to stimulate people in all walks of life decisively when the Japanese Cabinet members made shocking remarks about the Korean reaction Friday. They said recklessly that the "Korean reaction to the new history textbook policy of Japan is interference in internal affairs, and Japan's annexation of Korea was not an invasion."

Encouraged by public opinion, the major political parties came up with stern policies against Japan, demanding the convocation of the National Assembly standing committees concerned. In particular, the majority Democratic Justice Party (DJP) which had taken a rather cautious attitude, broke its silence Monday to attack the Japanese posture. According to a resolution of its Central Executive Committee, the DJP issued a special statement calling for the immediate correction of the distorted contents of the textbooks and the withdrawal of the controversial remarks of the ministers.

The Korea-Japan Parliamentarians League for the Seoul side also gave shape to its countermeasures against the Japanese scheme by sending an official written protest to the league's Japanese side. Furthermore, the majority party announced that it would take second and third measures if its initial demand was not met by the Japanese side.

It is quite natural that the people's rage affects the political world. Since the dispute is most likely to reach the level of the assembly at this moment, the tone of censure of Japan seems likely to be raised continuously. Even though the DJP does not show its evident position on convening the education-information and foreign affairs committee soon as requested by the minority parties, the party is willing to call the panels into session, if necessary, to handle the issue.

The Japanese reaction to this political movement of the parties is worthy of notice, political observers said. The issuance of a special statement by the majority party directly reflects the current stream in the political world. Before adopting the statement in the Central Executive Committee, the party said that "we will watch the development of the situation to grasp the real state of the controversial issue." This rapid shift of DJP's policy on the issue is believed to have taken place because the party found that the people's angry emotion caused by the historical distortion could no longer be controlled.

The first response of the Japanese side to the political climate in the nation is expected to be bared in a general meeting of the Korea-Japan Parliamentarians League for the Tokyo side to be held today in Tokyo.

The first minority Democratic Korea Party (DKP) had lost a chance to take the initiative in launching offensives against Japan with regard to the twisted historical facts as it did in numerous cases in the past. Remodeling its earlier stand, the DKP blamed, especially, the government for its failure to prevent the historical distortion through contacts with the Japanese Government. Rep. Yim Chong-ki, floor leader of the party, pointed out that minority parties had taken issue with the Japanese history textbooks in assembly sessions since last year.

CHOSON ILBO VIEWS FRENCH MINISTER'S SEOUL VISIT

[Editorial: "French Minister of External Relations Cheysson's Scheduled Visit to ROK -- Desirable Relationship Between the ROK and France in the Future"]

[Text] According to a Foreign Ministry announcment, French Minister of External Relations Claude Cheysson and his wife will visit our country on 5 August at the invitation of Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok. The then French Minister for External Relations Jean Francois-Poncet visited the ROK in April last year, the first time a French foreign minister has visited the ROK since the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two in 1886. Accordingly, Minister of External Relations Cheysson's visit will be the second of its kind in the history of ROK-French diplomatic relations. Because the upcoming visit of Minister of External Relations Cheysson is taking place under the socialist government led by President Mitterrand, his visit is attracting extraordinary interest.

As has been widely known, we have no doubt that high on the agenda in Minister Cheysson's discussion with the ROK will be such issues as whether France will recognize the Pyongyang regime and ROK-French economic cooperation. However, it seems that these pending issues will not be finally settled in the upcoming foreign ministers meeting between the two countries; rather, the two sides will first of all exchange opinions during the meeting. It also seems that the issues between the two countries will be further discussed when French Minister of State for Foreign Trade Michel Jobert and Senator Philippe Machefer make their schefuled visits to our country in September, and that the final settlement of the pending issues will be made through the exchange of mutual visits between the presidents of the ROK and France, which may take place in the first half of next year.

As for the issue of recognition of the Pyongyang regime by the French Socialist Government, it is up to President Mitterrand to decide the timing. During the election season, the French Socialist Party promised French voters that the party would establish friendly relations with all countries of the world when it assumed power. In June, Minister Cheysson confirmed his government's stand at the French National Assembly that there is no change in the principle of establishing diplomatic relations with North Korea. By adding the provision that he would deal with this matter under conditions acceptable to all parties concerned, he made it clear that the issue of establishing relations with North Korea is not an urgent one.

In contrast to other Western countries which will recognize North Korea only under the condition that such communist countries as Communist China and the Soviet Union recognize the ROK, France is considering establishing relations independently with North Korea.

The French Government's recognition of the Pyongyang regime would not deal a severe blow to the ROK right away, because trade between Paris and Pyongyang can never increase and France will not give blind support to North Korea in the international arena. This notwithstanding, if France should sell high-powered weapons to Pyongyang on the occasion of the establishment of relations between the two countries, it might pose a serious threat to the ROK's security. Furthermore, France's recognition of North Korea itself might bring about a considerable change in the political equilibrium in the Korean Peninsula. In the last analysis, because France's recognition of North Korea gives nothing profitable to the ROK, our government should devise wise countermeasures to cope with this.

Today, France is paying much attention to economic cooperation with the ROK. France is enthusiastic in participating in such large-scale projects -- totaling $10 billion -- as the construction of the Nos. 11 and 12 atomic power plants, the high-speed electric railway between Seoul and Taejon, the Pusan subway, and the No. 2 iron and steel mill in Kwangyang Bay. In other words, the ROK can be a large construction market for France. The two countries' economic relations will be settled, of course, in a cool-headed and utilitarian fashion. Nonetheless, if the terms are good, the ROK has no reason to avert its face from French capital and technology. The only thing that we are worrying about is that we wonder if the Western countries' competition for economic cooperation with the ROK might cause diplomatic tension.

On reflection, except for the inauspicious event in which a French fleet invaded Kanghwa Island in 1866, ROK-French relations have experienced no disputes. However, the Kanghwa Island incident has become an old story of the previous century. Times are completely changed today, and ROK-French relations cannot but be formed in the context of the given international political situation, the spirit of peace and friendship, and national interests. If France is considering trying to gain an advantage in economic cooperation with the ROK by using the North Korean card, it would be difficult for ROK-French relations to succeed. We firmly believe that as friendly nations, the two countries should respect each other's stand and try to put into effect bona fide cooperation.

CHOSON ILBO DISCUSSES CONTROL DATA CASE

[Editorial: "Case of Control Data -- We Urge Dramatic Turnaround"]

[Text] Whatever the reason may be, it is a pity that the Korean subsidiary of Control Data Corporation, a U.S. computer parts manufacturer, decided to close down its plant. The result was an unhappy ending both for the enterprise itself and for the Koreans who worked there.

The company explained the closure of its Korean plant by saying that the plant was no longer profitable. In this connection, some observers say the plant was closed down because of excessive trade union activities. Whatever the reason, the news about the plant's closedown was, of course, not good news to anyone.

Any enterprise should be profitable, as a matter of course, and it holds true that if any enterprise judges that its profitablity is diminishing, the enterprise has the right to suspend its business activities as it chooses. This notwithstanding, another correct option for an enterprise is to devise measures for reviving its profitability by exercising originality in the face of a recession. Closing down is the last resort. It makes us feel sorry to see Control Data Korea use the last resort. We wonder if the company has been operating in the red.

If the real reason for the closedown was excessive trade union activities, then it is really a serious problem from another viewpoint. In a democratic society, the trade unions exist to map out solutions for coexistence in which the enterprises and workers alike can survive. Therefore, the negotiations between labor and management should not be a "zero sum game," which will bring about a collapse of either side or of the entire company. This principle requires that both labor and management exercise self-restraint, using rational dialogues and attitudes of mutual concessions. We can say that the collapse of Control Data Korea was a case in which such principles were not observed well.

If we say that the collapse was due to the radicalism of the trade union members, this case should serve as a bitter motivation for the workers, the enterprise, the trade union as well as the authorities concerned to do a self-examination. The trade union members should reflect on their conduct once again, considering if the controversial Urban Industrial Mission [UIM] kind of radicalism can be a constructive means for solving problems. As we saw in the case of the closedown of Control Data Korea, such a radical way of solving problems is bound, in the long run, to touch off collapse. And when the collapse occurs, what is the price for the workers?

On the contrary, the more serious the problem is, the more the parties concerned should, as much as possible, avoid becoming emotionally radical, and take instead a more cool-headed posture. Doing so would also profit themselves. In our social activities, we often see cases in which radical factions exercise their influence like a gust of wind. This is misguided and a way to lead all parties concerned to a collapse.

As for the UIM's creation of such troubles, the trade unions' leaders and ministry concerned should keenly feel responsibility for not taking appropriate measures. So far, the trade unions' leaders and authorities concerned must have paid due attention to this problem. Even so the situation turned out as it did. The trade unions' leaders and the ministry concerned should keenly feel responsibility for not devising efficient measures to avoid what happened. They should seriously analyze the causes and rectify the problem. The enterprises should exert efforts to always put at rest workers' emotions by thoroughly understanding the raised standards of the workers' desires.

In the final analysis, we earnestly hope that the workers and the management of Control Data Korea will work miracles, in the literal sense of the word; that is, achieve a dramatic turnaround making possible the continued operation of the company by taking a middle-of-the-road policy with which the enterprise and workers can forget the past completely and which both the enterprise and workers alike can accept. Will this suggestion come to an end in the long run as our one-sided dream?

AFTERMATH OF ECONOMIC MEASURES ANALYZED

SK280249 Seoul YONHAP in English 0227 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Seoul, July 28 (YONHAP) -- One month after the South Korean Government announced substantial interest rate cuts, business activities are beginning to show signs of gradual recovery, business sources said Wednesday.

In addition, increased speculation in real estate and other markets triggered by the government's July 3 measures banning all anonymous financial transactions beginning Jan. 1, 1983, was reported to have come under control.

The sources said the interest rate reductions and intensified financial support for industries have created new demand and lowered the default rate for commercial bills and the operation rate of small and medium industries. They said a total of 411.5 billion won was provided to small and medium industries during the one-month period. They added that the prolonged hot spell has spurred seasonal demand for summer goods, including refrigerators. Inventories declined in some industries to contribute to the gradual recovery of the overall business climate.

Savings deposits, which had dropped sharply after the June 28 interest cuts, eventually recovered to increase by 17.8 billion won as of July 24. Demand deposits also rose by 440.8 billion won. Investment activities and exports, however, are still sluggish.

Real estate business, once brisk with increased transactions in small houses and apartments, registered only a slight price increase while overall transactions remained subdued.

The gold market and black market for U.S. dollars, both rattled by the two government measures, regained stabilized prices over the weekend. The domestic gold price had soared to 50,000 won per don (3.75 grams) on July 9 from the 40,000 won a month earlier, but with the help of the Bank of Korea's bullion auction, it has fallen to 46,000 won. The black market price for a 100 U.S. dollar bill soared to 87,800 won on July 20. Now the bills are traded at 85,000 won.

The Seoul stock exchange, which posted an explosive turnover of 30 million shares shortly after the June 28 measure, has cooled off after the July 3 action and is now sluggish.

Korea's foreign exchange holdings in July fell 639 million U.S. dollars to 5.7 billion dollars from the June figure, apparently affected by dwindling imports and the interest rate cuts.

Meanwhile, South Korean businesses are reporting decreased investments despite considerably lower financial expenditures caused by the June 28 measure.

BOU THANG SENDS GREETING MESSAGE ON SRV WAR HEROES DAY

BK270928 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Text] On the occasion of Vietnam's war heroes and invalids day, 27 July, Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense, sent letters to both the SRV Ministry of Defense and to Vietnamese invalid cadres and combatants and those who are still carrying out their duty in Kampuchea.

Here is his message to the SRV Ministry of Defense:

On the occasion of the anniversary of Vietnam's war heroes and invalids day, 27 July, the KPRAF and the Kampuchean people remember the deeds of every cadre and combatant of the VPA who has died or has been wounded for the cause of the Kampuchean revolution, thus upholding the brilliant example of internationalist solidarity.

We humbly send this message to the SRV Defense Ministry asking it to forward our greetings to the disabled comrades and the families of those killed in past battles in Kampuchea as well as to the families of Vietnamese cadres and combatants who are carrying out their duty of strategic alliance in continuing the struggle to help the Kampuchean people defend and rebuild their fatherland.

We send to every comrade our high regards.

[Message from Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense, to sick and disabled Vietnamese cadres and combatants on duty on the Kampuchean battlefield -- date not given; read by announcer]

[Text] Beloved Comrades:

Allow me to extend on behalf of the PRK Defense Ministry, the KPRAF and the Kampuchean people best regards and profound revolutionary sentiments to all the sick and disabled comrades and the families of the fallen heroes on the occasion of the 27 July day.

The date 27 July is the day that the Vietnamese people throughout the country commemorate the good deeds of all the invalids and fallen heroes. We bow our heads to pay tribute to the souls of the fallen Vietnamese cadres and combatants and express our sincere gratitude for the great service performed by all the comrades who have become disabled or have sacrificed their lives in the joint struggle of our two fraternal peoples and armies during every historic epoch to liberate and defend our beloved Kampuchean fatherland and to save our Kampuchean people from destruction by the genocidal regime, and who are now joining with us in defending and building our country toward socialism.

We sincerely express our profound thanks and best regards to the families of all the disabled and fallen Vietnamese comrades-in-arms. Our people will always remember the great and lofty sacrifices made by the disabled and fallen Vietnamese comrades-in-arms on our Angkor land in the struggle against France, the United States and the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary clique -- lackey of the Beijing expansionists -- in the past and in the current struggle to defend and rebuild our country. The blood and bones sacrificed by the disabled and fallen Vietnamese comrades-in-arms have contributed to building and consolidating the long-standing, close militant solidarity between the two peoples and armies of Vietnam and Kampuchea. Kampuchea will always remember the good deeds performed by the disabled and fallen Vietnamese comrades-in-arms. The Kampuchean people and the KPRAF express their deepest gratitude toward the heroic VPA.

We are proud of and confident that the fraternal, heroic VPA, which is patiently upholding the spirit of international solidarity and fears neither difficulties nor sacrifice, will always stand shoulder to shoulder with us in the struggle against our common enemy in every historic epoch because our lofty goal is to achieve independence, freedom, peace and socialism for our two nations.

The KPRAF pledge to follow the brilliant model set by the VPA, to hold aloft the bond of close solidarity between the two nations and armies of Kampuchea and Vietnam, to adhere always to the sacred militant alliance with which history has bound the two fraternal nations together, and to fulfill all tasks of national construction and struggle to crush all enemies.

We wish all the sick and disabled comrades quick recovery and good health so that you can come back to fulfill your duty on the battlefield. We extend best wishes for good health to all the families of the disabled and fallen comrades-in-arms and of those cadres and combatants who are fulfilling their noble and glorious duty on Kampuchean territory.

[Signed] Bou Thang, minister of national defense of the PRK

Visits Hospitalized Combatants

[Text] While all the fraternal Vietnamese people are commemorating the 35th anniversary of war invalids day, this evening a high-ranking PRK delegation led by Comrade Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, chairman of the Central Propaganda and Education Commission, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, minister of national defense and vice chairman of the KUFNCD National Council, visited the Vietnamese combatants who are fulfilling their international duty in the land of Angkor and are receiving medical treatment at Hospital No. 22. Comrade Ngo Dien, SRV ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the PRK, also accompanied this delegation.

Upon its arrival at the hospital, the delegation was warmly and cordially welcomed by the comrade chairman of the hospital and many cadres. After conversing and exchanging best regards, the delegation handed over some gifts -- medicine, milk, sugar and so forth -- to the hospital as a gesture of thanks to the heroic Vietnamese combatants who have sacrificed everything for the cause of the Kampuchean revolution. Later on, the delegation paid a cordial and friendly visit to the patients in various rooms. In each room, the delegation chatted with the VPA comrades under medical treatment there. The delegation also expressed admiration to the VPA comrades for their great sacrifice made for the cause of the Kampuchean revolution.

At 1700 the delegation bid farewell to all the VPA comrades after wishing all the comrades at Hospital No. 22 and all other hospitals quick recovery so as to carry on their international duty for the cause of defending peace in Indochina and of eternal Kampuchea-Vietnam friendship.

ACTIVITIES OF LAO PROPAGANDA DELEGATION REPORTED

BK230748 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0435 GMT 23 Jul 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 23 Jul (SPK) — (Sopha P. Phoudan), chief of a department of the Lao Propaganda and Education Commission, on 22 July held a conference in Phnom Penh on the success of the Third Congress of the LPRP.

Men Saman, member of the KPRP Central Committee and vice chairman of the Propaganda and Education Commission; Mat Ly, member of the Central Committee and vice chairman of the National Assembly; and Chan Ven, secretary general of the Council of State were present.

(Sopha P. Phoudan) talked about the work of the Third LPRP Congress which reviewed the achievements made since the second congress and defined the tasks for the years to come.

The victory of the Kampuchean and Vietnamese revolution in 1975, (Sopha P. Phoudan) said, helped the complete overthrow of the Lao reactionaries, lackeys of the U.S. imperialists. Since then, the LPDR has progressed toward socialism without passing through the capitalist period. The Lao multinational people under the clear-sighted leadership of the LPRP have opened a new page of their history by entering the period of national defense and reconstruction with the multisided assistance of Kampuchea, Vietnam, the USSR and socialist countries.

Agriculture and silviculture constitute important bases for economic expansion, the raising of the people's living standards, the development of handicrafts and socialist industrialization in Laos.

The LPRP pays special attention to the education of Marxist-Leninist ideology and to the training of scientific cadres, he stressed.

[Text] Phnom Penh, 26 Jul (SPK) -- Bou Thang, member of the Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and chairman of the Central Propaganda and Education Commission, received the Lao Propaganda and Education Commission delegation led by (Sopha P. Phoudan), chief of a department of the commission, in Phnom Penh on Sunday, 25 July.

Bou Thang stressed the efforts of the Kampuchean people to gradually rebuild their country from scratch. The propaganda work has enabled the local people to understand the revolution and to be aware of present and future difficulties and has exhorted them to check sabotage maneuvers against the Kampuchean revolution and to strengthen the rock-like unity of the Kampucheans, said Bou Thang, who affirmed that the bonds of friendship, solidarity and cooperation between Kampuchea and Laos, particularly cooperation between the two commissions, are deepening.

(Sopha P. Phoudan) talked about the efforts of the Lao people to build their country under the leadership of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party and highly appreciated the successes won by the Kampuchean people under the just leadership of the KPRP.

VODK SCORES THACH'S THREATS; URGES ASEAN SUPPORT

BK270642 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Station commentary: "The Bandits' Logic of the Le Duan Aggressors"]

[Summary] Recently, together with their proposals on the Kampuchean problem, the Le Duan aggressors increasingly threatened to retaliate against the ASEAN countries if the latter continue to interfere in Vietnamese and Kampuchean affairs.

Nguyen Co Thach and Radio Hanoi repeatedly stated that the Vietnamese have the right to attack the ASEAN countries in self-defense. "This is amazing! Was it in self-defense that the Vietnamese invaded Kampuchea and used their troops to wage their war of aggression against the Kampuchean people?" And now that the Vietnamese are at the Thai border, they claim they have the right to attack Thailand and other ASEAN countries as well, again in the name of self-defense. This is the logic of bandits.

Vietnam's war of aggression in Kampuchea is a blatant violation of international law and the UN Charter and it has been condemned by countries the world over. But ignoring UN resolutions, the Vietnamese have tried unsuccessfully to fool world opinion. Now they turn to the ASEAN countries, using tricks, divisive tactics and threats to coerce these countries to abandon their stand on the Kampuchean problem and, in particular, to stop supporting the Kampuchean resistance.

But, like other peace- and justice-loving countries all over the world, the ASEAN countries understand the role and importance of the Kampuchean resistance against Vietnam whose expansionist policy, with the backing of the Soviet Union, is to achieve the Indochinese federation and use it as a springboard to annex other neighboring countries.

"The Vietnamese have not yet realized their goal of creating the Indochinese federation, but already they say that they have the right to attack Thailand and other ASEAN countries in self-defense. One dreads what would happen next if they completely conquered Kampuchea, and their country bordered on Thailand!"

This is why supporting the Kampuchean resistance and Democratic Kampuchea is not only just and in conformity with the UN Charter but also necessary for defending and safeguarding peace and stability in Southeast Asia against the Vietnamese and the USSR expansionist policy. For this reason, it is the duty of the ASEAN countries to continue their support for the Kampuchean people's struggle against the Vietnamese aggression despite Nguyen Co Thach's threats.

INDOCHINA PUBLIC HEALTH MEETING OPENS IN VIENTIANE

[Text] The first conference of the Indochinese countries' public health ministers was convened on the morning of 26 July in the capital of Vientiane under the chairmanship of Prof Vannalet Latsapho, acting minister of public health of the LPDR. The conference is being attended by Dr Yit Kim Seng, PRK minister of public health, and his delegation and by Prof Dang Hoi Xuan, SRV minister of public health and his delegation.

The opening ceremony was attended by Phoumi Vongvichit, member of the LPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, deputy prime minister and minister of education, sports and religious affairs; and some ministers, deputy ministers and SPC members. Attending the opening ceremony were Nguyen Xuan and Neou Samom, ambassadors of the SRV and the PRK; and diplomats of socialist countries in Laos.

Prof Vannalet Latsapho spoke on the objectives of the conference. He said it is held to exchange views and further consolidate cooperation and mutual assistance in the public health field among the three Indochinese countries. On this occasion, he invited Deputy Prime Minister Phoumi Vongvichit to deliver a speech to open the conference officially. Later, Dr Yit Kim Seng and Dang Hoi Xuan took turns speaking. They stressed that the first conference of the public health ministers of Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam is an inevitable advance in the time-honored tradition of militant solidarity among the three Indochinese peoples and of the fraternal cooperation of the three countries' public health cadres who have participated in a protracted struggle for national independence and socialism.

They said: We have encountered several common problems and shared a common objective -- that is, to enable the people to have good health by the year 2000. We have the same favorable conditions and the same difficulties which must be surmounted. We have successfully resolved such problems to some extent through bilateral cooperation agreements. We have positively implemented these agreements and have basically recorded satisfactory results. The need to build and defend each country under the present historical conditions calls on us to work further in the international arena and in the western Pacific and Southeast Asian regions. A new issue has been raised for us to resolve through close and harmonious cooperation and mutual assistance on a broad scale. This will develop the capabilities of our public health work, thereby enabling us to contribute among the three countries. In conclusion, they pledged to do their best to make the conference successful and to implement the various joint decisions to be adopted by the conference.

The conference will continue until 27 July.

SOUPHANOUVONG VISITS SAVANNAKHET PROVINCE

[Text] On 22 and 23 July LPDR President Souphanouvong visited production bases and construction unit 903 in charge of constructiing Route 9 in Se Tha Muak, Savannakhet Province. He met and cordially chatted with the cadres, engineers and workers of the construction unit and the Soviet engineers attached to the Se Tha Muak area. The president also visited some bridge construction sites along Route 9 and an oil depot construction site with the capacity of storing 875,000 liters of oil.

In addition, the president visited cadres in Muang Phin where he met and cordially chatted with the local cadres, combatants and people.

This visit constitutes an encouragement to them and shows that the party and the state are always concerned about the well-being of the people of all tribes and are trying to bring happiness and a plentiful life to all the people.

Accompanying President Souphanouvong was Souvanna Phouma, the government's adviser.

RADIO URGES VIGILANCE TO SMASH ENEMY SCHEMES

[Unattributed article: "Fully Heighten Revolutionary Vigilance to Smash All Enemy Sabotage Schemes"]

[Text] Respected listeners and beloved comrades and friends: At present, our country is marching along the glorious path toward socialism. Our army and people are energetically engaging in socialist transformation and construction at a time when the situation in the world and in this region are basically favorable to us. Our armed forces have simultaneously and successfully implemented the party's political and military tasks. Each unit, organization, office and combat front have positively consolidated their strength in all respects -- both qualitative and quantitative.

However, the growth and expansion of our armed forces caused great concern to the imperialists and reactionaries, thus, prompting them to intensify their dark schemes to sabotage and obstruct our revolution through various political, military, economic, cultural and diplomatic maneuvers. The enemies' primary objective is to limit, obstruct and sabotage our revolution and to create disturbances and divisions among our people so as to instigate chaos and to weaken our revolutionary forces, thereby blocking our advance toward socialism.

At present, the enemies are using exiled Lao reactionaries, underground forces, and spies to create rifts among the people of all nationalities and to utilize some economic and cultural vestiges left behind by the colonialists, neocolonialists and feudalists to relentlessly undermine our revolution. They are also trying to create divisions among our people and between Laos and other socialist countries, such as between Laos and Vietnam. Simultaneously, they are also trying to undermine our economy.

Beloved comrades and friends: In face of such dangerous enemy schemes our armed forces and people must constantly heighten vigilance. Though having different objectives and intentions, the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing reactionary clique have closely colluded with each other in undermining and sabotaging the revolution in our country. Therefore, our revolutionary army must further heighten their vigilance to smash all the enemies' schemes in order to defend our country and build socialism. Our party, government and LPLA Supreme Command have constantly called on our entire party, army and masses, particularly our armed forces, to heighten vigilance and to stand ready at all times to smash all the enemies' maneuvers promptly, expecially during the current rainy season. While our people are joyously celebrating the glorious success of the third party congress and the various achievements scored in the first half of this year, our armed forces must step up their responsibilities to defend the country resolutely and to maintain security so as to allow our people to carry on their livelihood in peace. Our armed forces must strictly carry out their patrol duties, keep national secrets, and closely follow the movements of enemy spies -- henchmen of the U.S. imperialists and the international reactionaries -- to mete out punishment promptly and suitably.

Only by constantly heightening vigilance, profoundly appreciating and understanding the new tasks and all resolutions adopted by the third party congress, and clearly understanding the enemies' maneuvers will we be able to fulfil gloriously the political and military tasks adopted by the party for the new period, take our country forward, and completely defeat all the enemies of our country.

SRV'S NGUYEN CO THACH ARRIVES FOR TALKS

[By Jim Wolf]

[Excerpts] Bangkok, Jul 28 (AFP) -- Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach arrived here today on the final leg of a four-nation tour, saying he had come for peace, "not quarreling."

Mr Thach, who flew in from Kuala Lumpur, is seeking support for Hanoi's latest initiative on war-torn Cambodia, where Hanoi maintains more than 150,000 troops in defiance of successive United Nations resolutions.

"The problem facing us is a very difficult one," he told reporters at the airport. "No one can have the illusion they can settle it overnight; we must be patient."

"I come here for peace, cooperation and friendship, not for quarreling," he said.

He was met at the airport here by Ambassador-at-Large Phaibun Maolanon. He is to confer with Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila tomorrow, but will not meet Thai Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon, though he did meet the Malaysian head of government, Dr Mahathir Mohamed.

OFFICIALS, MEDIA COMMENT ON THACH'S VISIT

Thanat's Comments

BK280219 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 28 Jul 82 p 1

[Excerpt] Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach will not reach a solution to the Kampuchean problem during his visit here "unless he changes his manner," Deputy Premier Thanat Khoman said yesterday. Thanat said that so far Thach's regional tour had only created a negative image of him and Hanoi.

Indications are that Thach will be coolly received when he arrives this afternoon, following his reported threat in Singapore to support insurgent movements in the ASEAN countries.

Thach denies making the threat, although he did say Vietnamese troops might cross into Thailand in pursuit of Khmer Rouge guerrillas.

Thanat described the reported threat to undermine the ASEAN nations as an act of irresponsibility and a sign Thach lacks international diplomatic manner.

He reminded Hanoi that the last time it pushed into Thai territory it had to retreat after sustaining heavy losses.

"I hope he changes his attitude and has a clear mind to find the right words to solve this international problem, as Thailand and ASEAN are also looking for the same solution in a peaceful way," Thanat said.

[Editor-in-chief The Chongkhhadikit article: "Whatever Thach Has in Mind, We're Ready"]

[Text] When Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach arrives today, our foreign minister is prepared for whatever he may be up to.

His one-man "invasion" like the armed incursion into Ban Non Mak Mun, will unify the people -- and ASEAN. As he made his way here, he voiced threats. Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan reported that he had threatened to subvert the ASEAN countires supporting the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea. Typically, to confuse the people of the world, he denied he had said such a thing to Dhanabalan. Whether he did or not should be judged by the character and history of public statements of both persons.

Then Thach went ahead and made more threats -- this time about "hot pursuit" of Khmer resistance forces into Thai territory.

It doesn't seem to matter to him that Vietnam is already carrying out these actions against Thailand. In subversion, the Vietnamese have done it for years, in fact, since the early 1960's with a school at Hoa Binh, near Hanoi, for training Thais in ideology, propaganda work, agitation, guerrilla warfare -- subversion is the name of the game.

Since China stopped material support of the outlawed Communist Party of Thailand (CPT), Vietnam has actively sponsored insurgency elements using Mukdahan as base for expansion of subversion in the northeast. It must be remembered that at one time Vietnam worked with both the Soviet Union and China to undermine the Bangkok government in the rural areas of the region.

As for "hot pursuit," the Vietnamese forces, with Heng Samrin troops acting as veneer, have already done this quite occasionally, disrupting Thai villagers' lives and endangering them.

Thailand will not be intimidated in any way by such threats, real or idle.

Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila will have been informed of what Thach had said in Singapore and Malaysia, our ASEAN partners. He will have noted any discrepancies or inconsistencies or any particular line Thach is taking during his current tour. In this manner he will be prepared for any propaganda, provocation, prevarication or positive pronouncement.

Thach has reportedly requested a meeting with Secretary-General Prasong Sunsiri of the National Security Council, who regretfully turned it down. Undoubtedly, he had been told about some disagreement over policy towards Kampuchea. Perhaps he might want to learn about it at first hand and find a way to exploit it. However, there has been a closing of ranks loud enough for him to hear about during his meanderings in this region.

One thing he must realise is that, though there may have been varying views on ways and means, there is no difference of opinion in the government and among the people that the best solution for the Kampuchea problem is to implement the United Nations General Assembly resolution on the affair. The resolution calls for the total withdrawal of Vietnamese forces from Kampuchea and for self-determination for the Kampuchean people.

Evidently, this is not what Hanoi wants. So, bringing together in Ho Chi Minh City the foreign ministers of the pro-Vietnam Laotian Government and the Vietnamese puppet regime in Phnom Penh, Thach made counter-proposals for partial withdrawal of Vietnamese forces from Kampuchea, a "safety zone" along the Thai-Kampuchea border, and an international conference on Southeast Asia.

If he brings these suggestions up, Thailand is prepared to tell him that, first, they are a rehash of old proposals; second, they are being presented as a means to get around the UN resolution; third, they are unacceptable; and, fourth, we as loyal UN members should stick to principles of the UN Charter.

While those in other parts of the world who fail to understand the psychology of the Vietnamese leadership may be fooled into thinking that the Ho Chi Minh City proposals are for "peace," Thailand, as a result of experience, knows what each of the suggestions means.

A partial withdrawal has been taking place annually as tired or demoralised or about-to-defect or due-for-rotation troops are sent home following the end of the dry-season offensive and the beginning of the rains. But fresh troops are always sent in to replace them when a new offensive is to begin.

A partial withdrawal will be considered worthwhile if it is the start of a schedule for total withdrawal. It is realised here that no precipitate total withdrawal can take place all at once and that measures have to be taken to ensure the safety of the withdrawing soldiers.

The "safety zone" idea, obviously adapted from the previous "demilitarised zone" proposal from the Vientiane meeting of the Indochina foreign ministers, cannot be accepted by any Thai Government. Declaring any part of Thailand, even along the border, a "no man's land" is tantamount to giving up sovereignty over it, and our constitution absolutely prohibits that.

An international conference on Southeast Asia is evidently meant to divert attention from the Kampuchean problems to other regional problems which have nothing to do with the Vietnamese invasion of that country. Thailand is going to insist that any conference should be held within the terms of the International Conference on Kampuchea.

The campaign being conducted throughout the world by Vietnamese propagandists, particularly Thach himself, is that the Kampuchean seat in the UN be declared "empty." This suggestion is a clever one, paving the way -- Hanoi hopes -- eventually for seating of the Heng Samrin regime as the legal representative of Kampuchea in the UN.

Against Vietnam's "empty seat" tactic, ASEAN has now a trump card -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk heading a coalition of Khmer patriots under the name of Democratic Kampuchea. Now that, after much vacillating, he had made up his mind that he has done the right thing for his country and people, he is going all-out to campaign for all the international support he can get to save his country, the first essential task being to retain the UN seat.

Prince Sihanouk is the man that the Vietnamese really fear. They know that he is the only one who can mobilise the Khmer people so that they can make Kampuchea untenable for them.

He has already issued his battle cry: "Hitler is alive in Hanoi!"

With the Prince, ASEAN is also presenting the Vietnamese with a chance to negotiate a peace settlement. Hanoi owes a lot to the prince, who granted sanctuary for its forces in eastern Cambodia (as Kampuchea was then known) while they fought the American defenders of South Vietnam. But it first has to regain the trust of the prince who believes that he has been betrayed.

It must be recalled here that the Vietnamese had been firm supporters of the Khmer Rouge until they decided to go their own way. Both Vietnamese and the Soviets vehemently decried the first charges of genocide made against the Khmer Rouge. Then, when the Khmer Rouge turned to China for help, they moved into Kampuchea.

If Thach brings up the question of the "Chinese threat" from Kampuchea, he can be told that the only way to get rid of it is to talk to Prince Sihanouk and abide by the UN resolution. A Kampuchea that is independent and neutral will be no danger to any of its neighbours. Such a Kampuchea can only come about if all the Vietnamese forces leave and let the Khmer people choose their own government.

By its acceptance of the situation in Laos, Thailand has shown unmistakably that it respects the will of the people.

Thailand and its ASEAN allies can promise to cooperate in Vietnam's economic recovery, obtain the assistance of Western and other countries for Vietnam, and work with the Indochina states for regional peace and progress -- if only Vietnam will just leave Kampuchea alone and permit its people to decide their own nation's destiny. That's all we ask.

VOFA SAYS THACH 'PLAYING GAMES WITH ASEAN'

BK271350 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Station commentary: "Is Hanoi Just Playing Games With ASEAN?"]

[Text] Foreign Minister of Vietnam Nguyen Co Thach and his four-man delegation are visiting four noncommunist Asian countries, namely, Singapore, Burma, Malaysia and Thailand. The Vietnamese delegation is scheduled to leave Kuala Lumpur for Bangkok on 28 July 1982.

Western diplomats and observers have pointed out that the timing of the Vietnamese foreign minister's tour of Southeast Asian countries is clearly intended to steal thunder from the newly-formed Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea.

Hanoi has realized that with His Royal Highness Prince Norodom Sihanouk as president, the coalition government will receive greater credibility from the international community. They have also criticized that the Vietnamese foreign minister's tour is aimed at convincing the five ASEAN countries that Hanoi is serious about its claimed partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and the proposal that more of such troop withdrawals would be made if Thailand would stop providing assistance for the coalition government. But the UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL, or UPI has recently reported that Hanoi's pledge to a withdrawal of some of its troops from Kampuchea was only a cover up for moving more Vietnamese soldiers into the area. It has further reported that the arrival of fresh Vietnamese troops in western Kampuchea also brought an increase in the level of fighting near the Thai-Kampuchean border. According to the UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL, a Vietnamese defector reported that the Vietnamese troops have been moving into the Thai-Kampuchean border area since shortly after Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach announced a substantial troop withdrawal from the region on 6 July 1982.

In addition, the French news agency, on the day the troops were reported to have arrived back by VNA, reported from Ho Chi Minh City that there was no sign of the returning Vietnamese soldiers from Kampuchea. At the same time, no troop movement of any kind in the city or along Highway No 1 from Kampuchea was observed. All these have made the observers and Western diplomats continue to wonder whether Hanoi is merely playing games with ASEAN.

Foreign Minister Thach's recent announcement on the substantial troop withdrawal has reminded ASEAN leaders of the grim lesson they had when Vietnamese President Pham Van Dong made a promise during his visit to the Southeast Asian region in October 1978 that a dispute over the Kampuchean issue would not be solved by a use of force. But 2 months later, Vietnamese troops invaded Kampuchea.

UN KAMPUCHEA COMMITTEE DELEGATION ARRIVES

[By Toemsak C. Phalanuphan]

[Text] Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee of the International Conference on Kampuchea (ICK) Massamba Sarre, stating that he is "very hopeful" to find a peaceful solution to the Kampuchean problem in the framework of the UN resolutions, said yesterday he is willing to meet Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach to discuss the conflict.

Sarre, who is Senegal's ambassador to the UN, is leading a team appointed by the UN-sponsored International Conference on Kampuchea for a four-day fact-finding trip to Thailand.

He and his team, which includes Malaysian Ambassador to the UN Zainal Abidin bin Sulong, will call on Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila at the Foreign Ministry this morning to discuss the recent developments in the Kampuchean situation.

Tomorrow they will visit Khao-i-dang holding centre in Aranyapathet where some 40,000 displaced Kampucheans are being held. Representatives of Japan, Nigeria and Peru are also on this team which arrived in Bangkok yesterday morning.

Sarre told the NATION he is willing and ready to meet everyone, including Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach who is scheduled to arrive in Bangkok this afternoon. Sarre will also meet representatives of the newly-formed Democratic Kampuchean (DK) Coalition Government if they want to discuss the Kampuchean situation with him here.

Sarre said: "Our main objection here is to see the Thai foreign minister. However, if meeting others can help, why not?"

After Thailand, the team will also visit Austria, Sweden, China, Japan, and the U.S. After returning to the UN, the team will submit a report evaluating all the "new elements" in the Kampuchean situation to the UN General Assembly.

This report will tell whether the situation warrants holding another round of the ICK. Vietnam and the Soviet bloc have boycotted the ICK, which is demanding complete withdrawal of all foreign troops from Kampuchea and a free election supervised by the UN to set up a neutral government in Phnom Penh.

Sarre reported that Western European governments welcomed in principle the recent developments that included the formation of the DK Coalition Government and the Vietnamese four-point proposal in the Ho Chi Minh communique of July 7.

They are waiting to see what will develop from the current ASEAN tour of Thach, Sarre added.

He also said the Western European governments believe that situation in Kampuchea has been stabilized and that they did not foresee an escalation of the conflict. "We are very hopeful that a peaceful solution could soon be found. But we also know it is going to take time," Sarre said. "We are slow but we are working," he added.

Ten nations are represented on the ICK Ad Hoc Committee. They are: Thailand, Malaysia, Sri Lanka, Japan, Nepal, Senegal, Nigeria, Sudan, Belgium, and Peru. All except Peru, which abstained, voted to give the Kampuchean seat in the UN General Assembly to the Khmer Rouge government last year.

This year, the UN General Assembly is expected to discuss and vote on the Kampuchean seat in mid-October. "This question is one of the first few issues to be taken up. And the outcome of this year's voting is likely to be the same as last year," Sarre predicted. Last year, the DK won the seat over vigorous opposition from the Soviet bloc by a vote of 79 to 36 with 30 abstaining.

PRIME MINISTER PREM RECEIVES UNICEF SPECIAL ENVOY

[Text] Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon recieved visiting Prince Talal ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz Al Sa'ud of Saudi Arabia in his position as a UNICEF special envoy and president of the Arab Gulf Fund at Government House at 0930 today. The prince is visiting Thailand from 25 to 28 July. The prime minister and the UNICEF special envoy exchanged views on the Indochinese refugee issue.

They agreed that the refugee problem is the responsibility of the world, not just Thailand's. The prince said that Thailand and Saudi Arabia are similar in that they are both surrounded by countries of different administrative systems. For this reason, leaders of Thailand and Saudi Arabia ought to visit each other in order to exchange views on how to resolve their countries' problems.

The Saudi prince inquired about the king's health with the prime minister, who replied that the king's health has improved significantly.

The Saudi prince then participated in a meeting with Deputy Prime Minister Thanat Khoman and other senior Thai officials at Government House. He was given a briefing on Thailand's fifth national economic and social development plan. The prince expressed understanding of Thailand's problems and would give more assistance, such as for the establishment of a government organization for assistance of parents and children. He asked Thailand to submit the project for UNICEF and the Arab Gulf fund for assistance.

On trade with Saudi Arabia, the prince said Saudi Arabia wants to buy more goods from Thailand and suggested that Thai and Saudi trade representatives exchange visits. He also encouraged cultural exchanges between the two countries.

BANGKOK POST INTERVIEWS KHUN SA FORCE COMMANDER

[By Subin Khuankaeo]

[Text] Chiang Mai -- A former Kuomintang army colonel who claimed to lead the forces which clashed with the leftist Wa National Army [WNA] has denied reports that the weekend battle on Doi Lang was for control of the opium trail. On Saturday, the Shan United Army of Khun Sa, assisted by Kuomintang irregular troops and Lahu (Muser) hilltribesmen, seized a major WNA stronghold in fierce fighting.

In an exclusive interview with the POST the Lahu State Army's [LSA] encampment on Doi Lang, Col Chang Si Kuang said the "tripartite" forces' only aim was to uproot the WNA force residing on Doi Lang because of their dislike for the communists. Chang was installed as the leader of the joint forces with the consent of Khun Sa.

The WNA, a major supporter of the Burma Communist Party, is reportedly led by A-bi and had about 300 guerrillas stationed on Doi Lang before Saturday's fighting. The WNA were pursued by the joint forces and their troops were broken up into small groups, Chang claimed. Sporadic clashes continued but the casualties of both sides were not known.

Speaking through an interpreter, Col Chang said he has lived in Thailand for 18 years and felt grateful towards the Thai Government for allowing him to stay. His forces would want to repay in kind by "protecting" the Thai border and repelling the Burmese Communists, he said.

The SUA's Chief Coordinator Chai Sai referred to the ouster of Khun Sa's men from Ban Hin Taek early this year as "a thing of the past." He said that as the SUA were fighting the Burmese Communists, the Thai authorities could help by allowing wounded SUA troops to be treated at Thai hospitals. Chai Sai said despite its war against the communists, his force is caught in the middle and is harrassed by both Thai and Burmese troops.

SUA strategic Chief Li Tae Chong and LSA leader Pha Cha-ue were among those present during the interview.

Meanwhile, about 200 Thai families and 500 hilltribes people have moved out of Doi Lang Mountain to the low land. The Thai authorities have stationed several units of border patrol police and village defence volunteers to guard Thai villages on Doi Lang since early this month.

VFF ISSUES APPEAL ON OPPOSING U.S. ARMS RACE

BK280149 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 3 Jul 82 p 1

[Appeal to the nation by the VFF and Vietnam Peace Committee -- date not given]

[Text] At present, the U.S. imperialists, the bellicose Reagan administration and other reactionary forces are frantically pursuing an arms race policy. This threatens mankind with the catastrophe of a world war in which nuclear and other destructive weapons would be used.

We must stop their cruel acts and dangerous schemes. Mankind's destiny and the peace and security of nations must be protected. These are the deep hopes and pressing requirements of mankind.

Through the second UN General Assembly special conference on disarmament and with various forms of struggle, the governments and peoples of various nations have expressed their support for the peace initiatives of the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. They have also resolutely demanded that the bellicose forces stop their arms race and implement disarmament.

The Vietnamese people while striving to build socialism and firmly defend their socialist fatherland must enthusiastically participate in this large-scale struggle of the peoples all over the world. They must take positive action to show their stand by immediately affixing their names to this petition in order to contribute to the joint voices and acts of thousands of millions of people throughout the five continents who are resolutely struggling for the success of the cause of peace and disarmament.

THAI CRITICISM OF SUPPORT FOR CGDK NOTED

[Text] According to a VNA report, many newspapers in Thailand recently have strongly criticized the Thai authorities' policy of tailing after foreign countries in the farce of establishing a coalition government against the PRK.

Stressing the danger of this policy and demanding its review, the PATINYA weekly on 12 July carried an open letter from its editorial staff to thai Prime Minister Prem saying that the fact that the Thai Government supports the so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea [CGDK] is an act of interference in the internal affairs of another country. It asked the government to review this policy. PATINYA also criticized the Thai Government for pursuing an adventurous policy which binds the nation's interests to those of big nations, which seriously effects the Thai domestic situation. It demanded that the government pursue a genuine neutral policy without interfering in Kampuchean internal affairs, and develop relations with the Indochinese countries.

The paper MATUPHUM on 8 July carried an article saying Chairman Heng Samrin's government has restored and developed the country considerably. The majority of the Kampuchean people have supported the Heng Samrin government. As a result, Thailand should not adhere too scrupulously to the UN resolutions in refusing to recognize this government since not all UN resolutions are correct.

The paper pointed out that Thailand made a serious error when it participated in the farce of establishing the coalition government against the PRK. This error is tantamount to Thailand's collusion with the United States in the former war against Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. It is like setting a fire close to one's house.

DO MUOI LEADS GROUP TO HONOR WAR VETERANS

OW272343 Hanoi VNA in English 1538 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA July 27 -- A delegation of the Communist Party Central Committee, the National Assembly, the Council of State, the Council of Ministers, the Vietnam Fatherland Front, the army and the Hanoi People's Committee this morning laid a wreath at the Hanoi war monument.

The delegation included Do Muoi, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party Central Committee and vice-chairman of the Council of Ministers; Huynh Tan Phat, vice-president of the Council of State; Hoang Quoc Viet, president of the presidium of the Vietnam Fatherland Front Central Committee; Lieutenant-General Bui Phung, vice-minister of national defence; and representatives of mass organisations.

The delegation also visited the sick soldiers at the army hospital 108.

In Ho Chi Minh City, the day was marked by visits to sick and wounded armymen and war invalids and families of fallen combatants.

Le Quang Chanh, vice-chairman of the people's committee, and Hap Bunse, consul-general of the People's Republic of Kampuchea, visited families whose children are discharging their international obligation in Kampuchea.

DIRECTIVE ISSUED ON ECONOMIC UNIT REORGANIZATION

BK270920 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 25 Jul 82

[Text] The Council of Ministers recently issue directive No 120 on the reorganization of production and construction establishments in the economy.

After stressing the requirement, significance, standard and content for reorganizing production and construction establishments in the present situation, the directive points out: It is imperative to concentrate efforts on fulfilling main economic targets, especially agricultural, grain and food production targets and those of the cultivation of key industrial crops. We must strive to develop the production of consumer goods, especially staple goods, for the people's daily life and for export, and goods which can generate large income for the state. We must also develop effectively various heavy and key industrial branches such as the electricity, coal, pharmaceutical, engineering, and construction materials branches.

HAIPHONG WAR VETERANS -- The Duyen Hai engineering factory in Haipong municipality has provided jobs to more than 500 war veterans, most of them technical workers. Among this group, 11 had furthered their studies at the state university and subsequently returned to work at the factory as engineers. Many others have performed their tasks outstandingly and have been awarded with titles of emulative and progressive workers. [Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 20 Jul 82 BK]

HAI HUNG WAR VETERANS -- Some 80 percent of war veterans who have returned to Hai Hung Province are provided with jobs according to their ability and suitable to their health. More than 7,200 wounded soldiers are working at various plant nurseries; almost 2,000 are working at handicraft production establishments and 500 more at animal husbandry farms. AUSTRALIA

ALP WANTS NUCLEAR-FREE SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE

[From the "Australian Insight" program]

[Text] The deputy leader of the opposition Labor Party, Mr Lionel Bowen, says if his party came to power at the next elections he would work toward the abolition of nuclear weapons in the Southern Hemisphere. Mr Bowen, who is the Australian Labor Party's [ALP] spokesman on foreign affairs, believes Indonesia could be a partner in achieving a nuclear-free region. He is talking to (Michael Donn) in Sydney.

[Begin Bowen recording] The Northern Hemisphere has the superpowers in it and they have the nuclear weapons. The Southern Hemisphere hasn't got the superpowers and therefore there is a chance in my view to get all the countries in the Southern Hemisphere, including the oceans -- with the Pacific and Indian Oceans, and people who are in those areas -- to come to an agreement that we have a nuclear-free zone. That would still allow transit of warships from the superpowers, but it would guarantee that there will be no launching of weapons from the zone and no storage of weapons in the zone.

[Question] Are you looking at a complete ban on the nuclear industry in the Southern Hemisphere or just nuclear weapons?

[Answer] No. You can't ban the nuclear industry because in some cases it has to be allowed for peaceful uses, such as electricity generation. It is a dangerous industry, but we are talking about nuclear weapons in those terms.

[Question] Are you trying to get the concept of a nuclear-free Southern Hemisphere written into the ALP policy for the next election?

[Answer] Yes, I think we could do it. Yes, there is no problem about it from ALP policy. The big issue for us is to get the rest of the nations in the Southern Hemisphere to agree, and I think they would.

[Question] Do you really think it is feasible to get a country like Indonesia or, perhaps, even Argentina for that matter, to be so concerned with peace that they would put aside the thought of acquiring nuclear weapons or using nuclear weapons?

[Answer] Well, Argentina would be part of the Treaty of Tlatelolco, which means a nuclear-free zone. I see nothing wrong with that. Indonesia doesn't want nuclear weapons because it recognizes that there is no future with a nuclear war. And I think that is the main rason (? why Malaysia did). Indonesia also would be of undoubted benefit to us in our negotiations together in the whole of Southeast Asia relating to ASEAN and Vietnam so they would be a partner in terms of peace and stability of the region.

[Question] Why have you come up with this concept now?

[Answer] Oh, I think it has developed because of what is a known factor. If the Antarctic is a nuclear-free zone by an international treaty agreed on, if Latin America is a nuclear-free zone by a treaty agree on, if the world has been talking about a zone of peace in the Pacific and the Indian Oceans it does not require much more imagination to add in a few of the land masses in the area -- to say, well why don't we deal with it south of the Equator. Nobody is going to attack us in the Southern Hemisphere in my view. Nor should we be the launching pad from the Southern Hemisphere to the Northern Hemisphere. So if we get the superpowers to agree to that, I think we have made some contribution to world peace.

[Question] When can we see a nuclear-free Southern Hemisphere?

[Answer] As soon as you get a Labor government.

[Question] As quick as that?

[Answer] Well, I would think the initiative would commence. I see no real problem in starting that initiative. We will certainly get no initiative from the present government.

[Question] But you wouldn't expect it to get bogged down, such as with the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks?

[Answer] Not at all because it would not have come into that. I mean, there is no question of any storage of weapons, nuclear capacity, in the Southern Hemisphere. The difficulty we would have would be with the French, who probably still want to continue their tests. But I think the intelligence of Mitterrand and others would see that perhaps they can do without that facility. [End recording]

NEW CALEDONIA

COMMANDOES SENTENCED FOR RAID ON ASSEMBLY

NC232004 Paris AFP in English 1954 GMT 23 Jul 82

[Text] Paris, July 23 (AFP) -- Five people were sentenced today in Noumea, New Caledonia, for their participation in yesterday's commando raid into the South Pacific island capital's local assembly, it was reported here. The commando raid was staged by about 30 hooded members of a rightwing grouping that opposes reforms now under deliberation and that are pushed by the leftwing government in Paris. The reforms aim towards the promotion of the indigenous Canaque population.

The five participants in the violence, in which 17 people, including a Socialist assemblyman, were injured, were being tried in flagrante delicto. Two men received 20 days in prison and five years of loss of civic rights, the three others suspended sentences and fines. Another eight people arrested following the raid are to be tried on Monday, as judicial authorities pursue their investigation into who masterminded the operation.

The French state secretary for overseas territories, Henri Emmanuelli, charged in Paris today that the raiders had enjoyed the complicity of certain assemblymen from the opposition. In Noumea, the leader of the left-allied Independence Party, Roch Pidjot, suggested there was police complicity, too. He pointed to the small number of police that had turned out for the protection of the assembly. The most explicit charge was brought in Paris by Communist Deputy Jacques Brunhes, who said that the local new-Guallist movement was behind the extreme right violence.

State Secretary Emmanuelli declared that the government would "not let itself be intimidated" and go through with its reforms. They include a land reform, cultural promotion for the Canaques, development of the island's interior areas, and inclusion of local customary law into island jurisprudence. The measures have been depicted here as designed to take the wind out of the sails of the island's independence movement.

Meanwhile, the man charged with last September's murder of Independence Party leader Pierre Declercq was released today by the Noumea appeals court on 4,000-dollar bail. The man, Dominique Canon, 21, has claimed all along that he was innocent.

In an unrelated development concerning another French overseas possession, Mr Emmanuelli let it be known today he would sue the mayor of St Paul, on the Indian Ocean Island of La Reunion, for slander. The mayor, Paul Benard, sued the state secretary for "racist declarations," because Mr Emmanuelli in a press conference had allegedly referred to "cultural and racial differences between La Reunion and France." Mr Emmanuelli claims his words were misrepresented. A local La Reunion court has already declared itself incompetent to hear the mayor's charge, Mr Emmanuelli enjoying immunity from its prosecution as a government member.

U.S. URGED NOT TO IGNORE MAOIST THREAT TO ASIA

BK271045 Jakarta ANTARA in English 1020 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Jakarta, July 27 (ANTARA) -- Indonesian OBSERVER newspaper today editorially attaches great importance to Indonesia's Defence and Security Minister concurrently Armed Forces Commander General M. Yusuf's current visit to Washington "as he may be able to gain some insight of current United States political and security interest in Southeast Asia".

It stated: "Politically speaking, there is no divide that separates the United States and Indonesia in Southeast Asia. Their views on how to deal with the danger of communism are perfectly reconciled.

"Of late, some government spokesmen in Indonesia have been vocal in voicing concern about the latest danger of communism in Indonesia. Latent or real, the public is confident that General Yusuf has all the means at his disposal to cope with it. In point of fact, the people do not have to be told or taught about communist danger in whatever corner it may lurk. Through experiences the people have been aware of this and they also realize that communism will have no fertile ground to blossom in Indonesia.

"But it is on the precise United States handling of security problems in Southeast Asia which the Indonesian public has been left in doubt. As can be seen, the United States, in its pre-occupation on the danger of communism, has resorted to a containment policy of the Soviet Union by way of dumping a huge amount of American weapons and troops along the entire length of the Soviet Union border.

"But despite this impressive-looking cordon sanitaire which the United States has built from Okinawa, PRC, South Korea, the Philippines, Turkey and West Europe, with observation posts in some points in South Asia and in the Middle East, it appears that the Soviet Union has been able to pierce it in some strategic points, or to overfly it. Indochina, Afghanistan, Ethiopia, Mozambique, Angola, Cuba and Nicaragua (?are cases) in point.

"Worse still, through too much preoccupation on the Soviet Union posing as the biggest threat to the security of Asia and the Pacific, the United States has allowed Chinese communism to get a strong foothold in the Philippines. By fanning hatred and dissatisfaction of the barrios people against the 16-year-old unpopular regime of President Ferdinand Marcos, Chinese communism plays a dominant role in future Philippine politics. The entire island of Negros in the central part of the Philippines and a multitude of Red pockets throughout the country are reported to be in the grip of Mao-oriented Philippine communist insurgents.

"It is no more that Islamic Moro insurgents who have put Mrs Imelda Marcos on her desperate flight to Moscow. It is the Mao-oriented local communists in the Philippines that prompted her to recruit the support of the Kremlin for her government's fight against them. All this, coupled with the demand of a Philippines cardinal for President Ferdinand Marcos to step down in order to prevent a communist take-over in the Philippines should be a strong reminder to the United States how badly incorrect U.S. security arragements have been placed in Southeast Asia.

"As a guest (of Indonesia), General Yusuf should have the patience and courtesy to listen to his hosts in Washington. But as a friend he should give them some pointers as to how to prevent communist take-over in Southeast Asia. And in this it is perhaps timely for the general to tell his friends in Washington to stop supporting unpopular regimes which are only bent on enriching themselves".

SUPREME SOVIET DELEGATION ARRIVES 26 JULY

[Text] July 27 (ANTARA) -- A Soviet parliamentary delegation headed by the deputy chairman of the Supreme Soviet Presidium, Antanas Stasevich Barkauskas, arrived here by air Monday afternoon for an official visit to this country at the invitation of the Indonesian parliament.

In a prss statement issued upon arrival at Halim Perdanakusumah International Airport, Barkauskas, 65, said that the Soviet Union already has and continues to propose that the relations between Indonesia and the Soviet Union should be further deepened. Barkauskas, who is also chairman of the Supreme Soviet Presidium of the Soviet Socialist Republic of Lithuania, explained that progress in the relations between the two countries was in agreement with their respective interests.

In the Soviet Union the significance of such relations were laid on the preservation of various kinds of regular contacts between the Soviet parliament as the highest legislative body of the country with the Indonesian parliament.

He expressed hope that their visit, meetings and talks in the future would further strengthen these contacts and deepen mutual understanding and trust. He said his delegation's visit was a return visit on the one made by a delegation of the Indonesian parliament to the Soviet Union in August 1979.

He said at that time the Indonesian parliamentary mission was headed by Speaker Daryatmo and saw with their own eyes that the people of the Soviet Union were sympathetic and respected Indonesia and its talented and diligent people. The visit by the nine-member delegation including its leader was the second made by a Soviet parliamentary mission to Indonesia during the administration of the new order. The first visit was made in 1974.

In the prepared press statement Barkauskas said the traditional relations between the Soviet parliament and Indonesia have been going on for a long time and not for the last decade only.

He admitted that problems had been faced in these relations but the Soviet Union was of the view that the Soviet Union and Indonesia in their international political relations have never faced radical conflicting interests. The Soviet Union did not see a single obstacle which might hamper cooperation with Indonesia including with the other members of the Association of South East Asian Nations, ASEAN. He reiterated a statement issued by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

The first visit by an Indonesian parliamentary mission of the Soviet Union was during the old order regime in 1956. The mission was headed by Speaker Sartono.

The following year the visit was returned by a Soviet parliamentary delegation headed by Voroshilov, chairman of the Supreme Soviet Presidium.

The Soviet, parliamentary delegation was greeted at the airport by Hardjantho, vice speaker of the House; Wang Suwandi, parliamentary secretary; officials of the Department of Foreign Affairs and Soviet Ambassador Shpedko and his staff.

The Barkauskas delegation, after a six-day stay in this country, would fly back to the Soviet Union on Saturday after concluding visits to the cultural and educational center of Yogyakarta and the world famous tourist island of Bali.

The delegation is also scheduled to pay courtesy calls on President Suharto, Vice President Adam Malik, Speaker Daryatmo, Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja, Trade and Cooperative Minister Radius Prawiro and Jakarta Raya Governor Tjokropranolo.

Meeting With Speaker Daryatmo

BK271351 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Text] Parliamentary Speaker Daryatmo said that there have been no problems in relations between Indonesia and the Soviet Union and he hopes that the visit of the Soviet parliamentary delegation to Indonesia will further strengthen these relations. This was stated by the speaker when he received a courtesy call from the visiting Soviet parliamentary delegation in Jakarta today.

The nine-member Soviet parliamentary delegation arrived in Jakarta yesterday evening for a 5-day reciprocal visit to Indonesia at the invitation of the Indonesian parliamentary leadership.

According to Daryatmo, there are three ways to promote relations between the two countries, namely, through the government, through the parliament and through the private sector.

SUDOMO BRIEFS SUHARTO ON POST-ELECTION SITUATION

BK271148 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 0700 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Excerpts] The latest developments in the security situation in the country were reported by the deputy commander of the armed forces-commander of the Security and Order Restoration Command, Admiral Sudomo, to President Suharto at the Bina Graha building this afternoon.

Following his 1-hour meeting with the president, Admiral Sudomo told newsmen that the security situation in the country is generally good and stable and that everything is under control. This can be attributed to the high consciousness of the public security and order.

Touching on the excesses of the recent general elections, Sudomo said that many cases have been completely solved. This is the first time in Indonesian history that excesses arising from the general elections were resolved immediately. He said that out of the excesses, 40 cases have been solved through the courts while another 94 cases are about to be brought to the court. Sudomo said that the persons involved in the cases were not detained.

Report on Thach's Talks

[By N.G. Nair]

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, July 27 (AFP) -- Malaysia has agreed to study some of the Indochinese proposals aimed at easing tension in Southeast Asia in the light of clarifications given here today by visiting Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach.

The proposals were contained in the joint communique issued by the three Indochinese foreign ministers of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia after their meeting in Ho Chi Minh City earlier this month.

They include the convening of an international conference with the participation of the Indochinese and Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) states, India and Burma, along with the five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council.

Mr Thach continued his discussions on the Cambodian issue with his Malaysian counterpart Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie at the Foreign Ministry here this afternoon.

After the one-hour meeting, the secretary general of the Malaysian Foreign Ministry, Tan Sri Zakaria Ali, told newsmen that Mr Thach had explained "some of the aspects of the Ho Chi Minh City proposal, including the proposal for an international conference."

"He asked the Malaysian minister to consider and study the proposals. We agreed to study them on the basis of the clarifications," Mr Zakaria said. He declined to elaborate on the nature of the clarification. ASEAN had earlier dismissed the Ho Chi Minh City proposal saying (?there was) nothing new in it.

Since his arrival here on Sunday in the course of a tour of countries in the region, Mr Thach had two rounds of discussions with Mr Ghazali and a 50-minute meeting with the Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad. The discussions were devoted to the Cambodian issue.

Mr Zakaria repeated this statement yesterday that there was no agreement between the two sides on the "approaches to resolve the Cambodian problem." (?Mr Zakaria) reiterated the Malaysian position that a political solution to the Cambodian conflict was essential for durable peace to be sustained in Southeast Asia. Mr Zakaria pointed out that while [words indistinct] the problem to be solved in accordance with the declaration of the International Conference on Cambodia, Vietnam continued to be opposed to it.

He said Malaysia viewed the resolution of the Cambodian problem as the first step towards realising the concept of the zone of peace, freedom and neutrality (ZOPFAN) in the region. Mr Thach accepted the concept of ZOPFAN but insisted that Cambodia should not be dealt with in isolation from the rest of the region. The two ministers agreed to maintain contact and continue the dialogue on Cambodia, Mr Zakaria said.

Mr Thach will have another meeting with Mr Ghazali over breakfast tommorrow, when the discussions would be of an informal nature.

Earlier today, Mr Thach exchanged views with the Malaysian minister of trade and industry, Tengku Ahmad Rithauddeen.

He will address a press conference tomorrow morning before leaving for Bangkok on the last leg of his current tour. He has already visited Singapore and Rangoon.

Thach's Press Conference

BK280511 Hong Kong AFP in English 0354 GMT 28 Jul 82

[By N.G. Nair]

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, July 28 (AFP) -- Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said here today it was a good sign that Malaysia had agreed to "examine very carefully" the Indochinese proposal for an international conference on Southeast Asia.

Speaking at a news conference at the end of his four-day visit, Mr Thach described Malaysia's reaction to the proposal as "very responsive." Although Malaysia had not accepted the proposal, it had not rejected it, he said.

Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali had told Mr Thach that he would study the proposal carefully in the light of clarifications provided by the chief Vietnamese diplomat. Mr Thach declined to elaborate on the "clarifications," saying that the nature of the discussions he had here were "confidential."

The proposal for an international conference to discuss the problems of peace and stability in Southeast Asia was among the suggestions made by the foreign ministers of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia after their recent meeting in Ho Chi Minh City.

The Indochinese ministers also proposed creation of "security zone" on the Thai-Camobodian border and announced a partial pullout of Hanoi's more than 150,000 troops in Cambodia, although critics dismissed this as a mere troop rotation.

Mr Thach, who had three rounds of discussins including a breakfast meeting this morning with the Malaysian foreign minister and a talk with Prime Minister Dr Mahathir Mohamed, said he was "more and more optimistic" of narrowing down Hanoi's differences over Cambodia.

The Vietnamese minister, due to fly to Bangkok today on the last leg of a four-nation tour of Southeast Asia, emphasised that he had never used the threat of subversion against the region to retaliate for "hostile actions" against Indochinese countries.

Mr Thach said he had categorically assured Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan and Deputy Prime Minister S. Rajaratnam that Vietnam's right of self-defence "does not include subversion." "I can say without ambiguity, no subversion," he said.

He said that Vietnam hoped it would not have to take self-defence measures in the future, but this did not mean that Hanoi might not "reconsider our position" if hostile actions against Indochinese states continued.

Asked about the progress of the United Nations-sponsored orderly departure programme for the Vietnamese who wished to leave the country for settlement abroad, Mr Thach said that it was "going on, but not very smoothly." This was because of the discrimination in the acceptance by other countries like the United States of people who left under the programme and those who fled illegally, he said. Those who left illegally were treated by other countries as "political refugees" and were not subject to the same bureaucratic restrictions as the normal migrants, he said.

He said the United States was encouraging the illegal departure. The Voice of America (VOA) broadcast weather reports about the sea conditions in the South China Sea and even distributed sea-sickness pills for the boat people, he said.

Mr Thach, who previously visited Singapore and Burma, said that he would meet the Thai foreign minister, Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, during his "unofficial visit" to Thailand.

He said he had accepted invitations to visit Indonesia and Philippines, partners with Malaysia, Thailand and Singapore in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, but the dates for the trips later this year had to be finalised.

Lao Resistance Group

BK280547 Hong Kong AFP in English 0532 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, July 28 (AFP) -- Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said here today that it would be "interference in the internal affairs of Laos" if the Laotian rebels exiled in Thailand were allowed to set up a rival government.

He was replying to a question at his press conference on a Bangkok report that the Laotian rightist leader Gen Phoumi Nosavan, based in Thailand since 1965, was planning to set up a "union government on national liberation" to oppose the Hanoi-backed government in Vientiane.

Mr Thach said it would be a "dangerous precedent" to allow exiles in a country to form an illegal regime although he did not think it constituted any threat to the Vientiane government.

Departure for Bangkok

BK280737 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0600 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Vietnam's Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach left Kuala Lumpur for Bangkok today after a 4-day visit. His visit has failed to bring about any significant breakthrough in the Kampuchean issue. Mr Thach had talks with the prime minister, Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed, and the minister of foreign affairs, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie.

Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir told Mr Thach that Vietnam's invasion of Kampuchea had set a dangerous precedent for other big countries to march into neighboring territories just because they did not like the government in power. The prime minister had stressed to Mr Thach that solution in Kampuchea was not to establish a government of Hanoi's choice as such a government did not have popular local support.

Mr Thach told newsmen he would be making similar visits to Jakarta and Manila in late October.

Commentary on Thach's Talks

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] The Malaysian prime minister, Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed, yesterday reminded the visiting Vietnamese foreign minister, Mr Nguyen Co Thach, that the overall objective of both Malaysia and Vietnam was the same, and that is the attainment of peace and stability for the whole Southeast Asian region. A continuation of the present dialogue between the ASEAN nations and Vietnam was essential if there was to be greater understanding between the two sides. But whilst the channels of communications between Malaysia and Hanoi would always remain open, we will continue to condemn the Vietnamese military invasion of Kampuchea in December 1978, its removal of the Democratic Kampuchea regime and installation of the puppet Heng Samrin regime, Vietnam's continued military occupation of Kampuchea and finally its intransigence and hostile attitude toward its neighbors.

The Vietnamese foreign minister's attempt to link China to the origin of Vietnam's Kampuchean venture has met with skepticism throughout his current tour. His statement that Vietnam would withdraw from Kampuchea the moment China signed a nonaggression pact with that nation has also been widely dismissed as a propaganda ploy. Instead, both Singapore and Malaysia have pointedly reminded him that whatever differences Vietnam has had with Kampuchea, and however legitimate its grievances were against the actions of the Khmer Rouge government which once held power in Phnom Penh, Vietnam has absolutely no right or excuse for invading Kampuchea and toppling the Democratic Kampuchea Government.

The last three and a half years of Vietnam's contact with ASEAN and the United Nations should have taught the lesson that it cannot hoodwink its neighbors or international opinion about the brazen act of aggression it has committed against a weaker neighbor. Nobody, except some communist nations, have accepted its reason for its continued military occupation of Kampuchea. And yesterday, Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir told the Vietnamese foreign minister that Vietnam's invasion of Kampuchea sets a very dangerous precedent for other big countries to march into neighboring territory simply because they do not like the government in power. Such action will cause more countries to be flattened, because any big neighbor can come in if it feels threatened or does not like the government.

The Malaysian prime minister also reminded Mr Nguyen Co Thach of the fact that whatever Vietnam's problems were with Kampuchea, the solution was not to move into that country and set up a government of its choice. The Heng Samrin administration installed by Vietnam, therefore, cannot have the legitimacy of a government of the people's choice.

Observers of the international scene have also discussed the cost of Vietnam's Kampuchean military adventure and have stated that Vietnam is today isolated internationally as it never has been with all its neighbors suspicious and even fearful of its intentions.

Vietnam's economy is in tatters and its people have been deprived of the chance to attain a decent standard of living just because of the greed for glory of an aging and covetous leadership.

Mr Nguyen Co Thach has always attempted to put the blame for Vietnam's actions on its neighbors, but the ball has always remained at Vietnam's feet.

DOCTORS GIVE MARCOS 'CLEAN BILL OF HEALTH'

BK280751 Hong Kong AFP in English 0629 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Manila, July 28 (AFP) -- After rumours that his health is deteriorating, President Ferdinand Marcos said that a medical check-up today had given him a clean bill of health.

Mr Marcos, 64, who said he had an annual check-up every June or July, said off the cuff in a televised speech on natural resource management in the Philippines that doctors had told him he was "supposed to be clear of any malady," and only gave him medicine for a cold. He added that he had a bad habit of staying up nights reading, and "doctors did not find this charming at all."

COURT DISMISSES PETITION AGAINST MARCOS' POWERS

HK250038 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 24 Jul 82

[Text] The Supreme Court yesterday uphold the power of the president to issue decrees after the lifting of martial law and without the concurrence of the Batasang Pambansa. The High Tribunal made this decision on a petition which questioned the legality of presidential decree No 1840. The decree grants tax amnesty and requires taxpayers to file statements of assets and liabilities. The petition, filed by Assemblyman Valentino Ligazpi, asked the court to declare the decree null and void because it was passed without the concurrence of the Batasang Pambansa. Further, Ligazpi said, the stand-by powers granted the president in amendment No 6 of the Constitution were removed from the president when the Constitution was again amended in the plebiscite of April 7, 1981. In dismissing the petition, the high court said amendment No 6 was not in any way altered or modified, much less repealed, by the amendment of 1981.

MRS MARCOS NAMED TO EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

HK260026 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 25 Jul 82

[Text] The ruling party, Kilusang Bagong Lipunan, in a caucus last night unanimously endorsed the appointment of the first lady, Imelda Romualdez Marcos, to be the 8th member of the 15-man Executive Committee. President Marcos withheld approval of the proposal, but said it is about time that members of the Executive Committee be increased.

The Executive Committee, created under the 1981 constitutional amendments, is the highest executive body that takes care of the day-to-day operations of the government. The present seven members are Prime Minister Cesar Virata, Deputy Prime Minister Jose Rono, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, Budget Minister Manuel Alba, Industry Minister Roberto Ongpin, Assemblyman Emmanuel Pelaez, and Cebu Governor (Eduardo Gourias).

Supporters of the proposal cited the need for the first lady to represent Metro Manila, the most populated and important region, and the womanhood, which comprises almost one-half of the population of the country. They pointed out that two of the government's priority programs -- human settlements and the national livelihood program, KKK -- are directly under the first lady. They also cited the need for her to represent Mindanao, being the chairperson of the Southern Philippines Development Authority.

GOVERNMENT ALTERS LABOR EVACUATION POLICY

HK240018 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 23 Jul 82

[Text] The government has altered its policy on the evacuation of Filipino workers from war-torn nations.

Labor Minister Blass Ople said the consensus at an inter-ministerial meeting yesterday was to evacuate only those who are willing to be repatriated. He said total evacuation could affect the momentum gained by the Philippines in foreign labor markets. He said the gains must be maintained in the face of stiff foreign competition. However, Ople maintained that the government will see to it that the safety of Filipinos who choose to remain in their overseas jobs will be ensured.

MARCOS CALLS FOR WAGE INCREASE FREEZE

HK270007 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Excerpt] President Marcos has appealed to labor to temporarily freeze its demand for wage increases, to enable business to survive and recover. Addressing the nation at the opening of the fifth regular session of the Batasan, the president said demands for salary hikes at this time are unrealistic. The president noted that many sectors of industry and business are reeling from world recession and inflation. In the copper and gold industry alone, the president said, as many as 40,000 workers could have been laid off if the government had not stepped in and help them. President Marcos said sacrifice and [word indistinct] are called for at this time.

MILITARY EXPECTS TO SOLVE PELAEZ SHOOTING

HK240014 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 23 Jul 82

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said yesterday the military expects to solve the ambush of Assemblyman Emmanuel Pelaez in the next few days. Enrile said investigators are following up leads and expect to make arrests within the next 24 hours. However, the defense minister refused to say whether there has been a new break or if the probers are pursuing the original theory that more National Liberation Front terrorists may have perpetrated the ambush.

Enrile said the entire armed forces have been mobilized in the hunt for the ambushers. The defense chief said the ambush was an irrational act, and indicated that terrorism has arrived at a new dimension. He noted that in the past 6 months more than 62 government officials and workers have been killed in terrorist attacks.

MNLF Blamed For Shooting

HK240418 Baguio Mountain Province Broadcasting Corporation in English 0400 GMT 24 Jul 82

[Text] PC-INP [Philippine Constabulary-Integrated National Police] Chief Lt Gen Fidel Ramos, after receiving intelligence reports, has said the ambush of Assemblyman Emmanuel Pelaez was the handiwork of the Moro National Liberation Front. Ramos alerted four regional commands in Mindano and central and southern Luzon, including the Metro Manila area. Intelligence reports received by President Marcos said MNLF terrorists are now operating in Metro Manila to create disturbances and violence to get the attention of the Islamic conference which opens next month in Algeria. Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile has also called the ambush on Pelaez an unfortunate and irrational act. He said the perpetrators did a great harm on the country.

Meanwhile, Assemblyman Pelaez has appealed for the possible motive behind his ambush. He himself said he did not know of anyone who could have committed the ambush. Pelaez said he is appealing to everyone to refrain from speculating on the parties responsible for the assassination attempt. He said the authorities should just be allowed to do their job of getting to the bottom of the case. Pelaez remains in good mood and in a stable condition in his heavily guarded room at St Luke's Hospital. Except for some broken ribs, the assemblyman is in top shape. Hospital Director Charles Hearn said Pelaez is well on his way to recovery.

GOVERNMENT TO BRIEF PRC OFFICIALS ON TEXTBOOK ISSUE

OW281223 Tokyo KYODO in English 1213 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 28, KYODO -- The government is arranging a detailed briefing for Chinese Embassy officials here to explain the Japanese Government's criteria for authorizing high school textbooks, Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa announced Wednesday. This follows Chinese official criticism of newly approved Japanese textbooks which use language downgrading the Japanese military invasion of China in the 1930s.

Miyazawa told a press conference that the government also plans to assure the Chinese, through the Japanese ambassador in Beijing, that there has been no change in Japan's attitude towards China since the 1972 Sino-Japan joint communique, which restored diplomatic ties between the two countries. The ambassador has also been asked to sound out as quickly as possible the exact Chinese position on the textbook controversy.

Miyazawa said the purpose of the planned briefing on the textbook authorization system was to clear up any Chinese misunderstandings. He also said the government was thinking of stressing that the change in wording the Japanese attacks on China from "invasion" to "advance" did not indicate any change in the Japanese attitude to its own history.

The government expects to know on Thursday whether the Chinese Embassy officials will accept the briefing.

Complaints have also been heard from South Korea about the textbook revisions, but so far there has been no official communication on the matter from the Seoul government. But Miyazawa expressed the government's willingness to arrange a briefing on the textbook system for the Koreans, too, if they desired.

JAPAN, PRC AGREE TO EXCHANGE DEFENSE PERSONNEL

OW281209 Tokyo KYODO in English 1159 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 28, KYODO -- Japan and China agreed Wednesday to promote further their personnel exchanges in the defense field. The agreement was reached when Chinese Ambassador Song Zhinguang paid his first ever courtesy call on Defense Agency Chief Soichiro Ito.

Ito told Song that Japan was not in a position to cooperate with China in defense affairs, but hoped to improve friendly relations between the two nations by promoting personnel exchanges between the two nations. The agreement leads to the personnel exchanges between Japanese Defense Agency and Chinese Defense Ministry officials, including uniformed personnel.

Seiki Nishihiro, former defense counsellor and now director general of the Education and Training Bureau, visited Beijing last January at the invitation of the Chinese Defense Ministry.

The Chinese ambassador told Ito that China maintained its stand that Sino-Soviet relations can make no progress in the foreseeable future unless the Soviet Union changes its hegemonistic policy, despite some opinions saying that Sino-Soviet relations might be improved, a reference to the recent visit of Soviet sportsmen to China.

Song also said the Beijing government was maintaining its policy of peaceful reunification of Taiwan to the motherland. Although diplomatic relations between China and the United States are strained as a result of American arms sales to Taiwan, it is only the Soviet Union which rejoices, he added.

KPA MEETING OBSERVES PRC PLA ANNIVERSARY

[Text] Pyongyang, July 29 (KCNA) -- A soldiers meeting was held on July 28 at the unit of the Korean People's Army to which Comrade O Ki-su belongs under the sponsorship of the Ministry of Peoples Armed Forces on the occasion of the 55th anniversary of the founding of the Chinese People's Liberation Army. The meeting was attended by Lieutenant General Pak Chunk-kug and other generals and officers and soldiers of the KPA, and He Zhangming, charge d'affaires ad interim of the Chinese Embassy in Pyongyang and its officials were invited there.

Speaking first at the meeting, Major General of the KPA O Ki-su said: The founding of the Chinese People's Liberation Army was a historic event of great significance in developing the Chinese revolution to a new, higher stage. Over the 55 years since its founding, the CPLA has covered a victorious road of a glorious struggle for freedom, independence and socialism under the wise leadership of the Communist Party of China.

The friendship and solidarity between the peoples and armies of Korea and China, he declared, are now being consolidated and developed to a new stage under the deep concern and care of the great leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, and respected Comrade Chairman Hu Yaobang and respected Comrade Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping. They will in the future, too, always struggle and win victory together as comrades-in-arms and class brothers just as they defeated common enemies in close unity in the past.

Speaking next, Yu Kezhong, military attache of the Chinese Embassy, said: The militant friendship between the peoples and armies of the two countries was personally initiated and nursed by the great leader of the Chinese people Comrade Mao Zedong in his lifetime together with the great leader of the Korean people Comrade Kim Il-song and it has withstood a long test. The meeting between the leaders of the two parties and the visit of a military delegation of the People's Republic of China to Korea some time ago further strengthened and developed the traditional relations of friendship between the two countries, he said.

The Chinese people and the People's Liberation Army will, as in the past, wage a struggle in unity with the Korean people and People's Army and win victory together, whatever storm and change may come to the world in the future.

SOCIALIST COUNTRIES MARK STRUGGLE MONTH

SK281116 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1051 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 28 (KCNA) — Meetings for solidarity with the Korean people and film shows were held in the Soviet Union, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Cuba during the month of anti-U.S. joint struggle.

A meeting was held at the farm machine repair factory in Frunze, the capital of the Kirghiz Soviet Socialist Republic, which was attended by K.K. Atachev, vice-chairman of the Council of Ministers of the republic, the chairman of the Union of Societies of Friendship with Foreign Countries, the vice-minister of foriegn affairs and the general secretary of the Central Committee of the Soviet-Korean Friendship Society.

A resolution was adopted at the meeting which expresses solidarity with the Korean people in their struggle for national reunification and demands an unconditional implementation of the resolution of the 30th United Nations General Assembly on turning the armistice in Korea into a durable peace and creating a favorable condition for the promotion of the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea.

The Korean film week opened at the "Horizont" cinema in Moscow.

A portrait of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and a portrait of Comrade Josip Broz Tito were hung on the background of the platform of the meeting which was held by the "Sava-82" young voluntary labour brigade in Zagreb, Yugoslavia. Speaking at the meeting, the head of the labour brigade declared that the Yugoslav people and youth fully support the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo put forward by the great leader of the Korean people Comrade Kim Il-song. Solidary messages to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and to the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il were adopted at the meeting.

A meeting was held at the unit of the Bulgarian People's Army stationed in Kresna City, Blagoevgrad Province, at which a portrait of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and a potrait of Comrade Todor Zhivkov were hung on the background of the platform.

Meanwhile, the Cuban Committee for Supporting Korea's Reunification and the Cuban Association for Friendship Among the People co-sponsored a meeting at the Havana metal building equipment factory.

KIM CHAEK STEEL PLANT RALLY URGES 80'S SPEED

SK280603 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Excerpt] At a time when the entire nation is seething with the struggle to register a new revolutionary upsurge in socialist economic construction, the three revolutions team members dispatched to the Kim Chaek steel plant, a great metallurgical base in the northern district, resolved to actively wage the struggle to create the speed of the 80's by upholding the party's intention and vigorously carrying out the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture. They appealed to the three revolutions team members in the industrial sector across the nation to respond to their resolution.

They had a rally on 26 July to thoroughly implement the policy put forward by the glorious party center for vigorously carrying out the struggle to create the speed of the 80's in socialist economic construction with the spirit of the era of the great Chollima upsurge. Respectfully placed in the front of the meeting site was the portrait of the great leader of our party and our people, Comrade Kim Il-song. Slogans reading "Long live the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song" and "Long live the glorious KWP" were hung at the rally site. Also hung at the meeting site were slogans reading "Let us create the speed of the 80's with the spirit of the era of the great Chollima upsurge," "Let us effect a new upsurge on all fronts of the socialist construction by vigorously waging the three revolutions," "Let us accelerate to the maximum socialist economic construction with idomitable revolutionary spirit and the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance" and "Let us all become the Kim Hyok and Cha Kwang-su of the 80's."

Comrade Kang Hui-won, alternate member of the KWP Central Committee Political Bureau and responsible secretary of Chongjin municipal party committee, (Yi Kang-hwan), responsible secretary of the party committee of the Kim Chaek steel plant, and other personages concerned attended the rally together with the three revolutions team members disptached to the Kim Chaek steel plant.

The meeting began with the playing of "Song of Marshall Kim Il-song." Then responsible person of the three revolutions team members at the Kim Chaek steel plant (Pak Myong-mun) delivered a report.

Pointing out that the working people of the Kim Chaek steel plant are effecting an unprecedented upsurge in production of steel and iron by upholding the slogan "Let us create the speed of the 80's with the spirit of the era of the great Chollima upsurge," the reporter said that the nationwide struggle for creating the speed of the 80's is a rewarding struggle for further strengthening the nation's political and economic might and epochally enhancing the people's living.

He noted that the three revolutions teams of the Kim Chaek steel plant are facing the task of supporting and guiding the working people so they will fulfill their lofty resolution and targets without fail. The three revolutions teams will excellently carry out their mission as the vanguard of the revolution and the standard bearer of the struggle, cherishing deep loyalty and revolutionary passion, at the forefront of the struggle to create the speed of the 80's.

He said: The struggle to create the speed of the 80's can be successfully carried out only through the struggle against outdated and stagnant elements in the domains of ideology, technology and culture. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The three revolutions team members, firmly arming themselves with the chuche idea and continuously preserving lofty revolutionary awareness, should mingle with the masses and actively inspire revolutionary zeal and initiative. Thus, they should carry out the three revolutions more vigorously.

Vigorously waging the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture by the three revolutions team members is the glorious task assigned by the great leader and the glorious party center. The struggle to create the speed of the 80's demands, in particular, that our three revolutions team members more vigorously carry out the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture.

The reporter stressed that giving priority to ideological revolution is important to the three revolutions and that the basic factor for ideological revolution is to thoroughly establish the party's unitary ideological system among the party members and workers.

He said: Firmly establishing the party's unitary ideological system is the cause of our party's ever-victorious strength and is the key to the creation of ceaseless miracles and renovation in socialist construction by our people.

The reporter noted that the three revolutions teams members will lead all the steel fighters to firmly arm themselves with the chuche idea, to think and act in accord with the demand of the chuche idea and to follow and learn about the loyalty of the young communists, including Kim Hyok and Cha Kwang-su, who upheld the great leader and devotedly carried out the order of the respected leader in the early stages of the Korean revolution. The three revolutions team members will encourage them to fully implement the leader's teachings and the party's policy, the embodiment of his teachings, without any deviations.

He stressed: The three revolutions team members will inspire the party members and workers, in unity with the party organizations, to vigorously struggle to create the 80's speed by highly displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and arduous struggle of the unheralded heroes and by fully mobilizing existing reserves and potentials.

The reporter said that the three revolutions team members will strengthen the chuche nature and self-reliance of the metallurgical industry, paying attention to increasing production of steel and iron, will inspire the workers and technicians to mass technical innovations and will direct their attention to resolving scientific and technical problems arising in production.

Noting that the technical revolution can be successfully carried out only by the struggle against outdated and stagnant elements, he said they will strengthen the struggle against conservatism, passivity and technical mysticism hindering technical development and will think and act boldly.

The reporter said: The cultural revolution is an important revolutionary task for successfully ensuring the creation of the 80's speed. The three revolutions team members will actively wage the struggle to enhance the cultural and technical standard of the steel fighters, directing attention to the work of training technicians and specialists by upholding the policy for intellectualizing society, thus expanding their ranks, and will actively struggle to establish discipline in life and productive culture.

Pointing out that the movement to acquire the red banner of the three revolutions and the movement to follow and learn about the examples of the unheralded heroes constitute a communist mass movement to achieve the cause of the chuche-orientation of society by accelerating the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture under our party's guidance, he said that the three revolutions team members should support effecting a new innovation in the production of steel and iron by strengthening and developing the movement to acquire the red banner of the three revolutions and the movement to follow and learn about the examples of the unheralded heroes.

The reporter said: The struggle to create the 80's speed demands that the vanguards of the three revolutions teams raise their responsibility and role higher than ever. The three revolutions team members should become standard bearers in creating the new advance speed and should encourage all working sites to raise the flames of the great revolutionary upsurge.

Following this report, the responsible person of the three revolutions team at a blast furnace workshop, Pak Pyong-Chong; the responsible person of the three revolutions team at the second steel workshop, (Kang Tae-kyu); the responsible person of the three revolutions team at a processing workshop, Pak Myong-kol; and a member of the three revolutions team at processing workshop No 1, Choe Kyong-ok, participated in discussions.

Saying that the glorious party center wants a new revolutionary upsurge in socialist economic construction, those who participated in the discussion noted that they will make every effort to achieve the lofty targets set forth at the meeting to appeal to the nation to wage the struggle to create the 80's speed with an attitude worthy of vanguards of the three revolutions responsible for producing steel and iron together with the working people of the Kim Chaek steel plant.

They said that they will guide all the people in acquiring the revolutionary spirit to fully implement the revolutionary tasks assigned them under any difficult circumstances, cherishing the spirit of absoluteness and unconditionality of the party's policy. They will also inspire all units and outposts to create innovations by actively helping them to vigorously work to implement party policy.

Those who participated in the discussion stressed: The three revolutions team members at the Kim Chaek steel plant will inspire the working people to register exploits in creating the 80's speed, in unity with enterprises and party organizations. They will increase the total volume of industrial production by 141.7 percent in the third quarter of this year compared with that at the end of last year; production of pig iron, by 158.7 percent; production of steel, by 160 percent; and production of rolled steel, by 144.2 percent.

During the fourth quarter, they will increase the total volume of industrial production by 169 percent; production of pig iron, by 184.4 percent; production of steel, by 199.4 percent; and production of rolled steel, by 175.5 percent. They will also fulfill ahead of schedule the production targets of steel and iron forecast in the second 7-year plan.

Noting that the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and arduous struggle is the militant banner for creating the 80's speed, they said that the three revolutions team members will strengthen the chuche nature and self-reliance of the metallurgical industry by vigorously waging the struggle to resolve the pending problems by our own strength, our own technology and our own material. Thus, they will inspire all battlefields to effect a new upsurge and innovation.

Saying that it is an important task facing the three revolutions work team members to strengthen the mass technical renovations in the struggle waged to create the speed of the 1980's, they stressed they will actively push ahead with making the national economy chuche-oriented, modern and scientific by raising the flames of the mass technical renovations in every combat unit, contributing to creating the speed of the 80's.

Noting that the most important thing in launching the movement to win the red flag of three revolutions and the movement to emulate the example of the unheralded heroes is to persistently activate these movements, they said they will make great efforts to deepen and develop these mass movements. They also noted there were appealing to the three revolutions team members at plants and enterprises throughout the nation to actively respond to their resolution to energetically activate the struggle for the creation of the speed of the 80's.

The meeting adopted a letter of appeal to the three revolutions work team members at plants and enterprises throughout the nation.

NODONG SINMUN URGES STRENGTHENING OF MASS MOVEMENT

[NODONG SINMUN 24 July editorial: "Let Us Thoroughly Implement Our Party's Policy for a Mass Movement"]

[Text] Today a struggle to create the speed of the 1980's is vigorously being waged in all the sectors of the people's economy. To vigorously push ahead with this struggle, we should thoroughly implement our party's policy for a mass movement.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: All parts of the revolution and construction works have been carried out in a mass movement and in a people's movement. On the basis of the people's great revolutionary zeal and creative positiveness, we have been able to successfully carry out all the difficult but grand tasks of revolution and construction.

Resolving all the problems in the movement of all the masses and in the movement of all the people is a principle which our party has consistently kept in accelerating socialist construction. A basic key to resolving all the problems in socialist construction is to generate people's ideology.

A mass movement is a creative way in which we make masses unreservedly display their infinite strength by enhancing their unity and cooperation; a revolutionary way in which we can accelerate socialist and communist construction through a mass struggle and a collective renovation.

In a new historic period in which the cause of imbuing society with the chuche idea was raised, our party laid down the movement to win the red flag of three revolutions and the movement to follow the examples of unheralded heroes and has wisely led them to be vigorously waged in all the sectors and in all units.

The movement to win the red flag of three revolutions and the movement to follow the examples of unheralded heroes are communist-type remodelling movements to realize the cause of imbuing society with the chuche idea by vigorously accelerating three revolutions -- ideological, technological and cultural -- under our party's leadership.

The movements have contributed to successfully implementing the task of thoroughly remodelling all aspects of social life in accord with the demand of the chuche idea, setting an unprecedentedly high goal. For this reason, the movements became a driving force, making all members of society chuche-type communist revolutionaries endlessly loyal to the party and the leader and making them effect great upsurges in construction and production by encouraging them to display their revolutionary passion and creative positiveness.

The great vitality of our party's policy for a mass movement has been clearly confirmed in practice. In the flames of the movement to win the red flag of three revolutions and the movement to follow the examples of unheralded heroes, three revolutions have been firmly turned into the work of masses and great successes have been attained in remodelling nature, society and man, without the might of the movements, we could not conceive of the changes recently enacted in the ideological and spiritual traits of our people and of the miracles and renovations continuosly created in socialist construction.

Today we are assigned the weighty task of creating the speed of the 80's and of effecting new revolutionary upswings in all the sectors of the people's economy. We should advance more rapidly than in the past. To this end, we should strengthen a mass movement to arouse the revolutionary passion of the party members and workers and their postiveness. A basic key to enacting new revolutionary upswings lies in closely joining the struggle to create the speed of the 80's with the movement to win the red flag of three revolutions and the movement to follow the examples of unheralded heroes.

When we more vigorously stage a mass movement, upholding the party's policy, we can arouse the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and fortitude among the party members and workers and attain decisive successes in the struggle to carry out the 10 major prospective goals for socialist economic construction by unreservedly mobilizing all the inner reserves and potentials.

What is more important in vigorously waging the movement to win the red flag of three revolutions and the movement to follow the examples of unheralded heroes is patiently pushing ahead with the movements, firmly adopting them as the party's consistent policy.

The most important mass movements' of our party are the movement to win the red flag of three revolutions and the movement to follow the examples of unheralded heroes. These movements contain our party's strategic plan to expedite the cause of imbuing society with the chuche idea by quickly accelerating revolution and construction. No work is more proud and rewarding to party organizations, functionaries and members and workers than the work of enacting greater upsurges in socialist construction by thoroughly implementing the party's policy for a mass movement.

As we have done in carrying out other works, we should have the party's policy for a mass movement prove its worth by firmly adhering to it without interruption.

Today, during the struggle to enact new revolutionary upsurges in socialist construction, one who is thoroughly implementing the party's policy for a mass movement is one endlessly faithful to the party's call. To thoroughly implement the party's policy for a mass movement, the party's guidance to the mass movement should be enhanced. The movement to win the red flag of three revolutions and the movement to follow the examples of unheralded heroes are mass movements which party organizations should responsibly guide and lead. How vigorously we push ahead with these movements and how greatly their vitality is displayed will be determined by the way in which the party's organizations implement the party's policy for a mass movement.

Experiences at units awarded the glorious red flag of three revolutions and at many units where unheralded heroes were produced show that, when party organizations meticulously plan the work of implementing the party's policy for a mass movement and patiently push ahead with it, a drastic change in people's ideological life takes place and upsurges in production and construction are accomplished.

All the party's organizations should firmly turn the struggle to implement our party's policy for a mass movement into party committee work and continuously deepen organizational and guiding work, overcoming formalism in their guidance. In particular, increasing the role of the party's responsible functionaries is very important. The responsible functionaries of party committees at all levels should mobilize all departments and members of party committees, directly adhering to the work of implementing our party's policy for a mass movement.

Establishing a correct methodology and carrying out substantive organizational work are important demands for thoroughly implementing the party's policy for a mass movement. Since the movement to win the red flag of three revolutions and the movement to follow the examples of unheralded heroes are unprecedentedly high-level advanced mass movements, only when we find a new methodology can we continuously deepen them without interruption.

On the basis of grasping reality, the party organizations and functionaries should continuously push ahead with these movements in a vigorous manner with tangible plans and correct methodology. They should positively help and encourage the organizations of trade unions, the Agricultural Workers Union and the Socialist Working Youth League to play their role in the struggle to implement the party's policy for a mass movement. We should resolutely renew resolved targets and thoroughly carry them out. Only when struggle tasks and targets are tangible and realistic and are set high can we successfully implement them and vigorously stage a mass movement.

The struggle to create the speed of the 80's contains a high goal. In line with the demand of today's reality, all party members and workers should boldly establish the struggle tasks, supplement it with targets adopted in discussions and carry it out without fail. The party organizations should help and encourage them to implement resolved targets in any circumstances, sincerely organize the summing-up of the program to execute the resolved targets and rearrange the program in a substantive manner.

It is very significant in implementing the party's policy for a mass movement to work well with the units which won the red flag of three revolutions and with the unheralded heroes. By positively encouraging the units that won the red flag of three revolutions and unheralded heroes and by organizing well the work of generalizing their experiences, all party organizations should make society increasingly pay attention to the two movements and make everybody participate in the movements with a high zeal.

All party organizations should find good examples created in the course of the movement to follow the examples of unheralded heroes, (?should register them on the honor roll) for winning the red flag of three revolutions and should fully publicize them.

To thoroughly implement the party's policy for a mass movement, functionaries should be in the forefront of these movements, assuming great responsibility for them. Leading functionaries are the leading forces of our party and leading members of revolution. Only when they positively participate in these movements can functionaries expect success. The pride of functionaries lies in their unconditional implementation of the party's policy for a mass movement. Our functionaries should work sincerely toward pushing ahead with any task until completed. All functionaries should vigorously forge ahead with the movements, deeply recognizing that the movement to win the red flag of three revolutions and the movement to follow the examples of unheralded heroes are responsible tasks to implement the party's policy for a mass movement.

Increasing the role of the three revolutions team is very important in vigorously implementing the party's policy for a mass movement. When the three revolutions team -- the vanguard of ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions -- wisely lead the struggle to implement the party's policy for a mass movement, the mass movement can be conducted vigorously. By closely combining the movement to win the red flag of three revolutions with the movement to follow the examples of unheralded heroes, three revolutions teams help the movements to be implemented in a unified way at the unit to which they belong.

At units where the taean work system is thoroughly observed and the demand of the chuche farming method is met, the three revolutions team, which pays deep attention to the mass movement, is leading the party members and workers to push ahead with the movement to win the red flag of three revolutions together with the movement to follow the examples of unheralded heroes, vigorously waging organizational and political work. With the party organizations, the team members should, without fail, lead the party members and workers to implement the target adopted in discussion. They should also plan to accelerate the movements within the movement of all the masses.

All party members and workers should create the speed of the 80's by thoroughly implementing the party's policy for a mass movement and enact a new turn in the struggle to effect new upsurges in socialist construction.

NODONG SINMUN ON RURAL TECHNOLOGICAL REVOLUTION

SK290040 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2238 GMT 25 Jul 82

[NODONG SINMUN 26 July editorial: "Let Us Vigorously Accelerate the Technological Revolution in Rural Areas"]

[Text] Based on his deep analysis of the present situation of the development of the rural economy of our country, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song recently elucidated in detail the method of more vigorously accelerating the technological revolution in rural areas, stressing its importance. The teaching of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a programmatic principle which the party organizations and functionaries in the rural economic field and other related fields should firmly follow.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: All farming work in rural areas should be carried out with machines and chemical fertilizers and the 8-hour workday system should be adopted in cooperative farms, too, as is done in plants.

Vigorously accelerating the technological revolution in rural areas is a rewarding struggle to free farmers from arduous labor and to solve labor problems in rural areas. Our party has long set forth a policy to free farmers from arduous labor and has struggled to implement it. Thanks to this, much of the farm work is being done by machines and boosted with the use of chemical fertilizers.

However, to provide a completely independent and creative labor life for farmers and to make the 8-hour workday system possible in cooperative farms, too, as in plants, the technological revolution should be more vigorously acclerated in rural areas. This is an important requirement for more smoothly solving the people's diet problem by constantly increasing agricultural production.

Most urgent in the material life of society is the people's diet problem. Fundamental to improving the people's diet is to produce rice in greater quantities. Only when we produce large quantitites of rice can we achieve more rapidly the brilliant goal of implementing the party's policies by taking advantage of rice.

Under conditions in which arable land is limited and the influence of the cold front continues, to constantly increased grain production by more properly implementing the chuche-based farming method we should continue to carry out the technological revolution in rural areas.

By doing this we can further increase grain yield per unit and achieve the goal of 15 million tons of grain ahead of schedule by actively pushing ahead with the comprehensive mechanization and chemicalization of the rural economy and by improving the grain cultivation method.

Today, when arable land is being expanded thanks to the struggle to achieve the four-point nature-remolding program of the party, we are faced with the task of solving, with a view to the future, the labor problem arising in rural areas. At the same time, because intensification of the rural economy has reached a higher level, we need more farming labor to meet the demands of high level science and technology in farmwork and to solve the complicated farming process. Only under such conditions when the production efficiency of agricultural labor is enhanced through acceleration of the technological revolution can the labor problem in rural areas be solved smoothly and rapid progress in the development of agricultural production be guaranteed.

Proceeding from this, today our party not only has adopted as an important task the need to vigorously accelerate the technological revolution in rural areas, but is also calling for all functionaries and working people to participate actively in this struggle.

All functionaries and working people should correctly understand the party demand of the techological revolution in rural areas, its agriculture-first policy, and the importance of the technological revolution in rural areas in implementing the chuche-based farming method, and should vigorously push ahead with this work. Of primary importance in vigorously accelerating the technological revolution in rural areas is for functionaries to obstinately struggle with a correct viewpoint and attitude toward this task.

Only when we establish a correct viewpoint for any work can we effect positiveness and bring about the correct method of solving problems. The technological revolution in rural areas is no mere technical working-level problem. Included in it are the profound plan of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to completely ensure the independent and creative life for our peasants by freeing them from arduous work and to eventually resolve the question of rural areas, and our party's firm will to achieve the plan to the end.

Therefore, the viewpoint and attitude toward technological revolution in rural areas are related to the viewpoint and attitude toward the intention and policies of the party. What is important in implementing the party's intention and policies is the spirit of absoluteness and unconditionality.

The loyalty of functionaries to the party and revolution is being displayed while they are unconditionally implementing the party's line, policies and intention to the end, sincerely accepting them. It is an important demand of our party's policy to actively introduce new-type agricultural machines and to raise the efficiency of their utility. The spirit of unconditionality of functionaries in this sector toward the party's policies should be displayed in implementing this demand.

The functionaries in the rural economy sector should strenuously strive to carry out farmwork by using machines, accepting the new agricultural machines and properly utilizing existing machines.

To vigorously step up the technological revolution in rural areas we should effect a great revolution in producing agricultural machines. Technological revolution means mechanical revolution. Only when we constantly produce new types of agricultural machines, while producing on a large scale agricultural machines including tractors, rice-seeding machines, rice harvesters, and mobile threshing machines, can we brilliantly carry out the tasks of the technological revolution in rural areas in accord with the demands of the party.

Plants producing agricultural machinery should produce more modern agricultural machines required for overall mechanization of the rural economy by normalizing production, fully mobilizing reserves and potentials, and should guarantee their quality.

What is important in this is to have a firm viewpoint that good machines which fulfill their functions can be produced only when the functionaries and workers in the domain of agricultural machine production and in the agricultural sector firmly rely on their own strength and technology. The functionaries and workers in related fields, assuming a chuche-type stance, should design and produce agricultural machines which correspond to the nature of agriculture in our country. They should, first of all, produce machines which are urgently required and can be actually produced. Then they should gradually produce large-size and modern machines.

To effect a revolution in producing agricultural machines, we should raise the role of the scientists and technicians in this sector. Scientists and technicians, with deep awareness of reality, should strive to resolve the urgent problems arising in overall mechanization and chemicalization of rural economy in cooperation with workers and peasants, including mechanization of difficult and intensive labor such as growing seedlings and transplanting corn humus pots. Other fields, including the metallurgical sector, should ensure the various kinds of steel and other raw materials required to produce agricultural machines. The technological revolution in rural areas can be successfully carried out only when the party organizations and guidance functionaries organize this work in a planned manner and vigorously push it.

Party organizations and guidance functionaries in related fields should link all work related to the technological revolution in rural areas with the targets and resolutions adopted in the movement to win the red banner of the three revolutions, having a clear goal for successfully implementing the technological revolution in rural areas, and should substantially work in a planned manner. Once assigned to them, they should fulfill the plan without fail.

Party organizations should make functionaries and workers deeply realize the teachings on the technological revolution in rural areas given by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the party's policy and its significance. They should encourage them to actively carry out the technological revolution in rural areas with correct awareness of the revolution. At the same time, they should vigorously support guidance functionaries in a timely manner to prevent them from being negligent in carrying out the technological revolution in rural areas.

They should also help the functionaries assume the position of solving labor problems by renovating technology. We should direct attention to the work of raising the standard of technological knowledge of cooperative peasants and operators of various agricultural machines including rice-seeding machines. We should encourage them to raise their sense of responsibility and their role.

All functionaries and workers, vigorously accelerating the technological revolution in rural areas, should equip the rural economy with modern machines and modern technology and develop agricultural production by broadly introducing successes in agricultural scientification into the rural economy. Thus, they should contribute more to freeing the peasants from arduous labor.

NEW BOOK EXPLAINS CHUCHE THEORY OF PARTY BUILDING

SK270048 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2212 GMT 26 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 26 (KCNA) -- The publishing house of the Workers Party of Korea recently brought out "Chuche-Based Theory of Party Building", a book explaining the chuche-based theory of party building, which was founded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and developed and enriched by the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il.

This theory is the first in history to systematize in an integral whole all the theoretical and proactical problems arising in the building of a revolutionary party of the working class and its work and activity and gives comprehensive and perfect answers to urgent problems awaiting a scientific solution in the building of the party.

The theory defines the work with people as the main of the party work on the basis of the fundamental principle of the chuche philosophy that man is master of everything and decides everything; it clarifies in a comprehensive way the principles to be adhered to in the work with people and its content and ways.

The theory elucidates anew that the party's leadership over the revolution and construction should be realised in reliance upon the wisdom and strength of the working masses, attaching greatest importance to their interests, and that the work system and method of the party should serve for enabling them to maintain their stand as the master of revolution and construction and fully display their role as the master.

The book deals with the theories on laying organisational and ideological foundations of the party, setting up party organisations from lower units up and founding a unified party of the working masses, the theories elucidated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, it notes, newly formulated that the revolutionary party of the working class is a political organisation for realising the idea of the leader, the general staff of revolution, the heart of society and the successor to the glorious revolutionary traditions established by the leader.

The book comprehensively deals not only with the theory of the party organisational work, the keynote of which is the work with the cadres, the party members, the masses and the growth of the party and the work for strengthening the function and role of party committees and establishing the party organisational system, but also with the profound and unique theory on the party ideological work, the theories systematized anew by the great leader and the dear leader.

It recounts how the great leader and the dear leader defined the political guidance and policy guidance as the essence of the party's leadership over revolution and construction and solved in a unique way the fundamental principle arising in the party's leadership and ways and method for hits.

Besides, the book explains new unique theories on the external activities of the party and on the carrying forward and accomplishment of the cause of party building.

CONSTRUCTION GAINS SCORED IN NATIONAL ECONOMY

SK281530 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1506 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 28 (KCNA) — Productive construction is making brisk headway in various domains of the national economy in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

Now large-scale projects are going on at full steam to reclaim 300,000 hectares of tideland, obtain 200,000 hectares of land and build the Nampo lock gate and the Taechon power station for the irrigation of reclaimed tideland.

In the chemical industrial domain the construction of new fertilizer, caustic soda and sulfuric acid shops is progressing at a number of chemical factories.

Reconstruction on an expansion basis is going on at full pressure at the Kim Chaek and Hwanghae iron works and other major enterprises of the metal industry.

Meanwhile, the construction of the Wiwon and Nangang power stations and Maekjon lock gate power station and other hydropower stations is being accelerated and the reconstruction of the Pukchang thermal power plant on an expansion basis is progressing apace.

The Anju District coal mines, the biggest high-calorific coal production base of the country, the Sunchon and Tokchon District coal mines and the Musan mine with a prospective production capacity of 10 million tons of concentrated magnetite and the Komdok mine, which will play a big role in attaining the non-ferrous metal production target of 1.5 million tons, and other big coal and ore mines are being reconstructed on an expansion basis. At the same time, new promising coal and ore mines with favourable production conditions are being developed actively.

Besides, many construction projects are progressing at an accelerated tempo in various domains of the national economy including machine-building, building-materials and light industries, fisheries and railway transport.

Last year witnessed the completion of 2,470 construction projects in the industrial domain of Korea. As a result, in the first four years of the second seven-year plan, more than 10,000 industrial establishments and other productive construction projects have been finished.

VRPR FLAYS U.S. ENVOY'S TRUCE ANNIVERSARY REMARKS

SK281307 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] In a statement issued on 27 July marking the 29th anniversary of the signing of the truce agreement, Richard Walker, U.S. ambassador to South Korea, raved that the U.S. Government was disappointed that no progress has been made to ease tension on the Korean Peninsula and that U.S. policy toward South Korea is aimed at achieving permanent peace on the Korean Peninsula.

This is nothing but sophistry to conceal the nature of the aggressor and embellish the U.S. occupation of South Korea.

It is because of the policy of war and maneuvers to fabricate two Koreas by the United States and its stooge the Chon Tu-hwan ring that peace and peaceful reunification have not been achieved on the Korean Peninsula and that a dangerous (?situation) capable of igniting another war at any time remains in this land.

Nevertheless, the U.S. imperialist war maniacs attribute the fact that tension has not been eased and that permanent peace has not been achieved to something else. This can never be tolerated. All this clearly shows that we cannot achieve peace and peaceful reunification on the Korean Peninsula if the U.S. imperialists are allowed to remain in this land. The U.S. imperialists should stop uttering outrageous remarks which run counter to the stream of the times and leave South Korea without delay.

CHONGNYON DELEGATIONS -- Pyongyang, July 29 -- Comrade Hwang Chang-yop on July 28 met the delegation of functionaries of the League of Korean Youth in Japan under Chongnyon headed by Choe Se-chin, teacher at the Chongnyon Central School, and the delegation of model functionaries of the League of Korean Youth in Japan under Chongnyon headed by Song Won-chin, vice-director of the Organizational Department of the Central Standing Committee of the league, visited the socialist homeland and conversed with them in an atmosphere overflowing with compatriotic sentiments. NO OFFICIAL COMMENT ON JAPANESE ENVOY'S REMARKS

SK290128 Seoul YONHAP in English 0056 GMT 29 Jul 82

[Text] Seoul, July 29 (HONHAP) -- The Foreign Ministry declined official comment Wednesday on remarks by Japanese Ambassador to Korea Toshikazu Maeda that the size of Japanese loans to South Korea should be decided on an annual basis, pending a thorough review of the test of Maeda's speech.

"We have requested the Japanese Embassy to provide a copy of Ambassador Maeda's speech. Pending a review of the text, we cannot make any official comment," a spokesman for the ministry said. He added, however, that Seoul's position that the size of the loans should be determined on a package basis remains unchanged.

In a speech Wednesday at a seminar for senior executives of the Korean business community in the resort town of Cheju City, the Japanese ambassador said the Japanese Government's budget is decided on an annual basis and that this makes it impossible for Japan to work out a loan package to South Korea over a five year period.

South Korea is requesting a total of four billion dollars in official Japanese loans and commodity credits to help finance its fifth five-year social and economic development plan, which began this year.

Korean officials said privately they did not understand why Maeda made his remarks at this stage. They said the current loan negotiations between Seoul and Tokyo have been conducted on a package basis up to this point.

JAPANESE MINISTRY 'ACKNOWLEDGES' TEXTBOOK PROBLEM

SK281201 Seoul YONHAP in English 1150 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Seoul, July 28 (YONHAP) -- The Japanese Foreign Ministry has acknowledged "problematic descriptions" of past Korean-Japanese relations in new editions of Japanese high school textbooks and has expressed its willingness to recommend corrections to the Japanese Education Ministry, according to a high-ranking official in the Korean Foreign Ministry.

Kong No-myong, first assistant minister of the Foreign Ministry here, told reporters Wednesday that the Japanese Foreign Ministry notified the South Korean Embassy in Tokyo of such opinions. Kong, quoting reports from the Korean diplomatic mission in Tokyo, disclosed that pertinent officials at the Japanese Foreign and Education Ministries shared the view that the issue should not be allowed to expand further.

The Japanese officials held a meeting Tuesday afternoon to discuss the alleged "distortion of historical facts" and accompanying protests from South Korea and other countries, Kong said. Kong said officials in the Korean Embassy in Tokyo have maintained frequent contact with Japanese officials to urge the Japanese Government to clarify its official stance on both the issue and Japanese Cabinet members' subsequent remarks in defense of them.

Kong said the Korean Foreign Ministry is prepared to take appropriate countermeasures when the official posture of Tokyo is announced. He refused to reveal what the countermeasures might be, however, saying the Japanese Government must announce its position first.

Diplomatic Action Sought

SK290132 Seoul YONHAP in English 0123 GMT 29 Jul 82

[Text] Seoul, July 29 (YONHAP) -- The South Korea Government is planning diversified diplomatic action, including an official protest, against the Japanese Government regarding the alleged distortions of historical facts in Japanese high school textbooks, a Foreign Ministry official said Thursday.

The official said Tokyo is expected to inform the Korean Government of its "unified view" on the controversial textbooks soon at which time Seoul will take the appropriate diplomatic measures.

The Korean Government also plans to protest the remarks by a Japanese Cabinet minister in defense of the textbooks' contents, if the Japanese Government does not provide an adequate retraction of the comments.

Assembly To Discuss Issue

[Text] The National Assembly education-information committee will be called into session sometime between Aug. 5 and 10 to deal with the distortions of history in the newly revised Japanese textbooks. The House panel will also take issue with the controversial remarks of Japanese Cabinet members justifying the biased historical accounts of Korea-Japan relations.

A ranking official of the Democratic Justice Party said yesterday that "the opinion is dominant in the party that it is necessary for the party to convene the panel from the standpoint of the people's sentiment towards Japan." He said that the assembly was required to reflect the people's growing anti-Japanese feelings and to refute theoretically the history distortions and the ministers' reckless words, calling for the Japanese leaders to make serious reflection on themselves.

The concrete date for the convocation of the House committee will be decided on in a floor leaders' meeting of the three major parties to be held as soon as Rep. Yi Chong-chan, DJP floor leader, returns home on Aug. 5 from his U.S. trip, according to him. Referring to the possibility of convening the foreign affairs committee too, he said, "If the House committee is called into session, the textbook controversy may become a formal diplomatic problem between the two governments." "However, we may consider convening the panel following the education-information committee session, watching the development of the related situation," he opined.

Meanwhile, Rep. Han Byung-chae, chairman of the education-information committee, said that the lawmakers on his panel from both the majority and minority groups had already collected diverse materials with which they would retort to the Japanese claims. Rep. Yim Chong-ki, floor leader of the first minority Democratic Korea Party, revealed that he would continue to request the majority party to agree on convening the education-information committee as soon as possible. He also said that his party would demand the convocation of the foreign affairs committee.

Rep. Yi Tong-chin, floor leader of the second minority Korea National Party, however, claimed that the two committees should meet at once.

SEOUL SINMUN Views Issue

SK280905 Seoul SEOUL SINMUN in Korean 24 Jul 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Japan's Distorted History Education"]

[Text] Whenever Korea-Japan athletic games -- especially boxing matches in which a knockdown is justified to win -- take place, we are unanimous in ardently hoping for victory in the games. When our athletes do win, such as a knockout in a boxing match, we feel a jubilance which non-Koreans can never imagine.

On this subconscious sentiment that is not normally revealed but flares up at every opportunity, we often think of examining ourselves. Nonetheless, because the Japanese get on our nerves once in a while, we come to think that it is foolish for us to do such a thing.

The current controversy being caused by the Japanese history books has again ignited our subconscious sentiment. The cause of our burning sentiment is not a product of our anti-Japanese sentiment. The cause, to which our history gave birth, cannot die away yet. All dispersed compatriots of Korea residing in Japan, Sakhalin and Communist China are elements of that history.

Japan has been pertinaciously adhereing to its chauvinistic patriotism. In the past, a warlike young Japanese army officer altered words on the epitaph of the great King Kwanggaeto [the 19th king in the ancient Koguryo dynasty]. Japanese egotism is so blind and strong that it accepts the altered epitaph as correct history. Their short-sighted egotism has made it possible for the Japanese themselves to gloss over authentic history. For example, they have been putting forward the false hypotheses that the Japanese ruled over the Korean Peninsula via Imna [ancient country that was located on the southern tip of the Korean Peninsula].

The current Japanese distortion of history has confirmed to us that such Japanese history books, which are full of uncertainties, are surely altered and falsified. The following are the contents that Japan has distorted and that make us grasp their petty guiles: The Japanese revised the words "an invasion" -- against the Korean Peninsula and China -- into "an advance," changed the word "oppression" into "quelling," the words "military expedition" into "dispatch," and the word "exploitation" into "transfer." They changed the words "1 March national movement" into "riot" and shifted their responsibility for their massacre in Nanjing, China, onto the Chinese Army, making us burn again with indignation. In this connection, we come to a conclusion that Japan is a country which can always distort history.

An official of the Japanese Education Ministry once quibbled that they have compiled history books from an objective viewpoint on the basis of reliable materials, adding: It is not recorded in history that Japan forcibly urged the Korean people to worship at the Shinto shrines when Korea was under the Japanese colonial rule. Therefore, the worship was only encouraged.

This is the way the Japanese talk about any historical materials. The actual facts they erased from the records are not their material, but the only records that have been kept are theirs. Because of the forced worship at the Shinto shrines, even in the biting cold winter days, many Koreans were frostbitten for life. And the Korean generation who were frostbitten is now only in their middle age. In this regard, we are surprised at the Japanese insensitivity.

The book titled "Gluttony of the Devil" [a book recently published by a Japanese depicting the Japanese colonial army as using human bodies for scientific and medical experiments during World War II], which mired the Japanese themselves in the mud of shame as well as shocking us, is also a "material" which has been completely erased from their "record."

There is an open letter from former Japanese Premier Miki to Tanaka that has become a topic of discussion. It is a political challenge harshly criticizing Tanaka for his steering of politics behind the Liberal-Democratic Party. In the open letter, Miki stresses the need to learn a lesson from the so-called "tragedy of the Pacific war." The aggressive war is also a deep shame and scar for themselves. There is no reason for them to soften, beautify and even distort history. Maybe because of their pertinacious national characteristics, the Japanese can admit their historical faults with their reason, but they can never abandon their egotism.

The new generations -- the Hangul generation in Korea and the post-war generation in Japan -- that are not polluted by the Japanese colonial rule are beginning to reach middle age in both countries. It behooves the older generations of the two countries to prevent these new generations from being imbued with distorted history and being antagonistic toward each other.

At this juncture, it is too dangerous for Japan to imbue their new generation with such a chauvinistic patriotism. If a new generation in Japan is imbued with such patriotism, it would make many mistakes in international society. We will be the country that would suffer the most severe injury caused by such a new generation.

In this regard, we keenly feel that we should, first of all, examine ourselves, whether we will stand firm or not.

FOUR CARDIOLOGISTS ATTEND MOSCOW MEETING IN JUNE

SK290152 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 29 Jul 82 p 8

[Text] Four leading Korean cardiologists visited Moscow last month to take part in the Ninth World Congress of Cardiology as Korea's representatives, it was belatedly learned yesterday.

The four-member Korean delegation obtained visas for their Moscow tour June 21, the opening day of the six-day international cardiology meeting, from Moscow Embassy to Tokyo, through auspices of the Japanese Heart Foundation, said Kim Sam-su, a member of the Korean delegation, yesterday. It was the first time that Korean doctors have visited a communist country, with which Korea does not have diplomatic relations.

The Korean delegation include Kim, a professor of internal medicine at the Catholic Medical College, and concurrently Korean Vascular Center; Prof. Yi Ung-ku, of the Severance Hospital; Cho Kwang-hyon, director of Dr. Cho's clinic; and Prof. Ochoni I-chon, of Sunchonhyang College Hospital. They are all members of the Korean Cardiology Society.

Their Moscow visit was at the invitation of the World Congress of cardiology headquartered in Geneva. Korea is a full member of the congress, a worldwide organization of cardiologists.

At the Moscow meeting, about 3,500 repersentatives from 67 countries, both full-member countries and non-member nations of the congress, participated in exchange of information on research and development in cardiology, Kim said. North Korea attended the Moscow meeting as a non-member country, he added.

During their six-day stay in Moscow, the four-man Korean delegation received favorable treatment from Moscow cardiology officials, he said. Chavos, president of the Moscow cardiology meeting, looked for them during the opening day to extend greetings for their Moscow visit, Kim said.

MONTSAME POLITICAL OBSERVER SCORES U.S., ISRAEL

OW242106 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1715 GMT 24 Jul 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 24 Jul (MONTSAME) -- A MONTSAME political observer writes:

The Decision of the U.S. President Ronald Reagan to stop deliveries of the necessary components for the production of cluster and pellet bombs to Israel until after Begin's reply to the U.S. inquiry about the use of U.S-made cluster and pellet bombs in Lebanon has been studied, demonstrates the truly boundless "humanism' of the U.S. leaders, such an extraordinary concern for the proper use of U.S. cluster and pellet bombs which are designed to annihilate the maximum number of people does credit to the U.S. administration.

Indeed, if such bombs are used in a wrong way, for example, are dropped over the outskirts of Beirut but not over its densely populated areas, it may reduce their annihilating force and many Palestinians and Lebanese would die painfully and slowly instead of being immediately torn into pieces. This couldn't leave the philanthropic hearts of the U.S. leaders indifferent.

However, as is known, the Israeli aggressors have a knack for the exclusively correct use of the U.S. weapons, in particular, of the cluster and pellet bombs, designed for the maximal annihilation of Palestinians and Lebanese irrespective of their age, sex and occupation. So the U.S. President should not have worried and have interrupted the Israeli premier from his important work for writing an account; 30 thousand killed Lebanese and Palestinians are the best account by Israeli monsters of the use of American weapons in Lebanon.

MOLOMJAMTS ADDRESS SCIENTIFIC CONGRESS 21 JULY

OW230003 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1720 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 21 Jul (MONTSAME) -- The 5th congress of the Mongolian Society for dissemination of Scientific Knowledge (M.E.D.N.), one of the powerful public organisations of the country, opened its first session in the centre of scientific and technical information today.

The congratulatory message of the M.P.R.P. Central Committee to the 5th M.E.D.N. congress which was read out by D. Molomjamts, a Politbureau member and secretary of the M.P.R.P. Central Committee, stresses the growing role of the M.E.D.N. in the socio-economic life of the country.

Chairman of the society's Executive Committee T. Puntsagnorob, corresponding members of the M.P.R. Academy of Sciences, delivered a report on the tasks of the M.E.D.N. in implementing the decisions of the 18th M.P.R.P. Congress. He said, in part, that the whole activity of the society was aimed to increase the theoretical and economic knowledge and socialist consciousness of the working people.

HENG SAMRIN GREETS CASTRO ON STRUGGLE ANNIVERSARY

BK251042 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0410 GMT 25 Jul 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 25 Jul (SPK) -- Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State, sent his "warmest" greetings to Fidel Castro Ruz, first secretary of the Cuban Communist Party Central Committee, chairman of the Council of State and chairman of the Council of Ministers of Cuba, on the occasion of the 29th anniversary of the heroic attack on the Moncada Barracks.

Chairman Heng Samrin said in his message:

The 26 July 1953 insurrectional movement of young Cuban patriots under your clear-sighted leadership marked the resumption of the armed struggle for a new society, genuine justice and progress for mankind. The brilliant victory of this struggle resulted in the formation of the first socialist state in America.

Since then, the valiant Cuban people, led by the distinguished Cuban Communist Party and revolutionary government, have scored important successes in the unyielding struggle for the defense of national independence and they have made significant contributions to the struggle of oppressed peoples who aspire for equality, justice, freedom, democracy, peace and progress.

We are convinced that the fraternal Cuban people will win greater successes in their intransigent struggle against the sabotage, threats and provocations of the Yankee imperialists and the international reactionaries.

May the ties of fraternal friendship, militant solidarity and close cooperation between our two parties, governments and peoples deepen with every passing day in the common struggle against the Yankee imperialists, the Chinese hegemonists and expansionists, for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress.

Meeting Marks Anniversary

BK270834 [Editorial Report] Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian at 1300 GMT on 26 July carries a 20-minute report with portions recorded on a "solemn" meeting sponsored by the KUFNCD at the Chattomuk Conference Hall "this morning" to mark the 29th anniversary of the attack of the Cuban people on Moncada. "Attending the meeting, among others, were Comrade May Ly, member of the party Central Committee, vice chairman of the National Assembly and acting minister of agriculture; Comrade Chan Ven, secretary general of the Council of State; Superior Bonze Tep Vong, vice chairman of the National Assembly and of the KUFNCD National Council; Comrade Chheng Phon, minister of information and culture and chairman of the Kampuchea-Cuba Friendship Association; and Comrade Miguel Fuentes Fraga, acting charge d'affaires of the Cuban Embassy to Kampuchea."

After the playing of the two countries' national anthems, the announcer presents Comrade Chheng Phon's recorded speech. The minister of information and culture begins his speech by saying that today the Kampuchean people are happy to celebrate the 29th anniversary of the fraternal Cuban people's victory in their armed struggle. After praising the victory of the Cuban people's struggle, he continued: "In the name of the entire Kampuchean people, the PRK government and front, we would like to express our joy, feeling of militant solidarity and appreciation to the heroic Cuban people who are marvelous champions defending freedom and human rights in the Americas."

He then states: "Close to the U.S. and due to the October revolution, Cuba become a strong base for the struggle against the U.S. imperialists for genuine independence, freedom and the people's right to be the masters of their country and their own destiny."

Later on, he describes various stages of the Cuban people's struggle against the Batista regime. He then continues: "After the people toppled Pol Pot, the genocidal murderer, on 7 January 1979, our Kampuchea which was seriously damaged under the barbarous Pol Pot regime was restored and is developing and advancing toward socialism.

"Recently, instigated by the Beijing Chinese expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and some international reactionaries such as Thailand, the three Khmer reactionary groups gathered and formed a tripartite coalition government with the label of Democratic Kampuchea. The creation of this government is aimed at gaining the leading role in Kampuchea and destroying and pushing the Kampuchea fatherland once more into suffering.

"The entire Kampuchean people, army and all levels of the state power strongly support the communique of the sixth foreign ministers conference of the three countries in Ho Chi Minh City, and solemnly warn the three reactionary groups who were abandoned by the people that the situation in Kampuchea is irreversible. We are categorically determined not to let these Khmer reactionaries return to Kampuchea."

After Chheng Phon's 9-minute speech, the announcer says that Comrade Miguel Fuentes Fraga took the floor and then presents his speech recorded in Spanish with simultaneous translation into Cambodian.

The Cuban acting charge d'affaires thanks the KPRP Central Committee, the KUFNCD Committee and the Kampuchea-Cuba Friendship Association for organizing this meeting. Then he reviews the courageous and valiant struggle of the Cuban people against Batista's dictatorial regime. After giving a short account of the Cuban people's socialist development, he highly praises the victory scored by the fraternal Kampuchean people after 7 January 1979.

After this speech and the playing of the Internationale, the presidium and all honorary guests visited the exhibition on the history of the Cuban people's struggle and great achievements scored by the heroic Cuban people during the past more than 20 years.

The announcer says the meeting concluded at 1030, after an art show presented by the arts directorate of the Ministry of Information and Culture, "in a joyful and sincere atmosphere filled with the spirit of the bonds of solidarity that are strengthening and developing between Kampuchea and Cuba.

KAMPUCHEA COMMENTARY SCORES COALITION GOVERNMENT

[KAMPUCHEA commentary: "Sihanouk and Son Sann Under the Umbrella of the Beijing-Labeled Democratic Kampuchea"]

[Text] It is still remembered that before the declaration announcing the formation of the so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea [CGDK], the three exiled reactionary Khmers -- Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan -- and their Beijing, Washington and ASEAN masters openly bargained with each other over the leading roles, thus making it clear to world public opinion that this loose tripartite alliance is only a farce with Democratic Kampuchea putting on a new shirt. In fact, this so-called CGDK is a devilish child delivered by the two Beijing and Washington midwives with an additional helping hand from the Thai leading circles. This is their last way out, showing their decline and their desperation.

Sihanouk and Son Sann have more and more clearly revealed their reactionary faces by finally embracing the stinking corpse of Democratic Kampuchea and thus taking their shares in the genocidal crimes of the murderous Pol Pot gang. This clearly shows the impasse of vicious Prince Sihanouk and Son Sann the comprador whose ambitions and greed for power made them bow to the genocidal and murderous gang which is hated by humanity.

In the so-called coalition government, the Pol Pot gang holds almost all the power -- military, diplomatic, financial and economic. In his interview with AFP, Son Sann affirmed: "I want to sit on a clean seat of power, but as there is none at the moment, I have to sit on this blood-stained seat of Democratic Kampuchea."

As for Sihanouk, in his interview with a VOA corresppndent, he admitted that his cooperation with the Pol Pot murderers was done under the instigation of Beijing, Washington and ASEAN who baited him with the title of president of the CGDK and the promise of aid.

The delay in setting up the so-called CGDK cabinet after the signing of the declaration in Kuala Lumpur also indicates that the three antinational, antipopular and traitorous Khmer groups were not in agreement and still growling at each other. But in the end, which one of the reactionary Khmer groups got the most?

In the composition of the so-called CGDK, it is the same murderers who hold the key roles. Khieu Samphan, former figurehead chairman of the State Presidium and present figurehead prime minister of Democratic Kampuchea, is vice president in charge of foreign affairs. Ieng Sary, former deputy prime minister and foreign minister of Democratic Kampuchea, has an important role in the economic and financial committee. This means that the decision to provide Sihanouk and Son Sann with food and financial supplies is up to him. Son Sen, former minister of national defense of Democratic Kampuchea, still has an important place in the National Defense Committee.

Where are the results of Son Sann's demand to be exclusively prime minister in charge of foreign affairs and national defense? And what about Sihanouk, whose life ambition is to remain in power, with the title of president only on paper with no real power and who has forgotten his insults and grudges against Pol Pot? What about Pol Pot? Where is he? He is still commander in chief of the genocidal gang's army -- the highest and most powerful man.

The presence [as heard] of hangman Pol Pot in the CGDK Cabinet is a trick to fool world public opinion like the time when they replaced Pol Pot with Khieu Samphan, only on paper, or when they proclaimed the abolition of the communist party and the Democratic Kampuchean regime.

Even more farcical is Sihanouk's statement admitting himself to be a parrot shrieking at the United Nations in defense of the devilish regime of Democratic Kampuchea. This reveals that the main objective of the frantic efforts to set up the so-called CGDK is to keep the illegal seat of Democratic Kampuchea in the United Nations against the revival of the Kampuchean people. World opinion is well aware that at present Sihanouk and Son Sann, in their bid to grab the shadow of power, are stooping so low as to kowtow to and shelter themselves under the armpit of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan genocidal and murderous gang of Democratic Kampuchea propped up by the Beijing reactionary leading circles, in collusion with U.S. imperialists.

The barking of this pack of dogs does not stop the progress of mankind. In the PRK, all of the people and the whole army, united in mobilizing the great vitality of the fatherland, are determined to heighten the will and vigilance to fight, and to successfully carry out the tasks of defending and rebuilding the Kampuchean fatherland on the road to victory.

MORE 'GENOCIDE' VICTIMS FOUND IN SVAY RIENG

BK241147 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1300 GMT 22 Jul 82

[Text] The team to investigate the genocidal crimes in Svay Rieng Province has just discovered many new graves which are proof of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique's genocidal crimes in the vicinity of Ta Nor village, Svay Tea commune, Kompong Rou District, Svay Rieng Province. A label found by the team on a tree in the forest indicated that 1,450 bodies were buried in the area. According to the investigation team, the clique wrote down the numbers of victims that it killed on such labels.

So far, the team has found 214 skeletons. It is continuing to dig up the graves and is searching for documents in the area.

According to inhabitants living in the area, at the beginning of 1979 the Pol Pot clique arrested more than 1,000 people of all ages, including old people and babies, from various villages in the districts adjacent to Vietnam, such as Kompong Rou, Chan Trea, Svay Teap and Rumduol districts. These people were sent to Ta Nor village of Svay Tea commune where theywere starved and tortured. A week later, the Pol Pot clique lied by saying that these people had been misled by the enemy and were sent here to attend a reeducation course. A week after this so-called reeducation course, these 1,000 inhabitants were taken out of the village.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION DRIVE RESULTS REPORTED

BK280928 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] From the beginning of this rainy season to mid-July, our brother and sister peasants all over the country have made particular efforts to increase agricultural production. More than 300,000 hectares of all types of rice -- 21 percent of the plan -- have been planted in 16 provinces.

Our brother and sister peasants have transplanted 33,000 hectares of early rice and 1,700 hectares of IR-36 rice, broadcast 100,000 hectares of floating rice, broadcast 100,000 hectares of highland rice, planted nearly 70,000 hectares of slash-and-burn-rice and late rice and sowed more than 50,000 hectares of all kinds of rice. As the result of rice transplantation, our peasants have sowed, broadcast and transplanted nearly twice as much as in last year's rainy season.

Concurrently, our brother and sister tractor operators plowed 55,000 hectares of land in various provinces against the plan of 91,000 hectares.

The state power and mass organizations in various localities have closely cooperated with our brother and sister peasants all over the country in transplanting, sowing and broadcasting to increase agricultural production in order to welcome the communique of the sixth Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos foreign ministers conference and to exceed this year's rainy season production plan.

Reportage for 19-25 July

BK260619 [Editorial Report] Monitored Kampuchean media have reported the following agricultural developments in the reporting period 19-25 July:

National level: Phnom Penh SPK in French at 0404 GMT on 25 July reports that Kampuchean peasants have planted 329,940 hectares of rice or 21 percent of the plan.

Kompong Cham: SPK at 0407 GMT on 19 July notes that by mid-July, peasants in Kang Meas District had grown rice on 200 hectares, corn on 1,400 hectares and other crops on 280 hectares. In this rainy season, the district plans to grow 5,920 hectares of rice and 3,680 hectares of subsidiary crops. The district veterinary service has vaccinated 9,670 oxen and buffalo. The local authorities also provided the peasants with 20 motorpumps. The news agency at 1455 GMT on 23 July reports that in the first half of this year the rubber plantation at Chup, Kompong Cham Province, produced 8,021,700 liters of latex and 2,180 tons of crepe rubber.

Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey: At 0400 GMT on 20 July Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian reports that in Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province, by 10 July, more than 7,000 hectares of slash-and-burn rice, nearly 13,000 hectares of floating rice, 500 hectares of flood-receding rice, 3,000 hectares of late rice, 2,000 hectares of ordinary rice and 900 hectares of early rice had been planted; nearly 4,000 hectares of land sown and 10,000 hectares of land plowed; about 700 hectares of corn, 300 hectares of manioc, 100 hectares of sweet potatoes, 200 hectares of beans and 600 hectares of vegetables planted. The province plans to cultivate 160,000 hectares of rice.

Kandal: Phnom Penh Domestic Service at 0400 GMT on 20 July reports that in Leuk Dek District, by mid-July, 2,540 hectares of land had been replowed, 277 hectares of slash-and-burn rice planted, 132 hectares of fallow land reclaimed and 2,534 hectares of corn, 15 hectares of potatoes, 480 hectares of beans, 73 hectares of sugarcane and 27 hectares of vegetables planted. The radio at 0400 GMT on 23 July quotes a statement given to a station correspondent by (Khieu Khin), chairman of the People's Revolutionary Committee of Phnom Penh District, Kandal Province, as saying that so far, more than 2,000 hectares of IR-36, 3-month, 4-month and 6-month crops have been transplanted in the district, representing 40 percent of the total acreage and that the rest of the plan is expected to be completed in the next 2 months. The radio at 1300 GMT on 25 July adds that in Kandal Stoeng District of the same province, by mid-July, more than 1,000 hectares of various kinds of rice had been sown; 23 hectares of 3-month rice, 600 hectares of 4-month rice, 300 hectares of IR-36 rice and 1,000 hectares of 6-month rice transplanted while the total acreage for planting these rice varieties is 10,725 hectares. Meanwhile, 1,479 hectares of floating rice had been broadcast while the acreage for floating rice is 2,077 hectares; 2,815 hectares of intensive planting land tilled with 108 hectares of rice planted and 300 hectares transplanted on this land; more than 200 hectares of corn, soybeans, sugarcane, potatoes, and vegetables were also planted. The district agriculture service bartered to peasants 100 tons of IR-36 rice seed, 6 tons of corn seed, 472 tons of chemical fertilizer and 1,000 liters of insecticide.

Svay Rieng: SPK at 0420 GMT on 21 July reports that in Svay Rieng District, Svay Rieng Province, by the beginning of July, more than 500 hectares of rice had been planted including 380 hectares of floating rice, 100 hectares of early rice and 557 hectares of subsidiary crops grown. In this rainy season the people plan to cultivate 35,700 hectares of rice including 6,330 hectares of floating rice, 15,170 hectares of middle rice and 1,700 hectares of early rice. The district agriculture service has provided them with chemical fertilizer and other materials to aid in production. The local authorities also repaired hydraulic facilities.

Battambang: According to SPK at 1445 GMT on 22 July, Sangke District has planted 12,200 hectares of rice, sown 990 other hectares and grown 3,960 hectares of subsidiary crops. In this rainy season the people plan to cultivate 36,000 hectares of rice. Phnom Penh radio at 0400 GMT on 24 July adds that in Moung Russei District, 31 tractors were provided to the district by the state power. The district has 12 manual tractors and (?4,742) pairs of oxen and buffaloes. Up to 7 July, the peasants had plowed 16,125 hectares of land, broadcast 8,900 hectares, sown 575 hectares and grown 800 hectares of various crops.

Prey Veng: Phnom Penh Domestic Service at 1300 GMT on 24 July says that in Kamchay Mea District, by the beginning of July, 280 hectares of land had been plowed; 400 hectares of 3-month rice, 900 hectares of middle rice, 700 hectares of late rice and 160 hectares of IR-36 rice seeds sown and many hectares of secondary food crops grown on the 660 hectares of land set aside for planting secondary food crops.

Pursat: The radio at 0400 GMT on 24 July notes that from the beginning of the rainy season up to July, peasants in this province broadcast and transplanted all kinds of rice on more than 10,000 hectares of land, sowed 2,300 hectares and tilled more than 15,000 hectares. At 1300 GMT on 23 July the radio adds that in Kandieng District of the province, 4,500 hectares of ricefields have been plowed; more than 4,000 hectares of different types of rice planted; 300 hectares sown; 300 hectares of soybeans, 22 hectares of sesame, 37 hectares of manioc, 19 hectares of sugarcane and 6 hectares of corn grown. The radio at 1300 GMT on 24 July adds that youth in Kandieng District helped peasants repair a ditch and dig 4 new ditches totalling 13 kilometers in length. They are determined to dig another 2,500 meters of ditches.

Kompong Chhnang: SPK at 1433 GMT on 25 July reports that in Kompong Leng District, Kompong Chhnang Province, in the first 10 days of this month, the peasants sowed 280 hectares of rice and grew 30 hectares of subsidiary crops.

DEPUTY INTERIOR MINISTER ON LAOS-VIETNAM FRIENDSHIP

BK281402 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 27 Jul 82

[Interview granted to SIANG PASASON correspondent by Asang Laoli, member of LPRP Central Committee and deputy interior minister -- read by announcer; date not given]

[Text] Question: Wbat is your opinion on the progress of the implementation of the Laos-Vietnam treaty of friendship and cooperation over the past 5 years?

Answer: Over the past 5 years, the implementation of the treaty signed between the LPDR and the SRV on their special relations and cooperation -- a precious legacy left for the two nations and parties by the great President Ho Chi Minh -- has blossomed splendidly and involved vivid activities clearly reflected in many spheres. An important issue is national defense. We have enjoyed wholehearted mutual support and assistance and striven to strengthen mutual cooperation in order to defend peace in the two countries and to counter all the sabotage schemes, provocations and threats by the Beijing ruling clique which is colluding with the imperialists, headed by the U.S. imperialists, and other reactionaries to occupy the two countries and Indochina as a whole. The two nations have bitterly defeated these adventurous schemes.

The LPDR and the SRV have reached unanimity in establishing the borderline and marked a boundary of friendship, thereby enabling the people of various tribes living along the border to make a normal living and visit each other, and developing and promoting the fine traditions of all-round cooperation in the task of further strengthening the all-people national defense and public security line.

Question: What is the importance of the treaty toward the special solidarity between Laos and Vietnam?

Answer: The Laos-Vietnam treaty of friendship is of great epochal and historic importance since the two countries shared the same fate in the past half a century and are currently carrying out two similar strategic tasks -- to defend the fatherland and build socialism. Meanwhile, we have had the same enemy -- the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists who are colluding with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries to eliminate the revolutionary movement in Indochina, totally swallow up the three Indochinese countries and realize their intention to become the master in Southeast Asia.

The Laos-Vietnam solidarity is of special importance. It is a source of the overall strength of the two nations in defeating all enemy's adventurous schemes at present and in the future. The Laos-Vietnam solidarity constitutes a solid guarantee for each country's independence, freedom and advancement toward prosperity. This has become a concrete gain of the ever victorious socialist revolution and a fine example for the people throughout the world.

Question: How will you contribute to the implementation of the Laos-Vietnam treaty of friendship and cooperation?

Answer: I am convinced that in the future the friendly relations and cooperation between the two nations, parties and people of Laos and Vietnam, founded on the basis of Marxism-Leninism, respect for each country's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, equality, mutual trust and mutual assistance in the spirit of comradeship, will strengthen the combat forces and develop the overall strength of the three Indochinese countries, thereby dealing heavier blows to the hostile policy of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists who are colluding with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries to sabotage the revolutionary gains of the three Indochinese countries. By so doing we can defend the independence and sovereignty of each country -- an outpost of the world socialist system -- and contribute to the various nations' struggles for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

I am convinced that under the beacon of the Third LPRP Congress and the party's diplomatic line in particular, the LPDR and the SRV will find it necessary to strive to coordinate and assist each other in a spirit of comradeship and remain singleminded in dealing with important issues and all-round cooperation. I personally will do everything I can to defend and promote the special cooperation, as in the past 5 years, to make the splendid gains we have won further blossom, thus contributing to the overall success of each nation.

FRIENDSHIP DELEGATION RETURNS HOME FROM SRV

[Text] Vientiane, July 28 (OANA-KPL) -- The delegation of the Laos-Vietnam Friendship Association led by its president, Souk Vongsak, on July 26, returned home from Vietnam, Souk Vongsak, who is also minister of public health, took part in the celebration of the 5th anniversary of the signing of the Laos-Vietnam friendship and cooperation treaty in Hanoi.

LEADERS GREET CUBAN COUNTERPARTS ON ANNIVERSARY

["Text" of joint greetings message, dated 26 July, from Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee and prime minister, and Souphanouvong, president of state and chairman of the Supreme People's Council of the LPDR, to Fidel Castro Ruz, first secretary of the Cuban Communist Party Central Committee and president of the Council of State and the Council of Ministers, and Flavio Bravo, president of the National Assembly of the people's government of the Republic of Cuba]

[Text] On the occasion of the 29th anniversary of the Moncada Barracks attack, on behalf of the LPRP, the Supreme People's Council, the government of the LPDR, and the Lao people of various tribes, we are pleased to convey warm salutations and wholehearted greetings to you, comrades, and through you, to the Communist Party of Cuba [PCC], the National Assembly of the people's government, the revolutionary government and fraternal people of Cuba.

On 26 July 1953, the Cuban Revolutionary Armed Forces, under Comrade Fidel Castro's leadership, launched an attack against the Moncada Barracks. This attack was considered a clarion call of encouragement for the Cuban people in a vigorous movement of struggle against the North American imperialists' neocolonialism and the Batista dictatorship. It also created favorable conditions for the Cuban people to achieve great victory in their revolutionary struggle on 1 January 1959. Promoting and expanding their heroic and creative tradition of revolutionary struggle, despite disturbances, intervention, provocations and an economic blockade conducted against Cuba by the North American imperialists and the counterrevolutionaries, the heroic Cuban people, under the correct leadership of the PCC with Comrade Fidel Castro as head, have scored many firm successes in safeguarding the revolutionary gains and in concentrating forces in consolidating and building the country along the path of socialism in the first land of freedom in the Western Hemisphere.

Following the glorious successes and outstanding achievements in building socialism as well as in pursuing the correct foreign line and in fulfilling international obligations, the status and role of the Republic of Cuba have been raised daily to an ever higher level in the international arena. These successes and achievements are also considered as a great encouragement for various nations which are carrying out the struggle against imperialism.

We are elated at and always appreciate highly the successes achieved by the fraternal Cuban people. We are very proud to note that fraternal relations and cooperation, based on Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism, between the two countries of Laos and Cuba have been fruitfully developed with each passing day. We pledge to strive to maintain and promote and expand further the aforesaid fine relations of friendship. We wish the fraternal Cuban people great success in the implementation of the resolutions of the second PCC congress so as to build the Republic of Cuba into a developed, strong socialist country. May the fraternal friendship and militant solidarity between the two parties, governments and peoples of Laos and Cuba be everlasting!

SITTHI REPORTS ON TALKS WITH SRV'S THACH

[Excerpts] Bangkok, July 29 (AFP) -- Vietnam is tired of confrontation and "fully understands" concern about its troops in Cambodia, Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach was quoted as saying today. Mr. Thach made his remarks during a two-hour meeting here with his Thai counterpart Sitthi Sawetsila, who reported them at a news conference.

Air Chief Marshal Sitthi said Mr. Thach, on the last stage of a four-nation tour of non-communist Southeast Asian states, had stressed that Vietnam did not wish to see regional hostility. Vietnam had experienced "confrontation" in the three years since it sent its troops into Cambodia to depose the Beijing-backed Khmer Rouge government and was anxious to ease tension, Mr. Thach was quoted as saying.

Marshal Sitthi said Mr. Thach had expressed a willingness to invite a United Nations ad hoc panel seeking a Cambodian settlement to visit Vietnam. If confirmed, such a gesture would be a break with past Vietnamese policy, which had always rejected U.N. machinery because the world body continued to recognize the deposed Khmer Rouge government. Mr. Thach had agreed in principle to hold talks on a personal basis with the head of the ad hoc committee, Ambassador Massamba Sarre of Senegal, who is now in Thailand, Marshal Sitthi said. He said the Thai Foreign Ministry would do its best to set up such a meeting. Mr. Sarre was due to leave Thailand tomorrow for New York and Mr. Thach is scheduled to fly home.

Marshal Sitthi, who spoke in Thai, said his talks with Mr. Thach had taken place in a "good atmosphere" and had turned out "better than expected." He said both sides understood there could be no overnight solution to the Cambodian problem and that further consultations would be required.

Marshal Sitthi quoted Mr. Thach as saying Vietnam "fully understands" Thailand's concern about its troops in Cambodia which, if confirmed, would also represent a shift in Hanoi's policy. Previously, Hanoi had maintained that the presence of more than 150,000 Vietnamese troops in Cambodia was a purely bilateral matter involving it and the handpicked government it installed in Phnom Penh on January 7, 1979.

Marshal Sitthi said Thailand had reiterated its view that the Cambodian situation must be solved in line with successive United Nations General Assembly resolutions calling for total withdrawal of foreign troops. Vietnam had reiterated its willingness to withdraw its troops after an end to the perceived threat to the region from China, Marshal Sitthi said.

He said he felt "relieved" by the talks and hoped further consultations would be held in the future. Mr. Thach invited him to visit Vietnam and he had accepted, but no date had been set, Marshal Sitthi said. Mr. Thach also issued invitations to visit Vietnam to his counterparts in Singapore, Burma and Malaysia, the previous stops on his current tour. Mr. Thach, who is to hold a pre-departure new conference here tomorrow, was meeting the head of the powerful Thai National Security Council, Prasong Sunsiri, this afternoon.

The ad hoc committee was set up by the U.N.-sponsored International Conference on Cambodia, which held its first session last year. Vietnam and its allies boycotted it. Ambassador Sarre of Senegal was not immediately available for comment, but said yesterday in an interview that he would be pleased to meet Mr. Thach if called on to do so.

Group Protests Thach Visit

[Text] A group of about 300 people calling themselves the Thai National Defense Volunteers' Group demonstrated at 0630 today at That Thong monastery in Phra Khanong area, Bangkok, protesting against Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, who has been visiting Thailand since 28 July.

The group displayed posters and distributed leaflets demanding that Nguyen Co Thach leave Thailand immediately.

At about 0800 the group arrived at the Vietnamese Embassy on Sathon Road. [as heard] They stated through loudspeakers that Nguyen Co Thach is not wanted here and demanded that he immediately leave Thailand. Police forces were sent to provide security at the site of the demonstration. At about a little after 0900, the protesters dispersed.

At 1000 today, Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach met with Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila for talks at the Foreign Ministry.

SITTHI BRIEFS UN KAMPUCHEA DELEGATION 28 JULY

BK290147 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 29 Jul 82 p 3

[Excerpts] Members of the ad hoc committee of the International Conference on Kampuchea (ICK) were yesterday briefed by Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila on ASEAN's views on the Kampuchean conflict during a meeting at the Foreign Ministry.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Chet Sucharitkun said the delegation, led by Senegal's Ambassador to the UN Massamba Sarre, also listened to explanation on ASEAN's attitude toward the recent Ho Chi Minh proposals. At least three of the ASEAN countries have made it public that the Ho Chi Minh proposals, which call for an international conference on Southeast Asia, are not acceptable.

Chet said the delegation is here to search for "positive elements" conducive to a political settlement of the Kampuchean conflict within the framework of the UN resolutions.

The delegation described as an "encouraging sign" the formation of the Kampuchean coalition government of the three Khmer resistance forces, according to the spokesman. Sarre told the NATION on Tuesday that he was very hopeful a political solution would be found to solve the Kampuchean conflict.

The closed-door meeting, which started at about 11 am, was over about half an hour after the schedule. Foreign Minister Sitthi also hosted a luncheon for the special envoys at the Foreign Ministry.

NATION REVIEW HITS INTELLIGENCE ON KHUN SA'S RETURN

BK290215 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 29 Jul 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Khun Sa's Army Must Now Face Reprisals Here"]

[Text] Khun Sa's Shan United Army [SUA] saying that they are not waging any battle for the control of opium trails is a statement strictly for the birds. If it is not for the opium how does he finance an army which may contend as against the Rangoon government or, to give it saintly look, it is supposed to be fighting the Burmese communists. [sentence as published] But what Khun Sa and his lieutenants do not seem to understand it is that however much they mask their vulpine face, they are not wanted in Thailand.

We do not want any anti-Rangoon forces on our soil nor do we want opium kingpins nor an anticommunist army. We are quite sure that the Burmese Army and the Thai Army are quite capable of taking care of communist insurgents.

In a lighting attack on Ban Hin Taek earlier this year our forces roundly defeated the forces of Khun Sa holed up there and they fled back across the Burmese border.

Burma certainly does not seem to have been lackadaisical in taking advantage of the situation and there seems to have been pretty strong pressure on Khun Sa's SUA, so much so he seems to have opted to cross the border again into Thailand. We strongly doubt the explanation given by his henchmen that the SUA were fighting the Burmese communists.

Undoubtedly there are Burmese communist insurgents but they are not such a powerful force as the SUA which had to face the full force of the Thai Army before it could be routed at Ban Hin Taek. If, as Khun Sa's men say, the leftist Wa National Army had routed them out of Burma, then it must be taken for granted that the SUA had become badly depleted after its confrontation with the Thai Army earlier this year.

Whatever the actual reason for the SUA crossing the border and fighting in Doi Lang, the main point is that our intelligence seems to have broken down. If the SUA was engaged in Burmese territory near the border with either the Burmese regular forces or the communist irregulars, the Border Patrol Police along the border should have known about it and should have been alert to the possibility that Khun Sa's men might cross the border and enter Thailand.

The Border Patrol Police, if the intelligence reports had warranted it, could have also apprised the authorities and requested reinforcement. For too long several of Thailand's border areas have been treated as a no man's land and this is especially true of the Thai-Burmese border which is one of the principal centres of drug trafficking. Of course, now, however belatedly, Thai forces will move against the SUA and whatever opium caravan they may be escorting and then it will be back again to Burmese territory.

Eventually, this ding dong will have to stop, but meanwhile there can be some satisfaction that with both Burma and Thailand exerting continuous pressure on the SUA, their normal process of drug trafficking -- procuring opium, refining it into heroin, and then marketing the heroin -- is disrupted. But Thailand must learn one lesson -- our intelligence must always be on top of the situation so that our armed forces can act swiftly and ruthlessly.

SU ANAKHOT SAYS CPT MAY HAVE HELD CONGRESS

BK290916 Bangkok SU ANAKHOT in Thai 25-31 Jul 82 pp 11, 12

[Excerpts] In late June several members of the Communist Party of Thailand [CPT] provincial committees from the south came to Bangkok and stayed for about a week. An earlier visitor to Bangkok was Sin Toemlin -- or Comrade Prawat -- who is the secretary general of the CPT for the southern region. All of these people were heading for a location near the Kampuchan border, possibly an area under Khmer Rouge control, to join CPT representatives from the other regions and members of the Central Committee and the Political Bureau.

If the CPT was using such a location for its fourth congress, it seems to have picked the right time. It would be easy for it to use the period during the formation of the coalition government in Kampuchea to help conceal its congress from the authorities. Moreover, the Khmer Rouge stronghold would provide better security for the congress than anywhere else. In any event, Thai intelligence authorities have not confirmed nor denied this information.

A source, who does not believe that the CPT leadership can find a location to meet said: "I heard that some high-level party officials came to Bangkok and left after a short stay.... If this is true, it means that they have succeeded in finding a location. At first they wanted to meet in the south -- they could get there from Penang. Then they changed their mind and wanted to meet near the Burmese border, but it probably was too difficult to get there. The report about the meeting being held in Kampuchea certainly sounds plausible. Anyway, I still do not believe that a CPT congress will materialize due to internal splits."

The source's evaluation is that the domestic faction has a good chance of gaining the leadership because it is the faction which controls the armed personnel. If it is true that the meeting was held in Kampuchea, it shows that the meeting was hosted by the group whose operational zone covers the southern portion of the northeast -- which borders Kampuchea. This operational zone is under control of the group of Thong Chaemsi and Prasit Taphianthong.

SELF-DEFENSE VILLAGES PROGRAM TO BE EXPANDED

[Text] According to Lt Gen Suraset Ramsomphop, secretary of the subcommittee for coordination and followup of the self-defence village project along the Kampuchean border, a total of 117 self-defense villages have been established in the provinces bordering Kampuchea by the Supreme Command in order to organize the people living in scattered locations along the Kampuchean border who are endangered by the fighting and the influx of Kampuchean refugees and to facilitate their earning a living. The provinces concerned are Ubon Ratchathani, Sisaket, Surin, Buriram, Prachin Buri, Chanthaburi and Trat. The project has proved successful and thus the Supreme Command plans to establish self-defense villages on other borders -- the Lao, Burmese and Malaysian borders -- as well. The government has already approved the project in principle.

According to Suraset, the self-defense villages along the Lao, Burmese and Malaysian borders will be established along the same principle. The establishment will be jointly organized by the Supreme Command's joint operations center, the provinces concerned and the national economic and social development board. The target is to organize 136 self-defense villages along the Lao border, 46 villages along the Burmese border and 69 villages along the Malaysian border from 1983 to 1985.

INSURGENT LOSSES IN NORTH -- As many as 30 communist insurgents were killed, and 4,553 others surrendered as a result of the army's military operation in the northern region during the past four months, ending June, a spokesman for the Internal Security Operation Command (ISOC) disclosed yesterday. He added that another 31 insurgents were wounded, and 12 others were arrested. Substantial quantities of weapons, both heavy and light, ammunitions and medical supplies were also seized during the operation, according to the spokesman. EEC TAPIOCA QUOTA -- The European Economic Community has agreed to give an additional export quota for 500,000 tons of tapioca products to Thailand this year for five million tons set earlier, a highly-placed source said. EEC, moreover, also allows Thailand to use a quota for 500,000 tons of next year in this year because there remain large quantities of the products in the country after the quota is fulfilled this month. This will enable Thailand to export one million tons more of tapioca this year. [Text] [Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 21 Jul 82 p 14 BK]

FOREIGN MINISTER THACH VISITS MALAYSIA 25-28 JULY

OW282028 Hanoi VNA in English 1524 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 28 -- Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach paid a four-day official visit to Malaysia from July 25-28 as guest of his Malaysian counterpart, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie. During his stay there, Nguyen Co Thach called on Prime Minister Mohamed Mahathir to convey to him a message from Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong and his invitation to visit Vietnam. Prime Minister Mahathir accepted the invitation with pleasure and gratitude.

Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach held talks with Foreign Minister Ghazali Shafie. The two sides discussed their bilateral relations and peace and stability in Southeast Asia. They said they shared a common objective, that of peace and stability in the region, but at the same time, they also spoke of their differences as to how to tackle the problem. They agreed to continue their dialogue to solve their differences in order to make of Southeast Asia a zone of peace, stability and cooperation. Both sides showed a high sense of responsibility for peace and stability in Southeast Asia, and agreed that their talks were very useful, and that they took place in a friendly and frank atmosphere, and in mutual understanding. Foreign Minister Ghazali Shafie accepted Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach's invitation to visit Vietnam.

Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach cordially met with Minister of Trade and Industry Rithauddeen. They discussed trade relations between the two countries. Also present at these talks and contacts on the Malaysian side were Parliamentary Secretary Abdul Kadir; General Secretary of the Foreign Ministry Zakaria; Ambassador Ajitsingh; and Malaysian Ambassador to Vietnam Halim. On the Vietnamese side were Ambassador to Malaysia Nguyen Can, and Pha Doan Nam and Tran Huy Chuong, heads respectively of the General Department and the Third Asian Department of the Foreign Ministry.

Interviewed on Visit

OW281632 Hanoi VNA in English 1555 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 28 -- Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has granted the following interview to VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY on his visit to Malaysia ending today:

Question: Could you speak of the result of your visit to Malaysia?

Answer: I had useful talks with the Malaysian prime minister, the foreign minister and the minister of trade and industry. In a friendly and open spirit, the two sides discussed bilateral issues and the situation in the region. The Malaysian leaders had a profound impression of Chairman Pham Van Dong's visit in 1980. [date as received] Both sides shared identical views on the danger to all nations in Southeast Asia. They shared common interests in striving for a peaceful, stable and cooperative Southeast Asia, and held that the formula put forth by Malaysia for a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality in Southeast Asia is a basis for dialogues. They, however, differed in dealing with the settlement of the issues, due to their different viewpoints on the so-called Kampuchean situation. What is important is that the Malaysian leaders are highly responsible for the cause of peace in Southeast Asia and the dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries. The two sides unanimously maintained that dialogues and contacts are necessary for better mutual understanding and for due consideration of each others' interests. They agreed that pending a unanimity of views, there should not be any action or statement that would further complicate the matters and be harmful to the dialogue and reconciliation. In this spirit, they agreed to promote contacts in the future. Prime Minister Mohamed Mahathir and Foreign Minister Ghazali Shafie accepted the invitation to visit Vietnam. In a meeting with the minister of trade and industry, the two sides dealt with the economic development in each country and their trade relation. All the talks were very useful and took place in an atmosphere of friendship, frankness, equality, goodwill and mutual understanding, and with a high sense of responsibility for peace in Southeast Asia.

Question: The Singaporean and Thai press has made so much fuss about the so-called Vietnam's threat. What then is the attitude of Malaysian leaders on this matter?

Answer: We have made a full appraisal of the constructive attitude and high sense of responsibility of the Malaysian leaders for peace in Southeast Asia, and the dialogue between ASEAN and Indochina. The Malaysian leaders received us with openness. They did not believe in what the press had said and they wanted to see us to learn of the truth in this matter. They asked about the allegations of Singaporean newspapers about Vietnam's threat and its support for subversive actions against ASEAN. I reaffirmed Premier Pham Van Dong's statement in 1980 [as received] on Vietnam's policy, which is to persistently respect the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of other countries and refrain from interfering in their internal affairs.

At the same time, I made it clear that if Thailand and other ASEAN countries continued their hostile actions against the Indochinese countries, the latter would exercise their right to self-defence. We, however, hope that this would not happen. The Malaysian press also reported that contrary to what Singaporean newspapers had charged, we had never mentioned the matter of subversion. We also expressed our appreciation of the Malaysian newspapers' responsibility for their news reporting.

Question: How could you appraise Malaysia's role for peace and stability in the region?

Answer: Malaysia has proposed the formula of a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality in Southeast Asia (ZOPFAN). Together with the seven principles advanced by Lao Foreign Minister Phoun Sipaseut at the United Nations in 1981 on behalf of the Indochinese states, the ZOPFAN formula is a basis for discussion by all countries in the region to find out solutions to regional problems on the principles of respect for each others' independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, non-interference in each other's internal affairs, and non-imposition of ones' views on others, and non-imposition of outside views. In its relations with the Indochinese countries, Malaysia, together with Indonesia, has always persisted in the approach of dialogue and started its dialogue with the Indochinese countries in early 1980 when the situation was very tense. With the responsible attitude of the Malaysian Government leaders, we are convinced that Malaysia can play a very important role in restoring peace and stability in the region.

Question: What is Malaysia's attitude toward the proposals of the Indochinese foreign ministerial conference held in Ho Chi Minh City in July 1982?

Answer: The Malaysian leaders are studying them seriously.

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN DISCUSSES WITHDRAWAL FROM PRK

BK290711 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2330 GMT 28 Jul 82

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN editorial: "Glorious International Duty" -- date not given]

[Text] Inspired by boundless fraternal love, the party, government, people and army of fraternal Kampuchea regretfully bade farewell to a number of VPA units which had just fulfilled their glorious international duty and which were on their way back to the fatherland.

The people of Ho Chi Minh City and many localities in Tay Ninh Province, representing the entire country, heartily welcomed back the officers and men from the frontline with the love and affection of the rear.

The distinguished orders awarded to these units by the Kampuchean and Vietnamese states and pinned on their military flags are not only citations for military exploits for the units that have just fulfilled their international duty and returned to the homeland, but they are also a common reward and honor for all our army units which have been performing international duty in the friendly country over the past few years.

Following in the footsteps of the former international Vietnamese soldiers who stood side by side with the Kampuchean people in fighting and chasing away the imperialist and colonialist aggressors, our army units now performing the international duty in Kampuchea have overcome countless difficulties and even sacrificed their own lives. In coordination with the Kampuchean revolutionary forces, they have smashed the genocidal yoke of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary clique — Beijing's lackeys — and liberated Kampuchea completely. Subsequently, they have devotedly helped the brother Kampuchean people in their comprehensive revival. They have also wholeheartedly assisted the Kampuchean people and people's revolutionary army in defending their country and protecting all revolutionary gains firmly against all acts of sabotage by the Beijing expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries.

Knowing that their assistance to fraternal Kampuchea is tantamount to helping their own country, our officers and men have done everything they have been able to do, for the sake of peace and happiness of the Kampuchean people, as well as for the independence and freedom of the three fraternal peoples in the Indochinese Peninsula.

We forever cherish the finest sentiments for the heroic and indomitable land of fraternal Kampuchea, where our officers and men have left behind part of their flesh and blood. The fact that the party and state of Kampuchea have shown concern and cared for the Vietnamese soldiers and that the Kampuchean people love and protect them and consider them as their own children and brothers provides a great source of encouragement and a source of invincible strength for our army in defeating all enemies and fulfilling all duties. We are forever grateful to the party, government and people of fraternal Kampuchea for their profound love and devoted care, reflecting the close ties between the two nations in the common struggle for the independence, freedom, happiness and bright future of the two countries.

The glorious achievements of the units that have returned to the fatherland from their international mission have contributed to further enriching the heroic traditions of the VPA, which always fights and makes sacrifices for the fatherland's independence and freedom and the people's happiness and for the noble international obligation.

With the firm growth of the Kampuchean revolution, a number of VPA units performing international duties in friendly Kampuchea have returned to the fatherland. This reflects our willingness to live in peace and friendship with other countries in Southeast Asia. However, the Beijing expansionists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, their henchmen and other reactionary forces, are continuing their efforts to oppose and sabotage the three Indochinese countries, especially Kampuchea. Despite their repeated failures, they are still resorting to the many crafty tricks aimed at stepping up their sabotage activities with every day and every hour.

The parties and governments of the two countries once said: As long as the Beijing expansionists continue to seek ways to sabotage Kampuchea, the Vietnam People's Army will remain in Kampuchea in order to carry out its international obligations. Thus, those VPA units remaining in Kampuchea will continue to shoulder heavy international duties.

Upholding the fine character and the glorious tradition of the heroic VPA, our units now remaining in Kampuchea to carry out their international obligations vow to cooperate wholeheartedly and closely with the Kampuchean Revolutionary Armed Forces in order to firmly protect Kampuchea and its revolutionary gains. This is their proper contribution to the achievement of the three Indochinese causes — preserving independence and freedom, building socialism and maintaining peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

All VPA cadres and combatants now performing international duties in Kampuchea vow to behave themselves as model soldiers in their relations with the local people, as comrades-in-arms and the most trusted comrades of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Armed Forces, and as pious and filial sons of the Kampuchean people.

Although they are living far from their homeland, every one of our cadres and combatants has developed international love in place of national love and has enjoyed the love of the people of friendly Kampuchea in lieu of their family-related sentiments. They have always felt optimistic and enthusiastic in the fulfillment of their assigned missions. Every one of our cadres and combatants is determined to uphold the pure spirit of proletarian internationalism by remaining ready to overcome all ordeals and by striving to make more contributions to the steady growth of the friendly Kampuchean revolution, thus contributing to further strengthening the close militant solidarity among Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea.

Our people and army have the greatest confidence in the rapid growth of the Kampuchean revolution. We reaffirm that the Kampuchean situation is irreversible. All plots aimed at undermining the Kampuchean revolution will certainly be doomed to failure. While demonstrating our good will, we must not relax our vigilance against any stubborn and crafty enemy. Armed with a just cause, we are now strong enough to preserve our revolutionary gains and to move the revolution forward.

To be closely united with the fraternal Kampuchean people and armed forces and ready to do everything necessary to help friendly Kampuchea defeat its enemies of all stripes and build a prosperous and happy country are the lofty international obligations and the heavy but glorious duties of our people and armed forces, especially those units now performing their international obligations in Kampuchea.

FOREIGN MINISTRY CONDEMNS ISRAELI BEIRUT BOMBING

OW282233 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] On 28 July our Foreign Ministry issued a statement condemning Israel's barbarous bombing and shelling of the capital of Beirut. Following is the full text of the statement:

In defiance of the strong condemnation by the progressive world public opinion, Israel, encouraged and abetted by the United States, has arrogantly prolonged its brutal war of aggression in Lebanon, continuing to perpetrate many crimes against the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples.

A most serious event is that over the past 6 days, the Israeli aggressors, using a large number of warplanes, warships and artillery batteries, have repeatedly bombarded in a most barbarous manner the populated areas of the capital of Beirut, causing great loss of life and property to the local people. On 27 July alone, Israeli warplanes' bombs killed or wounded more than 300 civilians in the capital of Beirut. This criminal act of Israel was aimed at opposing the staunch struggle of the Palestinian and Lebanese people in the capital of Beirut, in an attempt to force them to agree to a solution beneficial to the United States and Israel.

The SRV Government sternly condemns the above genocidal crime of Israel and demands that it immediately end its bombing and shelling of the capital of Beirut, that it immediately and unconditionally withdraw its troops from Lebanon and that it respect the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Lebanon. The SRV Government and people express their profound admiration for the staunch and valiant struggle of the combatants and people of Palestine and of the Lebanese people in west Beirut and on the other fronts in Lebanon. The SRV Government and people affirm their militant solidarity with and unswerving support for the just and surely victorious struggle of the Palestinian and Arab peoples and are confident that they will certainly come out gloriously victorious in that struggle despite the many difficulties and ordeals they have to undergo.

VICE FOREIGN MINISTER HOLDS TALKS WITH PLO ENVOY

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 28 -- Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs Vo Dong Giang held talks with 'Ali Fayyad, envoy of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), here, on July 27. Also present on the occasion was Bui Hong Phuc, head of the First Department for Western Asia and Africa of the Foreign Ministry.

'Ali Fayyad informed Vice-Minister Vo Dong Giang of the current fight of the peoples of Palestine and Lebanon against the aggression by U.S.-backed Israel in Lebanon. The two sides discussed further development of the militant solidarity and mutual support between the peoples of Vietnam and Palestine and their coordination in foreign activities and other international issues of mutual concern.

The talks took place in an atmosphere full of cordiality and militant solidarity between Vietnam and Palestine.

Hanoi Meeting 28 July

OW281831 Hanoi VNA in English 1501 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, July 28 -- A get-together was held here today to welcome 'Ali Fayyad, envoy of the Palestine Liberation Organization, currently on a visit to Vietnam.

The meeting was jointly sponsored by the Vietnam Committee for Solidarity and Friendship With the Palestinian People, the Vietnam Committee for Solidarity and Friendship With Other Peoples, the Vietnam Committee for Afro-Asian Peoples' Solidarity and the Vietnam Peace Committee. Present were Tran Dang Khoa, Presidium member of the Central Committee of the Vietnam Fatherland Front; Prof. Hoang Minh Giam, president of the Presidium of the V.C.S.F.O.P.; Prof. Pham Khac Quang, president of the V.C.S.F.O.P.; Nguyen Van Trong, deputy head of the Foreign Relations Board of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee; and others.

Speaking on this occasion, Prof. Pham Khac Quang condemned the crimes of the U.S.-abetted Israeli aggressors against the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples. Together with progressive mankind, he said, the Vietnamese people reiterated their unshakeable militant solidarity with the fraternal Palestinian people in their courageous struggle.

Speaking on the occasion, 'Ali Fayyad recalled the heroic struggle of the Palestinian and Lebanese combatants against the Israeli aggressors over the past two months. He expressed sincere gratitude to the Vietnamese Government and people for their firm support for the Palestinian struggle. The Palestinian people and their armed forces, he said, highly valued the Vietnamese people's solidarity with and support for them, and they learnt a lot from the Vietnamese wars of resistance. The Palestinian people's just cause will be crowned with victory, and Israel's aggression will be defeated, even though it is being backed and abetted by the U.S. imperialists, he added.

The meeting voiced the Vietnamese people's persistent support for Palestine, and their demand for an immediate end to the Israeli aggression against Palestine and Lebanon.

DEFENSE MINISTER SINCLAIR LEAVES ON ASEAN TOUR

BK290906 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 29 Jul 82

[Text] The defense minister, Mr Sinclair, has left on a 2-week tour of four of the five member countries of the Association of the Southeast Asian Nations. Mr Sinclair's first stop will be Singapore where he will have talks on defense issues with the prime minister, Mr Lee Kuan Yew, and other senior officials. On Monday he will fly to the Philippines for discussions with President Marcos and the defense minister, Mr Enrile. Later in the week, Mr Sinclair will hold talks in Bangkok with the Thai prime minister, Gen Prem Tinsulanon, before inspecting military establishments outside the capital. Mr Sinclair will then fly to Malaysia where he will meet the prime minister, Dr Mahathir, and other senior officials. While in Malaysia, the defense minister will visit the Butterworth airbase near Penang where squadrons of Australian Mirage jet fighter planes are stationed.

STREET HOLDS TALKS WITH JAPAN'S SAKURAUCHI

[Text] Ministerial talks between Japan and Australia have opened in Canberra. Japan's foreign minister, Mr Sakurauchi, said his country would welcome Australian moves to relax import restrictions in line with the prime minister's proposal to eliminate protectionism. Mr Sakurauchi said Australians should understand that there was concern among Japanese business circles of the effects of industrial relations in Australia on Japanese industry.

Australia's foreign minister, Mr Street, said many of the crucial questions the two governments would have to face in the 1980's revolved around developing energy resources. Mr Street said countries which looked to Australia to supply their mineral resources would have to recognize that development would only occur if operations were profitable. He said that in times of depressed world activity, there had been a tendency to press supplying countries to bear the effects of temporary adjustments without regard to long-term development.

NUCLEAR WASTE DISPOSAL METHOD TO BE DEVELOPED

[Text] Canberra, July 29 (AFP) -- Australia has pumped one million U.S. dollars into its project of safe disposal of nuclear waste by burial in synthetic rock called "Synroc."

Energy Minister Senator Sir John Carrick has announced that one million U.S. dollars would be given to finance a team of scientists at the Australian National University who have been working on the Synroc project.

Senator Carrick said further development of effective nuclear waste disposal processes was crucial to public acceptance of nuclear energy as a means of generating electricity.

At present, many European countries use a similar method of nuclear waste disposal to Synroc, whereby waste is buried in borosilicate glass.

Australian scientists are however confident that the synthetic rock they hope to produce commercially will be more acceptable as it is similar to ordinary rocks which have immobilised radioactive elements in the earth's crust for millions of years.

SIHANOUK VISIT 'NOT BY OFFICIAL INVITATION'

BK281320 Sydney THE AUSTRALIAN in English 23 Jul 82 p 2

[By Nicholas Rothwell]

[Excerpts] The head of the new coalition Kampuchean government-in-exile, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, will not be allowed to have any discussions with government officials during his visit to Australia later this year. Prince Sihanouk last month praised Australia's action in withdrawing recognition from the Khmer Rouge regime, which deprived him of his throne before itself being removed from power by a Vietnamese invading force in 1979.

The prince, whose Moulinaka faction is allied in the alternative government with the Khmer Serei group under the former Cambodian prime minister, Mr Son Sann, and remnants of the Khmer Rouge, is making international missions to win support for his coalition. Australia has withdrawn its recognition from the Khmer Rouge regime and at present does not recognise any government in Phnom Penh. The Australian Government has told Prince Sihanouk and Mr Son Sann that they will not be able to have contact with the minister for foreign affairs, Mr Street, or other Austrialian diplomats during their visit.

There has been intense debate in Federal Parliament since the de-recognition of the Khmer Rouge, announced in 1980 on the recommendation of the former foreign minister, Mr Andrew Peacock, over the Australian position on Kampuchea. The ALP [Australian Labor Party] foreign affairs spokesman, Mr Lionel Bowen, has often advocated recognition of the Vietnamese-backed government of Mr Heng Samrin in Phnom Penh and the resumption of aid to Vietnam.

Since the launching in Kuala Lumpur this month of the Kampuchean coalition, ambassadors of all the Western European nations and senior American officials have met Prince Sihanouk, although their countries do not yet have diplomatic relations with the group. The Australian Government's position is that Prince Sihanouk and Mr Son Sann must enter this country as private individuals, not as representatives of a government-in-exile. Officials of the Foreign Affairs Department have also refused the prince assistance in the form of accomodation or protocol, since his visit is not by official invitation.

PAPUA NEW GUINEA

SOMARE TO BE NAMED PRIME MINISTER 2 AUG

BK291204 Hong Kong AFP in English 1054 GMT 29 Jul 82

[Text] Port Moresby, July 29 (AFP) -- Papua New Guinea's opposition leader Michael Somare will be formally declared prime minister on Monday following the final split today of the 30-month-old five-party coalition government.

The Melanesian Alliance was the first party detach itself from the coalition which has been squabbling for four weeks since the general election as to who should lead the administration. Melanesian Alliance leader Father John Momis said his group of six or seven MP's and a house of 109 will join neither the government nor the opposition. It is expected that they will abstain when Parliament votes next Monday for a new prime minister for the next five years. The United Party, with a similar size, also announced that it would pull out of the coalition. It is most likely to vote for Mr Somare, with the expectation of being rewarded with some ministerial posts in the new government.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Sir Julius Chan, head of the coalition government and leader of the People's Progress Party, has announced that he was stepping down, leaving the power temporarily in the hands of former Defence Force commander and present National Party leader, Brigadier General Ted Diro.

PAPER CAUTIONS AGAINST 'JAKARTA-WASHINGTON AXIS'

[Text] Jakarta, July 29 (AFP) -- The Soviet and Chinese threats in South-East Asia have become the main topic of discussions between Indonesian Defence Minister General Mohammad Yusuf and American leaders, influential Jakarta newspaper KOMPAS reported today. General Yusuf, now visiting the United States, had discussed the matter with President Ronald Reagan, Defence Secretary Casper Weinberger, Secretary of State George Shultz and Joint Chief of Staff General John Vessey, the paper said in a report from Washington.

The Indonesian nationalist newspaper MERDEKA (FREEDOM) today cautioned against the creation of a "Jakarta-Washington axis" as a result of General Yusuf's visit to the United States. Indonesia should not become another South Vietnam, Iran (under the shah), or Nicaragua under Somoza, the paper said in an editorial.

The paper recalled the campaign here against the banned Indonesian Communist Party (PKI) in 1965 which it said might have got the encouragement from American intelligence circles.

"An illusion for the creation of a Jakarta-Washington axis is impossible to materialise. But we regard the coming President Suharto's visit to the United States is quite an honour and constitutes a valuable opportunity.

"Being an independent and sovereign state, Indonesia does not have to wear other people's glasses to assess the U.S. policies. The United States is a big and powerful country, but the important thing for us is whether that country still continues to be useful for Indonesia now and in the future," the paper said.

LEGISLATOR ON PALESTINE, YUSUF'S U.S. VISIT

[Text] Jakarta, July 29 (ANTARA) -- Though the struggle of the Palestine people (Palestine Liberation Organisation -- PLO) is in a difficult position at present they ultimately will achieve victory, Amin Iskandar, member of Commission I dealing with defence and foreign relations of the House of Representatives said here Wednesday. "They are on the right side and there will be no force or the arrogance of arms which will be able to stop the giant struggle of the Palestine people," the legislator said before newsmen at the parliamentary building here. He pointed out to the ignominious defeat suffered by Nazi Germany under Hitler when overruning other countries and also other colonialist powers. There was no doubt that Israel also would face a similar fate, the MP representing the Muslim United Development Party (PPP) said.

It was now merely a matter of time and moment and the victory for the alestinian people will then come, he said with firm conviction. The time for victory for the Palestinians would be when they have their own country and the right to determine their own future, he said. To gain all these goals there must be sacrifices and the Palestinians had proved their heroism by facing an enemy far stronger in every field.

The legislator also spoke about the visit by Defence Minister General Mohammad Yusuf to the United States and commented that the visit was aimed at eliminating any idea that Indonesia was solely depending on the United States but that she was pursuing an independent and active foreign policy. The result of the visit by the defence minister, Amin Iskandar said, would be very much decided on the attitude and good will of the United States on assessing the visit. It was clear that the visit of General Yusuf to the United States contained a positive meaning for the development of the Indonesian Armed Forces in the future. It was also closely linked with the projected visit of President Suharto to that country in October, he added.

Replying to a question he said that relations between Indonesia and the Soviet Union were good but actually they could be further strengthened.

SUPREME SOVIET DELEGATION CALLS ON RADIUS PRAWIRO

BK280823 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0740 GMT 28 Jul 82

[Text] Jakarta, July 28 (ANTARA) -- Visiting parliamentary delegation of the Soviet Union led by Deputy President of the Supreme Soviet Presidium Antanas Stasevich Barkauskas Tuesday called on Trade and Cooperative Minister Radius Prawiro.

Radius said the visit was a courtesy call to discuss among other things economic and trade cooperation between the two countries. Trade relations with the Soviet Union, according to the minister, are quite gratifying. The Soviet Union is a substantial buyer of various agricultural and industrial products from Indonesia, he noted. Citing an example Radius said the Soviet Union has so far imported a large quantity of Indonesian coffee and textile products. Indonesia has been able to supply the Soviet Union with garments, he added.

The minister, however, admitted a problem in the bilateral trade saying that in many cases trade has been made through a third party. He cited another example that recently Indonesia had to buy Soviet made fertilizers from a third country. Also he noted shipments have always been handled by ships belonging to a third country. Something should be done to improve the trade relations to (?press) down the expenses, he suggested.

At the meeting the Soviet delegation asked for an explanation about the the trade and cooperative minister's decision No 234 of 1978 about trade coordination with Eastern European countries. Radius said the decision was issued to cope with the problems affecting trade with the socialist countries. Such a decision has also been taken concerning trade with the United States and West Europe. In the case with the United States and West Europe the government coordinates pepper trade to ensure quality and set a reasonable price to prevent rivalry among national exporters, Radius explained. He assured the Soviet delegation that the coordination board is only called on the help in the event of a problem in the bilateral trade.

At present the bilateral trade is in Indonesia's favour. According to a record at the Trade and Cooperatives Ministry, the bilateral trade in 1980 was closed with a surplus of U.S. $53.17 million for Indonesia. Indonesian exports that year were worth U.S. $72.93 million as against imports from the country of U.S. $19.76 million. In 1981 the export figure rose to U.S. $79.98 million. Imports also increased to U.S. $41.11 million. Rubber accounted for 99 percent of the Indonesian exports while imports were mainly cotton and glass products.

The Soviet parliamentary delegation is here for a 6-day visit starting Monday at the invitation of the Indonesian parliament. Earlier that day the delegation paid a similar call on the foreign minister, Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja. Visits to President Suharto, Vice President Adam Malik and the Jakarta Governor Tjokropranolo are included in the program of the Soviet delegation. Before leaving the country Saturday the delegation plans to visit cultural centres in Yogyakarta and Bali.

REFUGEES ARRIVE IN JAKARTA EN ROUTE TO FRANCE

[Text] Jakarta, July 29 (AFP) — A total 3,360 Cambodian refugees recently transferred here from Thailand will be resettled in France soon, the office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees said today. The refugees arrived here between May and July and were lodged on the island of Galand, 1,200 kilometers (720 miles) northeast of Jakarta.

The move was made to relieve overcrowding in the camps of Thailand, where some 150,000 Laotians, Cambodians and Vietnamese boat people live under very harsh conditions. French "schools without walls" sent five teachers to Galand to help with language and practical instructions for easing the 3,360 refugees into France.

Overall, some 13,000 Cambodian and Vietnamese refugees live under satisfactory conditions on Galand in camps jointly run by the Indonesian Red Cross and the United Nations.

The number of Vietnamese boat people reaching Thailand and Malaysia dropped off sharply in recent months, while boatloads of refugees are still landing on the northern Indonesian islands of Natunas and Anambas 700 kilometers (420 miles) off the south Vietnamese coast. A total 4,336 Vietnamese boat people arrived in Indonesia over the first six months of the year against 5,161 for the comparable period in 1981. From 1976 to June 1982, 73,489 boat people landed in Indonesia, according to U.N. sources in Jakarta.

INDONESIA TIMES ON CHEMICAL WEAPONS IN LAOS

[Editorial: "The Hmongs and the World"]

[Text] Mr Adnan Buyung Nasution, the Indonesian lawyer and human rights activist who joined the recent Lawasia inquiry along the Thai-Laos border, disclosed here last week that they had found chemical weapon victims among the refugees. The inquiry, which had been made from June 4 through 11, 1982, by a team consisting of lawyers from Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia, India, Japan, Australia and New Zealand and some physicians, found Laotian refugees whose skins were withering like the peel of a rotten orange, especially at their armpits and around the throats. They have no hope of cure and would eventually die of the disease, Mr Nasution said. What the lawyer disclosed here is nothing new because long ago doctors at the refugee camps had found such victims and defecting Pathet Lao pilots had told of flying biochemical missions against the Hmong tribe in Laos and in December 1981 the Pathet Lao director of public health, who had defected to China, disclosed that the Vietnamese Government practised the policy of genocide towards national minorities in his country by using chemical weapons in the air and on the ground.

The Hmongs are a tribal people of Laos who, during the Vietnam war, with other tribal groups made a series of anti-communist activities by sabotaging was supplies along the Ho Chi Minh Trail into Kampuchea and South Vietnam and rescuing American pilots downed over Laos. Since 1975 these basically defenceless hilly people have fallen victim to the new and diverse arsenal of biochemical warfare. And the attacks may be going on until today.
